Bristow	Gore	Nelson	Sherman
Clapp	Gronna	Norris	Warren
Crawford	Jones	Perkins	Works

NOT VOTING—25.

Bankhead	Culberson	Reed	Stone
Borah	du Pont	Robinson	Thomas
Burleigh	Fall	Root	Weeks
Catron	Jackson	Smith, Md.	Williams
Chamberlain	McCumber	Smith, Mich.
Clark, Wyo.	Newlands	Stephenson
Colt	Penrose	Sterling

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary continued the reading of the bill, as follows:

Salicylic acid, 2½ cents per pound; tannic acid and tannin, 4 cents per pound.

The next amendment was, in line 8, before the word "cents," to strike out "4" and insert "5," so as to read:

Tannic acid and tannin, 5 cents per pound.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator in charge of this schedule why that exceedingly heavy cut has been made. I notice that the present law is 35 cents per pound on tannic acid and tannin. The House provided 4 cents per pound. The Senate committee has increased it to 5 cents. Of the 5 cents per pound the equivalent ad valorem is but 10.43 per cent. Is there any reason why it should be reduced to that amount?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In answer to the inquiry of the Senator I will say that the duty of 35 cents per pound was prohibitive. The importations were very small indeed as compared with the domestic production. The Senate committee thought a duty of 5 cents a pound bore a proper relation to the other duties. Under the present rate there were very small importaions, as I recall it.

Mr. SMOOT. Is it not true that this article is used mostly in patent medicines?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I understand that it is used in making gallic acid and from gallic acid pyrogallic acid is made. It is the basis of those acids.

Mr. SMOOT. But as to salicylic acid?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am not informed whether it is used in making salicylic acid or not.

Mr. SMOOT. I was speaking of salicylic.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I understood the Senator asked if it was used in making salicylic acid. I have no information about that, if that was the question.

Mr. SMOOT. I notice in the House hearing Dr. Summers, under the head of salicylic acid, makes this statement:

Our Government and its citizens are being unjustly taken advantage of by a $100,000,000 corporation of Germany. Through the inequalities of our tariff laws, in conjunction with our patent laws and the skillful manufacture and dissemination of defamation calculated to discredit competition, this special interest has patented control of opportunity and deprived the noncombative sick of the use of what would best restore their health.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I understood the Senator to inquire in regard to tannic acid, not salicylic acid.

Mr. SMOOT. I spoke of salicylic; I thought we had that under consideration?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Tannic acid.

Mr. SMOOT. I understood that it was salicylic acid.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued, as follows:

Tartaric acid, 3½ cents per pound; all other acids and acid anhydrides not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the provision is that all other acids not specially provided for in this section shall pay 15 per cent ad valorem. That is the basket clause for the acids. The present law is 25 per cent. I know of no reason why the rate in the basket clause should be lower than any specific rate of acids provided for in the paragraph. Such is the case, and in the basket clause will fall all the unenumerated acids that come into this country. There are thousands of those articles, and they will fall in the basket clause at the rate of 15 per cent.

Mr. President, it is inconsistent with all former tariff acts that the basket clause should have a lower rate than the items specifically mentioned in the paragraph. No one can tell offhand what will fall in the basket clause. It includes everything but what is specifically mentioned. I hope the Senate will not ultimately agree to the 15 per cent. There is no amendment offered at this time, but I simply give notice that when we have the bill up for consideration I expect to offer an amendment to correct that inconsistency.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that some of the acids bear a lower rate of duty than 15 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly; I know that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And some higher.

Mr. SMOOT. That is absolutely true.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is not only the acids mentioned here that are to be considered but those mentioned in the free list also—sulphuric acid and other acids which are there mentioned.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, no, Mr. President. This provision applies only to the acids that are not specifically provided for in this section, and the free list is in this section. It provides for every acid that is not particularly mentioned in the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In the bill? I mean not only in this paragraph, but in the free list as well.

Mr. SMOOT. It says "in this section," and the free list is a part of this section.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That is the statement I just made.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 13, before the word "albumen," to strike out "egg" and insert "dried egg," so as to read:

4. Dried egg albumen, 3 cents per pound.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 18 and 19 and the following words:

6. Alizarin, natural or synthetic, dry or suspended in water, 10 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of paragraph 9, the last paragraph read being as follows:

9. Argols or crude tartar or wine lees crude or partly refined, containing not more than 90 per cent of potassium bitartrate, 5 per cent ad valorem; containing more than 90 per cent of potassium bitartrate, cream of tartar, and Rochelle salts or tartrate of soda and potassa, 2½ cents per pound; calcium tartrate crude, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the paragraph which has just been read I shall not undertake to amend, I think, but I want to call attention to the thoroughly false principle that is adopted in the paragraph. There are much grosser instances of it in the bill elsewhere. Some of them have been moved by the Senate committee and some have not. Of course the Senate is well aware that argols or crude tartar are the lees of wine which adhere to the bottom and sides of the cask. Practically the labor involved in it is very small.

That is the raw material for the other articles at the end of the paragraph of which there is very great consumption. Cream of tartar is used in cooking, in medicine, in dyeing, and in very many ways. It is in very large use. Now, they have left the rate on the argols, the raw material, the same that it is to-day, and they have cut the manufactured product.

Mr. President, I can understand the position of the protectionist who seeks to discriminate in favor of the native industry. I can understand the position of the free trader, even if I do not agree with him. But I know of no defense that can be offered for discriminating in favor of the foreign producer. It is giving him a protection. Of course, if you raise the duty or maintain it on the raw material and reduce it on the manufactured article, you discriminate in favor of the foreign producer, because you discriminate against the native producer, and it seems to me that that is utterly indefensible.

If it is the desire to reduce all alike or to put argols on the free list or anything of that sort, I do not know that I should waste the time of the Senate by saying anything about it, but I do want at this point to enter a protest against the system which is adopted here and there in the bill of giving protection to the foreign manufacturer and discriminating against the native manufacturer.

Mr. President, as the rate on the raw material is maintained in the old bill as in the present law I shall move to make "2½" in line 7, "3 cents," which leaves them both unchanged. If it is desired to cut them both down or to cut down, as I think we had better, the raw material, which would cheapen the product to the consumer more than anything else, I shall be glad to vote for it, but I do not think that on any ground it is possible to justify a discrimination in favor of the foreign manufacturer.

In line 7, I move to strike out "2½ cents" and insert "3."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts offers an amendment to paragraph 9, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, line 7, strike out "2½" and insert "3," so as to read:

Containing more than 90 per cent of potassium bitartrate, cream of tartar, and Rochelle salts or tartrate of soda and potassa, 3 cents per pound.

Mr. LODGE. That, I will say, is a reduction of 2 cents on cream of tartar, but keeps the duty the same as on Rochelle salts.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the duty upon crude argols is purely a revenue duty. We imported in 1912, as given in the table, 23,648 pounds and we got a revenue of $111,172. The importation of refined argols, to which the Senator from Massachusetts refers, were very slight. The only importations were 10,000 pounds at a value of $1,800.

The duty upon cream of tartar was reduced to 2½ cents a pound, cream of tartar being the principal product made from argols. We placed a duty upon refined argols the same as upon cream of tartar, 2½ cents a pound, both of which are made from crude argol by a very simple process, as the Senator from Massachusetts has said.

Mr. LODGE. The result, of course, of this arrangement would be to reduce the revenue on the raw material, because it would be more profitable to send in the finished material. The finished material, of course, is made here. It will transfer the business there by discriminating in favor of the foreign producer. That is not free trade. It is not fair competition. It is giving an advantage to your foreign competitor. I do not know on what principle of political economy that can be defended.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. BRISTOW. I desire to make some inquiries in regard to the bill, and this paragraph illustrates the point upon which I want to make the inquiry.

I note that the duties collected in 1912 under this paragraph were $111,172. It is estimated that there will be a revenue of $125,000 under the present bill. How does the committee arrive at this estimate of revenue?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. As one of the committee, having made some study of it, I am very free to confess that I myself have very little faith in these estimates. They are mere speculations as to what the imports may be under conditions, but it has been customary, I find in reference to other bills, to make these calculations, and the House has made them. It has taken the importations which have come in and the rates, and the officer of the Treasury Department has made an estimate, or a guess I call it, as to what the imports will be under the new rate. For myself I can not place much confidence in them.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will note the ad valorem equivalent as indicated in the report here and the data that have been furnished the Senate, under the Dingley bill the importations for the year 1905 were 5.05 per cent. Under the Payne bill the importations of 1910 were 5 per cent; in 1912, 5 per cent; and they are estimated at 5 per cent in this bill. Yet with that estimate the same percentage ad valorem, which practically would be the same rate, there is an estimate of an increased revenue.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me, particularly as it will undoubtedly increase the admission of the finished product, this would probably fall off. I do not mean to say from the whole paragraph we may not get so much revenue, but it will certainly reduce the revenue on the raw material and increase it on the finished product.

Mr. BRISTOW. There are so many articles in the paragraphs where these estimates are made that it seems to me they are misleading. I do not see how it is possible to estimate an increased revenue under the paragraph.

Mr. JAMES. I will say to the Senator from Kansas the estimates were made in the usual way by the experts of the Treasury Department, and have always been so made. Estimates compiled in this manner were made in reference to the Payne-Aldrich bill.

Mr. BRISTOW. That may be. There may be somebody in the Treasury Department who understands it, but I thought possibly the Committee on Finance understood it also.

Mr. JAMES. Of course the committee did not have time to make estimates. We had to rely upon the experts at the department as to the amount of goods that would likely be imported under reduced rates of duty or increased rates of duty.

Mr. BRISTOW. This is not either reduced or increased, but still there is an estimate for increase in the revenue.

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield.

Mr. LIPPITT. I doubt if the statement of the Senator that these estimates were made in the way in which they were made in the Payne-Aldrich bill is entirely correct. I only wanted to take a little objection to that, because I propose shortly to discuss the way in which the estimates have been made for some of the textile schedules. They are so very unique and the result is so very extraordinary that I want to enter my protest against the statement being accepted by this body that the estimates here inserted are on the same basis as those in any previous bill.

Mr. BRISTOW. In order to illustrate the point I should like to refer back to paragraph 7:

7. Alumina, hydrate of, etc.

According to the data furnished us by the committee on the importations of 1905 the ad valorem was 7 per cent, on the importations of 1910 under the Payne bill it was 23.45 per cent, and in 1912 it was 24.19 per cent. That shows a very, very large increase in importations. The importations in 1910 were 1,538,619 pounds. In 1905 the importations were but 16,291 pounds, showing in the five years from 1905 to 1910 an increase of more than a million and a half pounds, an enormous increase. Then two years later, in 1912, there is an increase of 800,000 pounds, another large increase in the importations, and also an increase in the price, apparently, and an increase in the ad valorem rate. There appears to be an increase in the ad valorem rate also, but the price appears to be the same.

I was at lunch at the time this paragraph was passed over. I wanted to inquire as to the theory upon which a reduction was made in that duty, the increased importations year by year showing that we were still getting from abroad a large amount of this material. If this is a revenue bill, why should that be reduced?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Of course I suppose the Senator recognizes the general method which has been pursued to divide the duties collected by the value of importations, using the value of importations as the divisor and getting the ad valorem equivalents in that way. I have not followed that out.

Mr. BRISTOW. Was the duty reduced because the importations were not sufficient to cause competition, or was it reduced for the purpose of securing revenue? I wanted to know why the duty was reduced from an estimated ad valorem of 24.19 to 15.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I understand the Senator to refer to alum.

Mr. BRISTOW. No; to alumina, hydrate of, and so forth.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That is a hydrate or refined bauxite of alumina?

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The importation was small, amounting to only $38,294. I have not before me at this time the amount of production. The production of alum makes a very large showing in this country and the importations are very small.

Mr. BRISTOW. That brings up another question I wanted to inquire about. I see there is no estimated production given to this paragraph; that is, alumina, hydrate of, or refined bauxite. Why have we not an estimate of the production in this country for that item?

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; I gladly do so, because I am inquiring for information.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will state to the Senator that it is exceedingly difficult to get figures showing the domestic production of many articles manufactured or produced in this country. None of the departments has had any systematic scheme for making those estimates. We have to rely altogether, almost, upon the census estimates, and, as the Senator very well knows, the Census Office groups the separate articles under some general head. Therefore we are not able through that source to secure the production except as to all the numerous articles embraced in the schedules.

We have, as the Senator will discover upon closer investigation, very much more data in these tables than the House had in their tables. That is because the experts were directed, wherever it was possible to obtain any reliable data as to production in this country of an article, to obtain it and to use it in these tables, and they have done so.

In the paragraph to which the Senator was calling attention, where it refers to alumina and alum, the Senator will observe a little lower down, in the second bracket, the production by pounds of alum.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; I observed that.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think that, of course, includes alumina, but there was no way to ascertain what part of it was alumina and what part of it other things that come under the head of alum. The Senator will observe, further answering the inquiry made of the Senator in charge of this schedule, that while the number of pounds of alumina imported in 1910 and 1912 sound rather large, one a million five hundred thousand and the other two million three hundred thousand, when you reduce that to dollars the amount is very insignificant; it is almost negligible. In one year it amounted to only $26,000, in round numbers, and in the next to only $38,000, in round numbers.

The Senator will observe that as to the next bracket, which, as I said, I am sure includes alumina along with a great many other things that come under the general head of alum, that the production in this country, in pounds, amounted to 220,000,000 in 1905 and to 246,000,000 pounds in 1910. Estimated in dollars, in 1910 this production amounted to something over $3,000,000.

Mr. President, we have this state of affairs: We have an importation of only $26,000 of alumina, while we have a production under that schedule under the head of alum, which includes alumina, as I assume, of $3,000,000 in this country. So the importations of alumina compared with our production of alumina are very slight indeed.

Mr. BRISTOW. As I understand——

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Utah will excuse me a moment, as I understand—I may be mistaken, and, if I am, the Senator will correct me, and I shall be glad to have him do so—alumina is a kind of earth or mineral from which material is made that is used for various mechanical purposes, and it is found largely in the State of Arkansas. That is my understanding. The figures relating to alum appear here and speak for themselves, but I do not think that alum is a product of alumina.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, yes.

Mr. BRISTOW. I never have heard of that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Alumina is a valuable constituent of bauxite, which has been protected by tariff laws, and alum is made by the treating of alumina.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. There is nothing wrong with the figures here in reference to alumina or hydrate of alumina, which is refined bauxite. Bauxite is produced in Arkansas. We do not import very much alumina, but we do import considerable bauxite. All of the bauxite produced in Arkansas, of course, is made into hydrate of alumina. Then the alumina is made into aluminum. That is the process. The amount of importation and of the production of alum in this country are correct as given in the handbook. The Government does not keep its account of the production of alum and of hydrate of alumina together. They are kept separately. The figures as to the importation and production in this country are right and——

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. CUMMINS. Inasmuch as we are conducting a school of instruction, there is one thing about this as to which I should like to have some information. In 1905 the average unit of hydrate of alumina was valued at 8¼ cents a pound; in 1910 at 1⅞ cents a pound; and in 1912 at the same rate.

What brought about this very remarkable reduction in the value of hydrate of alumina? I can see very little connection between it and alum, for I notice that alum was worth during the year 1905 but 1 cent a pound, as against 8¼ cents for hydrate of aluminum; in 1910 it was worth only nine-tenths of a cent a pound, and in 1912 it had recovered in price to 1 cent a pound. I should like to know whether the duty that was put upon this article, hydrate of alumina, so developed the domestic production that this enormous decrease in price has been brought about?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. The reduction in price has been brought about by the superior mode of handling bauxite and making aluminum. Aluminum a few years ago was $4 a pound; to-day it is but 18 cents a pound. Bauxite is the raw material from which it is made.

Mr. CUMMINS. But, Mr. President, asking pardon of the Senator from Utah, I should like to hear an answer to my question from some one who is responsible for this bill and who is promoting its passage.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the only information I can give is open to the Senator from Iowa, which is that the largely increased production, not only in this country but in Europe, as I understand, of crude bauxite has affected the price. Certainly if the duty in this instance did not raise the price, but cheapened the article to the consumer, it did not perform the duty which some of our protectionist friends claim it is the office of a tariff duty to perform.

Mr. BRISTOW. But, if the Senator will permit me a suggestion, if it did accomplish what the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] says it did, then it has been a very desirable agency, has it not?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator from Kansas that might be true if you could trace it, but so many other things operate to produce a result that I do not think the Senator from Utah will claim that in this particular the duty was the sole cause of this reduction in the price and that the largely increased production in the United States and in Europe did not affect the price.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. KENYON. I simply want to suggest to the Senator from Kansas that the lowering of the price of this article, in my judgment, has been largely due to several facts: Originally there were patents issued to one Pratt, I think, of Pittsburgh. Another inventor was also working along the same line. There was a great deal of litigation. Finally one concern acquired all of these patents. They then entered into a gigantic monopoly, which not only controlled all the business in this country, but became world-wide. They controlled the bauxite, alumina, and aluminum.

The great development of the bauxite fields, which are found in many places, coupled with the fact that the patents have expired and new processes developed, and the fact of the formation of this gigantic monopoly which absolutely controls prices and production in this country has brought about this very strange situation in that production and in the price of the article.

Mr. BRISTOW. Does the Senator from Iowa mean that the monopoly voluntarily reduced the price of this article from 8½ cents a pound to 1⅕ cents a pound?

Mr. KENYON. No; I do not mean that the monopoly has voluntarily done it except for their own convenience, perhaps, but they had all the product, and aluminum, which formerly had been supposed to be as valuable as diamonds and precious metals, became a very common metal.

Bauxite can be purchased for something like 25 cents a ton; and the increased discovery of bauxite and the increased use of and better instrumentalities for the making of aluminum, including the power that has been secured from Niagara Falls and along the St. Lawrence River have all tended to cheapen production of this article.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. OLIVER. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa a question. As I understand, bauxite is the raw material used in the manufacture of aluminum, is it not?

Mr. KENYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. OLIVER. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa, bauxite being the raw material which the manufacturer, this monopolist, had to acquire, how it came about that it was through his work that the price of bauxite was reduced?

Mr. KENYON. As the Senator from Pennsylvania knows, they acquired practically the whole bauxite production of the United States. The United States Government brought an action against this monopoly. They were decreed to be a monopoly, and agreed to a consent decree which held that they were a monopoly controlling these various products.

Mr. OLIVER. But that does not explain why the price of this article came down from something like 8 cents a pound to between 1 and 2 cents a pound.

Mr. KENYON. The company that absolutely controlled this product in this country declared such enormous dividends—in one instance the dividends being 500 per cent on $3,200,000 worth of stock; in other words, a dividend of $16,000,000—that even that monopoly had not the audacity to keep prices up to the old standard.

Mr. OLIVER. I am aware that the manufacture of aluminum has been very profitable, but I know something about the history of the patents connected with it, and the Senator from Iowa is laboring under something of a mistake when he says that the patents were brought together by a combination. The patent monopoly was acquired after a long course of adverse litigation, and not by reason of the bringing together of a large number of plants.

Mr. KENYON. I did not say that; but the original patents and then the Bradley patents flowed into the same channel and were controlled by the same company in the Senator's own town.

Mr. OLIVER. But it was through adverse litigation that they flowed in, and not through negotiation one with another.

Mr. KENYON. They eventually reached the same end.

Mr. SHIVELY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. SHIVELY. The reduction of the price of alumina is due to the vast improvement in the process of extracting the alumina from the bauxite and to competition between American and European producers in the use of this improved process. The chief and practically the only producer of aluminum in this country had a patent on the process. But this did not avail in Europe. The European producers used precisely the same process. The competition between these producers did bring about a substantial reduction of the price of this very useful metal. The patent in the United States was owned and controlled by the Aluminum Co. of America. In 1909 the patent expired. At about the time of the expiration of the patent the Northern Aluminum Co. was organized under the laws of Canada. This company located a site and constructed a plant on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence River. The Northern Aluminum Co. was conceived and promoted by the Aluminum Co. of America. The latter was the chief owner, if not the sole owner, of the stock of the Canadian corporation. It was through this Northern Aluminum Co. that the trust agreement was negotiated with European producers. The device was a manifest effort to evade the operation of the Sherman Antitrust Act and establish a world control of the price of aluminum. This brief history may be aside from the main question, and I repeat that the reduction in price to which the Senator calls attention is due to the cheapening influence of the improved processes and the competition between American and European producers.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I am very much obliged to the Senator for the very clear statement he has made. The principal purpose I had in referring to this paragraph was to call attention to the absence of an estimate as to the amount of local production. Such an estimate is given in the following paragraph relating to alum. I am free to say that I was very much interested in learning, if possible, what has been the increase in the amount of production in the United States, and observing the very great increase in the amount of importations and at the same time a reduction of duty, the absence of any information as to the increase in production at home led me to ask the question.

The question I asked in regard to the estimates as to revenue has been answered by the Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON], and from the brief examination I have been able to make since this book was published I have been compelled to concur in his judgment that the estimates as to the amount of revenue are certainly of very little value.

Mr. SHIVELY. Mr. President, what the Senator says will be found true of not a few articles falling under these brackets. Bauxite is only a clay containing this article called alumina. The extraction of this alumina from the clay is one stage in the process in manufacture of the metal called aluminum. When we come to the bauxite or the alumina extracted from it, no separate items of domestic production are furnished by any department of Government. For instance, the deposits of bauxites are rich in Arkansas. There the clay is mined and transported to St. Louis, where it is subjected to the process by which the metal is extracted and appears in the crude form called alumina. This alumina is then transported to another plant of the Aluminum Co. of America, at Niagara, where it is subjected to a process called electrolysis.

The product of this process is the aluminum of commerce and the form in which it goes forward into various manufactures. The statistics of aluminum, the finished product of these materials, have been assembled with reasonable accuracy and are available, while the statistics of the materials themselves, for reasons readily apparent, have not been gathered with the same degree of care.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is the aluminum that is produced at Niagara Falls by this concern?

Mr. SHIVELY. Yes; that is the article in the production of which these intermediate processes are employed.

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, as I understand, this earth is secured in paying quantities in Arkansas. It has not been discovered in other States to the extent, so far as the amount of aluminum it contained is concerned, that it has been in certain parts of Arkansas.

Mr. SHIVELY. If the Senator will allow me, there is no question that the deposits of bauxite clay are by no means confined to Arkansas. But in Arkansas the presence of this metal in the clay exists in such large percentage as to make it commercially profitable to extract it. In my own State we have great bodies of clay containing the metal in varying proportions. It is only a question whether in any of the deposits it is present in sufficient quantity to justify reduction of it.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is my understanding.

Mr. SHIVELY. There are lands containing this metal in Alabama, in Georgia, and in Tennessee, and I doubt whether there is a State of the Union wherein it is not present.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], on page 3, line 7, to increase the rate there proposed from 2½ to 3 cents per pound.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Maine whether or not, in his opinion, the result suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts would occur. As I understood him, if the rates are left in line 5 at 5 per cent and in line 8 at 2½ cents a pound there would be an inducement to refine the product before it comes into this country; in other words, it would promote the refining of the product in foreign countries rather than encourage bringing the raw material into this country and then refining it here. I want to know whether, in the opinion of the Senator from Maine, that result will occur if the rates remain as set forth in this paragraph.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, in my opinion that result will not occur. The process of refining and making cream of tartar from argols is well established in this country. It is a simple process, and I do not believe that any such additional duty is necessary, even from the viewpoint of a protectionist.

Mr. JONES. In other words, they could not refine it abroad and bring it in here more cheaply than they could bring it into this country with this rate of duty and then refine it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Well, the importations of the refined have been negligible. The duty has been prohibitory upon the refined. What we have imported has been the crude argols, and they have been refined here.

Mr. JONES. Was not that because the duty was so arranged as to encourage the bringing in of the raw material and its refining in this country? Is not that the reason why we have so few imports of the refined product?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. If that be true, I do not know why cream of tartar, which is the principal product made from argols, would not have been made abroad and imported here. That was not done. Our production of cream of tartar in this country in the year 1910 was 15,593,000 pounds, with only a small importation of 116,000 pounds in that same year.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I move to strike out the figure "5," in line 5, and insert "3."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, line 5, it is proposed to strike out "5" and insert "3," so as to read:

9. Argols or crude tartar or wine lees crude or partly refined, containing not more than 90 per cent of potassium bitartrate, 3 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I hope that amendment will be adopted. It seems that this duty is to be levied purely and simply for revenue purposes, and but for the fact that I have not my memoranda with me I should have made a motion to strike out entirely the duty on argols. They are not produced in any quantity in this country. The revenue derived would be comparatively insignificant, and it can not be denied that by retaining the same duty on the raw material and by very greatly diminishing the duty on the finished product the industry will be very seriously handicapped, if not destroyed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES].

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of line 24, page 3, as follows:

10. Balsams: Copaiba, fir or Canada, Peru, tolu, and all other balsams, which are natural and uncompounded and not suitable for the manufacture of perfumery and cosmetics, if in a crude state, not advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the balsams and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; if advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the balsams and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that all of those balsams which are natural and uncompounded are to-day on the free list, and on the same balsams if advanced in value by any condition or process of treatment whatever, the rate of duty is one-fourth of a cent per pound and 10 per cent ad valorem. Now note the inconsistency of this paragraph. Paragraph 5 of this bill provides that all chemical and medicinal compounds shall carry a rate of duty of 15 per cent. All the balsams assessed here at 10 per cent are the raw product for the preparation of medicinal compounds and chemicals; and they carry a duty of 10 per cent. While the balsams in the advanced condition carry a duty of 15 per cent, the products that are made from them under paragraph 5 only carry a duty of 15 per cent. When the time arrives I shall offer an amendment to put these balsams on the free list, where they have always been and where they properly belong. They are not produced in this country at all.

Mr. SHIVELY. I merely wish to observe that, on the theory of this bill, that would not be an objection to the duty. We are looking for revenue, and that is clearly a revenue duty.

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator mean to say that in looking for revenue he is going to place the same duty upon the raw material that he does upon the manufactured article?

Mr. SHIVELY. We shall meet that question fully when the Senator offers his amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. All of these balsams that are advanced in value in any way carry 15 per cent, just the same as the medicinal compounds carry under paragraph 5.

Mr. SHIVELY. Under paragraph 5 the duty on these medicinal compounds is fixed at 15 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. Balsams are also dutiable at 15 per cent if advanced in any manner. They are the intermediary products for the preparation of all of these medicinal compounds carrying exactly the same rate of duty.

Mr. SHIVELY. The ad valorem rate automatically takes care of the differential.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no differential. They are the same.

Mr. SHIVELY. But the duty is 15 per cent on both, on the ad valorem basis.

Mr. SMOOT. All right.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to line 10, page 4, as follows:

11. Barium, chloride of, one-fourth cent per pound; dioxide of, 1½ cents per pound; carbonate of, precipitated, 15 per cent ad valorem.

12. Blacking of all kinds, polishing powders, and all creams and preparations for cleaning or polishing, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no preparations containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

13. Bleaching powder, or chloride of lime, one-tenth cent per pound.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator in charge of this schedule of the bill if he can tell me how he arrives at the duty in paragraph 13. Why was the reduction made?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In the first place, I will say, looking at the importations into the country, taking into consideration the vast extent to which bleaching powder is used in different industries, by the paper mills, by the bleachers, and by the textile industries, and having lowered the duties upon those products, we have cut the duty upon the articles used by the manufacturers of them. This is one article which they use extensively.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Can the Senator state the amount of the domestic production of bleaching powder?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have not the figures here.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Has the Senator considered the selling price in Great Britain and in the United States at the present time?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have no knowledge of that.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Bleaching powder is manufactured in two places in the United States. There is a large factory at Midland, Mich., and another at Niagara Falls, N. Y. This article was on the free list under the Wilson bill. In 1897 there was placed on bleaching powder a duty of two-tenths of a cent per pound. At that time there was practically no bleaching powder made in the United States. The price was about $2 per hundred pounds, or 2 cents per pound. Almost immediately after imposing a duty of two-tenths of a cent per pound the price of bleaching powder dropped to $1.87½ per hundred pounds. It is now $1.25 per hundred pounds, the selling price in Europe being practically the same as in the United States.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Is it not true that this decrease of price has resulted largely from the adoption of the improved method of manufacture by electrolysis and the abandonment of the older method of manufacture by using hydrochloric acid? Has not the adoption of the present method of simply passing a current of electricity through a solution of salt resulted in lowering the price?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have no doubt improvements in production have had much to do with it; but that does not alter the fact that we are selling bleaching powder in the United States as cheaply as they are selling it in Europe. I assume, according to the statement of the Senator, that the purpose of this change was either to provide a cheaper product for people in this country who use bleaching powder or else it is to increase the revenue. I am also stating a fact when I say that either at the same time or a very few weeks or months after placing the duty of two-tenths of a cent per pound upon bleaching powder, the price went down.

This industry is of considerable importance. At least it is important to the community where it is located. Unless somebody is going to get some benefit from the change, unless there is some probability that the price of bleaching powder to the consumer is going down, it seems to me it will be a very unwise thing to interfere with an industry of this kind. It is now proposed to reduce the duty 50 per cent, or from two-tenths of a cent per pound to one-tenth of a cent per pound.

The industry located at Midland is of great importance to that little city which is located in a prosperous agricultural community. Midland and the surrounding farming country has prospered because of the bleaching powder factory located there. The Senator seems to have no information which justifies this proposed reduction, and there certainly is a possibility that injury if not destruction may result to this industry.

I desire to have read a statement made by one of the concerns manufacturing bleaching powder in this country, namely, the Midland plant.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Certainly

Mr. GALLINGER. Before the statement is read, can the Senator tell us how many concerns there are in the United States making bleaching powder?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Two.

Mr. GALLINGER. Only two?

Mr. SHIVELY. And I understand the Senator to say that they are actually making and selling the article here as cheaply as it is sold abroad?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes, sir. That is a part of the proof.

Mr. WILLIAMS. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If that be true, how could a reduction of the duty hurt them?

Mr. TOWNSEND. These concerns have struggled for existence up to date, and this reduction may involve them in ruin. Unless some benefit is going to come from the change in duty, it seems to me it would be a mistake to interfere with it, because of the possibility of a temporary reduction of the price in order to give a complete monopoly to the foreigner, who already has a monopoly in Great Britain, but who when American competition was destroyed would again raise his price, as he had before. The manufacturers are not making a great amount of money. No one will claim that either one of these concerns, which employ a great many men and are producing a large amount of bleaching powder, are getting an unusual profit.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon one more interruption, I understood him to say just now that putting the duty upon the article had reduced its price.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It did; or, in any event, the price was reduced when the duty was placed there.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Ah, I was going to say that perhaps the House had failed to retain the duty, or had declined to increase it, for fear that increasing the duty much further might put the industry clear out of existence by reducing the price so much that manufacturers in this country could not afford to make the article.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is a fairly good Democratic argument.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is a fairly good inconsistent Republican argument. The Senator puts a duty on an article in order to raise the price for the purpose of protection. Then he comes in and makes an observation the necessary logical inference from which is that putting on the duty lowered the price; in other words, that the duty failed of its purpose; and because it failed of its purpose he wants it retained.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is not the logical conclusion at all. At the time this duty was put upon bleaching powder the United Alkali Co., a monopoly of Great Britain, had the market in this country. The presumption is that it was charging too much to the American consumer because it had a monopoly. By giving protection to the American manufacturer and assuring him that he could invest his money in building a factory without fear of destruction by reason of a temporary reduction in price by his foreign competitor American enterprise constructed two factories in the United States. When this was done, the price of bleaching powder dropped and the consumer got the benefit. Whatever philosophy you may apply as to cause and effect, these are the facts, and now the price is $1.25 per hundred.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But if the Senator will pardon me——

Mr. TOWNSEND. Just a moment; let me finish my statement, if you please.

Another thing in connection with this matter: If it be true that the reduction of this duty is for the purpose of obtaining revenue, it certainly must fail in that purpose. I am not claiming that it will necessarily put these concerns out of business, I feel that it may result in that. If our market is worth it, the United Alkali Co., of Great Britain, can destroy them and then have the field to themselves. The margin of profit in the production of bleaching powder is so small and the investment required for its production so large that no new concerns will be created. Adequate protection is necessary for the success and progress of this business.

I do not say that even 1½ cents a pound for this powder is not a profitable return. I assume that it is, because the product is sold on both sides of the water at practically the same figure. But I do contend that the present duty can not be found to have brought any injustice to the American consumer.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. The importations of bleaching powder last year seem to have been 72,000,000 pounds. The estimate made by the Committee on Finance is that under the present bill the importations will be 119,000,000 pounds, so that according to the estimate 47,000,000 pounds more will be imported into this country if the present bill becomes a law.

That, it seems to me, is a sufficient reason for resisting this change, because if 47,000,000 more pounds are imported into this country the establishment in Michigan and the other establishment to which the Senator alludes will naturally make 47,000,000 pounds less; and if it be true that the product is now sold as cheaply here as abroad, what earthly reason is there for depriving the American manufacturer and the American workingman of the opportunity of making that 47,000,000 pounds.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I can see none; but I was discussing the subject from a Democratic standpoint. Either this is done for the purpose of increasing the revenue or it is done to cheapen bleaching powder to the American consumer. I maintain that neither one of those conditions will be brought about in the end by the reduction of the duty.

I ask to have read the statement I send to the desk, which I think is a very candid and clear statement from a manufacturer of this product.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

BLEACHING POWDER.

By the tariff act of 1897 bleaching powder was taken off the free list and a duty of 0.2 cent per pound was placed upon it. Prior to this change the price of bleaching powder in the United States was about

2 cents per pound. Either simultaneously with the placing of this 0.2 cent per pound duty, or shortly afterwards, the United Alkali Co. of Great Britain, who controlled more than 90 per cent of the bleach sold within the United States, lowered the price in the United States to about $1.87 per 100 pounds, and also paid the import duty.

The placing of this small import duty that was only about 10 per cent of the ruling price proved to be sufficient to inspire enough confidence among capitalists so that two bleaching-powder plants were erected in the United States, one at Niagara Falls and the other at Midland, Mich.; both plants increased their capacity from time to time until competition became very keen and prices were reduced to $1.25 per 100 pounds, which is the ruling price to-day on yearly contracts, the price being substantially the same in the United States and Great Britain.

The United Alkali Co. of Great Britain, and not the consumer, is paying the 0.2 cent per pound now assessed on imported bleach, and if the duty is reduced we do not think that any more bleaching powder would be imported or the price to the consumer reduced, for the following reason:

A bleaching-powder plant costs several times the annual output of the plant, and if the selling price changes 10 per cent, it would only affect the return on the investment in the bleaching-powder plant by a small part of the 10 per cent. It is not likely that the proposed reduction in the import duty will cause any plants now built to discontinue their operations, and thereby permit any increased amounts of bleaching powder to be brought into this country from abroad; neither would the prices be likely to change, for the reason that the selling price at the present time does not return a normal profit on the investment and new competitors are not likely to enter this market and thereby cause a still further reduction in the selling price.

To summarize: We believe the present import duty will furnish a larger revenue to the Government than a lower import duty, and at the same time the risk of an American industry being blotted out by a foreign monopoly is less than it would be if the import duty were lower.

Respectfully submitted.

THE DOW CHEMICAL CO.,
By HERBERT H. DOW,
General Manager.

MIDLAND, MICH.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I desire to call attention to the probable Democratic claim, and that is, that the proposed reduction of duty will increase the revenue.

According to the statistical document placed before us, the Finance Committee estimate that under the pending bill the importations of bleaching powder will be increased from 93,000,000 to 119,000,000 pounds. It is clear that if they are correct about this, and the duty is reduced one-half, one-tenth cent a pound duty on 119,000,000 pounds can not equal the amount of revenue which would be derived from the present duty of one-tenth of a cent a pound on 93,000,000 pounds. So evidently, from their own figures, there will be a clear loss of revenue to the Government from this reduction, and no one has yet stated, nor do I believe he can state, that the price to the consumer is going to be reduced by the reduction of the duty.

For these reasons, at the proper time, I shall move to amend the bill by substituting the present duty of two-tenths of a cent a pound.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, the Senator from Michigan has just stated that at the proper time he will offer an amendment. I desire to say that I have no sort of objection to Senators withholding their amendments if they see fit, but when Senators discuss a proposed amendment, and then, after having debated it for 10 or 15 minutes or half an hour, say they propose at some other time to offer that amendment, I think it is a waste of time. Senators ought either to offer the amendments now or to refrain from discussing proposed amendments to be submitted at some other stage of the consideration of the bill.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I think the criticism of the Senator is proper.

Mr. SIMMONS. I suggest that that has happened twice in the last hour. This is the second time it has occurred. We had quite a lengthy discussion, I think, over a proposed amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW]. He did not offer it. That was just so much time wasted, because when the amendment is offered later we will go through the same process of discussion.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

Mr. TOWNSEND. Just let me answer the Senator. I agree that the criticism of the Senator is just. When I rose I thought the Senate had changed the House bill. I find I read it incorrectly. When I commenced to speak, I had that in mind. After I rose my attention was called to the fact that the House, not the Senate, had made the change in the duty. I shall not offend again in this particular.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina is mistaken if he thinks I discussed a proposed amendment and then refused to offer it. I rose to inquire in regard to certain duties and the reasons for certain changes that were made.

Mr. SIMMONS. Probably I was mistaken in naming the Senator from Kansas. I think I was mistaken. Probably it was the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. SIMMONS. I am not complaining. I simply wish to call attention to the fact that we lose time when we engage in these discussions as to amendments that are to be proposed hereafter.

Mr. SMOOT. I referred to paragraph 16 of the bill. There is no amendment offered there by the House. I simply said that when the proper time came I should offer an amendment to it, and that is what I intend to do.

Mr. SIMMONS. To that statement I have no objection. What I was rather protesting against was, in connection with the statement that there would be an amendment offered later, that we should enter into debate upon the amendment that is to be hereafter offered.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 14, page 4, lines 11 and 12, before the words "impure tea," to insert "compounds of caffein, 25 per cent ad valorem," so as to make the paragraph read:

14. Caffein, $1 per pound; compounds of caffein, 25 per cent ad valorem; impure tea, tea waste, tea siftings or sweepings, for manufacturing purposes in bond, pursuant to the provisions of the act of May 16, 1908, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I ask that paragraph 14 and paragraph 19 go over. They are connected; that is, the remarks I have to make about the one I will make about the other at the same time. I have not the papers with me now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 15, page 4, line 17, after the word "preparations," to strike out "15" and insert "20," so as to make the paragraph read:

15. Calomel, corrosive sublimate, and other mercurial preparations, 20 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to line 22, page 4, as follows:

16. Chalk, precipitated, suitable for medicinal or toilet purposes; chalk put up in the form of cubes, blocks, sticks, or disks, or otherwise, including tailors', billiard, red, and other manufactures of chalk not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I desire to make some inquiries in regard to the paragraph relating to chalk.

There is a duty of 25 per cent provided, the same in both the House bill and the Senate bill, which is apparently a reduction from the present duty, which on the importations for 1912 was 43.10 per cent. The duty on the importations for 1905 was 46.12 per cent. The importations for that year were 400,000 pounds. Five years later it had increased from 400,000 pounds to 2,728,000 pounds, and there was an apparent decrease in the ad valorem duty, though there appears to be an increase in the price. I may not understand this, but how can there be a decrease? Oh, I see; the increase in the price resulted in the decrease in the ad valorem duty.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the duty is the same in the proposed bill and in the existing law, 25 per cent ad valorem. The only change in that paragraph is made by striking out the words "French chalk," that being really a talcum or a hydrated silicate of magnesia. That was the only change made by the House or by the Senate committee. The ad valorem duty is 25 per cent in both. We made no change.

Mr. BRISTOW. As I understand, the 25 per cent duty is applied to the entire paragraph here, while in the present law it is 1 cent a pound on certain chalks and 25 per cent on manufactures of chalks.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, yes; I was looking at the manufactures of chalk. I beg the Senator's pardon. Those are dutiable at 25 per cent.

Mr. BRISTOW. There is estimated a very large increase in the importation. I suppose that estimated increase is due to the reduction in the duty. Is that the basis for the estimated increase in the importation?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. So far as I am concerned, I think I have already stated my belief in regard to these estimates, that they are merely speculations, and I think the Senate so understands. They may be made by the experts on some basis, but I think they are not to be depended on and are simply approximations or estimates.

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course I may have taken the estimates too seriously, and I suppose I have, from the discussion we have had here to-day, but they are the basis upon which the revenue to be secured is estimated. If it is mere speculation or guesswork, there is nobody that can estimate how much revenue we are going to get from the bill, is there?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I shall be very glad to have the Senator suggest any better method than has been adopted and has been followed in this bill, of taking the imports under the rates which have existed and making an approximation as to what, in the opinion of the experts, the imports may be under new conditions. I know of no way in which one can look into the future and determine what it is to bring forth.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am inclined to think the Senator is right about that, but, taking this as an illustration, if we are to import 2,000,000 pounds more of this chalk next year than this year, will not such a large increase, an increase of practically 33⅓ per cent, estimating it roughly from the figures, have a tendency to reduce greatly the amount of American production? That is, are we not transferring the business from the United States to the foreign country, and in such transfer of the business from the United States to the foreign country will it not take from the American producer a business which he now has and result in reduced production, men out of employment, and hard times as far as that industry goes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, there is no supply of good chalk in this country. What we use is imported almost entirely. It is drawn from England and from France.

Mr. BRISTOW. I understand there is a great deal produced in Texas of the products contained in this paragraph. My information may be wrong, but I have been informed that the State of Texas does produce some of this material, and a large quantity of it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. My only source of information was the glossary prepared by the expert of the Tariff Board, who stated that there is no supply of chalk of good quality in this country, at least no supply available for the eastern manufacturing markets. We draw practically the whole of our consumption of this article from England and France.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator is correct as to chalk, ground, precipitated, and so forth, that simply means an increase in revenue and not a loss to an industry, but my information is different.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment was in paragraph 18, page 5, line 12, after the word "compounds," to insert the word "combinations," so as to make the paragraph read:

18. Chemical and medicinal compounds, combinations, and all similar articles dutiable under this section, except soap, whether specially provided for or not, put up in individual packages of 2½ pounds or less gross weight (except samples without commercial value) shall be dutiable at a rate not less than 20 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That chemicals, drugs, medicinal and similar substances, whether dutiable or free, imported in capsules, pills, tablets, lozenges, troches, ampoules, jubes, or similar forms, shall be dutiable at not less than 25 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, so that there may be no misunderstanding as to whether we can return to this paragraph 18 or not, I wish to make an inquiry. I have no objection at all to the word "combinations" being put in as an amendment, but I do want to refer to the paragraph as a whole. When all the committee amendments are through and the bill has been read I wish to offer an amendment to the paragraph as a whole, but not to affect the particular word "combinations."

The SECRETARY. Paragraph 19, at the foot of page 5, has already been passed over.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment was, in paragraph 23, on page 6, line 13, after the word "distillates," to strike out the words "including dead and creosote oil."

Mr. SMOOT. I move that paragraph 23 be stricken out of the bill entirely. I wish to say as a reason for that motion that benzol, naphthol, resorcin, toluol, and xylol, and all the coal-tar distillates that are named in this paragraph are at the present time on the free list, and there is where they ought to be now. They have not been on the dutiable list. They are not produced in this country. They are used in manufacturing coal-tar dyes, and they ought to go on the free list, where they are to-day. I move that paragraph 23 be stricken out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out paragraph 23 in the following words:

23. Coal-tar distillates, including dead and creosote oil not specially provided for in this section; anthracene and anthracene oil, benzol, naphthol, resorcin, toluol, xylol; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes, 5 per cent ad valorem.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when Mr. NELSON'S name was called). The senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] is absent from the Chamber in the transaction of public business. He is paired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON].

Mr. OLIVER (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN] to the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON]. I make the announcement of this transfer for the day. I vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], who is absent. If he were here, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN]. I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. WALSH] and vote "nay."

Mr. PERKINS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN], who is absent on business of the Senate. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] and vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIAMS. I desire to transfer my pair to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS. I transfer my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL] and vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER. I was requested to announce a pair between the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY].

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 40, as follows:

YEAS—27.

Bradley	Dillingham	Lodge	Sterling
Brandegee	Gallinger	Norris	Sutherland
Bristow	Gronna	Oliver	Townsend
Burton	Jackson	Page	Warren
Clapp	Jones	Perkins	Weeks
Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Poindexter	Works
Cummins	La Follette	Smoot

NAYS—40.

Ashurst	Johnson, Me.	Owen	Smith, Ga.
Brady	Johnston, Ala.	Pittman	Smith, Md.
Bryan	Kern	Pomerene	Smith, S. C.
Chilton	Lane	Robinson	Stone
Clarke, Ark.	Lea	Shafroth	Swanson
Fletcher	Lewis	Sheppard	Thomas
Gore	Martin, Va.	Shields	Thompson
Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Shively	Thornton
Hughes	Myers	Simmons	Vardaman
James	O'Gorman	Smith, Ariz.	Williams

NOT VOTING—29.

Bacon	Culberson	Nelson	Sherman
Bankhead	du Pont	Newlands	Smith, Mich.
Borah	Fall	Overman	Stephenson
Burleigh	Goff	Penrose	Tillman
Catron	Hitchcock	Ransdell	Walsh
Chamberlain	Lippitt	Reed
Colt	McCumber	Root
Crawford	McLean	Saulsbury

So Mr. SMOOT'S amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee to paragraph 23, line 13, striking out the words "including dead and creosote oil."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 15, before the word "benzol," to strike out the words "anthracene and anthracene oil."

Mr. BURTON. I should like to know what becomes of those items, "anthracene and anthracene oil." Do they go on the free list or in the basket clause?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. On the free list.

Mr. SMOOT. They go to paragraph 460 of the free list.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. We have now reached paragraph 24. I have sometimes thought that the Secretary did not read with his usual distinctness. I trust that he will read this paragraph so that we will all hear it.

The Secretary read paragraph 24, as follows:

24. Coal-tar products known as anilin oil and salts, toluidine, xylidin, cumidin, binitrotoluol, binitrobenzol, benzidin, tolidin, dianisidin, naphtylamin, diphenylamin, benzaldehyde, benzyl chloride, nitrobenzol and nitrotoluol, naphtylaminsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, naphtolsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, amidonaphtolsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, amidosalicylic acid, binitrochlorbenzol, diamidostilbendisulfoacid, metanilic acid, paranitranilin, dimethylanilin; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I congratulate the Secretary.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire is perfectly satisfied.

Mr. GALLINGER. The paragraph was read very correctly and lucidly. Now I should like to ask the Senator from Maine to give an explanation as to what these various products are.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They are coal-tar dyes.

Mr. GALLINGER. They must be different or there would be only one designation. Will the Senator tell us in what respect they differ?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They differ from those in paragraph 23.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I move that paragraph 24 be stricken out of the bill. I do this because all these are intermediary products for the manufacture of coal-tar dyes. They are not coal-tar dyes, but they are products from which coal-tar dyes are made. They are now on the free list, and there is no necessity for taxing them 10 per cent. They are not made in this country. They can not be made in this country. They are used, however, in this country in the manufacture of coal-tar dyes. I move that the paragraph be stricken out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah moves to strike out paragraph 24.

Mr. SMOOT. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK]. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. REED. I am paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. LODGE (after having voted in the affirmative). I have just been informed that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH], who I thought I saw in the Chamber, has not voted. I should like to ask if that is the case?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He did not vote.

Mr. LODGE. I have a general pair with that Senator. However, I transfer my pair to the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CATRON] and will let my vote stand.

The result was announced—yeas 30, nays 40, as follows:

YEAS—30.

Bradley	Cummins	Lodge	Sterling
Brady	Dillingham	Norris	Sutherland
Brandegee	Gallinger.	Oliver	Townsend
Bristow	Gronna	Page	Warren
Burton	Jackson	Perkins	Weeks
Clapp	Jones	Poindexter	Works
Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Sherman
Crawford	La Follette	Smoot

NAYS—40.

Ashurst	Johnston, Ala.	Pittman	Smith, Md.
Bryan	Kern	Pomerene	Smith, S. C.
Chilton	Lane	Ransdell	Stone
Clarke, Ark.	Lea	Robinson	Swanson
Fletcher	Lewis	Shafroth	Thompson
Gore	Martin, Va.	Sheppard	Thornton
Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Shields	Tillman
Hughes	O'Gorman	Shively	Vardaman
James	Overman	Simmons	Walsh
Johnson, Me.	Owen	Smith, Ariz.	Williams

NOT VOTING—26.

Bacon	Culberson	McLean	Saulsbury
Bankhead	du Pont	Myers	Smith, Ga.
Borah	Fall	Nelson	Smith, Mich.
Burleigh	Goff	Newlands	Stephenson
Catron	Hitchcock	Penrose	Thomas
Chamberlain	Lippitt	Reed
Colt	McCumber	Root

So Mr. SMOOT's amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment was, in paragraph 26, page 7, line 6, after the word "cellulose," to insert "15 per cent ad valorem."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I desire to speak briefly in regard to this paragraph. I should like to take it as a whole before the amendments are agreed to. I should like to have the whole paragraph read before the question is put on the first amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the paragraph.

The Secretary read paragraph 26, as follows:

26. Collodion and all other liquid solutions of pyroxylin, or of other cellulose esters, or of cellulose; compounds of pyroxylin or of other cellulose esters, whether known as celluloid or by any other name, if in blocks, sheets, rods, tubes, or other forms, not polished, wholly or partly, and not made into finished or partly finished articles, 15 per cent ad valorem; if polished, wholly or partly, or if finished or partly finished articles, of which collodion or any compound of pyroxylin or other cellulose esters, by whatever name known, is the component material of chief value, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, there are in the United States only four manufactories making collodion and the liquid solutions of pyroxylin and turning them into blocks, sheets, rods, and tubes, but the products of those factories are the foundation of the celluloid industry. The celluloid industry is a very large one, comparatively speaking. I believe it employs some 40,000 hands throughout the United States. It constitutes the principal industry in many places. In my own State there is one quite large town which is entirely supported and based upon the celluloid industry, and there are other factories scattered about the same neighborhood in Worcester County.

The celluloid industry has had severe competition. It has had difficulty in maintaining itself under the existing duties. The figures given in the Tariff Handbook as to importations are entirely misleading, for the simple reason that celluloid articles come in under many different heads and are classified under other kinds of goods.

The Tariff Handbook gives the manufactured articles or compounds of pyroxylin at $184,820, but a report of the German celluloid industry published in Berlin gives the exports of manufactured celluloid articles from Germany to the United States for the year 1912 as $348,000 from that one country. The figures also given in regard to exports from Germany show at once that our duties are far from being prohibitive; on the contrary, they leave the door wide open to a severe competition. The exports from Germany in 1907 amounted to $120,000, in 1908 to $122,000, in 1909 to $97,000, in 1910 to $127,000, in 1911 to $325,000, and in 1912 to $348,000. So that from Germany alone there comes $348,000 worth.

We also import largely from France. There is one large firm which imports a particular manufacture known as Parisian ivory, and that firm is believed to do a business of $300,000 per annum in this country. There is also a large amount brought from Japan.

This increase of importation shows that the duties are not prohibitive, but, on the contrary, that the competition of the foreign maker with our people is constantly increasing.

The other House cut the duty to a very low point, putting collodion and liquid solutions, together with the cellulose esters and cellulose, the raw material, into the same classification as the blocks, sheets, rods, and tubes, at 15 per cent ad valorem. They then put the manufactured articles at 35 per cent ad valorem. The old duties were specific, being 40 cents per pound on collodion and cellulose esters when made up in blocks, sheets, or tubes, and 65 cents per pound and 30 per cent ad valorem on the finished celluloid articles.

From the finished celluloid articles, where the severe competition comes, the specific duty of 65 cents per pound has been removed and the duty has been fixed by the other House at 35 per cent, as against the present duty of 60 per cent, and by the Senate at 40 per cent. The others have been cut from 40 and 45 cents a pound to 15 and 25 per cent, according to the Senate amendments.

I believe, Mr. President, that although the Senate amendments greatly improve the bill they still will make it almost impossible for this industry to maintain itself at all. I desire, as it is an industry of very great importance in my State and in other States, to state to the Senate something about its history.

In the first place, the industry is distinctly an American industry. It was owing to our inventions and our improvements that the manufacture of celluloid was developed and made possible in so many directions.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question. As I understood him, there are imports from Germany and France very much in excess of the total amount here stated?

Mr. LODGE. The imports from Germany alone are $348,000, according to their official report.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. More than twice as much as the Treasury Department reports?

Mr. LODGE. For all imports of celluloids.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. How does the Senator from Massachusetts account for that? Does the Senator think those articles have been smuggled into the country?

Mr. LODGE. No; I account for it by reason of the fact that these articles come in classified under the heads of other articles.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. What heads could they come in under?

Mr. LODGE. They are classified, for instance, as toilet articles; as toothbrushes, and so forth. They are classified under the head of the article in which the celluloid is used. They are used in an infinity of small articles.

Mr. SMOOT. As hairbrushes, for instance.

Mr. LODGE. As hairbrushes, toothbrushes, combs, and endless things; and so many of them are classified under different headings.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Do they not pay a higher duty under that form under the old tariff act?

Mr. LODGE. I have not made the comparison in all cases, but I fancy they pay a lower duty under those forms, for, if they did not, they would come in under this form.

There is an invested capital in the American industry of $14,000,000, and since the beginning of the industry to the present day there has been no undue circumstances in the growth of the business whatever, and the clean, clear conduct of the industry's affairs has merited the admiration of everybody who is familiar with it. There exist no trusts, no combinations, no intermingling of stockholders, directors, or anything of the character, and the keenest competition has always existed between the four manufacturing concerns in this country that make the raw material for the industry. I am speaking now of the raw material. Our foreign competitors are large and numerous. Factories for the manufacture of collodion and pyroxylin exist abroad as follows: Five in Germany, 2 in Austria, 3 in France, 1 in England, and 2 in Japan.

Now, I am going to take up the process of our manufacture and point out specifically the advantages of the countries which are our competitors.

The basis of our material is cotton. It is necessary for cotton to be of the very highest grade, clean, and through the manufacturing process of cotton cloths to be made into paper. Of course, in cotton we have the best standing in the world or as good as that of any other nation.

The paper entering into the manufacture of celluloid must be of the finest tissue. Its cost is difficult to average, but the records of manufacturers will show positively that the range is from 14 to 20 cents per pound. Absolute records will show that the German manufacturer secures his paper at a net cost of 8 cents per pound and the Japanese manufacturer undoubtedly as low, if not at a less price even than this.

The next process is the solution of this tissue paper into a combination of nitric and sulphuric acids. It is a well-known fact that Germany is the center of the acid market of the world. It has the great chemical combinations, trusts, or syndicates, which in Germany are not only sustained by the Government, but the Government has a part and lot in them. They have the greatest production of acids and the greatest consumption of acids of any country on earth, and this condition enables the manufacturers in Germany who use acids in their processes of celluloid manufacture to purchase them at from 20 to 25 per cent cheaper than they can be purchased in this country.

In the new bill acids used in the manufacture of celluloid have been placed on the free list; but, due to their corrosive nature, it is impracticable to transport them, and our manufacturers can not take advantage of the cheap German acids for this reason.

We now come to the most important element in the manufacture of celluloid. The result of the solution of tissue paper in acids is known as nitrocellulose. This is solvent in camphor. Camphor sells on the market to-day for about 42 cents per pound. The price is the same in European countries and in this country.

More than 90 per cent of all the camphor of the world comes from the island of Formosa. It is a Japanese Government monopoly, and we and the rest of the world outside of Japan have to buy at the price which Japan fixes. The agent of the Government is a great firm there, known as Mitsui & Co., who practically control all the camphor supply of the world.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if it is not true that the Germans make camphor synthetically?

Mr. LODGE. Oh, yes; there is synthetic camphor, but it is very little used.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. But it prevents the control of the supply of the other camphor by Japan.

Mr. LODGE. Not practically.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And it brings down the price.

Mr. LODGE. Not practically. It has no effect. Synthetic camphor does not take the place of the other at all.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Let me ask the Senator if when the Germans learned to make camphor synthetically it did not largely reduce the price of camphor, and is not that a check?

Mr. LODGE. Undoubtedly it forced down the price. It is an inferior product that is very little used either abroad or at home. It is probable that the Japanese manufacturer secures his camphor at considerably less cost than this, and I believe that the Japanese manufacturer pays in the neighborhood of 18 cents per pound for crude camphor. As regards European countries, the following conditions exist: There are two grades of crude camphor—B grade and BB grade. B grade is the crude camphor imported into the United States, and it is necessary for the American manufacturer to have this grade refined before it is possible to use it, and it is done at an additional cost of from 6 to 8 cents per pound. That is what is known in this country as refined camphor.

The BB grade is of higher distillation and is of such finer quality as to be suitable for the manufacture of celluloid without further purifying. It has been decided by customs officials in this country that the BB grade could not enter this country except under the head of refined camphor, on which in the past there has always been a duty of 6 cents per pound. Through the most reliable information, I learn that this BB grade is permitted to enter every country in the world as crude camphor, and free of duty. They not only admit the crude camphor but what we call refined, which it costs us 6 or 8 cents a pound to refine. In Germany, however, there is no duty on either crude or refined camphor.

As I have said, Mitsui & Co. are the selling agents of camphor in this country, acting as the representatives of the Japanese Government, and I have been informed by one of our manufacturers that his last contract for a supply of camphor contains a clause that any duties imposed on camphor in this country would be added to the purchase price demanded of the celluloid industry in their contract for this material.

I have here an article from an industrial chemical paper concerning the great factory for the manufacture of celluloid which has just been completed at Sakai by Mitsui & Co., which I shall not read.

Alcohol is also necessary as a solvent for nitrocellulose, and here the disadvantage of the American manufacturer is very serious. European manufacturers, and particularly German manufacturers, can purchase their alcohol at a net price of 25 and 26 cents per gallon. American manufacturers pay 40 to 42 cents per gallon. The reason for this great difference in the cost of those raw materials is that European alcohol is made chiefly from potatoes. Every German farmer raises potatoes, and spirits of all kinds are made from potatoes in Germany. It is one of their great industries.

The laws of this country will not permit the importation of grain alcohol, but the laws permit the use, free of excise tax, of denatured alcohol in our industries, yet our people are compelled to pay nearly twice as much as the European manufacturer, because alcohol in this country is made principally from corn or molasses. The American farmer secures a good price for his corn, and it is owing to this high price that the cost of alcohol is correspondingly high, and no amount of close buying, manipulation, or adjustment will secure a better price for our people. Some years ago, when the celluloid industry was making every effort to secure legislation allowing the use of denatured alcohol, denatured alcohol was selling in other countries, such as Canada, for from 13 to 25 cents per gallon, but by the time the law became effective the prices had advanced and American industries did not receive the expected benefit, as is well known from the experiment we made in respect of denatured alcohol. It did not turn out as we all hoped it would.

The pending tariff bill places methylated spirits or wood alcohol on the free list. This does not help the American celluloid industry in the slightest sense. Such spirits are not imported into this country at all. They can be made cheaper in this country than abroad, and, as a matter of fact, most all wood alcohol that is used abroad is manufactured in the United States. Furthermore, it is not fit for the purpose. The same is true of chemicals. For the reason that I have already stated, the Germans have an immense advantage with regard to chemicals.

Now, I come to the question of labor. Four years ago I looked up the question of wages with great care, taking the German official reports and the official Government reports of Japan, so that it was not mere guesswork. The other figures I know are correct, for they come from factories in my own State.

In France and Germany the male laborer in this industry gets from 70 to 80 cents per day and the women from 40 to 50 cents per day. In our factories the wages range from $2.10 to $2.50 per day for men and from $1 to $1.62 for women, while in Japan the Government statistics show that labor in kindred industries receives approximately 12 cents a day; but according to the report of the general superintendent of the recently completed Sakai celluloid factory—this is later than the figures I had before—the average daily wage of labor is 40 cents, and it is said that their labor is 90 per cent as productive as ours.

The records of the exports of other countries show that there was exported from Germany to all countries other than the United States unfinished celluloid sheeting to the extent of 5,791,000 pounds, valued at $2,527,000, at an average price per pound of 43.6 cents. From France there was exported of unfinished celluloid sheeting during 1912, 1,130,360 pounds, valued at $465,400, being an average price per pound of 41.1 cents, giving an average price per pound on which a levied tax of 15 per cent would be 6.3 cents per pound.

Those figures, taken in connection with the respective labor costs in this and foreign countries, show how impossible it would be for our people long to compete with foreign producers of this product.

Mr. President, the tremendous reductions that have been made in the rates of duty affecting the celluloid industry are not the worst part of it. For the first time, I think, in our tariff history a duty has been placed upon crude camphor. I need hardly say we do not produce any camphor in this country. The duty on it is, of course, a pure tax, and adds at once the rate of duty to the price of camphor; and, according to the contracts which the manufacturers have made, the Japanese will also add the duty.

That puts an additional burden on the industry in this country. You have not only in this bill cut the duties from 40 cents per pound to 15 per cent; from 45 cents per pound to 25 per cent; and from 65 cents a pound and 30 per cent ad valorem to 40 per cent ad valorem, as provided in the Senate bill, but you have put a tax on the raw material of the industry, one of its great constituent parts.

That, Mr. President, as I have pointed out in connection with another paragraph, is not free trade; it is not opening the market to fair competition; but it is a direct discrimination in favor of the foreign manufacturer.

The other makers of celluloid all have their camphor free. In Germany, as I have already pointed out, both the crude and the refined are free, and we are not only to have the present duty—which, in my judgment, is barely sufficient—cut all to pieces, but we are going to have the burden of a duty placed upon the crude raw material largely used in the industry. I think it will be a burden under which the industry can not possibly continue.

As I have said, Mr. President, it is a large industry in the sense that it employs 40,000 people. That is not large compared with some of the very great industries, such, for example, as the great metal and textile industries, but it is the livelihood of the people engaged in it. It has built up in my State one town with an extraordinarily good population. The factories are small individually; no one factory employs a great many hands; but the conditions are extremely healthful, the industry is a good one for people to engage in, and they are well paid.

I have taken the liberty of trespassing upon the time of the Senate because I think this industry has been treated with extreme severity, and I do not see how it is possible to justify, under any general proposition, the absolute discrimination in favor of the foreign maker. If everything had been made free, however hard that might have been upon the industry, it probably would not have destroyed it. At least, it would not have been a discrimination; but this is a direct discrimination—a direct protection of the foreign manufacturer.

When the item of camphor is reached I shall move—I fear only in vain—to restore camphor to the free list. In the meantime, Mr. President, I move to substitute, as the classification is the same, for the duties proposed by the Senate committee the existing duties, namely, instead of "15 per cent ad valorem," in lines 6 and 7, "40 cents per pound"; instead of "25 per cent ad valorem," in line 11, "40 cents per pound"; instead of "40 per cent ad valorem," in line 15, "65 cents per pound and 30 per cent ad valorem." I do not wish to delay the Senate, but I should like a vote on those three amendments, treated as one.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, I find, on examination of the celluloid industry, that one year ago the statistics showed that we were large exporters and manufacturers of celluloid and that this export trade had largely increased. I find that for the year ending June 30, 1911, we exported $1,694,000 of these manufactured products, while in 1907 our exports were $444,000, showing an increase of nearly 300 per cent in 1911. A large duty was placed on the manufacture of celluloid by the Dingley bill because of the tax upon alcohol; but with the removal of the tax the manufacturer can use denatured alcohol, so some of the burdens have been removed.

I want to call the attention of the Senate to the testimony of the president of the Arlington Manufacturing Co. before the Finance Committee in 1911. Mr. J. R. France, president of the Arlington Co., one of the companies appearing before the Finance Committee in 1911, in speaking of a bill permitting the use of denatured alcohol in the manufacture of celluloid, said:

The increasing cost of manufacture makes this tax entirely prohibitive to the sale of our goods in all markets except home. There are large fields open to us from which, for this cost, we are entirely shut out. The superiority of American manufacturers in this line is so much in advance of foreign competition that despite the disparity of earnings by employees as compared with foreign labor we could easily compete and that with good profits, except for this tax.

The tax has been removed.

Mr. LODGE. The tax on what?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. On denatured alcohol.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator must know that the legislation of some years ago concerning denatured alcohol has not proved successful. We have not been able to put denatured alcohol on the market. The farmers have not entered into its production as we expected they would.

Mr. LANE. There were certain restrictions placed upon the farmer in the way of testing and in connection with the apparatus used in the manufacture of the product which rendered it absolutely impossible for him to take advantage of the law. I introduced a bill on yesterday—I hope the Senator will help me get the bill through—relieving the farmers of these restrictions and freeing their hands. When we do that, I feel confident they will turn to the manufacture of this product.

Mr. LODGE. I sincerely hope they will. I supported the legislation when it was before the Senate; but the Senator confirms what I said that thus far it has not worked.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In relation to the tax upon alcohol this bill provides for the free importation of denatured alcohol.

Mr. LODGE. It provides for the importation of methylated spirits or wood alcohol free of duty.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And denatured alcohol.

Mr. LODGE. Denatured alcohol?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes; denatured alcohol under the bill is to come in free.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I repeat the announcement I made on the last vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Has the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have a pair with that Senator and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Has the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I withhold my vote.

Mr. BACON. I inquire whether the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] has or has not voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. BACON. I am paired with that Senator and therefore withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. REED. I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH]. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SAULSBURY. Has the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I therefore withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. MYERS. I ask if the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. MYERS. I have a general pair with that Senator. In his absence I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] to the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CHILTON (after having voted in the negative). I see that the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON] has not voted. I thought he was in the Chamber. I therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 46, as follows:

YEAS—21.

Bradley	Dillingham	Oliver	Sutherland
Brandegee	Gallinger	Page	Warren
Bristow	Jones	Perkins	Weeks
Burton	Kenyon	Sherman
Clark, Wyo.	La Follette	Smoot
Cummins	Lodge	Sterling

NAYS—46.

Ashurst	Fletcher	James	Lea
Borah	Gore	Johnson, Me.	Lewis
Brady	Gronna	Johnston, Ala.	Martin, Va.
Bryan	Hollis	Kern	Martine, N. J.
Crawford	Hughes	Lane	Norris

O'Gorman	Robinson	Smith, Ga.	Tillman
Overman	Shafroth	Smith, Md.	Townsend
Owen	Sheppard	Smith, S. C.	Vardaman
Pittman	Shields	Stone	Walsh
Poindexter	Shively	Swanson	Williams
Pomerene	Simmons	Thompson
Ransdell	Smith, Ariz.	Thornton

NOT VOTING—29.

Bacon	Colt	McCumber	Saulsbury
Bankhead	Culberson	McLean	Smith, Mich.
Burleigh	du Pont	Myers	Stephenson
Catron	Fall	Nelson	Thomas
Chamberlain	Goff	Newlands	Works
Chilton	Hitchcock	Penrose
Clapp	Jackson	Reed
Clarke, Ark.	Lippitt	Root

So Mr. LODGE's amendment was rejected.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like to have the Senate make the rates of this paragraph a little more consistent. I am not going to ask the Senate to vote upon changing the 15 per cent duty upon the liquid solution, but I am going to call the attention of the Senate to the rate provided on blocks, sheets, rods, tubes, or other forms not polished.

The rate to-day upon those articles is 45 cents a pound. The equivalent ad valorem on those articles to-day is 20.07 cents per pound. The Finance Committee of the Senate have raised that from 20.07 to 25 per cent; and then they have taken the finished product and reduced it from the equivalent ad valorem of to-day of 59 per cent to 40 per cent.

I move that, in line 11, paragraph 26, page 7, the figures "25" be stricken out and "20" inserted; and that, in line 15, the figures "40" be stricken out and "45" inserted. I do this to make the rates more consistent. If we reduce the rate upon blocks, sheets, rods, and tubes, as provided by the Finance Committee of the Senate, to what it is to-day, we will then at least give the manufacturer of the finished product in which there are importations a chance to live; and we will take off 5 per cent on the one and make it what it is to-day, and then reduce the present duty from 59.28 per cent to 45 per cent.

I make that as a motion, and ask for the yeas and nays upon it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Prior to that, there is a committee amendment which has not yet been agreed to. The Secretary will state the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. The whole paragraph was read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the committee.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, line 6, after the word "cellulose" and the comma, it is proposed to insert "15 per cent ad valorem."

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah proposes an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On line 11, instead of the numerals "25," proposed to be inserted by the committee, it is proposed to insert "20"; and on line 15, instead of inserting the numerals "40," as proposed by the committee, it is proposed to insert "45."

The VICE PRESIDENT. On that the Senator from Utah asks for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just one word before the yeas and nays are taken. The Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON] stated that denatured alcohol was on the free list under this bill. I wish to say that the Senator from Maine is mistaken. It is not on the free list in this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. If the Senator will permit me, I have an explanation to make. As he understood, we have that matter before our committee. I thought we had acted upon it. It is still before the Finance Committee, however, and not disposed of. I was wrong in making the statement that it is in the bill. I labored under a misapprehension about that. It has not been agreed upon.

In answer to the statement of the Senator from Utah, that as to collodion in blocks and tubes we have raised the duty, I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that in the present law the duty is 45 cents per pound, and the average unit of value in 1912 was $2.24. We placed the duty at 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. And the equivalent ad valorem at 45 cents per pound on the $2.24 is 20.07 per cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Twenty-five per cent upon the $2.24 per pound would be more than 45 cents per pound.

Mr. SMOOT. Why, certainly; I have said that, Mr. President. It is an increase.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, no; the Senator stated it the other way.

Mr. SMOOT. No; I beg the Senator's pardon. I stated that it was an increase. It is an increase from 20.07 per cent to 25 per cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I misunderstood the Senator. I thought he had made it somewhat less. But we left a margin between the duty upon the two things, the difference between 25 and 40 per cent, as a manufacturing margin.

Mr. SMOOT. And I have asked that that be made 20 and 45.

Mr. CUMMINS. I ask what the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah is on the finished product?

Mr. SMOOT. The amendment I propose is to make the duty on the finished product 45 per cent, and to decrease the rate of 25 per cent provided by the Senate Finance Committee to 20 per cent on blocks and sheets.

Mr. CUMMINS. It seems to me the Senator from Utah ought to divide the question. I should like to vote to substitute 20 for 25, but I also desire to vote against raising the other figure to 45. I would rather keep it at 40. I think the proper course would be to divide the amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am convinced——

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I believe the Senator from Utah had the floor. I beg his pardon.

Mr. SMOOT. No; I did not have the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I simply wish to state that I think the unit of value given for collodion in blocks and in tubes at $2.24 must be a mistake, because the value of the finished product given below is only $2.22. Therefore I shall not accept these figures as being correct. The Senator from Utah will observe that the unit value of finished collodion is less than that given for collodion in blocks and tubes.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I know that $2.24, the unit value, at 45 cents per pound, is 20.07 per cent. If it were 20 per cent, it would be one-fifth of $2.24, which would be 44.8 cents per pound; and the seven one-hundredths of a cent additional makes it 45 cents per pound.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes; but I call the attention of the Senator from Utah to the apparent mistake. Here are reports of 1,178 pounds, with a value of $2,641; and it seems to me it can not be that that is correct.

Mr. SMOOT. It is incorrect. I will say, the compiler, no doubt, has made a mistake as to the unit value of the manufactured product in your handbook. The unit value of the manufactured product in the print is $2.22, whereas on the blocks and tubes the unit value is $2.24, an increase of 2 cents over the manufactured product. But if the Senator will notice the equivalent rate named is correct. That is 59.28 per cent. The mistake is only in the one item of the cost per unit of the manufactured article.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I ask for a division of the amendment submitted by the Senator from Utah.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the first amendment offered by the Senator from Utah.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, in line 11, instead of the numerals "25," proposed to be inserted by the committee, the Senator from Utah moves to insert "20."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator call for the yeas and nays upon that amendment?

Mr. SMOOT. No; I will not ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The next amendment submitted by the Senator from Utah will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, line 15, strike out "35"; and instead of inserting "40," as proposed by the committee, the Senator from Utah proposes to insert "45."

Mr. TOWNSEND. What is the duty now?

Mr. SMOOT. The equivalent ad valorem now is 59.28.

Mr. CUMMINS. It is obvious that there must be some misunderstanding here. The finished product could not be reduced to a unit, because it comprises a great many forms of manufacture. There could be no unit, properly speaking, in the finished product. Therefore I can not rely upon that statement in the report that we have before us.

Mr. SMOOT. I have stated that I myself believe that is an error, although the unit value in this particular is the unit value per pound. While I believe there is an error, and do not question that there is, if the Senator will notice the amount of importations and the amount that was collected, he will see that the rate would be 59 per cent.

Mr. CUMMINS. It must be obvious, however, that a pound of celluloid pulp might be very, very different from a pound of celluloid boxes. Therefore I do not believe any weight can be attached to this classification. That is one of the reasons I thought the question ought to be divided.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I wish to ask the Senator from Utah if, under the Payne-Aldrich bill, the tax on the manufactured product is less than on the raw material?

Mr. SMOOT. The equivalent ad valorem duty upon the manufactured product is less than the equivalent ad valorem duty upon the liquid solution, but about two and a half times the amount of duty upon the blocks, sheets, rods, and tubes.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] has said that the imports were very much larger than are indicated by the handbook.

Mr. SMOOT. That applied only to the manufactured article; not to the liquid solution.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. But it is possible that under the Payne-Aldrich bill the manufactured product was cheaper than the raw material?

Mr. SMOOT. Why, no; of course it is not.

Mr. LODGE. The average unit of the manufactured article is $2.74.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the difficulty of getting along with this handbook. My attention is drawn to it because we have been looking it over.

If the Senator will look at the tables dealing with collodion, according to the first one, which covers the raw material, the average unit under the Wilson bill was 71 cents; under the Dingley tariff $6.23; under the Payne tariff, in 1910, 74 cents; in 1912, 55½ cents; estimated for a 12-month period under the pending bill, $1. The statement that $6.23 was the average unit under the Dingley tariff must be an error, I think.

Mr. SIMMONS. I entirely agree with the Senator that there must be some error as to the unit values in these three brackets. To illustrate a little bit further, in the second bracket the unit value of 1910 is given as 86 cents; the unit value of 1912 is given as $2.24. In the third bracket the unit value of 1910 is given as $4.11 and the unit value of 1912 as $2.22. It is apparent to me that there has been some mistake.

Mr. LODGE. There is a mistake or misprint, no doubt. Of course they are confusing. I should also like to ask, in that same item, the average unit being 55 cents in 1912, what is the basis for making it $1 in the estimate? I do not think the price has doubled.

Mr. SIMMONS. I imagine these figures are largely misprints, Mr. President.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The figure for 1905 ought to be 0.623, instead of $6.23.

Mr. LODGE. I had guessed that that was probably what was meant, but the basis of the estimate was what interested me. Fifty-five cents being the unit this year, why should it rise and be estimated to be $1 next year?

Mr. SIMMONS. I should imagine that in making the estimate of $1 under the Senate bill, the statistician probably took the averages during two or three prior years and reached the result in that way. Of course, I am not prepared to say to the Senator exactly the process by which the expert of the department reached that conclusion. I wish to say, however, that the expert who prepared this table is the same expert who has done this work for the committee for many years. He was with the committee in 1909 when the Payne-Aldrich bill was prepared.

Mr. LODGE. I am not blaming the expert. I think perhaps the expert had an idea when he raised the figure from 55 cents to $1, but I wanted to see whether or not anybody else had the same idea. That is, you put a duty on camphor, and the duty on camphor of course advances the value of the liquid pyroxylin. Therefore, your expert, I think probably correctly, has put his unit of value 45 cents higher than it was last year, and I wanted to see whether the committee knew it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

The amendment was rejected.

The SECRETARY. The committee proposes, in line 11, to strike out "15" and in lieu thereof to insert "25."

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. Also, in line 15, to strike out "35" and in lieu thereof to insert "40."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 29, on page 8, as follows:

27. Coloring for brandy, wine, beer, or other liquors, 40 per cent ad valorem.

28. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, roots, stems, vegetables, seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds), seeds of morbid growth, and weeds, any of the foregoing which are natural and uncompounded drugs and not edible, and not specially provided for in this section, but which are advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the drugs and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

29. Ergot, 10 cents per pound.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine why ergot has been taken from the free list? It has been there since 1872. I ask as a matter of curiosity.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Simply for the revenue, with the other drugs.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To collect some revenue from it, of course.

Mr. LODGE. I think on this item of taking ergot from the free list and making it dutiable at 10 cents a pound I shall ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair inquires of the Senator from Massachusetts on what he asks for the yeas and nays?

Mr. LODGE. I move to strike out the paragraph.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the bill by striking out paragraph 29, being all of line 6, on page 8, as follows:

29. Ergot, 10 cents per pound.

Mr. LODGE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I again announce my pair and withhold my vote.

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS]. I therefore withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I make the same announcement as heretofore with reference to my pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH]. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay." I desire to say at this time, if I may be permitted to do so, that on all roll calls where I have not been present to answer I have been engaged on committee work of the Senate.

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT]. If he were present, I would vote "nay."

Mr. SUTHERLAND (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. On account of his absence I withhold my vote. I will let this announcement stand for the remainder of the day.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I repeat the announcement made by me upon the last roll call, and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CHILTON. I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and vote "nay."

Mr. BACON. May I inquire if the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. BACON. I again announce my pair with that Senator. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay."

Mr. BANKHEAD. I announce my pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] and withhold my vote.

Mr. TILLMAN. I vote "nay."

Mr. CHILTON (after having voted in the negative). That necessitates the withdrawal of my vote, as I had transferred my pair to the Senator from South Carolina.

The result was announced—yeas 26, nays 39, as follows:

YEAS—26.

Borah	Crawford	Lippitt	Smoot
Bradley	Cummins	Lodge	Sterling
Brady	Dillingham	Norris	Townsend
Brandegee	Gallinger	Oliver	Warren
Bristow	Gronna	Page	Weeks
Burton	Jones	Poindexter
Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Sherman

NAYS—39.

Ashurst	La Follette	Ransdell	Smith, S. C.
Bryan	Lane	Robinson	Stone
Fletcher	Lea	Shafroth	Swanson
Gore	Lewis	Sheppard	Thompson
Hollis	Martin, Va.	Shields	Thornton
Hughes	Martine, N. J.	Shively	Tillman
James	O'Gorman	Simmons	Vardaman
Johnson, Me.	Owen	Smith, Ariz.	Walsh
Johnston, Ala.	Pittman	Smith, Ga.	Williams
Kern	Pomerene	Smith, Md.

NOT VOTING—31.

Bacon	Colt	McLean	Root
Bankhead	Culberson	Myers	Saulsbury
Burleigh	du Pont	Nelson	Smith, Mich.
Catron	Fall	Newlands	Stephenson
Chamberlain	Goff	Overman	Sutherland
Chilton	Hitchcock	Penrose	Thomas
Clapp	Jackson	Perkins	Works
Clarke, Ark.	McCumber	Reed

So Mr. LODGE's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRISTOW. I call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the figures on this paragraph as to the value of the average unit. The whole paragraph in 1896 under the Wilson Act was valued at 15 cents per pound. In 1905 under the Dingley Act it was valued at 36.3 cents per pound. In 1910 under the Payne Act at 29.1 cents. In 1912 under the Payne Act at 90½ cents. Its estimated value under this bill is 30 cents. With a duty of 10 cents a pound imposed on an article that has been on the free list, how do you get an average reduction in the value per unit from 90½ cents to 30 cents?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, it seems to me there must be a misprint there. It must be that instead of 90 it should be 30. I can not see any other explanation. Being only 29.1 cents for 1910, of course there could not be such a rise in the value as that.

Mr. BRISTOW. That probably may be true, but I am afraid this is not of as much value to us as it might be, because of the many errors it seems to contain.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment was, in paragraph 30, page 8, line 12, after the word "containing," to insert "more than 5 per centum of."

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment to that amendment by making it "10 per centum of." I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the reason why I offer the amendment. If it is not 10 per cent ethyl acetate or acetic ether will fall back into paragraph 17 and take the extreme high rate provided for articles manufactured and containing 20 per cent of alcohol or less. The 5 per cent takes care of sulphuric ether, which is, of course, the great anæsthetic that is prepared from ethyl alcohol with sulphuric acid, but ethyl acetate or acetic ether is prepared from alcohol with acetic acid and contains about 10 per cent of alcohol. Unless we increase 5 per cent to 10 per cent, ethyl acetate and acetic ether will fall back into paragraph 17 and take the higher rate. If you leave it at 5 per cent it takes care only of the sulphuric ether, which is the anæsthetic.

Mr. President, I sincerely hope that the Senate will agree to this amendment at least and not allow those articles to take an extremely high rate, and that is what they will do if the bill passes as reported.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the reason why the committee used that percentage was because the expert upon whom we relied stated, and he now states, that 5 per cent of alcohol is sufficient; that beyond that they should pay the duty which articles containing alcohol pay; but so far as sulphuric ether is concerned, the expert informs us that 5 per cent is sufficient.

Mr. SMOOT. Five per cent on sulphuric acid is sufficient. There is only 4 per cent of alcohol used in the compounding of sulphuric acid. That is the great anæsthetic. But 5 per cent will not take care of the ethyl acetate or the acetic ether, because about 10 per cent of alcohol is used in the ethers I have mentioned. If you leave the rate at 5 per cent, then those two ethers will fall into paragraph 17 and take the rate that is provided for compounds containing not more than 20 per cent of alcohol.

Mr. BRISTOW. Let me ask the Senator, if I may interrupt him, what will be the specific difference in the rate? How much higher than this rate will that make it?

Mr. SMOOT. I will tell the Senator in a moment. On all alcohol compounds not specifically provided for in this section, if containing 20 per cent of alcohol or less, it would be 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem. That is where it would fall, because that is the least that is provided for in that paragraph. I have not figured as to the equivalent ad valorem, but I will assure the Senator that it will be a very high rate.

Mr. BRISTOW. The rate in this paragraph is 5 cents per pound.

Mr. SMOOT. It is the proviso that I am speaking of now.

Mr. BRISTOW. Oh, the proviso.

Mr. SMOOT (reading)—

Provided, That no article containing more than 5 per cent of alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Therefore, if the ethers contain more than 5 per cent of alcohol they are not assessed under this paragraph, but fall under paragraph 17.

Mr. BRISTOW. And under paragraph 17, as I understand it, the rate is 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem, which would be an exceedingly high rate on those ethers.

Mr. BRISTOW. It is 10 cents a pound more, this duty.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What will be the amount of those articles in commerce as to the volume of importations?

Mr. SMOOT. I have not——

Mr. CRAWFORD. I mean the two ethers that the Senator claims will not be within the 5 per cent limit.

Mr. SMOOT. I will see if the figures are here.

Mr. CUMMINS. While the Senator from Utah is preparing to answer the question of the Senator from South Dakota, I should like to ask the Senator from Maine whether he disputes the statement made by the Senator from Utah in regard to some of the articles here in their ordinary form, that they would fall under another paragraph with a higher duty.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I, of course, have no special knowledge of my own about it. I do not pretend to have; but we had an expert upon whom we relied, and the expert now states to me that that percentage is sufficient, notwithstanding the statement made by the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator from Iowa that I am perfectly aware that it is sufficient for the sulphuric ether.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have called the expert's attention particularly to the other articles. He is here present. He says it is sufficient for them. I know nothing except what he says.

Mr. SMOOT. I say it is not sufficient for them; manufacturers of those ethers say they do contain more than 5 per cent of alcohol.

Mr. LANE. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah why they do?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I wish to ask the Senator——

Mr. SMOOT. Because it requires that quantity of alcohol to produce them.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Where does the Senator get his information?

Mr. LANE. What is the reason?

Mr. SMOOT. They can not be prepared in any other way.

Mr. LANE. Then, the Senator says that acetic acid is not as good a solvent as sulphuric acid. Acetic acid is one of the most perfect solvents known by chemists. I should like to know the reason why it will not dissolve as much alcohol as sulphuric acid.

Mr. SMOOT. It takes more alcohol.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana will state his point or order.

Mr. KERN. The point of order is that we do not hear a word said by the Senators engaged in the colloquy, and we would like to hear.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Before the Senator from Utah takes his seat, he has made the assertion that it will take 10 per cent. May I ask the Senator whence he obtains his information?

Mr. SMOOT. I obtain my information not only from men who pass upon the rate of duty levied at the port of New York, but from the manufacturers themselves.

Mr. WILLIAMS. You have obtained your information from the manufacturers?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; from the manufacturers.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Have you obtained your information from any men who are experts with regard to these particular matters and found that amount of alcohol to be necessary?

Mr. SMOOT. I have.

Mr. WILLIAMS. So it is a difference of opinion between your expert and the expert who serves the Senator from Maine, is it?

Mr. SMOOT. I have not confined my investigation of this question to one man. I have gone further than that and I am fully convinced that the ethers spoken of by me contain about 10 per cent alcohol.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is the Senator prepared to give an answer to my interrogatory a moment ago as to the amount of importation of these classes of ether and what——

Mr. SMOOT. The importations even under the present rate are very, very small. In fact, I will say that the specific duties do not amount to 25 per cent, as shown by the Democratic handbook. The value of imports in 1905 was $3,485; in 1910, $3,656.

Mr. CRAWFORD. To what extent are they manufactured in this country? To what extent are they articles of commerce?

Mr. SMOOT. A large quantity of them are manufactured here.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Of these particular classes of ether?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Has the Senator any figures on that?

Mr. SMOOT. Not as to the production in this country, but even with the rate to-day there is very little importation of those ethers.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What I want to find out is whether we are spending time over some technical classification of ether which may not be in general significance or general use or whether it is something of more consequence. I am sure I do not know.

Mr. SMOOT. They are used very extensively.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Utah what is the present duty, and whether the proposed duty as he estimates increases or decreases the rate of the present law?

Mr. SMOOT. If they fall into paragraph 17, as the wording of the paragraph will take them, then they will carry an increased percentage.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, I should like to say, for the information of Senators who are not familiar with this subject, that it does not require a particle of alcohol to make acetic ether, for the reason that acetic acid and alcohol are made by the same process. Just one particle more of oxygen converts alcohol into ether. Stopping just short of that process in distilling it, the ether, with the alcohol which goes on into ether, will be converted into acetic ether. I do not know of any reason, physical or chemical, why it would require or would take a larger proportion of alcohol than do the other ethers. That is not known to us who use the article.

Mr. SMOOT. Those who make it know, and they say that it does take about 10 per cent of alcohol.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, while I do not want to be offensive—far from it—I should like to inquire again of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] just upon what information he bases this positive assertion of his about a technical matter of this kind?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the information upon which I base my statement is obtained from an expert who has given me the information and also from the manufacturers of ether.

Mr. STONE. The expert who gave the information! I am curious, if I may venture the inquiry, to know who this expert is. Whom does he serve—the Government or some private interest?

Mr. SMOOT. He serves the Government; but any Senator has a perfect right to write to New York to find out exactly how these articles enter into this country, the classifications under which they come, and the rates that are imposed upon them, or for any other information connected therewith.

Mr. STONE. But the committee can not write to the expert unless we know who he is. If he is a Government official, we would like to communicate with him and see whether the other expert furnished by the Government of the United States, in the employ of the United States, and supposed to be thoroughly competent in matters of this particular kind tells the committee what has been related here in the hearing of the Senate. This expert is here at the call this moment of Senators. He states one thing. The Senator from Utah assumes to contradict him and assumes to have some special scientific knowledge of this matter, but when we ask him about it it seems he quotes from some mysterious man off in New York, who, he says, is in the Government employ. Of course, I accept his statement that the man is in the Government employ; and if so, I should like to question him and the committee would like to question him. Who is he?

Mr. SMOOT. Well, Mr. President, so far as that is concerned, I am not compelled to tell the Senator to whom I write or where I get my information.

Mr. STONE. No; the Senator is not compelled to do so.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to say that if the Senator really desires to know, and is interested in finding out, I can tell the Senator, and will tell him.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will tell the Senator from Missouri. I have the information here.

Mr. STONE. Very well.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The expert the committee had was an expert chemist who happens to have a German name, and I find that this language occurs in some notes and observations compiled by Thomas J. Doherty, Esq., who is a special attorney of the Customs Division. He seems evidently to have been the expert who gave the Senator from Utah his information, because this lawyer says:

Attention is particularly invited to the proviso which H. R. 3321 has attached to this paragraph. It must have been placed there under a misapprehension. What is meant by this remark is that with the exception of amyl nitrite and amyl acetate the ethers here mentioned are all made with ethyl alcohol, and in their finished condition they all contain alcohol. Sulphuric ether, which is the great anæsthetic, is prepared from ethyl alcohol with sulphuric acid. It contains ordinarily about 4 per cent of alcohol.

Which is just what the Senator from Utah said.

Ethyl acetate or acetic ether is prepared from alcohol with acetic acid and contains about 10 per cent of alcohol.

Which is just what the Senator said.

Ethyl chloride is prepared from alcohol by hydrochloric acid. It will be seen that the effect of the proviso is to exclude from the paragraph the most important of the articles that are named in the paragraph.

Which is just what the Senator said.

Articles so excluded fall within the terms of paragraph 17 at considerably higher rate of duty.

Now, we will put the chemical expert whom the committee had against the legal expert whom the Senator had, and try it out anyhow in the shape of the law as we have drawn it.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, not only have I taken the information referred to by the Senator, but I have inquired of those who manufacture the article in this country. I notice the Finance Committee, or the Democratic members of the Finance Committee at least, took notice of the fact that as the provision came from the House it meant nothing, and so they changed this proviso by adding as to ethers "more than 5 per cent of alcohol." If they will change that 5 per cent to 10 per cent, then everything in that paragraph will fall under the rates provided in the paragraph.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there is no question but that the committee itself had an expert, and the minority of the committee had an expert who furnished the notes which the Senator from Utah quotes. As to the relative competency of those two men I know nothing, but I want my medical friend from Oregon [Mr. LANE], in whom I have great confidence as a physician, to restate what he said on this point. I will say that, while a long time ago I had some knowledge of medicine, I am not familiar with this particular item, though I have used a great deal of the article.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Before that occurs, if the Senator from New Hampshire will pardon me a moment, I will say that I do not want to be misunderstood. Of course, both the majority and the minority have had experts; and that is right. I merely wanted to call attention to the fact that the expert who furnished this information upon the chemical schedule to the Senator from Utah was a lawyer, whereas ours was a chemist.

Mr. GALLINGER. I understood the Senator from Mississippi to say that. Now, if the Senator from Oregon, who has been recently in the active practice of the profession of medicine, would again state what he said on this point, it would be interesting to me, if to no one else.

Mr. LANE. Very well, Mr. President, I will try to make it plain and simple for the Senator. I will state that anyone who has ever made cider, and then converted it into cider vinegar, knows this particular fact from his own experience, that at a certain temperature, if kept long enough, it becomes hard cider, containing alcohol from a conversion of the element of sugar in it, when it becomes an intoxicating drink. Allow the process to go one degree further under the same conditions of heat, moisture, and the intervention of a certain bacillus which promotes fermentation, and it becomes vinegar, of which acetic acid is the main component part. Stop just short of that in the distillation or conversion of it, and you will have a certain amount of vinegar, if you place it in a receptable with a residue containing alcohol. I am assured by men who have more information than I concerning the manufacture of ether chemically that carrying 2 per cent of its own ethylic alcohol, it becomes acetic ether. Any of you know how to make vinegar and any of you know how to make alcohol out of cider, and any one of you, with a little bit of preparation, can make acetic ether at a very small expense. That, in a short and brief way, was what I meant to set forth in my previous statement.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] a little while ago made a statement to the effect that if this contention were right and this commodity was admitted under paragraph No. 17 it would result in an increase of the rate of duty. I am sure he will not persist in that statement in view of the fact that acetic ether under the present law now bears a duty of 250 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not speaking of the present law. I am speaking of that provision.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] asked the Senator from Utah the direct question whether, if this commodity fell under paragraph No. 17, it would be an increase of the rate, and the Senator from Utah, as I understood him, said that it would. The rate of duty under the present law is 250 per cent. The Senator from Utah can state in a moment what the rate will be under the proposed law, even if this article comes in under paragraph No. 17.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey where he gets the information that the rate of duty is 250 per cent?

Mr. HUGHES. Under the present law the rate is 50 cents a pound and not less than 25 per cent ad valorem. The price of acetic ether at present is about 20 cents per pound, making the rate of duty 250 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I take the Tariff Handbook prepared by the Democratic members of the committee and turn to that particular paragraph, and I find ethers, on all of which the specific duty does not amount to 25 per cent. Then you find above that sulphuric ether, which is in this paragraph. The next is ethyl chloride, which comes in under the Payne-Aldrich law at 30 per cent, just as I said, and then all other ethers. Under that head the highest rate—and that was in 1912—was 93.81 per cent, while in 1910 it was 142 per cent.

Mr. HUGHES. I call the Senator's attention to the language of the Payne-Aldrich bill, which is the bill now under discussion.

Mr. SMOOT. Not at all. I have not referred to that bill.

Mr. HUGHES. I have referred to it, and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] referred to it, and I am trying to correct a wrong impression which I think the Senator from Utah left on the mind of the Senator from Kansas. To do that I will read the language of the Payne-Aldrich law, which provides that—

Ethers of all kinds not specially provided for in this section—

Which includes acetic ethers—

50 cents per pound.

Further down it says:

That no article of this paragraph shall pay a less rate of duty than 25 per cent ad valorem.

As I have said, a duty of 50 cents per pound amounts to an equivalent ad valorem of about 250 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. Then there is a mistake in the document.

Mr. LODGE. The document is wrong.

Mr. HUGHES. I am not concerned about that. I simply wanted to correct what I regarded as a wrong impression left on the mind of the Senator from Kansas by the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Kansas is not asking for an increase over the present rate. We were not discussing the question of the increase over the present rate; we were discussing the question whether, if this paragraph should be passed as it stands, these ethers would not go out of this paragraph and fall into paragraph 17.

Mr. HUGHES. I would not have obtruded myself into the discussion at all had it not been that the Senator from Kansas asked the Senator from Utah the question point blank, whether or not, if these duties fell under paragraph 17, it would result in an increase over the present rates; and the Senator from Utah—whether he understood the Senator from Kansas or not I do not know—said it would result in an increase. That is the reason I wanted to make the correction.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator asked me that question, I do not remember it; but whatever he did ask, I said that I did not have the present law with me here, and I could not tell what it was; but I referred to the Tariff Handbook and quoted him the rate on all ethers on which the specific duties do not amount to 25 per cent, and gave him the amount of the imports.

Mr. BRISTOW. I desire to say that I meant to ask the Senator from Utah two questions: First, if his contention were correct, what would be the increase over the duty carried in this paragraph?

Mr. SMOOT. That is as I remember it.

Mr. BRISTOW. And then I asked whether it would increase the duty over the present law, and I understood the Senator to say that it would.

Mr. HUGHES. That was my understanding.

Mr. BRISTOW. I want to see if I understand this controversy.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, what did the Senator from New Jersey say was the price of ether to-day?

Mr. HUGHES. Twenty cents a pound.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, if the commodity falls under paragraph 17, the duty would be 50 per cent, and 20 per cent extra would be 70 per cent, if the proposed amendment is not adopted.

Mr. BRISTOW. I want to see if I understand this matter correctly. If the Senator from Utah is correct in his contention, it will increase the duties on some of these acids to 70 per cent over those carried in this paragraph; and if the Senator from Utah is not correct, the duty will be the same as that provided in this paragraph on the ethers to which he refers.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the proposition which the Senator from Utah makes to increase this to 10 per cent should carry—I will make that violent presumption, of course—let me inquire of the Senator from Maine what would then be the duty on the particular acids which are in controversy? Would it be more than that provided in this paragraph?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think it would fall into paragraph 17 if it contained more than the alcohol allowed by the provision here.

Mr. BRISTOW. Does the Senator from Maine state that, if the amendment suggested by the Senator from Utah prevails, it will place these acids under paragraph 17?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. No; I do not understand the question. I understood the question to be if they contained more alcohol than mentioned in the proviso where they would fall; but I understand now the inquiry to be as to what the effect would be of the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is the point exactly.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Well, these compounds then might contain 10 per cent of alcohol without being classed as alcoholic compounds or dutiable as alcoholic compounds. That would be the effect. As I understand, under this proviso they may contain 5 per cent and not be dutiable as alcoholic compounds and compelled to pay the higher rate of alcoholic compounds.

Mr. SMOOT. The effect of my amendment, Mr. President, would be that every item in this paragraph would remain dutiable at the rate provided in this paragraph; but if the amendment offered by me is not adopted and any of the ethers mentioned contain more than 5 per cent of alcohol, they will then fall back into paragraph 17 and carry the additional rate. It can not hurt anybody to accept the amendment; it can not hurt any item in this paragraph, because it simply makes it absolutely sure that the items mentioned in the paragraph shall carry only the rates that are provided in the paragraph.

Mr. BRISTOW. I should like the opinion of the Senator from Maine upon that point to see if there is a diffrence between his viewpoint and that of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, I have already stated what it seems to me would be the effect of the amendment, namely, that all of these articles might contain as high as 10 per cent of alcohol and still not be classed as alcoholic compounds and bear this low rate of duty of 20 per cent, whereas as alcoholic compounds, under paragraph 17, containing 20 per cent of alcohol or less they would be dutiable at 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BRISTOW. Does the Senator think that would bring in a number of compounds at a lower rate than they ought to come in?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do.

Mr. BRISTOW. Can the Senator say what those articles are?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It would bring in all of these. They might contain as high as 10 per cent of alcohol and still bear only this duty of 20 per cent ad valorem. The proviso offered by the committee is that they shall not contain more than 5 per cent of alcohol. We have limited the amount in that way.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am free to say that it is somewhat difficult for those of us who do not understand these chemical compounds to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion. I do not want to vote for a duty of 70 per cent on these compounds if that is what will be the effect of the amendment. At the same time I do not want to vote for an amendment that will bring in at a 20 per cent rate a lot of compounds that ought to carry a higher rate.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, here is the United States Dispensatory, an official document recognized by druggists and physicians all over the world, though not, perhaps, by those of the homeopathic persuasion. I think they recognize it as a fairly good authority, however. It aims to give a true and just statement of the facts. It describes acetic ether as follows:

A liquid composed of about 98.5 per cent, by weight, of ethyl acetate and about 1.5 per cent of alcohol, containing a little water. It should be kept in well-stoppered bottles, in a cool and dark place, remote from lights or fire.

That is acetic ether.

Mr. BRISTOW. Is that sulphuric ether?

Mr. LANE. It is acetic ether.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I want to call attention to what seems to me to be rather a curiosity of political literature in connection with this matter, although in itself it is not of much importance.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] has just dwelt upon the egregious wrong that would flow to the country if by a mistake in the percentage of alcohol designated in the paragraph under consideration certain of these preparations fell under paragraph 17 and became taxable there. He speaks of the duty as an enormous tax. I thought at first it was something that met with the absolute moral and political disapprobation of the Senator from Utah. I was convinced that he would be distressed to the very bottom of his soul if these things were taxable under paragraph 17.

Upon turning to paragraph 17 I find that it provides for a tax of 10 cents per pound, which upon the price of the article would be 50 per cent, plus 20 per cent ad valorem, which would be 70 per cent all told even if this misfortune occurred. That would be an enormous tax from a Democratic standpoint. But the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] has just disclosed the fact that under the present law, in framing which the Senator from Utah had so conspicuous a part, the tax was 250 per cent. In other words, it is a reduction of 180 per cent from the present law.

I never expected to live to see the day when the Senator from Utah would be warning the country against the Democratic error of fixing a tax of 70 per cent on a product where he had fixed a tax of 250 per cent. I say "he," because magna pars fuit, and he was there all the time. Next, perhaps, to the distinguished ex-Senator from Rhode Island, Mr. Aldrich, the Senator from Utah had more to do with fixing these protective tariffs, which were to advance the interests of the country and the people, than any man of that Congress. Now his soul is distressed because he is afraid that what he taxed at 250 per cent may possibly, under a Democratic tariff bill, be taxed at 70 per cent. I can readily understand why I should feel distressed, but I confess I do not understand why the Senator from Utah should feel distressed.

Of course we expected Senators upon that side, and especially the Senator from Utah, to quarrel with whatever we did. It would not have made any difference what we did; we could not have gotten the vote of the Senator from Utah, and we could not have gotten the vote of my distinguished friend from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], because our viewpoints are entirely different. In other words, you came in prepared to quarrel with us. You came in prepared to criticize and to cudgel us as far as you could.

I am reminded of a story I heard some time ago. A friend of mine says it is a true story. He said he was walking down the street in Louisville, Ky., and he noticed a man in front of him taking up the sidewalk; and as he took it up on both sides he noticed that the man was violently gesticulating. Just as he came up to the man my friend heard him utter these words: "I'm going home to lunch. If lunch ain't ready, I'm going to raise Cain; and if lunch is ready, I won't eat a dad-blamed bite of it."

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. WILLIAMS. So the Senator from Utah, like the man who was prepared to quarrel with his wife anyhow, because he knew his wife ought to quarrel with him, is prepared to quarrel with us anyhow, because he feels we ought to be quarreling with the present law, but he has studiously diverted attention from the present law in the entire discussion.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. WILLIAMS. We find him quarreling when we reduce a duty; we find him quarreling when we raise a duty. We find him criticizing us no matter what we do. I am prepared to believe that when he came——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator ought to understand that if there is any point in the world where it is inappropriate to interrupt a man, it is when he is in the midst of an anecdote. [Laughter.]

I am inclined to believe that the Senator came to this senatorial feast with his mind made up that if lunch was not ready he was going to raise Cain, and if lunch was ready he did not propose to eat a "blamed bite" of it. We never expected him to eat a "blamed bite" of it, but we do not think he ought to raise Cain with us on the ground that a duty is too high when it is a reduction of 180 per cent from the present rate.

I now yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I insist that that story, which the Senator from Mississippi is good at telling, he ought to tell to the Senate as he tells it in the cloakroom. It would be a whole lot better.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I remember an old friend of mine down in Yazoo City who was always using French words with Anglo-Saxon prefixes and suffixes to them, and he coined a word, which was "inaproposiousness." There are occasions upon which there is a good deal of "inaproposiousness" about telling a story just as I originally heard it, and this is one of them. There might be stronger words in the story if it were literally repeated.

At any rate, there was a man going down the street. He knew he was in a bad fix. He knew he had misbehaved himself, just as the Senator knows that all of you over there misbehaved yourselves when you passed the Payne-Aldrich bill. He thought his wife might quarrel with him when he got home because of the condition in which he had put himself—just as the Senator from Utah is afraid we might quarrel with him because of the condition in which he has put the country in connection with tariff matters—and he determined to choose his own line of battle and that his wife should not choose it. So, instead of quarreling about his being drunk, he had made up his mind to quarrel either about lunch not being ready or about lunch being ready; it did not make any difference which.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will inquire of my genial friend from North Carolina whether we have not put in a pretty good day's work to-day. I understand the Senator wants us to continue until 6 o'clock, as a rule; but we have been here a long time, and the matter under discussion might well have some consideration overnight, as there seems to be such a wide difference of opinion about it.

Mr. SIMMONS. I should like very much to have a vote upon the amendment of the Senator from Utah, and then I should be willing to adjourn——

Mr. GALLINGER. That is satisfactory.

Mr. SIMMONS (continuing). Unless it is desired to have an executive session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 12 of the proposed committee amendment the Senator from Utah moves to strike out "5" and insert "10," so that it will read "more than 10 per cent."

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE (S. DOC NO. 138).

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a Senate document an article by Darius H. Pingrey, who is a member of the American Bar Association and professor of international law in Illinois Wesleyan University Law School. It is on the subject of the Monroe doctrine. I think there is nothing improper in it. I offer it in connection with the resolution of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL]. It concerns entirely the present application of the Monroe doctrine. I should like unanimous consent to have it printed as a Senate document.

Mr. BACON. I presume there will be no objection to its being printed as a document.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not wish in any manner to interfere with the deliberate consideration of the resolution offered by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL], but it is in view of the discussion had on yesterday that I desire to have this paper printed.

Mr. FLETCHER. Will the Senator give us some idea as to the bulk of the document? What is the size of it?

Mr. SHERMAN. I suppose it will cover about a page of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Illinois on what occasion this address was made, and by whom?

Mr. SHERMAN. It is an article printed in the Chicago Law Journal. It was not made on any public occasion, but is a communication printed in that journal.

Mr. WALSH. By whom?

Mr. SHERMAN. By D. H. Pingrey, a member of the Illinois bar and also a member of the American Bar Association.

Mr. WALSH. Is that a regular legal publication, one regularly issued?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir; the journal has been published for some 40 years, and is one of very good standing.

Mr. WALSH. Is the Senator able to advise us that the article was not written for the purpose of promoting some particular interest?

Mr. SHERMAN. No, sir; I think, if anything, it will promote a more amicable understanding of the resolution offered by the Senator from New Mexico. It was only while I was listening to the discussion yesterday that I came to the conclusion that this would be a desirable public document. I do not think it will interfere with the deliberate action of the Senate in disposing of the resolution.

Mr. WALSH. I am only interested to know whether it is simply a contribution to the literature of the subject by some one not interested——

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; I think it is.

Mr. WALSH (continuing). Or whether it was written by some one for the purpose of forwarding some particular interest.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think it is a contribution to the literature of the subject. That is my judgment about it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the paper will be printed as a public document.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. BACON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, July 24, 1913, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 23, 1913.

MINISTER.

James M. Sullivan, of New York, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Dominican Republic, vice William W. Russell, resigned.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS.

Francis M. Wilson, of Missouri, to be United States attorney, western district of Missouri, vice Leslie J. Lyons, resigned.

Robert P. Stewart, of South Dakota, to be United States attorney for the district of South Dakota, vice Charles J. Morris, who is serving under a temporary appointment by the court.

PROMOTION IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

Lieut. Col. Willis T. May, Twenty-eighth Infantry, to be colonel from July 19, 1913, vice Col. William Paulding, Fourth Infantry, retired from active service July 18, 1913.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Jefferson K. Quillin to be postmaster at Clayton, Ala., in place of Charles Valentine. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1908.

CALIFORNIA.

Esther B. Kensel to be postmaster at Portola, Cal. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

David C. Hyer to be postmaster at Susanville, Cal., in place of Frank H. Bangham. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1913.

Frederick B. Nichols to be postmaster at McCloud, Cal., in place of Frederick B. Nichols. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Warren Rodgers to be postmaster at McKittrick, Cal., in place of Oscar H. Tetzlaff. Incumbent's commission expired July 23, 1913.

Francis F. Wrenn to be postmaster at Newcastle, Cal., in place of F. H. Howell. Incumbent's commission expired July 1, 1913.

COLORADO.

Sherman S. Bellesfield to be postmaster at Pueblo, Colo., in place of Nimrod S. Walpole. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1913.

M. J. Brennan to be postmaster at Leadville, Colo., in place of Ahiman V. Bohn. Incumbent's commission expired June 25, 1913.

FLORIDA.

J. L. Geiger to be postmaster at Zephyrhills, Fla. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

William E. McEwen to be postmaster at Wauchula, Fla., in place of Homer B. Rainey. Incumbent's commission expired April 19, 1913.

Gilbert M. Shepard to be postmaster at Blountstown, Fla. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

GEORGIA.

Annie K. Bunn to be postmaster at Cedartown, Ga., in place of John I. Fullwood. Incumbent's commission expired February 27, 1912.

George Dansby to be postmaster at Rockmart, Ga., in place of James F. Dever. Incumbent's commission expired April 9, 1913.

William J. Webb to be postmaster at Canton, Ga., in place of William T. Edwards. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

HAWAII.

John M. Bright to be postmaster at Lahaina, Hawaii, in place of Arthur Waal. Incumbent's commission expired June 23, 1913.

ILLINOIS.

Thomas F. Enright to be postmaster at Hubbard Woods, Ill. Office became presidential July 1, 1912.

Edward C. Schweitzer to be postmaster at Leland, Ill., in place of Carrie Hovda. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

INDIANA.

William C. Foltz to be postmaster at Bremen, Ind., in place of William Helminges. Incumbent's commission expired June 12, 1913.

Patrick Sharkey to be postmaster at Shirley, Ind., in place of Leonard E. Moore. Incumbent's commission expired February 1, 1913.

IOWA.

Henry Africa to be postmaster at Kanawha, Iowa, in place of Thomas H. Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired May 18, 1913.

Charles Loyd Paul to be postmaster at Ireton, Iowa, in place of Levi M. Black. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1909.

I. G. Winter to be postmaster at Sioux Center, Iowa, in place of Delbert W. Duncan. Incumbent's commission expired May 13, 1913.

KANSAS.

Hugh O'Hara to be postmaster at Frontenac, Kans., in place of Charles Friskel. Incumbent's commission expired April 5, 1913.

L. A. Walker to be postmaster at Parsons, Kans., in place of Benjamin L. Taft. Incumbent's commission expired February 12, 1912.

KENTUCKY.

C. E. Barnett to be postmaster at Earlington, Ky., in place of Charles Cowell. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

MAINE.

Leon B. Clay to be postmaster at Lincoln, Me., in place of Charles F. Plumley. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

William S. Mildon to be postmaster at Eastport, Me., in place of Albert Greenlaw. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

W. H. Newbegin to be postmaster at Kezar Falls, Me. Office became presidential July 1, 1913.

Stanley L. Wescott to be postmaster at Patten, Me., in place of Jacob F. Hersey. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1913.

Oscar R. Wish to be postmaster at Portland, Me., in place of Fred H. King. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Patrick H. Haley to be postmaster at Chelmsford, Mass., in place of Ralph W. Emerson. Incumbent's commission expired June 9, 1913.

MICHIGAN.

Robert E. Foley to be postmaster at Mohawk, Mich., in place of Thomas H. Berryman. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

MINNESOTA.

Oscar Johnston to be postmaster at Nashwauk, Minn., in place of Paul H. Tvedt, resigned.

Louis Tillmans to be postmaster at Aurora, Minn., in place of F. C. Talboys, removed.

Jason Weatherhead to be postmaster at Ada, Minn., in place of Charles E. Ward. Incumbent's commission expired March 28, 1910.

MISSISSIPPI.

Sidney J. Ferguson to be postmaster at Meridian, Miss., in place of W. J. Price, removed.

Johnathan R. Moreland to be postmaster at Philipp, Miss. Office became presidential April 1, 1913.

MISSOURI.

James R. Bennett to be postmaster at Branson, Mo. Office became presidential July 1, 1913.

C. H. Brown to be postmaster at Auxvasse, Mo. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Nelson H. Cook to be postmaster at Forest City, Mo. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

J. H. Guitar to be postmaster at Columbia, Mo., in place of Elgar A. Remley. Incumbent's commission expired June 26, 1913.

S. A. Norrid to be postmaster at Puxico, Mo., in place of Thomas A. Shelton, resigned.

Abram Stephens to be postmaster at Troy, Mo., in place of Solomon R. McKay. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

NEBRASKA.

J. D. Bishop to be postmaster at Peru, Nebr., in place of Fay Whitfield. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Frank P. Hobbs to be postmaster at Wolfeboro, N. H., in place of Arthur H. Copp. Incumbent's commission expired June 28, 1913.

James H. Willey to be postmaster at Milton, N. H., in place of Joseph H. Avery. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

NEW JERSEY.

Joseph F. Farley to be postmaster at Cliffside, N. J. Office became presidential April 1, 1912.

John B. Hankins to be postmaster at Pemberton, N. J., in place of Harry B. Ridgeway. Incumbent's commission expired July 23, 1913.

Waters B. Hurff to be postmaster at Bridgeton, N. J., in place of Morris Davis. Incumbent's commission expired June 16, 1913.

Wilmer J. Smith to be postmaster at Belvidere, N. J., in place of Charlotte C. Ketchem. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Charles T. White to be postmaster at Millville, N. J., in place of George W. Branin. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1911.

John W. Winter to be postmaster at Allendale, N. J., in place of Michael McDermott. Incumbent's commission expired July 23, 1913.

NEW MEXICO.

Malcolm Cameron to be postmaster at San Marcial, N. Mex., in place of Joseph McQuillin, removed.

L. A. Chandler to be postmaster at Cimarron, N. Mex., in place of George M. Chandler, resigned.

Viola Keenan Reynolds to be postmaster at Springer, N. Mex., in place of Louis Garcia, resigned.

George F. Williams to be postmaster at Mogollon, N. Mex. Office became presidential July 1, 1913.

NEW YORK.

Robert S. Ames to be postmaster at Lake Placid, N. Y., in place of Edward L. Ware. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Artemas D. Barton to be postmaster at Pine Plains, N. Y., in place of John W. Hedges. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1913.

Richard L. Earl to be postmaster at Honeoye Falls, N. Y., in place of George A. Case. Incumbent's commission expired May 7, 1913.

Alpheus D. Jessup to be postmaster at Florida, N. Y., in place of Garfield Vanderburgh, removed.

Nellie E. Lempfert to be postmaster at Stony Brook, N. Y. Office became presidential July 1, 1913.

Frank C. Lent to be postmaster at Atlanta, N. Y., in place of Rufus R. Clement. Incumbent's commission expired May 18, 1913.

Charles Miller to be postmaster at Baldwin, N. Y., in place of William J. Steele, resigned.

Robert W. Parrish to be postmaster at Brown Station, N. Y., in place of C. A. Wood. Incumbent's commission expired July 13, 1913.

Frederick H. Payne to be postmaster at Berkshire, N. Y. Office became presidential July 1, 1913.

Barton L. Piper to be postmaster at Watkins, N. Y., in place of Frank A. Frost. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1913.

James L. Reeve to be postmaster at Mattituck, N. Y., in place of Henry P. Tuthill, resigned.

Hugh Smiley to be postmaster at Mohonk Lake, N. Y., in place of Daniel Smiley, resigned.

Frederick H. Smith to be postmaster at Milton, N. Y., in place of Frederick W. Woolsey. Incumbent's commission expired July 23, 1913.

Stephen R. Williams to be postmaster at Kenmore, N. Y. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

NORTH CAROLINA.

D. Earl Best to be postmaster at Warsaw, N. C., in place of James B. Winders. Incumbent's commission expires August 4, 1913.

A. C. Link to be postmaster at Hickory, N. C., in place of Samuel M. Hamrick. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1911.

John F. Saunders to be postmaster at Troy, N. C., in place of L. M. Russell, resigned.

L. T. Sumner to be postmaster at Ahoskie, N. C. Office became presidential January 1, 1909.

Daniel L. Windley to be postmaster at Belhaven, N. C., in place of Walter C. Brinson. Incumbent's commission expired March 20, 1912.

NORTH DAKOTA.

James J. Dougherty to be postmaster at Park River, N. Dak., in place of Lyman Brandt, resigned.

Charles E. Harding to be postmaster at Churchs Ferry, N. Dak., in place of George C. Chambers, deceased.

Frank Renning to be postmaster at Velva, N. Dak., in place of George W. Downing, removed.

OHIO.

W. T. Alberson to be postmaster at New Philadelphia, Ohio, in place of Wilson A. Korns. Incumbent's commission expired April 13, 1912.

Charles Lee Burns to be postmaster at Andover, Ohio, in place of Charles E. Ainger. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1913.

P. W. Guilday to be postmaster at Milford, Ohio, in place of E. B. Gatch. Incumbent's commission expired April 5, 1913.

P. James McClain to be postmaster at West Carrollton, Ohio, in place of S. S. Connell. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1913.

I. L. McCollough to be postmaster at Butler, Ohio, in place of James T. McCready. Incumbent's commission expired June 12, 1913.

Charles H. Marshall to be postmaster at New Paris, Ohio, in place of Charles E. Samuels. Incumbent's commission expired May 12, 1913.

Custer Snyder to be postmaster at Lorain, Ohio, in place of Charles Doll. Incumbent's commission expired May 12, 1913.

OKLAHOMA.

L. B. Avant to be postmaster at Avant, Okla. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Marion B. Carley to be postmaster at Geary, Okla., in place of John W. Deam. Incumbent's commission expired February 27, 1910.

J. H. Cunningham to be postmaster at Carnegie, Okla., in place of Charles W. Young, resigned.

Lee Roy Daniels to be postmaster at Hydro, Okla., in place of Frank W. Hungate, resigned.

J. C. Groves to be postmaster at Porum, Okla., in place of A. J. Plunkett, resigned.

W. E. Hunt to be postmaster at Thomas, Okla., in place of Will Huston. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

J. E. McCutchan to be postmaster at Pawnee, Okla., in place of Louis N. Bushorr. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1912.

L. M. Nichols to be postmaster at Bristow, Okla., in place of Roy W. Lovett, resigned.

John S. Thompson to be postmaster at Mulhall, Okla., in place of T. B. Woosley. Incumbent's commission expired May 23, 1912.

OREGON.

J. W. Boone to be postmaster at Prineville, Oreg., in place of William Ledford, resigned.

Iva E. Dodd to be postmaster at St. Helens (late St. Helen), Oreg., in place of Marion C. Gray, resigned, and to change name of office.

Marshall W. Malone to be postmaster at Linnton, Oreg. Office became presidential April 1, 1913.

PENNSYLVANIA.

John Adams to be postmaster at Vandergrift, Pa., in place of S. W. Hamilton. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

Charles H. Carter to be postmaster at Mount Pocono, Pa.. Office became presidential July 1, 1911.

Andrew C. M. Crozier to be postmaster at Port Royal, Pa. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Charles M. Harder to be postmaster at Catawissa, Pa., in place of C. E. Geyer. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

W. B. Reisinger to be postmaster at Wrightsville, Pa., in place of William H. Flora. Incumbent's commission expired May 14, 1912.

Henry W. Rinehart to be postmaster at Millerstown, Pa., in place of Jerome B. Lahr, resigned.

John J. Ryan to be postmaster at Centralia, Pa., in place of R. M. Lashelle, sr., resigned.

PORTO RICO.

Jose Carrera to be postmaster at Humacao, P. R., in place of Jose Carrera. Incumbent's commission expired Fabruary 11, 1913.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

W. A. Hill to be postmaster at Newberry, S. C., in place of Charles J. Purcell, resigned.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

John F. McGowan to be postmaster at Hartford, S. Dak., in place of D. A. McGillivray, resigned.

Alfred E. Paine to be postmaster at Doland, S. Dak., in place of Joshua F. Wood. Incumbent's commission expired April 9, 1913.

TENNESSEE.

Ira La F. Lemonds to be postmaster at Tiptonville, Tenn., in place of William J. Walker, resigned.

Joel F. Ruffin to be postmaster at Cedar Hill, Tenn., in place of Joel F. Ruffin. Incumbent's commission expired March 3, 1913.

R. B. Schoolfield to be posmtaster at Pikeville, Tenn., in place of Oscar N. Vaughn, resigned.

William Thomas to be postmaster at Brownsville, Tenn., in place of Frank J. Nunn. Incumbent's commission expired July 23, 1913.

TEXAS.

W. D. Armstrong to be postmaster at Alto, Tex., in place of Charles M. Diller. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1913.

W. P. Boyd to be postmaster at Thurber, Tex., in place of Robert McKinnon, deceased.

C. W. Bradbury to be postmaster at Kirbyville, Tex., in place of J. C. Williamson, resigned.

August R. Gold to be postmaster at Fredericksburg, Tex., in place of Frederick Loudon. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

Charles Johnston to be postmaster at Goree, Tex., in place of Zachary Monroe, resigned.

C. E. Long to be postmaster at Jourdanton, Tex. Office became presidential April 1, 1913.

J. P. Sharp to be postmaster at Tioga, Tex. Office became presidential January 1, 1912.

W. F. Sponseller to be postmaster at Fowlerton, Tex. Office became presidential April 1, 1913.

John C. Wood to be postmaster at Big Sandy, Tex., in place of George A. Tohill. Incumbent's commission expired April 21, 1912.

VIRGINIA.

David W. Berger to be postmaster at Drakes Branch, Va., in place of W. S. Gregory, jr. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

D. F. Hankins to be postmaster at Houston, Va., in place of Charles A. Lacy, resigned.

James S. Haile to be postmaster at Chatham, Va., in place of James Carter. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1911.

WASHINGTON.

Maury C. Hayden to be postmaster at Lind, Wash., in place of J. J. Merriam. Incumbent's commission expired February 13, 1912.

John F. May to be postmaster at Republic, Wash., in place of George B. Stocking. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

WEST VIRGINIA.

C. B. Riggle to be postmaster at Middlebourne, W. Va., in place of Harry W. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

WISCONSIN.

Gustave Keller to be postmaster at Appleton, Wis., in place of M. F. Barteau. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1911.

John P. Rice to be postmaster at Sparta, Wis., in place of Fred A. Brandt. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 23, 1913.

SURVEYOR GENERAL OF ALASKA.

Charles E. Davidson to be surveyor general of Alaska.

POSTMASTERS.

IOWA.

Frederick S. Anderson, Stanton.
Willard Bucklen, Marble Rock.
W. H. Carmody, sr., Valley Junction.
Charles B. Clark, Ogden.
J. B. Conley, Lake Mills.
W. H. Dudley, Earlham.
Harry C. Fox, Monona.
William Frew, Hiteman.
Milton Funk, Lewis.
Reuben M. Gable, Lost Nation.
J. S. Guynn, Traer.
Leo L. Hamblin, Walker.
Edwin L. Helmer, Sanborn.
J. J. Herbster, Milford.
Elmer Hopkins, Whiting.
Anton Huebach, McGregor.
A. G. Johnson, Marshalltown.
Peter Jungers, Hospers.
Frank Kenney, Oxford Junction.
Frank Kussart, Eddyville.
A. W. Lee, Britt.
Charles W. McCarty, Ottumwa.
William F. McCarty, Clarence.
Ed. McConaughey, Allerton.
P. A. McCray, Rolfe.
Thomas R. McKaig, Corwith.
Jacob Meyer, Calmar.
Frank W. Miller, Olin.
Andrew J. Mullarky, Allison.
Andrew T. O'Brien, Independence.
George A. Pruitt, Blanchard.
Joseph H. Riseley, Winthrop.
Sam Robinson, Gravity.
John H. Schulte, Breda.
William D. Schulte, West Point.
R. C. Spencer, Audubon.
E. H. Vary, Mechanicsville.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Henry K. Bearse, Harwich.
L. F. McNamara, Haverhill.
Neil R. Mahoney, North Billerica.
James H. Roach, Winchester.
Osgood L. Small, Sagamore.
Lawrence J. Watson, Beverly Farms.

OHIO.

Andrew Hiss, Norwalk.
C. A. Weidaw, Bloomville.

TENNESSEE.

Henry Estill, Winchester.
Wiley Sublett, Estill Springs.

VIRGINIA.

Hoge M. Brown, Radford.

WITHDRAWALS.

Executive nominations withdrawn July 23, 1913.

POSTMASTERS.

IOWA.

Henry Eppers to be postmaster at Montrose, Iowa.

KANSAS.

George A. Griggs to be postmaster at Marquette, Kans.

NEW YORK.

F. L. Tripp to be postmaster at Pine Plains, N. Y.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, July 23, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Teach us, O God, our heavenly Father, Thy ways, make us apt scholars, and give us the grace to walk therein without fear and doubting, proving ourselves worthy of the gifts Thou hast bestowed upon us and the confidence Thou hast reposed in us, that our inheritance may be the riches of a pure and useful life; and all praise shall be Thine forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Journal as read will stand approved.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] objects.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the Journal be approved.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves to approve the Journal. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that "the ayes have it."

Mr. MANN. A division, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] demands a division.

Mr. MANN. Pending that, Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and three gentlemen are present—not a quorum.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves that the House do now adjourn. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks for the yeas and nays. Those in favor of taking the vote by yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Thirty-four gentlemen have arisen in the affirmative. Those opposed will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Sixty-nine gentlemen have arisen in the negative. Thirty-four is a sufficient number. The yeas and nays are ordered. Those in favor of the motion to adjourn will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 151, nays 59, answered "present" 7, not voting 212, as follows:

YEAS—151.

Abercrombie	Cox	Hay	Morgan, La.
Alexander	Davenport	Hayden	Morrison
Ashbrook	Decker	Heflin	Murray, Okla.
Aswell	Deitrick	Helvering	O'Hair
Baker	Dies	Henry	Oldfield
Baltz	Doolittle	Holland	Page
Barkley	Doremus	Houston	Pepper
Bartlett	Doughton	Howard	Phelan
Beakes	Elder	Hughes, Ga.	Post
Bell, Ga.	Evans	Hull	Quin
Booher	Fergusson	Igoe	Ragsdale
Borchers	Fitzgerald	Jacoway	Raker
Borland	FitzHenry	Johnson, Ky.	Rauch
Brockson	Floyd, Ark.	Johnson, S. C.	Reed
Broussard	Foster	Keating	Reilly, Conn.
Brown, N. Y.	Fowler	Kent	Roddenbery
Brown, W. Va.	Gard	Key, Ohio	Rothermel
Brumbaugh	Garner	Kirkpatrick	Rucker
Buchanan, Ill.	Garrett, Tenn.	Konop	Russell
Buchanan, Tex.	Garrett, Tex.	Korbly	Sabath
Bulkley	George	Lazaro	Saunders
Burgess	Gilmore	Lee, Ga.	Seldomridge
Burke, Wis.	Glass	Lever	Sherley
Byrnes, S. C.	Goodwin, Ark.	Lobeck	Sims
Byrns, Tenn.	Gordon	McAndrews	Sisson
Callaway	Gorman	McClellan	Smith, Md.
Candler, Miss.	Graham, Ill.	McCoy	Smith, Tex.
Casey	Gray	McDermott	Stedman
Church	Gregg	McGillicuddy	Stephens, Nebr.
Claypool	Hamlin	McKellar	Stephens, Tex.
Clayton	Hardwick	Maguire, Nebr.	Stone
Collier	Hardy	Mitchell	Stout
Connelly, Kans.	Harrison, Miss.	Moon	Stringer
Sumners	Taylor, Colo.	Walsh	Whaley
Taggart	Ten Eyck	Watkins	Wilson, Fla.
Talcott, N. Y.	Thacher	Watson	Wingo
Tavenner	Underwood	Weaver	Young, Tex.
Taylor, Ark.	Walker	Webb

NAYS—59.

Anderson	French	Lindbergh	Shreve
Austin	Gardner	McGuire, Okla.	Sinnott
Barton	Gillett	McKenzie	Sloan
Bell, Cal.	Green, Iowa	Mann	Smith, Idaho
Bowdle	Helgesen	Mapes	Smith, Minn.
Bryan	Howell	Mondell	Switzer
Burke, S. Dak.	Humphrey, Wash.	Morgan, Okla.	Temple
Campbell	Johnson, Utah	Moss, W. Va.	Thomas
Curry	Johnson, Wash.	Neeley	Thomson, Ill.
Davis, Minn.	Keister	Norton	Treadway
Dillon	Kelly, Pa.	Payne	Walters
Dyer	Kennedy, Iowa	Platt	Willis
Edmonds	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Prouty	Woods
Falconer	Knowland, J. R.	Rupley	Young, N. Dak.
Fess	La Follette	Scott

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—7.

Adamson	Crisp	Rubey	Wallin
Bathrick	Kahn	Smith, J. M. C.

NOT VOTING—212.

Adair	Dooling	Kelley, Mich.	Peterson
Aiken	Driscoll	Kennedy, Conn.	Plumley
Ainey	Dunn	Kennedy, R. I.	Porter
Allen	Dupré	Kettner	Pou
Ansberry	Eagan	Kiess, Pa.	Powers
Anthony	Eagle	Kindel	Rainey
Avis	Edwards	Kinkead, N. J.	Rayburn
Bailey	Esch	Kitchin	Reilly, Wis.
Barchfeld	Estopinal	Kreider	Richardson
Barnhart	Fairchild	Lafferty	Riordan
Bartholdt	Faison	Langham	Roberts, Mass.
Beall, Tex.	Farr	Langley	Roberts, Nev.
Blackmon	Ferris	Lee, Pa.	Rogers
Bremner	Fields	L'Engle	Rouse
Britten	Finley	Lenroot	Scully
Brodbeck	Flood, Va.	Lesher	Sells
Browne, Wis.	Fordney	Levy	Shackleford
Browning	Francis	Lewis, Md.	Sharp
Bruckner	Frear	Lewis, Pa.	Sherwood
Burke, Pa.	Gallagher	Lieb	Slayden
Burnett	Gerry	Lindquist	Stemp
Butler	Gittins	Linthicum	Small
Calder	Godwin, N. C.	Lloyd	Smith, N. Y.
Cantrill	Goeke	Logue	Smith, Saml. W.
Caraway	Goldfogle	Lonergan	Sparkman
Carew	Good	McLaughlin	Stafford
Carlin	Goulden	Madden	Stanley
Carr	Graham, Pa.	Mahan	Steenerson
Carter	Greene, Mass.	Maher	Stephens, Cal.
Cary	Greene, Vt.	Manahan	Stephens, Miss.
Chandler, N. Y.	Griest	Martin	Stevens, Minn.
Clancy	Griffin	Merritt	Stevens, N. H.
Clark, Fla.	Gudger	Metz	Sutherland
Cline	Guernsey	Miller	Talbott, Md.
Connolly, Iowa	Hamill	Montague	Taylor, Ala.
Conry	Hamilton, Mich.	Moore	Taylor, N. Y.
Cooper	Hamilton, N. Y.	Morin	Thompson, Okla.
Copley	Hammond	Moss, Ind.	Towner
Covington	Harrison, N. Y.	Mott	Townsend
Cramton	Haugen	Murdock	Tribble
Crosser	Hawley	Murray, Mass.	Tuttle
Cullop	Hayes	Nelson	Underhill
Curley	Helm	Nolan, J. I.	Vare
Dale	Hensley	O'Brien	Vaughan
Danforth	Hill	Oglesby	Volstead
Davis, W. Va.	Hinds	O'Leary	Whitacre
Dent	Hinebaugh	O'Shaunessy	White
Dershem	Hobson	Padgett	Wilder
Dickinson	Hoxworth	Palmer	Williams
Difenderfer	Hughes, W. Va.	Parker	Wilson, N. Y.
Dixon	Hulings	Patten, N. Y.	Winslow
Donohoe	Humphreys, Miss.	Patton, Pa.	Witherspoon
Donovan	Jones	Peters	Woodruff

So the motion to adjourn was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

For the session:

Mr. METZ with Mr. WALLIN.

Mr. HOBSON with Mr. FAIRCHILD.

Mr. SCULLY with Mr. BROWNING.

Mr. SLAYDEN with Mr. BARTHOLDT.

Mr. ADAMSON with Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota.

Mr. FIELDS with Mr. LANGLEY.

Mr. BARTLETT with Mr. BUTLER.

Until further notice:

Mr. AIKEN with Mr. BARCHFELD.

Mr. CARLIN with Mr. BRITTEN.

Mr. CARTER with Mr. CALDER.

Mr. CLARK of Florida with Mr. CARY.

Mr. CLINE with Mr. CRAMTON.

Mr. COVINGTON with Mr. FREAR.

Mr. CULLOP with Mr. CHANDLER of New York.

Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia with Mr. GOOD.

Mr. DICKINSON with Mr. GREENE of Vermont.

Mr. DIFENDERFER with Mr. HAYES.

Mr. DONOHOE with Mr. HINEBAUGH.

Mr. ESTOPINAL with Mr. HULINGS.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia with Mr. SLEMP.
Mr. FRANCIS with Mr. KELLEY of Michigan.
Mr. GALLAGHER with Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania.
Mr. CURLEY with Mr. KREIDER.
Mr. GITTINS with Mr. LAFFERTY.
Mr. GOLDFOGLE with Mr. LINDQUIST.
Mr. GOEKE with Mr. MCLAUGHLIN.
Mr. GUDGER with Mr. MANAHAN.
Mr. HAMILL with Mr. MARTIN.
Mr. HAMMOND with Mr. MILLER.
Mr. HELM with Mr. MOBLEY.
Mr. HENSLEY with Mr. NELSON.
Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi with Mr. PARKER.
Mr. JOHNSON with Mr. PLUMLEY.
Mr. JONES with Mr. J. I. NOLAN.
Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey with Mr. PORTER.
Mr. LEVY with Mr. POWERS.
Mr. LEWIS of Maryland with Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada.
Mr. LIEB with Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH.
Mr. PETERS with Mr. SUTHERLAND.
Mr. SHACKLEFORD with Mr. STEENERSON.
Mr. STEVENS of New Hampshire with Mr. STEPHENS of California.
Mr. UNDERHILL with Mr. TOWNER.
Mr. WHITE with Mr. VARE.
Mr. MONTAGUE with Mr. VOLSTEAD.
Mr. SPARKMAN with Mr. WILDER.
Mr. WHITACRE with Mr. WOODRUFF.
Mr. PATTEN of New York with Mr. MOTT.
Mr. LEE of Pennsylvania with Mr. MADDEN.
Mr. HARRISON of New York with Mr. LANGHAM.
Mr. KITCHIN with Mr. FORDNEY.
Mr. FERRIS with Mr. HAUGEN.
Mr. EDWARDS with Mr. HAMILTON of New York.
Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland with Mr. MERRITT.
Mr. DRISCOLL with Mr. GUERNSEY.
Mr. CONRY with Mr. DUNN.
Mr. CANTRILL with Mr. DANFORTH.
Mr. DALE with Mr. AVIS.
Mr. PALMER with Mr. MOORE.
Mr. GODWIN of North Carolina with Mr. MURDOCK.
Mr. RICHARDSON with Mr. ESCH.
Mr. O'SHAUNESSY with Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island.
Mr. RUBEY with Mr. HAWLEY.
Mr. DIXON of Indiana with Mr. GRIEST.
Mr. FINLEY with Mr. HUGHES of West Virginia.
Mr. LLOYD with Mr. SELLS.
Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts with Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts.
Mr. BARNHART with Mr. ANTHONY.
Mr. BEALL of Texas with Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania.
Mr. BLACKMON with Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin.
Mr. CRISP with Mr. HINDS.
Mr. RAINEY with Mr. PATTON of Pennsylvania.
Mr. ADAIR with Mr. AINEY.
Mr. FAISON with Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania.
Mr. BURNETT with Mr. COPLEY.
Mr. DUPRÉ with Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan.
Mr. DENT with Mr. KAHN.
Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. WINSLOW.

Until August 6:

Mr. ALLEN with Mr. J. M. C. SMITH (except banking and currency).

Until July 26:

Mr. PADGETT with Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Thursday, July 24, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Lorain Harbor, Ohio, with a view to widening, deepening, and straightening the channel of Black River (H. Doc. No. 160); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

2. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of St. Louis River, Minn. and Wis., with a view to redredging the artificial channel in said river from the foot of Peterson Islands, near Fond du Lac, to Dubray Creek (H. Doc. No. 162); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

3. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on examination and survey of Herring Bay and Rockhole Creek, Fairhaven, Md. (H. Doc. No. 161); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Attorney General, submitting an estimate of deficiency in appropriation for printing and binding for the Supreme Court of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913 (H. Doc. No. 159); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an estimate of appropriation in the sum of $50000 for employment of additional assistant attorneys and other employees in the office of the Assistant Attorney General for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914 (H. Doc. No. 158); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MANN: A bill (H. R. 7083) to create a bureau of labor safety in the Department of Labor; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. KENT: A bill (H. R. 7084) to amend the postal laws pertaining to the second class of mail matter; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. BRYAN: A bill (H. R. 7085) to authorize the President of the United States to provide transportation and coal-mine development in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota: A bill (H. R. 7086) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend sections 2291 and 2297 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to homesteads," approved June 6, 1912; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BEALL of Texas: A bill (H. R. 7087) to waive the age limit for admission to the Pay Corps of the United States Navy in the case of Rufus B. Langsford; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 7088) granting a pension to Susanna Hahn; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 7089) granting a pension to Elizabeth Farishon; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7090) granting a pension to Louvina Mays; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 7091) for the relief of C. E. Anderson; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RAUCH: A bill (H. R. 7092) to waive the age limit for admission to the Pay Corps of the United States Navy in the case of Harry W. Crider; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 7093) granting an increase of pension to D. B. Foote; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMSON of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 7094) for the relief of James O'Brien; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the Nashville Lumbermen's Club, Nashville, Tenn., favoring the passage of legislation abolishing the Commerce Court; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also (by request), petition of the Pennsylvania Pharmaceutical Association, favoring the passage of legislation giving the President of the United States or the United States Commissioner of Patents authority to suspend a product patent that can be manufactured by an entirely new process; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. DALE: Petition of the United States Life Insurance Co. in the city of New York, protesting against the passage of the proposed amendment exempting mutual life insurance companies from the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFFERTY: Petition of the United National Association of Post Office Clerks, Portland, Oreg., protesting against the passage of any amendment to the Reilly eight-hour law; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. LONERGAN: Petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, favoring the passage of Senate bill 4, in the interest of seamen; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MONDELL: Petition of sundry residents of Douglas, Wyo., protesting against the enactment of legislation of the character proposed in House bill 23133, Sixty-second Congress; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. O'LEARY: Petition of the First National Bank of Ozone Park, New York City, protesting against the depreciation of any of their assets; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. SCULLY: Petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Peoria, Ill., favoring equipment of road engines with electric headlights and safety boilers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Peoria, Ill., favoring the passage of legislation for a restriction of immigration to the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of the National Life Insurance Co. of the United States of America, of Chicago, Ill., protesting against life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Banana Buyers' Protective Association of New York City, protesting against a duty on bananas; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the New York Zoological Society, favoring the clause prohibiting importation of egrets, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Peoria, Ill., favoring improvement in living conditions of our seamen; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. WILLIS: Petitions of the Order of Railway Conductors and Switchmen's Union, against the enactment of a workmen's compensation law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, July 24, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a petition of the Pennsylvania Pharmaceutical Association, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for a suspension of a product patent if it can be shown that the product patented can be made by process of manufacture that is entirely new and original, which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey presented a memorial of the Plainfield Branch of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, remonstrating against the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women, which was referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

Mr. CLAPP presented petitions of sundry citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women, which were referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

Mr. OLIVER presented a telegram in the nature of a memorial from the Philadelphia Bag Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., remonstrating against the adoption of the provision of the administrative section of the pending tariff bill which would have the effect of excluding from the United States practically all burlap manufactured abroad, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

TARIFF DUTY ON LIME AND CEMENT.

Mr. OLIVER. I present a letter from Mr. David M. Kirk, a prominent merchant and manufacturer of Wampum, Pa., on the subject of the proposed duty of 5 per cent ad valorem on lime and Portland cement. I ask that the letter be printed in the RECORD without reading.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WAMPUM, PA., June 26, 1913.

Hon. GEORGE T. OLIVER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR OLIVER: Like yourself I am sometimes of the opinion that it is not wise to say very much to the present Congress relative to tariff, and I beg to ask your advice as to what to do.

It is very rare, so far as I recollect, that in such matters I have put in a protest on tariff; but I feel that in the matter of duty on lime and Portland cement, in which I have interests, the determination of Congress to fix a 5 per cent ad valorem duty is so close to free trade that I am utterly unable to understand their action. Germany is the great producer of Portland cement, outside of the United States, and wages and every feature of cost, except fuel, is so much lower than in the United States that I can only foresee a very serious problem for the Portland cement manufacturers in the United States. I am unable to believe that American workmen will ever consent to work for the wages paid in foreign countries, and the great scarcity of labor in this country will leave the manufacturers of Portland cement in a very difficult position. I therefore beg to inquire as to whether you know of any channel which is right and proper through which this matter can be presented with the hope of doing some good.

I quite appreciate that interested manufacturers of Portland cement could take issue in the form of protests, etc., against such a duty, and I understand the cement people have done so very thoroughly, and my latest advice is that they have done so unsuccessfully. Cement being a low-priced article, 5 per cent ad valorem is a very, very small margin, and which is entirely wiped out when taking into consideration the fluctuations of fuel and labor alone.

From information I have received, the duty should be 5 cents per 100 pounds, which would make a reduction of 12 cents per barrel.

If ever there was a time when Pennsylvania needed your hearty, earnest effort on her part it certainly is the present time.

In writing this letter I will refrain from arguments, etc., and I have written you very, very briefly, considering the importance of the matter, and I most earnestly beseech you to think the matter over and write me what you think can be done.

I understand this matter will be disposed of in the conference committee, and I am so unable to understand why such a duty has been arrived at that I am at sea. However, I will present no reflections nor discussions; but it does seem to me that the present administration is unwarranted in many things.

With kind regards, and hoping to hear from you by return mail, I beg to remain,

Yours, respectfully, DAVID M. KIRK.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BRISTOW:

A bill (S. 2818) granting an increase of pension to Jackson Stout (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BURTON:

A bill (S. 2819) to reimburse Edward H. Collins, postmaster of Bedford, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, for postal savings stamps stolen; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KERN:

A bill (S. 2820) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Fifer (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 2821) for the relief of Americus A. Gordon (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JONES:

A bill (S. 2822) to reimburse the Port Angeles City Dock Co. for damage done to the dock of that company by the U. S. revenue cutter Snohomish; to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. McLEAN submitted 13 amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

AMENDMENT TO DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BRANDEGEE submitted an amendment authorizing the accounting officers of the Treasury to allow the accounts of the United States marshal for the district of Connecticut amounts paid by him from the appropriation pay for bailiffs, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

INTERNATIONAL STATISTICAL INSTITUTE.

Mr. O'GORMAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res 141) which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Whereas the Government of Austria has invited the Government of the United States to be represented by official delegates at the fourteenth session of the International Statistical Institute to be held at Vienna September 7 to 13, 1913: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Department of State is authorized to accept this invitation and appoint one or more official delegates to represent the United States at this session of the International Statistical Institute, provided such arrangement can be made without requiring any special appropriation for the purpose.

STATUE OF ZACHARIAH CHANDLER.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, there is on the calendar a notice given by my colleague [Mr. SMITH of Michigan] that on July 28, at 3 o'clock p. m., he would call up Senate resolution No. 119. I desire to state at this time that in order that it may not interfere with other business this order will be postponed. I shall ask to have it postponed until a time to be fixed later, after my colleague returns.

I desire also at this time to announce that on Monday next, at the conclusion of the morning business, I shall address the Senate on the pending tariff bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the resolution itself fixes July 28.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am giving notice now that I shall ask to have that postponed, so that it will not interfere with the tariff debate which will come on, because it will not be considered at that time.

PRINTING OF MAP IN RECORD.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I desire to call up the motion to reconsider which was presented a few days ago in reference to the order which appears on page 2571 of the RECORD. I entered a motion to reconsider, and I move a reconsideration of the vote by which that order was agreed to. I think it will take no debate.

I will state that as soon as the motion was made the matter was submitted to the Joint Committee on Printing and the map has been ordered printed by the committee. I simply want to have the vote reconsidered in order that we may leave the matter as it stood before without setting any dangerous precedent. If the motion to reconsider is granted, I will ask that the order be referred to the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. SIMMONS rose.

Mr. GALLINGER. Does the Senator from North Carolina desire to interrupt?

Mr. SIMMONS. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Florida if he thinks this will lead to any debate?

Mr. FLETCHER. I think not.

Mr. GALLINGER. It will not lead to debate, I will say to the Senator. I desire to make a single observation.

I think the Senator from Florida, perhaps, is a little inaccurate in saying that the so-called diagram is being printed because of the action taken by the Joint Committee on Printing. I am informed that the Printing Office recognized the fact that the Senate itself had authority to order it and they proceeded to execute that order.

But I have no disposition to obstruct the motion of the Senator from Florida and will content myself with simply observing that I hope the Senator from Florida, who is chairman of the committee, and a very industrious Senator, will offer an amendment to the existing statute giving the Joint Committee on Printing explicit authority in words over illustrations. It does not appear in the present law.

I do not oppose the reconsideration, Mr. President, and hope that it will prevail.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, I desire to obstruct the motion if the object of it is to determine that the question was wrongfully decided by the Senate a few days since. I think it was decided exactly right and like it should be decided at all times when so raised.

If it is the purpose simply to reserve the question for further consideration by having a pro forma motion to reconsider entered, that will be satisfactory to me; but I am not going to permit this occasion to pass, carrying with it the assumption that the decision on that occasion was wrong. As nearly as I know anything I know it was right. If it is the intention of the Senator from Florida to ask that the matter may be disposed of pro forma and to reserve for future action the determination of the matter I do not think I shall interpose any objection. If that is not the purpose——

Mr. FLETCHER. My purpose is simply to have the matter stand as it stood before that action, without reference to the correctness or incorrectness of the action.

I will state that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] addressed a communication to the Joint Committee on Printing; that this matter came up in regular order and was acted on; that the request was granted in regular order; and that the printing of the map has been ordered. I simply want to leave that order stand. I will be very glad to act on the suggestion of the Senator from New Hampshire at a later time and consider some specific matter of legislation on that subject.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The request of the Senator from Florida is a little broader than the mere application by the Senator from Iowa to the committee. The question in its breadth does not belong to any Senator nor is it to be controlled by any particular request. It involves the right of the Senate to control its own RECORD; and when that is seriously denied I think an occasion has arisen when the Senate ought to debate it and know just exactly what is being done.

I realize that we are working under some pressure here this morning. I do not desire to disturb the prescribed order. For that reason, if it is understood that the motion to reconsider is adopted by consent and without prejudice to the question, I shall interpose no further objection. Otherwise I shall desire to be heard.

Mr. FLETCHER. I desire that it shall assume that attitude, especially in view of the fact that we are really discussing a moot question. The matter has been disposed of in accordance with the desires and wishes of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator if it is not a fact that this table, as I call it—diagram, as the Senator calls it—is already prepared in the Printing Office.

Mr. FLETCHER. I believe it is; and I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that instead of the supposed cost being about $5, the cost will be $43.30. But it is a valuable document, I think that shows the use of referring the question to the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. That, of course, will not bankrupt the Treasury in these days of prosperity. But I join with the Senator from Arkansas in saying that I do not concede that the Senate took any improper or rash action in determining the matter as they did. At the same time, I do not wish to say a single additional word. I do not think it is worth spending a great deal of time on.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I could not hear clearly what the Senator from Arkansas said about the Senator from Iowa. I think I caught a suggestion that I had agreed to something. I would be glad if his attention were called to it and he would tell me what his understanding was. I notice, however, that he is engaged.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I beg pardon. I did not understand that the Senator was addressing remarks to me.

Mr. CUMMINS. I could not hear clearly what the Senator from Arkansas said, but I caught the idea that he thought I had agreed to something with regard to this matter.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I do not think you agreed to anything, except that after the action of the Senate directing the publication of the map as prepared by the Senator you then addressed a communication to the Joint Committee on Printing making a request that that committee should grant the same thing. That is what I understood.

Mr. CUMMINS. I did address a communication to the Committee on Printing at the suggestion——

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Why did not the Senator deem the action of the Senate sufficient to justify the incorporation of the map into his remarks?

Mr. CUMMINS. At the suggestion of the committee.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The Senator must have had some doubt about the authority of the Senate to give the direction.

Mr. CUMMINS. I have had nothing to do with the authority of the Senate. I have not asked that it be reconsidered or revised.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. But the whole question arose in connection with the request and the motion made by the Senator from Iowa that a map be printed in the RECORD, and if it turns out that the Senator subsequently addressed a communication to one of the creatures of this body asking that the action of the Senate should be confirmed by the request of that body I think it presents a question that might be discussed.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator from Arkansas does not remember the RECORD. I asked the consent of the Senate, and said at the same time that I expected to secure the approval of the Committee on Printing, or hoped to secure it.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The only difference is I do not think the approval of the Committee on Printing is required when the Senate has ordered that certain things are to be published in the RECORD.

Mr. CUMMINS. I made no motion to direct it to be done.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The motion was put and carried.

Mr. CUMMINS. I know the Chair put the motion, but I did not make the motion. It is a matter of entire indifference to me what is done with it, but I wanted to be clear in my understanding of what the Senator from Arkansas said.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I thought the Senator had made the motion.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I wish to ask the Senator from Arkansas if he does not think the joint committee of the two Houses has some authority in the matter?

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I am not going to undertake to settle that question.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Does the Senator think the Senate can direct it?

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. A great many think the Senate can direct it. It is being done, at any rate.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Direct the joint committee of the two Houses?

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I am only dealing with the question we had before us when it was disposed of by the Senate.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, it has been impossible on this side of the Chamber to hear more than a small part of what has been said on the other side of the Chamber about this matter. It is one in which there is quite a lively interest, and I should like to know what the Senator from Florida is asking here at this time in regard to it.

Mr. FLETCHER. I entered a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the order was agreed to directing that the map should be printed in the RECORD, and the motion to reconsider is the pending motion. My purpose will be then——

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Senator has asked that the motion be considered at this time?

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes. I am calling up that motion. The motion went over at the time and is pending, and I am calling up the motion to reconsider the vote whereby that order was agreed to. Then I propose to follow that up with a further motion that the order be referred to the Joint Committee on Printing, which, as I said, has practically already disposed of the matter.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If this first motion is a mere matter of form, so that the question may come before the Senate on its merits, I do not know that I have any particular objection to it; but if it is to be considered on its merits before it is disposed of, I shall want to be heard, because I am one who agrees entirely with the Senator from Arkansas. I am decidedly opposed to having what, it seems to me, is an elementary right of the Senate to say what shall or shall not go into its RECORD put into the hands of a joint committee, a part of which is connected with another body. I do not believe we are ready to surrender our right to decide here in the Senate a question of that kind, and if the question is being considered on its merits I certainly want to know it.

Mr. FLETCHER. It is not now, and I hope the Senator will forego any discussion and leave the matter open, as it was before the question came up, because that particular point is really a moot question at this time. Mr. President, I call for a vote on the motion to reconsider.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Florida to reconsider the vote by which the order was agreed to.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. FLETCHER. Now I move that the order, which appears on page 2571 of the RECORD, be referred to the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think it would be better if the Senator should not make that motion. The diagram is already printed, and it will appear in the speech of the Senator from Iowa. Why, after it has become an accomplished fact, we should send an order to the Joint Committee on Printing and have it communicate with the Public Printer on a subject that has already been attended to, I can not understand.

Mr. FLETCHER. Very well.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest to the Senator to let the matter rest as it is.

Mr. FLETCHER. I will not press it. I will leave it where it is.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator leaves that subject, I understand the motion to reconsider has prevailed. That now brings the original motion before the Senate. Does the Senator intend to let it stand in that way?

Mr. FLETCHER. As it now stands, the order of the Senate is that the vote be reconsidered whereby that order was agreed to. Therefore the order itself is pending.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; but the motion itself is now before the Senate, after we have voted to reconsider the vote by which it was adopted.

Mr. FLETCHER. It is now before the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. The motion stands now just as it did on the original order which was voted on, and it ought to be disposed of one way or the other, ought it not?

Mr. FLETCHER. I was proposing to dispose of it, but, upon objection being made, I am prepared to leave it just as it stands.

Mr. NORRIS. If it is wrong, we ought to vote it down, but it seems to me that it is now in a peculiar light, with a motion pending before the Senate, which always will be pending, unless we dispose of it one way or the other.

Mr. FLETCHER. I am willing to have it put on the calendar under Rule IX, and I ask that it go to the calendar under Rule IX. Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will go to the calendar.

RURAL BANKING AND CURRENCY REFORM.

Mr. FLETCHER. I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a public document an address by Charles Hall Davis, of Petersburg, Va., delivered at Lake Toxaway, N. C., July 12, 1913, before the South Carolina Bankers' Association, on the subject of rural banking and currency reform (S. Doc. No. 140), and also to have printed as a public document an address, likewise delivered by Mr. Davis, at Asheville, N. C., on the occasion of its seventeenth annual convention, before the North Carolina Bankers' Association and representatives of the committees on rural finance of the various State bankers' associations of the Southern States (S. Doc. No. 141).

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator from Florida how many public documents have already been printed upon this one subject?

Mr. FLETCHER. These are the only documents which I have offered to be printed on this particular subject; and, so far as I know, this is the only discussion of any specific plan for the establishment of rural banks in this country. I desire to have the matter in shape for the committees that are considering at present the banking and currency bills which are pending. I think these addresses are valuable contributions to the subject, and I know of no subject of greater importance, especially to the agricultural people of the country, than the subject of agricultural banks and cooperation.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, my memory is that there have been a great number of articles upon this identical subject printed as public documents; and, if I am not mistaken, they would form a large book if they were all brought together. I am not going to object to the printing of these two addresses, but I believe the time has arrived when we should refuse to print as a public document every speech which is delivered upon this subject.

Mr. FLETCHER. I agree with the Senator from Utah, and I am very careful about asking for the printing of public documents. I know the study that Mr. Davis has given this subject and I know the work he has spent upon it. A part of it has been at my request and suggestion. I know how thoroughly he has gone into it, and I know that this is a very valuable contribution, bringing the subject up to date.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Senator will permit me to remark that while there is a vast amount of literature, monographs, and treatises, making a large library, collected by the Monetary Commission and from other sources, there is comparatively little in all that collection which relates to cooperative farmers' banks. It is a question of wide interest; one toward which the public is looking for information; and comparatively the literature is scant. I think a commission is now investigating that system abroad. I therefore hope the Senate will not be illiberal in allowing documents upon that particular subject to be printed.

Mr. FLETCHER. There have been various reports made and bulletins and documents printed; but, as the Senator from South Dakota suggests, the literature on this particular phase of the matter is very limited and very meager, I must say. The commission which spent three months studying this subject in certain European countries where systems which have been of vast benefit to the agricultural development of those countries are in operation is on its way home and will arrive in New York next Saturday, after spending months in the study of the subject; and this is in line with their work.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not propose to antagonize the request of the Senator from Florida, but I should like the Senator to state who Mr. Davis is and what his qualifications are.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Davis is a distinguished lawyer of some twenty-odd years' experience, residing in Petersburg, Va. He has had such experience as acquaints him with this particular subject, I think, in a way that makes his work quite important.

Mr. GALLINGER. I simply desire to add that I presume during the last three months I have received through the mail at least 25 "sure cures" for currency evils, and I have in several instances been requested to ask that they be printed as public documents. I neither have read the documents which have been sent to me, nor have I made the request that I was asked to make.

While I think this contribution may be of sufficient consequence to have it printed as a Senate document, yet I am constantly impressed, as I sit here from day to day, with the feeling that we are printing a great deal of material that is of very little concern to the Government or of advantage to us as legislators.

Mr. President, the Senator vouches that Mr. Davis, while a lawyer, has given great study to this problem, which is one of banking in a certain direction, and I certainly will not object to the printing, but will only warn the Senate that I think they are running riot in this matter of printing the opinions of all sorts and conditions of people on every possible subject under the heavens.

Mr. FLETCHER. I quite agree with the Senator, Mr. President, in general, and I wish to be careful in that direction myself. I know that these addresses were prepared with great care by Mr. Davis, at the request, in one instance, of the North Carolina Bankers' Association, and, in another instance, at the request of the South Carolina Bankers' Association, and they are, I think, quite important.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Florida if in these addresses there is set out any specific statute of foreign countries where this system of banking has been in vogue in the past, and whether any concrete form of statute is suggested in either of the addresses?

Mr. FLETCHER. There are no statutes of foreign countries set out in either address; but there is a proposed plan which is outlined and developed and the reasons given why that plan would be effective.

Mr. NORRIS. I am very glad to hear the Senator say that, because in my investigation of this subject, which has been as exhaustive as I have had time to make it, I have not found in the literature in reference to the matter what I deemed to be practical suggestions that would assist in framing any legislation on the subject. I believe it is of great importance, and I am convinced that in other countries they have developed in this respect to the benefit of the agriculturists. I think we might well study it, and I welcome any suggestion from any honest source looking to some practical legislation on the subject.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida? The Chair hears none, and the addresses referred to by him will be printed as public documents.

ADDRESS OF R. C. MILLIKEN.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, a few days ago I asked unanimous consent that an address by Mr. R. C. Milliken relating to the question of banks and bank currency be printed in the RECORD. It was at that time objected to by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP], but he has informed me since that he desired to withdraw his objection. Therefore I ask unanimous consent that the address be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Colorado who is the author of the address?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. R. C. Milliken.

Mr. GALLINGER. What are his qualifications to discuss the subject?

Mr. SHAFROTH. He is somewhat of a specialist on matters relating to finance. I have read the address, which is a very able one. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that I have also received a great many documents on this subject from various persons, one of which proposes to issue $5,000,000,000 of currency, and another which proposes to make the standard of value the kilowatt hour, but of course I have not asked that they be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado undoubtedly knows that the experts on finance who are flooding us with these documents are about as numerous as the autumnal leaves of Vallombrosa, and they are confusing a good deal the minds of those of us who take the trouble to read them. But if the Senator feels that this gentleman is really an expert and that his opinions are worthy of more than ordinary consideration I will not object to the request.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, it has been suggested to me that I ask that the paper be printed as a public document, instead of being printed in the RECORD, and I change my request to that extent.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I shall have to object to the address being printed as a public document. I think there may be a reason, if the Senator desires it personally, to have it in the RECORD, but I object to having it printed as a document.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Very well, then, let the request stand that it be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the address being printed in the RECORD? The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Address of R. C. Milliken, monetary statist of Washington, delivered under the direction of the educational bureau of the Young Men's Christian Association, April 11, 1913, entitled "The views of President Jackson respecting the so-called central bank."

I very much doubt if the views of any really prominent public man on so vital a question were ever more misunderstood than those of President Jackson respecting the so-called central bank. He favored the principle of a central bank, but opposed and destroyed the institution which failed to carry out the purposes of its creation. I direct your attention to the language used by him in his celebrated message to Congress of July 10, 1832, in which he vetoed the act to recharter the United States Bank. He said:

"A bank of the United States is in many respects convenient for the Government and useful to the people. Entertaining this opinion and deeply impressed with the belief that some of the powers and privileges possessed by the existing bank are unauthorized by the Constitution, subversive of the rights of the States, and dangerous to the liberties of the people, I felt it my duty at an early period of my administration to call the attention of Congress to the practicability of organizing an institution combining all its advantages and obviating those objections. I sincerely regret that in the act before me I can perceive none of those modifications of the bank charter which are necessary, in my opinion, to make it compatible with justice, with sound policy, or with the Constitution of our country."

WHAT PLAN DID JACKSON HAVE IN MIND TO RECOMMEND TO CONGRESS?

That language is too clear for argument. He admits favoring the principle. He was called on to approve or veto a specific act to recharter a particular bank which had already forfeited its right to exist. It was not incumbent on him to set forth in that veto message the specific provisions which such a charter should contain for the protection of the public interests. He need not have said he believed such an institution was "convenient for the Government and useful to the people." However, he did not stop with that gratuitous admission, but went further and said he felt it was his duty at an early period of his administration to submit a plan to Congress which not only would obviate the objections of the charter he vetoed, but combine the advantages which would render it an instrumentality for the public good.

It shall be my object this evening to point out to you, in the light of the history of those times, the plan which I believe Jackson had in mind to submit to Congress. It was "at an early period" of his administration that he says this "duty" manifested itself to his judgment. It becomes necessary, therefore, to consider some of the events of that period. Two years before he was inaugurated President there was published in London a most important treatise on banking, one which to this day is a standard authority on banking in every country having international commerce. It gave to its author, James W. Gilbart, F. R. S., great renown as a monetary thinker. It made him so famous that some of the ablest financiers of the British metropolis supplied him with funds and induced him to return to that city of his birth and early banking experience and organize the first of the London great joint-stock banks. No greater compliment was ever paid to a thinker than that compliment paid to Gilbart by those London capitalists. It is no easy matter to induce capital to finance a new project, but it is well-nigh impossible to induce capital to engage in a lawsuit, and that is just what Gilbart's project meant. He had to destroy the monopoly then enjoyed by the Bank of England before he could put his principles into operation. What a fight he made! It was against the most powerful corporation in the world at that time, the Bank of England. In the beginning he had no influential persons to aid him, but after fighting in all the courts of England, though losing his legal battle, he so educated the public that Parliament came to his rescue and destroyed the monopoly of the Bank of England, and then it was that Gilbart came into possession of his rights—the right to do a necessary and useful business in a free country.

Jackson was not a monetary expert—that is, he did not possess accurate detailed information on monetary affairs, on which he had given deep and sustained thought—something which carries a conviction that makes a man fight to the last ditch, as Gilbart did. But it is most unreasonable to suppose that some of the political economists of this country failed to direct Jackson's attention to the principles advocated by Gilbart, for those two great men had one important interest in common—the destruction of bank monopoly. I believe that Jackson "at an early period of (his) administration," when his attention was first directed to Gilbart's philosophy, had it in mind to recommend to Congress the principles advocated by that great philosopher of credit, but as his time was engrossed with other important public duties those early-formed views—not convictions—passed from his mind. He doubtless retained enough to be convinced he was thoroughly justified in vetoing that act to recharter his implacable foe, the United States Bank.

HOW GILBART'S PHILOSOPHY MUST HAVE INFLUENCED JACKSON'S MIND.

It is necessary, therefore, to call attention to some of the important truths announced at that time by Gilbart. He contended that the merchant was the permanent regulator of the interest on money, the immediate regulator being the proportion existing between the supply and the demand. This is what he wrote:

"Sir Josiah Child, in his excellent essay on Trade, accuses the 'new-fashioned bankers' of being the main cause of keeping the interest of money at least 2 per cent higher than otherwise it would be; for by allowing their creditors 6 per cent they make moneyed men sit down lazily with so high an interest and not push into commerce with their money, as they certainly would do were it at 4 or 3 per cent, as in Holland. This high interest also keeps the price of land at so low as 15 years' purchase. It also makes money scarce in the country, seeing that the trade of bankers being only in London, it very much drains the ready money from all other parts of the kingdom."

That we may be able to judge of these accusations, it will be necessary to make some observations upon those circumstances which influences the rate of interest.

It has been the opinion of most of our political economists that the rate of interest is regulated by the rate of profit. This sentiment has, however, been attacked. It has been contended that the rate of interest is not influenced by the average rate of profit, but by the moneyed capital in the market, compared with the wants of borrowers. In other words, that the price of money is influenced by the proportion between the demand and the supply.

This sentiment is undoubtedly right, but it does not overthrow the proposition against which it is advanced. The price of money or of the loan of money is, no doubt, like the price of other commodity, regulated at any particular time by the proportion between the supply and the demand. But does not the rate of profit regulate the supply and the demand? Will any commercial man borrow money when he must give a higher interest for it than he can profit by its use? Or will any man lend money at a very low interest when by engaging in business he can make a very high profit? It is true that on particular occasions and under particular circumstances some individuals may do this, but not permanently and universally. It is obvious, then, that a high rate of interest in proportion to profits increases the supply of money and diminishes the demand, and a low rate of interest in proportion to profits increases the demand for the loan of money and diminishes the supply. The rate of interest, therefore, is ultimately regulated by the rate of profits.

When we say the price of cotton is regulated by the cost of production, we do not mean to deny that the market price of cotton is fixed by the proportion between the demand and the supply. On the contrary, this is admitted; but, then, it is contended that the supply itself is regulated by the cost of production. If the market price of cotton were so low as not to furnish the grower a fair average of profit on the capital employed, then would capital be removed after a while from the cultivation of cotton to some other employment? And if the price of cotton were so high as to furnish more than a fair average of profit, then after a while more capital will find its way into that employment, the supply would be increased, and the price would fall; but it is only by influencing the supply that the cost of production may be the same for a number of years, the price may be perpetually varying. The price may from a variety of causes be in a state of constant vibration; but it can not permanently deviate on one side or the other much beyond the line marked out by the cost of production.

It is the same with money. It is subject to perpetual fluctuations from the proportion between the demand and the supply, but it does not deviate far from the line marked out by the rate of profit. For the rate of profit not only influences the supply (as with cotton), but also influences the demand.

The above reasoning is founded on the supposition that those who borrow money borrow it for the purpose of investing it in trade or of making a profit by its use. But this is not always the case; and is never the case with the government of a country, who always borrows for the purpose of spending. Now, we can form a judgment as to what portion of his profits a merchant is willing to give for the loan of a sum of money, but we can form no judgment as to the conduct of a profligate rake who wants money to spend on his follies. A king or a government is in the same state.

They will borrow money as cheaply as they can; but at all events money they will have. We can not therefore infer that, because Charles II gave at times to the new-fashioned bankers 30 per cent for money, the average rate of profit exceeded 30 per cent. May not, then, those advances to the king have had the effect of raising the interest of money and thus justify the accusations of Sir Josiah Child?

When a number of commercial men borrow money of one another, the permanent regulator of the rate of interest is the rate of profit; and the immediate regulator is the proportion between the demand and the supply. But when a new party comes into the market, who has no common interest with them, who does not borrow money to trade with but to spend, the permanent regulator (the rate of profit) loses its influence, and the sole regulator is then the proportion between the demand and the supply. The loans to the king created a much greater demand for money, and the rate of interest consequently rose. These demands were so great an amount and were so frequently repeated that the rate of interest became permanently high. Many individuals would no doubt (as Sir Josiah Child states they did) withdraw their capital from trade and live upon the interest of their money. And others who were in business would employ their superfluous capital in lending it at interest, rather than in extending their business. Those commercial men who now wanted to borrow money must give a higher interest for it than they did before. To enable themselves to do this they must charge a higher profit on their goods. Thus, then, in the artificial state of the money market it appears reasonable to suppose that the rate of interest may have regulated the rate of profit, instead of the rate of profit regulating the rate of interest, which is the natural state.

CLASS OF MERCHANTS WHO ARE PERMANENT REGULATORS OF INTEREST RATE.

Gilbart was very clear in all his statements, and left nothing to conjecture as to the class of merchants who are the permanent regulators of the interest on money, namely, those merchants buying seasonable articles for a consumptive rather than a speculative demand. Listen to what he wrote on that:

"Between the producer and the consumer of any commodity there are generally two or more parties, who are merchants or dealers. The demand for any commodity is either a speculative or a consumptive demand. The demand by the consumers who purchase for immediate use is always a consumptive demand. But if the commodity purchased be not intended for immediate use, but is purchased at any given time merely because the purchaser apprehends that its price will advance, then is that demand a speculative demand. So if a merchant purchase of a manufacturer or a farmer such a quantity of commodities as in the ordinary course of his trade he is likely to require, that demand may be considered a consumptive demand; but if in expectation of a rise in price he fills his warehouses with goods for which he has no immediate sale, then is that demand a speculative demand. A speculation, then, is that kind of traffic in which the dealer expects to realize a profit, not by the ordinary course of trade, but by the intervention of some fortuitous circumstance that shall change the price of the commodity in which he deals.

"A speculation in any commodity, therefore, is occasioned by some opinion that may be formed of its future price. It is well known that the price of commodities is governed by the proportion that may exist between the supply and the demand. Whatever increases the supply or diminishes the demand will lower the price, and, on the contrary, whatever diminishes the supply or increases the demand will advance the price."

When Gilbart thus wrote, the Bank of England, like the United States Bank, was controlled by bankers who were selling credit for profit and not as the permanent regulator of the interest rate, as is the practice with that institution at present. Before the Bank of England became a real bank of commerce panics occurred with the same frequency in the United Kingdom that they do now in the United States.

THE VOTING UNIT IN CONTROL OF THE HEAD OF THE CREDIT SYSTEM.

In considering the control of any corporation, especially the head of the credit system, we should not begin with the executive officers or the directors—the legislative body—but must go to the very source of control, the flesh and blood which elect the directorate, because the director of a corporation is a business politician and may be relied on to execute the will of those electing him to office. The amount of bank stock required to qualify the electors—voting units—of the central banks of England, France, and Belgium are charter provisions, but the other qualifications are regulated in other ways, usually by by-laws. The bank-stock interest of the Bank of England elector is $2,500 (500 pounds); the Bank of Belgium's is $2,000 (10,000 francs); while the electors of the Bank of France comprise its 200 largest stockholders not possessing some disqualifying interest. Those bank stocks are at a premium, so it requires an expenditure of $8,140 to purchase an electorship in the Bank of England and $8,685 in the Bank of Belgium.

"GREAT MERCHANT" QUALIFICATION OF THE VOTING UNIT.

The other qualification of the Bank of England elector is the "great merchant" who does not possess some antagonistic interest, namely, a "great merchant" who is not engaged in speculative enterprises or the sale of bank credit for profit. The amount of mercantile interest required to make an English merchant a "great merchant" in the estimation of those in control of that institution is difficult to ascertain; in fact, it varies; but I do not believe the least of those "great merchant" electors has less than $100,000 invested in the mercantile business. Each elector has just one vote for the governor and directors. So that 500 pounds of bank-stock interest gives an elector as much voice in control as would 5,000,000 pounds. Not one of those European central banks is stock controlled, their stock being used as one, but by no means the most important, qualifying factor. No class is more interested in the stability of values than those merchants who deal in seasonable articles for a consumptive demand. No other class is more injured by panics. To illustrate this we have but to direct attention to the actual experience of London during the 1907 panic. At that time one of the great banks of that city was in dire distress for immediate cash resources, and not one of its rivals would aid it; but the Bank of England, single handed and alone, went to its rescue and furnished it with all needed assistance. There was absolutely no patriotism in that act on the part of the Bank of England. They knew if that bank failed, a panic might ensue, and the injury resulting to their business would be incalculable, for they were the owners and possessors of large stocks of seasonable merchandise, the styles of 1907–8, which had to be disposed of during that season and not the following season when they would be supplanted by new styles. It was, therefore, to the selfish interest of those "great merchant" electors to use the credit of the Bank of England for the public good. They did not do that with their own wealth; they acted as trustees for the public. There are approximately 300 electors and more than 18,000 stockholders of the Bank of England, just 200 electors and more than 30,000 stockholders of the Bank of France, and 528 electors and more than 10,000 stockholders of the Bank of Belgium.

THE INFLUENCE OF GILBART'S PHILOSOPHY ON THE CONTINENT.

There is no comparison between the central bank of Jackson's time and that of to-day. Previous to the announcement of Gilbart's philosophy the public did not know the raison d'être of that institution, and in consequence of that ignorance the central bank's greatest menace was the ambitious war lord. Why, had it not been for the French victory at Austerlitz the French people would have been ruined financially, just as they had been ruined on two previous occasions by war lords, because Napoleon, just before engaging in that campaign, virtually drained the Bank of France of its gold reserve. He left only $150,000 at a time when the bank had 65,000,000 francs of demand obligations outstanding. Only a few years before this French incident, in 1797, we find the British war lord also looking on that institution as the engine of state rather than an instrument of commerce. During that year the Pitt ministry forced the Bank of England, against the solemn protest of its officers and directors, to make the Government a $5,000,000 loan with which to wage war against France. Such loan emptied the bank's vaults of gold. In an attempt to compensate the bank for that act of force the ministry induced Parliament to make the bank's notes a legal tender in the payment of debts. Here was the British Government for the first time in its long and eventful history of sound finance attempting to make money out of pieces of paper. What was the result of that act of repudiation? Loss of public confidence in the ability and good faith of the bank to redeem its obligations in gold. Of course, its notes fell below par and there remained for nearly a quarter of a century. Parliament tendered the same paternalistic aid of repudiation to the Scotch banks, but their officers had the good sense to decline it, and in consequence their notes remained at par with gold during the whole of the devastating Napoleonic wars.

But after Gilbart turned on the light of truth, public sentiment changed respecting the control of that important financial institution, for instead of looking to the State as the only safe guardian of commerce, they now look to the most potent force of human nature—self-interest. Keep the most important instrument of commerce free, and the citizens will make the wherewithal to protect the Government in its distress, but shackle that instrument and you deprive the citizens of the opportunity to aid their Government in time of need.

CENTRAL BANK THE MOST IMPORTANT BUT NOT THE ONLY FACTOR TO THE SUCCESS OF THE CREDIT SYSTEM.

Please don't understand me as contending that a properly controlled head of the credit system will cure all the financial ills of any country. I simply claim it to be the most important factor of the credit system. Credit has as much influence on prices as gold. In other words, an expansion of credit by $100,000,000 has as much influence on prices as an addition of $100,000,000 to the quantity of gold. It matters not whether the credit instrument employed to bring about such expansion be bank notes, deposits, bills of exchange, promissory notes, or any other evidence of credit, the effect on prices will be precisely the same. John Stuart Mill says, "Money and credit are exactly on a par in their effect on prices." Henry Dunning Macleod, the great Scotch philosopher of credit, says:

"It is perfectly acknowledged that credit produces exactly the same effect on prices as gold. And it has been shown by authentic statistics that in modern times gold only forms about 1 per cent of the circulating medium of currency; and to suppose that a variation to the small extent of a fraction of 1 per cent in the amount of the circulating medium, or measure of value, could produce the effect so popularly attributed to it is wholly beyond reason."

Go to a store and buy an overcoat, and you thereby remove that one article of commerce from the market and, pro tanto, cause an advance in the price of that article, and the effect is precisely the same whether you pay for it in gold or obtain it on credit. That credit may be evidenced by your open account with your merchant, by your promissory note executed in his favor, by a bill drawn by you on some of your debtors or a person who has agreed to accept it, by your check on your bank or a bank note. The effect will be the same whether you use one or the other of those credit instruments or pay for that overcoat in gold. The cause for the advance in the price was your consumption of that article. Any credit system, therefore, which facilitates the production of commerce or restrains overconsumption is a good system, and any credit system which does not afford ample facilities for the production of commerce or which fails to restrain overconsumption is a bad system.

In conclusion, let me say that as credit is on a par with gold in influencing prices—influencing them downward when used for production and upward when used for overconsumption; as the production of commerce is an absolute necessity to civilized man's existence and overconsumption an evil which should be restrained; as credit has about ninety-nine times greater influence than gold in affecting prices—does it not follow, then, that we should have one credit institution in this country whose sole mission it is to facilitate the one and restrain the other of those conditions? Without such an institution commerce will not only suffer for lack of ample facilities, but panics will continue periodically to wipe us off the financial map. I believe it was such an institution which Jackson thought was "useful to the people," and which he felt it his "duty" to recommend to Congress. If such a corporation was thought to be "useful to the people" in Jackson's time, when there was not a single hundred million dollar corporation in the country, what about it now, when hundred million dollar corporations are so numerous no one can count them offhand? Ask the average life insurance agent you chance to meet to name the hundred million dollar corporations engaged in his business, and I venture the assertion that not one out of ten can give you a correct reply without referring to a pocket index, yet that is a class of corporation unknown to the American people in Jackson's time. All have been organized since then.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3321, being the tariff bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I want to say in the beginning that, considering the state of the weather, to say nothing of the uninteresting character of what I am about to say, I shall not complain of any Senator who seeks a more comfortable place than this Chamber. I am sorry, under the circumstances, to burden the Senate with a speech, and I would not do so, except out of a high sense of duty to the people of my State.

I regret exceedingly that the Democratic Party could not or would not formulate a just and reasonable tariff measure that would afford fair and equitable protection to American industries and at the same time furnish the needed revenue for the Government. If this had been done, I should have been willing and glad to support it.

I am not much of a partisan. A political party means nothing to me, except as it represents fundamental principles of government in which I believe. Therefore, I would have supported a measure of this kind coming from the Democratic side of the Senate just as readily as I would if it had come as a Republican measure.

It has been said by the chairman of the Committee on Finance that in arriving at the rates of duty fixed by the pending bill the question of protection was not considered. There could be no stronger proof of the truth of this statement than the rates that are fixed upon the products of the State of California. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], in a very able review of this bill, shows that 51 per cent of the things produced in my State are made subject to duty; but, sir, this is for revenue only and not for protection, as I shall proceed to show.

California occupies a peculiar position in respect of tariff legislation. She produces what is not found in any other section of the country. Her chief products are not grown in any other State in the Union. Therefore, there is no Senator upon this floor, except my colleague, who has any direct interest in the effort I am about to make to protect my State from ruinous legislation. It is for that reason, Mr. President, that I have felt it my duty to devote myself at this time to a discussion of the effect of this bill, if it shall become a law, upon the products of my own State.

In what I am about to say there will be included much in the form of tabulated figures and communications from others giving facts and data with respect to the subject concerning which I am about to address myself. I do not desire to take up the time of the Senate unnecessarily, and, therefore, I ask in the beginning, Mr. President, unanimous consent that I may, as I come to these documents, include them as a part of my remarks without reading.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, permission to do so is granted.

LEMONS.

Mr. WORKS. The question of the tariff on citrus fruits is a question of right and justice and not of expediency or of politics, just as it is in case of any and every domestic product, whether it be a farm product or one of manufacture. Any attempt to use it for political or partisan advantage, no matter by whom, or how tempting such a use of it may seem, is a wrong to parties immediately and directly interested, a breach of duty to the Government, and a violation of a public and official obligation. If the lemon industry needs and is entitled to a duty under the doctrine of protection, for which the Republican Party stands pledged, no Republican Senator can consistently vote to deprive it of that right. If the tariff is a source of revenue to the Government and it seems to be just, no Democrat can vote to deny the industry this just protection if he believes in a tariff for revenue only and is not an out-and-out free trader.

The question is one between the fruit growers of our own country, who are by their energy and industry and the expenditure of millions and millions of dollars adding to the material wealth of the country, and foreign producers, importers, and their agents and brokers, who contribute nothing to the upbuilding of the Nation. It is a question between the men who pay the taxes and spend their money, derived from their business, here with us, and the foreign producer, who pays no taxes and takes the money derived from what he sells to a foreign country and spends it there. It is a question between an industry that supports and maintains hundreds of American families, drawn from every State in the Union, and pays American wages, and a foreign industry that feeds no mouths in this country and pays the pauper wages of a foreign country. To this it is answered that by the tariff the price of lemons is increased, that they are necessary for the use of the sick and the poor, and that therefore the tariff is an injustice to the consumers in our own country.

Mr. President, I propose to present this question, not as a political question, not as a plea for the upbuilding of an industry in my own State at the expense of any other industry or without reference to the rights of the public or the consumer, but strictly as a question of right and justice to all parties concerned. Therefore I expect to show by the evidence and data, which I shall submit for the consideration of the Senate:

First. That this industry needs and must have a tariff if it is to continue.

Second. That such a tariff as is now imposed has not and will not increase the price of lemons to consumers.

Third. That the increased tariff now imposed has not decreased, but has, in fact, increased the revenue to the Government derived from the tariff.

I am impressed with the belief that Members of Congress, as a rule, have very little conception of the extent and importance of this industry, not only to the State of California, but to the whole Nation, and but little understanding of the time and money necessary to bring a lemon orchard to bearing, or the skill and care and risk of producing and marketing the fruit. For that reason I am going to trespass upon the time and patience of the Senate in the effort to describe the conditions in my own State as to the present extent and importance of the industry and the facilities in the way of other suitable lands and supply of water for its extension, and give some account of the manner of growing, curing, and marketing the fruit, the expense involved and the risks to be met in the growing of the trees, and the production and marketing of the fruit. I do this partly for the information of Senators that they may act more intelligently in dealing with the question, partly to establish the right of the fruit growers to the present tariff rate, and partly because it has been claimed in some quarters not only that this country is not now producing sufficient of such fruit to supply the market, but that it never can.

The first of these claims is well founded. This country is not now producing sufficient lemons to supply our home market. Therefore it must be conceded that no tariff should be imposed that would prevent the importation of foreign-grown lemons. But the second claim, namely, that this country can not meet the demand of the home market in the future, is not well founded. It is well understood that only a comparatively small area of this country is adapted to the growth of citrus fruits because of the adverse climatic conditions. In what I am about to say on this subject I shall speak of my own State only, and I can do that better by submitting data covering the present acreage in bearing lemons, the planting not yet matured, the area of land in the State adapted to the growth of lemons if the industry is properly fostered and protected and the estimated output of lemons from this area.

In this connection I desire to say not only with respect to data bearing upon this particular subject, but as to all data used in what I shall say, that it has been gathered by thoroughly competent and reliable men under strict instructions from me to endeavor to arrive at the facts when available, and where estimates were necessary to keep within strictly conservative and safe lines, so that I might be rightly informed and be able to vouch for the truth, accuracy, and conservatism of the information I might attempt to impart to others. In gathering this information I have, wherever possible, procured the services of men with whom I am personally acquainted and upon whose competency and reliability I could depend. And as to most of the data furnished, it has been taken directly from the books of the fruit growers, not made or kept for this purpose, but in the daily conduct of their own business.

These data in respect of this branch of the subject show—

First. Number of acres of lemons in bearing, 24,443.

Second. Number of trees in bearing, 1,833,011.

Third. Number of acres planted to trees not yet in bearing, 8,001.

Fourth. Number of trees not yet in bearing, 600,095.

Fifth. Number of acres of land in California adapted to the growth of lemons not yet planted, probably not less than 95,000.

Sixth. Number of acres planted to lemons during last year, 2,000.

Seventh. Estimated annual planting, in acres, for the last five years, 1,000 to 3,000 acres.

Eighth. Average yield of lemons per acre, 200 boxes from the well-cared-for orchard, 100 boxes per acre from all trees in the State.

These data, which may be relied upon, show that with the present planting in California alone the annual output may be relied upon as not less than 2,800,000 boxes; and with the total acreage of available land planted to lemons, which may be depended upon if the industry is reasonably and properly protected against ruinous foreign competition, will be not less than 10,000,000 boxes.

To arrive at correct results in meeting the claim that the production can never meet the demand, we should next look to the quantity consumed. This information is easily obtainable from different sources, among others, Commerce and Navigation of the United States, Department of Commerce, for imports of lemons, the official railroad records showing shipments from California, as published in the Monthly Summary of Commerce and Finance of the United States, Department of Commerce, which show that the consumption of lemons, grown at home and abroad, reaches approximately 4,000,000 boxes per annum. It will be readily seen from these figures that with its available land adapted to the growth of lemons planted to that fruit California alone will be able to supply the home market with all the lemons needed and that very soon.

Mr. President, the importance of this industry to the country at large can not be overlooked or denied. If there is any industry in this country that should receive the favorable consideration of the Congress of the United States it is one like this that must be protected from foreign competition to live and which brings and keeps the people out of the city and on the farm. In this connection another claim that is urged against the California fruit grower, that he does not employ native help but resorts to foreign cheap labor, should be met. The conditions in California have been peculiar. Chinese and Japanese laborers have in past years found their way into our State against the earnest efforts of our own people to keep them out. They have, to some extent, supplanted white labor in the growing and marketing of fruit in the State.

This condition has been forced upon the fruit growers in spite of them. They employ all of the white laborers that can be had and who are willing to do the work called for. Some of the growers, at least, have used every effort to induce native laborers to render the needed service. This has partially succeeded, and the skilled employees are white, and a large proportion of the ordinary laborers as well. The statistics show that about 85 per cent of the employees on the citrus-fruit ranches and in the packing houses are American laborers, and the percentage is increasing. There are about 3,500 orientals employed in a total of 25,000 laborers. It is no fault of the fruit growers, as a rule, that any foreign laborers are employed, as they prefer native white labor to any other. Surely it is in the interest of this country that American fruit ranches employing this proportion of American citizens should be maintained rather than the foreign producer employing none but foreigners.

HOW LEMONS ARE GROWN, CURED, AND SHIPPED.

With this passing notice of some of the objections made to a tariff on lemons, I pass to a showing of the manner of growing lemons, the skill and labor required in their growth, curing, and shipment, and the risks encountered in carrying on this important industry before taking up the comparative cost of production and marketing of the fruit in this country and abroad and the necessity of the tariff now imposed for the protection of our own growers.

The growing of lemons requires a peculiar combination of soil and climate found only in a limited area in this country. Only a part of the State, from central California south, is adapted to their commercial growth. It must be taken into account also that in the localities adapted to the growth of citrus fruits irrigation is necessary and adds to the cost of production. The ground must be carefully prepared in advance, and a system of irrigation provided. In most cases the water necessary for irrigation must be bought, thus adding to the original cost.

The trees are transplanted at the age of 2 years and begin to bear in about four years thereafter, reaching full bearing at about 8 years of age. During all this time the trees must be cared for, irrigated, pruned, and the ground cultivated. The grower receives no returns to meet this continual expense for four years at least from the time the ground is prepared for the trees and only a partial return for some time later. The harvesting of the crop is peculiar. Lemon trees are in bearing at all times of the year. The trees at all times bear fruit at all stages of growth from the bud to the full-grown fruit. Therefore picking of the fruit occurs at all times of the year. Ordinarily, in a well-regulated orchard, the fruit is picked 10 or 12 times every year. The time of picking does not depend on the ripening of the fruit, for lemons are always picked green. The time of picking depends on the size of the fruit, and that depends on the demands of the dealers and consumers of lemons. The size of the fruit is determined by the use of a ring of the required size. Every lemon too large to pass through this ring is ready for picking, and the harvesting and curing of the fruit is kept up all through the year. The process of curing and loading on cars for shipment is well described by an experienced grower as follows:

The lemons are delivered at the door of the packing house in field boxes holding approximately 42 pounds net of fruit to the box. Two men unload to insure easy handling and stack the fruit six boxes high, which is then weighed and trucked to its own section to await its turn to be washed. All lemons are washed, whether clean or dirty. They are then trucked to the washer, when box and all are lowered into the tank of water and the lemons allowed to float out of the box to eliminate any chance of bruising. This water contains a small per cent of copper sulphate, about 1 pound to a thousand gallons of water, to prevent poison brown rot or Pythiacystis citrophthaca from spreading in the washer and infecting good fruit. There are several styles of washers in use, but we here speak of that known as the circular submerged.

Passing through the washer brushes the lemons are carried along on a wide canvas belt and are then separated into three grades: Dark green, light green, and tree ripe or yellow. These are carefully placed in boxes and stored in the curing house in tents. Here they are left for about a month and then examined for decay, when, if found necessary because of excessive decay, they are re-sorted and rots and contacts are taken out and the balance re-stored. If necessary this process is repeated until time of shipment.

The tree ripe, being the weakest fruit, is sorted and shipped when from 10 days to 6 weeks old, the half or light green coming next, and the dark green being held until the demand warrants shipment.

From the curing tents the fruit is trucked to the sorters where it is graded and placed in wooden trays 2 feet by 3 feet by 3 feet deep, one layer of fruit to each tray, stacked so as to allow some ventilation and stored until wanted in the packing room.

When wanted it is trucked to the packing room and a stack placed at each packer's skid. The skids are 9 feet long having room for three sets of trays, and each skid having three packing stands holding boxes ready for packing and wrapping of the fruit.

Four trays are placed on one end of the skid and the packer selects the size that is to be packed in the box, usually a "three hundred," wrapped with tissue paper and placed in the box in rows according to certain rules, which when followed will give a box containing 300 lemons, all of uniform size and of the right height for proper transportation—the lemons usually being about an inch above the edge of the box.

When all of that size are taken from the tray the attendant, or "rustler," as he is known, places the partly emptied tray back one space on the skid and the packer repeats the process with the next tray, and so on. Then moving back to the next space the same process is repeated with the next size of lemon, usually the 360 size, etc., until the trays are empty; then moving again to the front of the skid, where a new supply has been placed, the process is repeated.

When the box is packed, the rustler carries it to the press skid, where the pressman, examining the box for defects in packing and finding it O. K., puts on the cover, and by the use of the steel press forces down each end of the cover and the fruit flush with the end of the box, using great care to see that the lemons are not caught and bruised, when a small strip of wood known as a cleat is then placed over the cover and the ends of the box and nailed down to hold the covers in place. Over the center of the box a strap of iron is fastened which holds the cover tight against the fruit, keeping it from shaking in the box.

The fruit is then trucked into the refrigerator car and loaded on end in rows two tiers deep, beginning at each end of the car against the bulkhead next to the ice tanks, leaving air space of about 3 inches between each row, the boxes being placed edge to edge. Each row is held in place by two car strips, pieces of lumber 1 inch by ½ inch by 8 feet long, which are nailed to the head of each box, and where necessary car strips are nailed between rows at center and ends of box to take up space in the car so as to make the tiers tight. Where such car strips are used, material 1½ inches by ½ inch by 8 feet is necessary to keep from cutting the thin sides of boxes.

In the summer during the hot weather tree-ripe and fruit that is weakened from old age or other causes is iced in transit to prevent decay, but the bulk of the fruit from houses using the better methods is sent under ventilation and carries with but slight decay.

Every man or woman who touches a lemon is compelled to wear canvas gloves to prevent any scratching or bruising of the fruit. Each lemon is handled and examined individually seven times, once at time of picking, twice at washer, once at sorting, once at curing, and twice at packing, and is handled in bulk by 16 to 18 different men at different occasions, from picking to time of shipment.

All these processes are absolutely essential to the proper grading, curing, and shipping of the fruit.

This will show the extreme care necessary in handling and curing the fruit. It will be noticed that a full month's time is taken in curing the fruit and that every lemon must be separately handled not less than seven times. This renders necessary the employment of a large number of persons skilled in their work and a very large building or storage space for the boxes of fruit in process of curing. Some of the fruit is cured several months before shipment. I have seen the process in operation in its various stages, and to me it is extremely interesting. It results in the production in every market of this country of fruit of the finest quality.

COST OF PRODUCTION.

With this brief statement of how the fruit is produced, the skill and knowledge necessary to its successful production, and the risks attending it, I pass to a consideration of the cost of production. I do this because it is declared as the policy of the Republican Party that a tariff shall be imposed equal to the difference between the cost of production here and abroad, with a reasonable profit to the home producer. It is my purpose to compare the cost of production of lemons in this country and Italy, the chief competitor of the domestic producer, with the view of showing by actual figures the right of our lemon growers to the tariff now in force.

There is but little difficulty in arriving at the cost of production in this country. Most of the larger growers keep careful and accurate accounts of every item of expense that enters into the preparation of the ground, the planting and cultivation of the trees, irrigation, fertilizing, fumigation of the trees, and the picking, handling, curing, and shipment of the fruit, and the smaller growers have data from which the cost can be accurately determined. I have procured detailed and reliable accounts of these expenses from different growers upon whom I could rely, and shall submit them for the consideration of the Senate. The furnishing of accurate data as to the corresponding expense in foreign countries is more difficult. It is the policy of foreign growers to conceal the cost of producing and marketing their fruit, for the very good reason that a showing of such cost as compared with the cost in this country would show conclusively that a tariff on their imported fruit is absolutely necessary for the protection of our growers against the introduction of their cheaper grown and marketed product. Besides this, the foreign grower does not keep books of accounts of his expenses as is done by our own growers, and no official record of the cost of production in Italy, for example, is kept.

But there are certain items that enter into the cost of production that are easily obtainable, and they have been ascertained and furnished me for my use. To obtain this information and all data obtainable, a thoroughly capable and reliable man, having experience not only in the practical work of growing lemons but of the items of expense entering into their production, was sent by the fruit growers of California to gather this information. He had been for 10 years connected with the Agricultural Department of the Government; he had investigated the Italian lemon industry officially in 1908, an account of which was published in Bulletin 160, Bureau of Plant Industry—Italian Lemons and Their By-Products—and had peculiar facilities for ascertaining all that was to be had on the subject. It is my purpose to submit to the Senate the result of his investigations and the information obtained.

COST OF NEW PLANTING.

In considering the cost of production I shall take first the cost of new planting and then the cost of cultivation and care of the trees, including the picking of the fruit. In the effort to arrive at accurate results I have sought concrete cases, covering actual experience, furnished me by competent and reliable growers, who have kept accurate and detailed accounts of all expenses. The first that I shall advert to is a set of statements furnished me at my request by the San Diego Fruit Co., one of the large growers in San Diego County. These statements are rendered by Mr. John E. Boal, manager of the company. I have known Mr. Boal intimately for 20 years, and for a large part of that time was closely connected with him and his company in a business way. He is thoroughly familiar with every branch and detail of the business of growing lemons, is thoroughly competent, and has been, as I know, painstaking and methodical in keeping accounts of every item of expense connected with the business that he has efficiently managed for many years. The figures he furnishes may be implicitly relied upon as coming from the books of his company, kept from day to day in the ordinary conduct of the business, and with no intention or expectation that they would be used for the purpose for which I am now using them.

I take first the statement of the cost of planting. He takes 11 orchards, accounts of which have been kept, ranging in size from 1½ to 15 acres, giving the cost of planting each one of them to trees after the ground is prepared, then adds the cost of grading and preparing the land for the trees. In this connection it should be borne in mind that the grading and preparing the ground, so that it can be successfully irrigated by gravity, is an important part of the work of planting, involving no little skill and considerable expense, varying with the natural formation of the land that must be overcome. This table, after giving the number of the orchard, the number of acres in each, and the number of trees planted, segregates the expense under the heads of cost of trees, survey of the land, water, labor, and fertilizing, and gives the total in case of each orchard, and then gives us the total in each case. In order to arrive at the fair average cost each item is totaled in the footings. The result shows an average expense per acre of $91, not including the preparation of the land. The item of grading and preparing the land, $35 an acre, is then added, making a total of $126 per acre as a first investment, not including the cost of the land itself. It is a very interesting and instructive table, that is worthy of the careful consideration of the Senate in dealing with this important subject. It is as follows:

Cost of new planting, 1911, by San Diego Fruit Co.

Orchard No.—	Acres.	Number of trees.	Cost.	Survey.	Water.	Labor.	Fertilizer.	Total.
9	2½	158	$126.05	$5.00	$8.75	$16.21	$5.62	$161.63
31	2½	237	177.60	5.00	8.75	34.21	9.37	234.93
32	4½	351	278.25	10.00	15.75	58.90	13.12	376.02
33	6	491	370.72	35.00	21.00	133.57	18.75	579.04
78	9	712	580.31	12.50	31.50	207.63	26.25	858.19
80	15	1,072	963.91	10.00	52.50	346.18	39.46	1,411.05
83	8	591	443.25	5.00	28.00	149.88	22.50	648.63
85	4	262	209.60	2.50	14.00	52.44	9.84	288.38
103	1½	103	77.25	.....	5.25	11.64	3.75	97.89
108	10	770	630.50	.....	13.50	259.67	29.05	932.73
111	13	1,199	910.21	25.50	45.50	301.38	45.00	1,327.59
Total	76	5,946	4,757.65	119.50	244.50	1,571.71	222.72	6,916.08

Average cost of planting per acre	$91
Add grading and preparing land	35
Total	126

This will vary as the number of trees vary. This report shows average of 78 trees per acre. Frequently there are 90 trees planted per acre.

First year's care	$38.50
Second year's care	42.50
Third year's care	57.50
Fourth year's care	95.00
Fifth year's care	115.00
	348.50
	126.00
	474.50

I submit also on this subject a letter from W. G. Fraser, general manager of the Arlington Heights Fruit Co., to G. Harold Powell, manager Citrus Protective League, and three attached statements of cost, segregated and itemized, which show the cost of bringing lemon groves into bearing. They are as follows:

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS FRUIT CO.,
Riverside, Cal., October 6, 1911.

Mr. G. HAROLD POWELL,
Manager Citrus Protective League,
Consolidated Realty Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

DEAR MR. POWELL: We have carefully examined our old books and records to ascertain the cost of bringing our lemon groves into bearing, and we find that during the first few years of the company's operations the expenses upon the groves were not segregated in such a way that we can now prepare such a statement as you desire, as set forth in your letter of September 15.

In the year 1905 the Riverside Trust Co. (Ltd.) planted 163 acres of land to Eureka lemon trees, and our records have been kept in such a shape that we are able to furnish you with the information desired in your letter.

We are now furnishing you with three separate statements, numbered 1, 2, and 3.

No. 1 shows the cost of land and water, trees, fluming, plowing and leveling, planting, cultivation and irrigation, fertilizer, water dues, taxes, and management, covering a period of five years, after which the groves were self-sustaining. The average cost per acre as per statement No. 1 is $721.33.

Statement No. 2 includes all of the items in No. 1, together with the proportionate cost of plant, including buildings, tools, implements, horses, etc. The average cost per acre as per statement No. 2 is $803.33.

Statement No. 3 includes all of the items in Nos. 1 and 2, and in addition simple interest at 6 per cent, all of which brings up the average cost per acre to $1,012.96.

We thought that we would furnish all three statements and that you could use such of them as you thought wise.

We trust that the inclosed statements will furnish you with the desired information. If they should not, however, kindly advise and we will endeavor to furnish you with such additional data as you may suggest.

Yours, very truly,

W. G. FRASER,
General Manager.

STATEMENT NO. 1.

Cost of bringing 163 acres of lemon groves into bearing, trees planted in 1905 by the Riverside Trust Co. (Ltd.).

Year ended Sept. 30, 1905:
Land and water, 163 acres, at $450 per acre		$73,350.00
Plowing and leveling	$1,017.36
Fluming	4,310.31
12,608 trees, at $1	12,608.00
Planting	957.04
Cultivation and irrigation	107.53
Fertilizing	71.40
Water dues	87.17
Total	19,158.81
Management	113.80
		19,272.61
Year ended Sept. 30, 1906:
Cultivation and irrigation	1,238.72
Fertilizing	1,361.79
Water dues	804.65
Taxes	369.92
Other expenses	953.75
Total	4,728.83
Management	788.03
		5,516.86
Year ended Sept. 30, 1906:
Cultivation and irrigation	1,548.05
Fertilizing	734.64
Water dues	1,036.41
Taxes	794.40
Other expenses	536.78
Total	4,650.28
Management	1,777.29
		6,427.57
Year ended Sept. 30, 1908:
Cultivation and irrigation	1,967.99
Pruning	205.15
Fertilizing	2,522.25
Water dues	978.00
Taxes	773.51
Other expenses	309.42
Total	6,756.32
Management	1,670.91
		8,427.23
Year ended Sept. 30, 1909:
Cultivation and irrigation	2,493.20
Pruning lemons	125.35
Fumigation (90 acres)	1,423.19
Fertilizing	411.18
Water dues	1,556.70
Year ended Sept. 30, 1909—Continued.
Taxes	$1,042.52
Other expenses	509.55
Total	7,561.69
Management	2,521.43
		$10,083.12
Total		123,077.39
Less crop returns 1908	1,069.50
Less crop returns 1909	4,431.06
		5,500.56
Total		117,576.83
Average, $721.33 per acre.

STATEMENT NO. 2.

Cost of 163 acres of lemon groves, by the Riverside Fruit Co. (Ltd.).

Cost of land and water, at $450 per acre		$73,350.00
First year:
Proportion of cost of equipment, building, stock, tools, machinery, etc., at $82 per acre		13,366.00
Cost of planting, care, etc		19,272.61
Second year, cost of care, etc		5,516.86
Third year, cost of care, etc		6,427.57
Fourth year, cost of care, etc		8,427.23
Fifth year, cost of care, etc		10,083.12
Total		136,443.39
Less:
Crop returns, fourth year	$1,069.50
Crop returns, fifth year	4,431.06
		5,500.56
Total		130,942.83
Average, $803.33 per acre.

STATEMENT NO. 3.

Cost as per statement No. 2		$130,942.83
Interest at 6 per cent per annum:
Five years on $86,716	$26,014.80
Four and one-half years on $19,272.61	5,203.60
Three and one-half years on $5,516.86	1,158.50
Two and one-half years on $6,427.57	964.10
One and one-half years on $7,357.73	662.20
Six months on $5,652.06	169.56
		34,172.76
Total		165,115.59
Average, $1,012.96 per acre.

COST OF CULTIVATION.

Taking up the question of the cost of cultivation and care of the orchards, I have two carefully prepared tables, coming from the same reliable source, covering the years ending October 31, 1909, and October 31, 1910, respectively. These, like the one already referred to, are taken from the actual accounts made in the ordinary transaction of the business and for business purposes only. For this purpose 26 different orchards are taken, ranging in size from 6 to 39 acres. The items of expense are segregated into cultivation, hoeing, irrigation, pruning, picking, treatment of scale, and water, all of which are totaled in each case. To this is also added office expenses prorated. Then, at the foot, the total of each item of expense for all of the orchards is given and the average cost per acre, showing the cost per acre for 1909 to be $156.35, and for 1910, $182.26, an increase of $25.91 per acre. In case of the year 1910 the cost of picking, amounting to $76.66, is deducted, in order to show the exact cost of cultivation of the trees.

I submit these two tables, as follows:

Statement of lemon expense per acre for year ending Oct. 31, 1909, by San Diego Fruit Co., National City, Cal.

Orchard.	Acres.	Cultivation.	Hoeing.	Irrigation.	Pruning.	Picking.	Fertilizer.	Scale treatment.	Water.	Orchard total.	Office expenses prorated.	Orchard total.
No. 4	9½	$135.90	$53.36	$119.44	$1.72	$566.47	$243.39	$138.21	$99.75	$1,358.24	$94.83	$1,453.07
No. 9	7	93.73	24.46	69.52	.35	450.41	188.01	109.59	49.00	985.07	69.88	1,054.95
No. 28	33½	458.22	33.82	603.88	4.70	1,830.92	788.15	3.05	234.50	3,957.24	334.35	4,291.59
No. 30	4½	77.05	29.20	47.31	.67	151.68	80.04	.....	40.25	426.20	44.92	471.12
No. 31	7	85.82	32.64	88.46	52.61	343.80	214.12	106.79	49.00	973.24	69.89	1,043.13
No. 32	19	212.46	14.73	231.72	119.24	926.47	466.98	539.56	98.05	2,609.21	189.62	2,798.83
No. 33	12	166.53	42.77	97.69	73.64	830.68	298.06	1.11	129.50	1,639.98	119.78	1,759.76
No. 34	19	312.70	91.99	150.45	227.52	1,528.10	684.29	1.76	133.00	3,129.81	189.64	3,319.45
No. 52	19	264.43	76.55	148.74	176.23	1,727.75	689.90	1.75	133.00	3,218.35	189.64	3,407.99
No. 54	39	566.98	166.25	333.86	420.37	2,857.35	1,699.32	1,371.33	273.00	7,688.46	389.24	8,077.70
No. 55	9½	146.18	33.46	253.89	55.94	1,071.71	356.27	364.91	66.50	2,348.56	94.82	2,443.38
No. 76	6	72.79	18.79	49.86	12.15	231.03	165.34	70.21	42.00	782.17	59.88	842.05
No. 78	12	149.62	39.95	110.69	29.45	824.29	365.16	176.41	84.00	1,779.57	119.77	899.34
No. 80	24	183.18	82.15	201.87	212.24	1,274.64	581.59	2.22	168.00	2,705.89	239.54	2,945.43
No. 83	8	157.89	42.24	139.89	101.33	389.74	300.91	171.25	61.25	1,364.50	79.89	1,444.39
No. 85	9	179.16	42.40	183.97	151.35	524.38	300.32	145.89	66.50	1,593.97	89.82	1,683.79
No. 86	9½	139.94	2.40	73.18	71.51	659.31	240.52	145.54	66.50	1,398.90	94.81	1,493.71
No. 101	19	245.14	68.84	289.20	88.24	1,070.74	394.50	1.76	133.00	2,291.42	189.63	2,481.05
No. 102	19	285.84	87.17	217.08	107.93	774.16	372.31	240.54	133.00	2,218.03	189.63	2,407.66
No. 105	8	88.88	27.99	70.98	52.40	420.02	208.76	113.47	61.25	1,043.75	79.85	1,123.60
No. 108	18	378.06	65.06	213.17	232.40	1,046.88	508.53	305.61	136.50	2,886.21	179.65	3,065.86
No. 111	6	85.57	11.69	80.35	30.37	251.50	175.15	76.92	49.00	760.55	59.88	820.43
No. 112	10	128.13	3.05	91.68	167.59	424.37	274.54	158.00	70.00	1,317.36	99.80	1,417.16
No. 134	19	336.53	59.62	287.00	100.00	853.30	163.83	305.84	492.95	2,599.76	189.62	2,789.38
No. 136	9½	190.33	31.51	89.00	40.58	365.90	242.33	109.55	66.50	1,136.30	194.82	1,231.12
No. 137	12	160.53	27.32	134.20	116.49	516.04	316.36	324.69	84.00	1,679.63	119.77	1,799.40
Total	368	5,301.59	1,209.11	4,378.28	2,647.11	22,031.64	10,318.68	4,985.96	3,020.00	53,892.37	3,672.97	57,565.34
Expenses prorated	.....	361.33	82.41	298.39	180.42	1,501.54	703.25	339.81	205.82	.....	.....	.....
Total	.....	5,662.92	1,291.52	4,676.67	2,827.53	23,533.18	11,021.93	5,325.77	3,225.82	.....	.....	57,565.34

Total packed boxes 88,765
Average number boxes per acre 244

Statement of lemon expense per acre for year ending Oct. 31, 1909, by San Diego Fruit Co., National City, Cal.—Continued.

SUMMARY.

	Total.	Average cost per acre.
		1909	1910
Cultivating	$5,662.92	$18.89	$18.68
Hoeing	1,291.52
Irrigating	4,676.67	12.70	13.11
Pruning	2,827.53	7.68	10.80
Picking	23,533.18	163.94	76.77
Fertilizing	11,021.93	29.95	34.33
Scale treatment	5,325.77	14.47	19.81
Water	3,225.82	8.72	8.76
Increase, 1910	57,565.34	156.35	182.26
		25.91
		182.26

[1] Picking and hauling to house.

Average number of boxes per acre	214
Average cost per box in house	$0.75
Average cost of packing	.533
Average cost per box on car	1.283

Statement of lemon expense per acre for year ending Oct. 31, 1910, by San Diego Fruit Co., National City, Cal.

Orchard.	Acres.	Cultivation.	Hoeing.	Irrigation.	Pruning.	Picking.	Fertilizer.	Scale treatment.	Water.	Orchard total.	Office expenses prorated.	Orchard total.
No. 4	9½	$143.52	$15.75	$30.66	$107.27	$621.59	$279.43	$161.24	$77.55	$1,487.01	$136.32	$1,623.33
No. 9	7	116.30	18.55	92.49	82.91	417.95	198.72	132.47	57.20	1,116.59	100.45	1,217.04
No. 28	33½	442.87	67.18	462.34	338.12	1,901.11	839.93	521.54	273.55	4,846.64	480.72	5,327.36
No. 31	7	109.67	14.96	78.57	8.70	413.21	210.34	104.83	57.10	997.38	100.45	1,097.83
No. 32	19	299.83	38.13	193.66	126.87	1,669.64	523.28	273.96	87.60	3,212.97	272.65	3,485.62
No. 33	12	195.75	32.06	129.09	113.00	824.62	369.16	173.08	97.92	1,934.68	172.20	2,106.88
No. 51	19	292.04	95.92	168.27	369.40	1,317.10	775.35	705.78	155.10	3,878.96	272.65	4,151.61
No. 53	19	274.48	61.34	205.42	158.20	1,786.20	749.09	707.46	133.00	4,075.19	272.65	4,347.84
No. 54	39	500.63	120.31	533.04	603.84	3,438.71	1,824.29	832.26	318.40	8,171.48	559.65	8,731.13
No. 55	9½	172.88	32.44	126.83	245.90	943.33	442.44	206.97	77.45	2,248.24	136.32	2,384.56
No. 76	6	118.53	14.32	83.46	66.37	401.68	175.63	79.74	49.10	988.83	86.10	1,074.93
No. 78	12	173.52	26.89	98.70	173.92	877.88	318.47	200.26	192.50	2,062.14	172.20	2,234.34
No. 80	24	315.07	57.85	255.16	237.90	1,152.16	633.95	687.98	153.95	3,494.11	344.40	3,838.51
No. 83	8	124.94	10.76	127.12	82.29	536.15	362.47	163.66	65.40	1,472.79	114.80	1,587.59
No. 85	9	114.43	9.07	117.97	2.35	754.33	305.14	157.03	73.45	1,533.77	129.15	1,662.92
No. 86	9½	185.39	18.09	116.15	113.44	790.32	207.43	128.84	77.50	1,637.16	136.52	1,773.48
No. 101	19	245.72	35.73	276.14	149.37	1,157.48	415.50	258.73	153.10	2,691.77	272.65	2,966.42
No. 102	19	236.43	39.55	258.63	118.61	818.97	419.18	24.05	155.10	2,070.52	272.65	2,343.17
No. 106	8	113.01	11.91	85.52	44.63	753.28	217.98	119.93	65.26	1,411.52	114.80	1,526.32
No. 108	18	236.35	21.25	229.72	116.74	1,494.44	529.09	346.15	147.10	3,120.84	258.30	3,379.14
No. 111	6	77.37	3.76	72.55	23.75	399.38	152.72	96.02	57.10	882.65	86.10	968.75
No. 112	10	212.63	27.92	72.17	80.25	839.97	283.28	162.25	81.90	1,760.37	143.50	1,903.87
No. 134	19	336.06	42.65	318.29	167.96	1,083.77	714.34	399.73	155.15	3,217.95	272.65	3,490.60
No. 135	9½	171.08	21.23	97.54	26.67	454.72	210.31	160.27	67.50	1,209.32	136.32	1,345.64
No. 137	12	216.83	17.98	145.26	112.48	836.46	305.04		98.00	1,732.05	172.20	1,904.25
Total	363½	5,425.33	855.60	4,424.75	3,671.03	25,684.45	11,462.56	6,804.23	2,928.98	61,256.93	5,216.20	66,473.13
Office expenses prorated		427.60	85.60	342.05	256.55	2,223.30	1,026.15	598.40	256.55	5,216.20
Total		5,852.93	941.20	4,766.80	3,927.58	27,907.75	12,488.71	7,402.63	3,185.53	66,473.13

SUMMARY.

	Total	Average expense per acre.
Cultivating	$5,852.93	$16.10
Hoeing	941.20	2.58
Irrigating	4,766.80	13.11
Pruning	3,927.58	10.80
Picking	27,907.75	76.77
Fertilizer	12,488.71	34.35
Scale treatment	7,402.63	19.81
Water	3,185.53	18.76
Total	66,473.13	[2]182.85
Less picking		76.77
		106.09

[1] Water in future must show an increase to $20 per acre.

[2] Average cost per acre of total expenses.

This, it will be understood, leaves the fruit in the orchard. If the item of picking is excluded, it is still on the trees. If included, it is in field boxes, uncured and unpacked. After this must come the transportation to the packing house and the process of preparing, curing, and packing the fruit, as I have described. Further data will be submitted directly showing the cost of packing and shipment to market.

An interesting comparison of the cost of producing lemons is found in a letter that I am about to submit to the consideration of the Senate. The statements of Mr. Boal, that I have already submitted, were furnished to Mr. G. Harold Powell, secretary and manager of the Citrus Protective League, the gentleman I have mentioned as having visited foreign orchards and who has furnished for my use in this connection more extensive data and information gathered from the experience of many growers and which I shall advert to later on. In his letter to Mr. Boal, in acknowledging receipt of copies of the statements made by him, just given, Mr. Powell has this to say:

LOS ANGELES, CAL., September 22, 1911.

Mr. JOHN E. BOAL,
General Manager San Diego Fruit Co.,
National City, Cal.

DEAR MR. BOAL: I have been very much interested in looking over the account which you left with me regarding the cost of planting your lemon groves, the amount of wages paid to white and Japanese labor, and the statement of the expenses of maintaining your groves in 1909 and 1910. This account shows the same kind of variations that we are finding in the large number of accounts which will be used in getting at the approximate average cost of producing and of handling citrus fruits. I think that we will be able to submit from 125 to 150 individual growers' accounts showing the operating expenses in the field up to the time of harvest and the cost of picking, hauling, and packing the fruit.

I will incorporate this statement with the other statements that we shall submit to Senator WORKS, and also to the Tariff Board when our data are completed. In order to show some of the variations in the cost of producing citrus fruits, I thought you might be interested in seeing how your statement compares with some of the other large plantings. For example, on a planting of 140 acres the following expenses occur:

Fertilizer	$46.43
Irrigating	24.04
Fumigating	18.07
Forage and grain	7.50
Taxes	11.56
Maintenance and repairs	18.12
Frost protection	7.14
Insurance	1.75
Incidental materials	3.13
Cultivating	23.32
Pruning	11.36
Superintending	16.14
Total	188.56

On an account of 200 acres the following expenses occur:

Fertilizing	49.57
Fumigating	43.24
Taxes	8.71
Maintenance and repairs	10.65
Frost protection	4.98
Insurance	.86
Cultivating, including pruning and irrigating	89.49
Spraying	14.02
Superintending	10.00
Other tree care	1.09
Total	232.61

In a planting of 10 acres the following expenses occur:

Fertilizing	40.00
Forage and grain	30.00
Taxes	9.80
Maintenance and repairs	15.00
All labor	155.00
Total	249.80

In a planting of 219 acres the following expenses occur:

Fertilizing	36.02
Water	26.86
Forage and grain	7.59
Taxes	10.68
Maintenance and repairs	9.51
Frost protection	1.63
Insurance	3.57
Cultivating, including irrigating	47.81
Pruning	11.93
Fumigating	25.78
Other tree care	.07
Total	181.45

In a planting of 5 acres the following expenses occur:

Fertilizing	66.00
Water	20.00
Forage and grain	15.00
Taxes	5.20
Cultivating	8.00
Pruning	20.00
Irrigating	6.00
Total	140.20

These accounts have been selected at random and are typical of the accounts we are securing. Several of your charges are very much below the general average. The cost of water for the State will probably average somewhere near $20, and I judge from the figures we are obtaining that the average cost of fertilizing lemon groves will run between $40 and $50, while some of the most intensive growers spend very much more.

I am unable to say how your cost of picking compares with the others, as the yields are not included in your statement, but you might be interested to know that on the shipments covering 500,000 boxes, on which we have accurate data for the year 1911, the average cost of picking is 24.8 cents per box, hauling 5.7 cents, packing 61.2 cents, making a total cost of 91.2 cents per packed box from the time the fruit leaves the tree until it is placed on the cars. These figures are subject to revision as additional data are obtained.

Very truly, yours,

G. HAROLD POWELL,
Secretary and Manager.

It will be seen from this showing that there is considerable variation in the expense of producing lemons in different cases. This results partly from the difference in locality, climate, and character of soil and the manner and methods of different growers in cultivating the ground and caring for the trees. Where deeper plowing is done and better care taken in caring for the trees, a greater yield of fruit is obtained as a rule; therefore the average cost per box of fruit would not greatly vary unless an orchard is actually neglected.

OPERATING COST OF A LEMON ORCHARD.

Mr. President, I now pass to a more extended view of this subject of cost of production, based upon data furnished by Mr. Powell, whom I have already mentioned, gathered from the experience of a large number of growers. This will show the same variation in cost between different orchards. The purpose is to arrive at a fair average that will furnish a just basis of comparison of the cost of production here and abroad. I am about to submit for the consideration of the Senate an itemized statement, in two tables, of the operating cost of lemon orchards for the year 1910–1911, covering every important section in the State. In these tables 143 separate and distinct orchards, covering 3,658.4 acres, are taken, owned and operated by different persons, giving actual expenditures taken from accounts kept in the regular transaction of business in each case or determined from data possessed by the grower, showing the amount of materials used and labor expended in each place. The tables have been prepared with the greatest accuracy, and each item of expense is given separately.

Table I gives the cultural costs of labor required in producing the lemons, including the cost of cultivating, pruning, irrigating, fumigating, fumigating labor and materials when not separated, spraying, spreading fertilizer, other tree care, superintending, administration, and other accounts not segregated. It includes also a statement of the total labor cost and the cost per acre on each ranch.

Table II gives the cultural cost of materials required in producing the lemons on the same ranches, including the cost of chemical fertilizers, barnyard manure, water, fumigation, forage and grain for stock used on the ranch, taxes, maintenance and repairs, frost protection, insurance chargeable to the groves, incidentals usually including cover crop seed. Table II includes also a statement of the total cost of materials and the cost per acre on each ranch, the total cost of labor and the cost of labor per acre on each ranch, and the total cost of labor and materials and the total cost of labor and materials per acre on each ranch. Table II contains also a statement showing the average cost of labor, the average cost of materials, and the total average cost per acre of labor and materials for the 143 ranches.

In Table I, in the first column, is given the orchard number. For example, orchard No. 2 contains 300 acres. The cost in total and the cost per acre is given in each column, making a total labor cost of $46,839.02 and a cost per acre of $156.13. Under the corresponding orchard number in Table II the cost of chemical fertilizer is given as $40.20 per acre; barnyard manure, $6.03 per acre; fumigation, $28.63 per acre; taxes, $8.71; maintenance and repairs, $10.65; frost protection, $4.89 per acre, and so on for each separate item. The total cost of materials is $100.06 per acre and the total cost of labor and materials $256.19 per acre.

It will be seen that no figures are given in some of the columns. Where this occurs the item may have cost the ranch nothing, or it may be included in another column. These variations are explained in each case on the margin of the table. In case of superintendence and administration no allowance has been made for these items except where they represent cash expenditures. Where the grower performs labor he is credited with the amount expended at laborer's wages and is given no credit for superintendence or administration.

These accounts do not include depreciation on the groves, irrigation facilities, buildings, stock or tools, or interest on the investment. The average investment per acre in these items is about $65. A reasonable charge off is 10 per cent, distributed about as follows: 20 per cent on tools, 10 per cent on stock, and 3 to 5 per cent on buildings and equipment.

These tables are most complete and are intended to show with fairness and accuracy the cost of operating lemon groves in California. These data, which have been selected without any effort to make a favorable showing, show that on 143 representative ranches the average cost of labor expended annually in producing the California lemon crop is $92.51. The average cost of materials per acre is $108.75. The total average cost of labor and materials per acre is $197.15.

The tables follow.

THE COST OF PRODUCING LEMONS IN CALIFORNIA.

The tables following show the detailed cultural cost of producing lemons in California on 143 lemon groves, comprising 3,658.4 acres.

Table I shows the cost of labor, including plowing and cultivation, pruning, irrigation, fumigation, fumigation labor and materials, where not segregated, spraying, spreading fertilizer, other tree care, superintending, administration, and accounts not otherwise segregated.

TABLE I.—Cultural cost of labor required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1919.

No.	Acres.	XI. Cultivating.		XII. Pruning.		XIII. Irrigating.		XIV. Fumigating.		XV. Fumigation labor and materials.		XVI. Spraying.		XVII. Spreading fertilizer.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
		P. and L.
2	300	$26,845.82	$89.49	Under XI.		Under XI.		$4,382.32	$14.61			$4,237.31	$14.02	$1,001.79	$3.34
3	40	542.02	13.55	$787.44	$19.69	$293.60	$7.34	519.50	12.99			241.18	6.03
4	140	3,265.00	23.32	1,590.00	11.35	795.00	5.68	1,130.00	8.07					843.00	6.00
5	219	10,470.39	47.81	2,612.67	11.93	Under XI.				$5,645.82	$25.78			173.01	.79
6	5	40.00	8.00	100.00	20.00	30.00	6.00	R.
8	26.5	475.00	17.92	453.60	17.12	300.00	11.32	228.06	8.61					20.25	.76
9	20	717.40	35.87	413.92	20.70	Under XI.				813.40	40.67
10	10	See XXI.
11	5	Etc. 219.00	43.80	76.00	15.20	Under XI.		R.
12	10	240.00	24.00	R. 620.00	62.00	40.00	4.00			330.00	33.00
19	20	720.00	36.00	R. 155.00	7.75	270.00	13.50	294.72	14.74					Under II.
20	14	See XXI.		180.00	12.86
23	10	R. 225.00	22.50	65.00	6.50	40.00	4.00	50.00	5.00
24	13	425.00	32.69	300.00	23.07	160.00	12.31			225.00	17.30			37.50	2.88
27	9	216.00	24.00	280.00	31.11	99.00	11.00			112.50	12.50			85.50	9.50
21	120	See XXI.		1,723.20	14.36					1,456.28	12.14
17	4	48.75	12.19	71.12	17.78	26.25	6.56			168.20	42.05			4.56	1.14
14	10	175.00	17.50	60.00	6.00	120.00	12.00			75.00	7.50			6.00	.60
35	5	100.00	20.00	55.00	11.00	75.00	15.00	40.00	8.00					6.00	1.20
34	5	45.00	9.00	75.00	15.00	75.00	15.00	36.00	7.20			35.00	7.00	5.00	1.00
								Sulphuring.
36	70	371.67	5.31	731.66	10.45	537.97	7.68	14.45	.21					93.35	1.33
38	9	86.40	9.60	120.56	13.40	111.52	12.39	R.				53.72	5.97
37	2	22.50	11.25	32.00	16.00	20.00	10.00	R.						2.00	1.00
55	4.5	27.70	6.15	18.45	4.10	33.00	7.33	R.				21.00	4.66	8.59	1.88
30	5.5	77.00	14.00	81.40	14.80	30.35	5.52	75.00	13.64
42	8	90.00	11.25	90.00	11.25	66.00	8.25	60.00	7.50			20.00	2.50	24.00	3.00
61	100	898.75	8.99	1,044.06	10.44	1,780.50	17.80	552.40	5.52			381.30	3.81	357.75	3.58
39	5	120.00	24.00	60.00	12.00	90.00	18.00					80.00	16.00
33	8	80.00	10.00	108.00	13.50	60.00	7.50							7.20	.90
32	18	79.20	4.40	300.00	16.67	130.00	7.22							55.50	3.08
41	12	135.35	11.28	168.75	14.06	131.25	10.94					120.00	10.00	57.50	4.79
40	15	225.00	15.00	225.00	15.00	165.00	11.00					125.00	8.33	100.00	6.67
50	4.5	39.50	8.78	70.26	15.61	51.00	11.34					20.30	4.51	26.95	5.99
51	5	125.00	25.00	20.00	4.00	125.00	25.00					40.00	8.00	4.00	.80
52	5	50.00	10.00	50.00	10.00	60.00	12.00					30.00	6.00	20.00	4.00
53	5	65.00	13.00	100.00	20.00	64.10	12.82	42.00	8.40					3.00	.60
43	9	278.60	30.96	165.00	20.56	70.85	7.87	72.00	8.00			47.00	5.22	39.20	4.36
44	4	100.00	25.00	45.00	11.25	90.00	22.50					80.00	20.00
45	9	250.00	27.77	100.00	11.11	120.00	13.33					90.00	10.00	15.00	1.65
82	5	80.00	16.00	36.00	7.20	47.50	9.50			90.00	18.00			10.00	2.00
83	5	80.75	16.15	77.80	15.56	57.60	11.52			119.36	23.87
54	15	197.00	13.13	300.00	20.00	192.00	12.80	108.00	7.20					8.00	.53
57	11	137.50	12.50	98.00	8.91	91.65	8.33					73.35	6.67	47.65	4.33
25	5	150.00	30.00	75.00	15.00	80.00	16.00			65.00	13.00			61.00	12.20
81	110	5,223.10	47.48	1,584.00	14.40	1,332.00	11.20	431.24	3.92			149.93	1.35	264.00	2.40
59	30	400.00	13.33	450.00	15.00	450.00	15.00	221.96	7.40			7.50	.25	50.00	1.67
58	12	240.00	20.00	175.00	14.58	250.00	20.83					75.00	6.25	6.00	.50
60	10	144.00	14.40	Under XXI.		Under XXI.
56	18	191.25	10.63	250.00	13.89	93.75	5.21					125.00	6.94	144.37	8.02
65	35	533.00	15.23	542.50	15.50	267.00	7.63	Under IV.
66	6	94.50	15.75	70.00	11.67	37.80	6.30			228.98	38.16
70	15	333.33	22.22	375.00	25.00	60.00	4.00			250.00	16.67
71	7.2	136.80	19.00	37.50	5.21	36.00	5.00			108.00	15.00
72	10.5	125.00	11.90	375.00	35.71	60.00	5.71			350.00	33.33
73	14	R. 369.60	26.40	R. 420.00	30.00	Under XI.		51.32	3.67					14.00	1.00
75	22	97.00	4.41	365.00	16.59	160.00	7.27	R.		R.				73.00	3.32
76	6	55.00	9.16	40.00	6.67	42.00	7.00			115.00	19.17			18.00	3.00
79	2.5	30.00	12.00	30.00	12.00	25.00	10.00			30.00	12.00			30.00	12.00
68	7	155.55	22.22	228.26	32.61	24.89	3.56			132.62	18.95			23.32	3.33
69	13	123.37	9.49	319.30	24.56	163.55	12.58			178.75	13.75			16.92	1.30
137	8	104.24	13.03	60.00	7.50	72.96	9.12			220.00	27.50			41.12	5.14
138	1	16.00	16.00	15.00	15.00	7.50	7.50			15.00	15.00			1.50	1.50
139	7	183.75	26.25	60.00	8.57	91.87	13.12			109.34	15.62			8.75	1.25
140	2.5	R. 75.00	30.00	48.00	19.20	Under XI.				57.60	23.04
141	2	80.00	40.00	25.00	12.50	25.00	12.50			50.00	25.00			1.00	.50
142	48			1,027.22	21.40			385.42	8.03
143	4	34.40	8.60	60.00	15.00	85.80	21.45							5.10	1.28
144	15	480.00	32.00	275.00	18.33	77.25	5.15			330.00	22.00			25.00	1.66
145	5	41.75	8.35	125.00	25.00	68.00	13.60					55.00	11.00	5.00	1.00
146	3	68.04	22.68	75.00	25.00	23.10	7.70			57.66	19.22			1.53	.51
147	3	15.00	5.00	75.00	25.00	32.85	10.95							13.00	4.33
148	10	R. 198.40	19.84	42.00	4.20	60.80	6.08			115.20	11.52
149	3.5	87.50	25.00	80.42	24.69	25.20	7.20							7.00	2.00
150	22	172.26	7.83	780.00	34.09	77.00	3.50			210.00	9.55			110.00	5.00
80	7	317.40	45.34	351.00	50.14	80.00	11.43			319.80	44.40			18.65	2.66
1	422	R. 7,556.00	17.91	7,849.00	18.60	4,061.00	9.67			4,275.00	10.13			Under I.
48	3	49.09	16.36	23.08	7.69	42.86	14.29					23.44	7.81	23.08	7.69
47	3	75.00	25.00	45.00	15.00	40.00	13.33					25.00	8.33	10.00	3.33
24	3.75	R. 62.00	16.53	81.00	21.60	96.00	25.60			98.60	26.29			8.00	2.13
85	2	Under XXI.
88	3	R. 87.00	20.00	22.50	7.50	24.60	8.20			55.25	18.42
89	50	See XXI.								407.12	8.14			25.00	3.11
90	8	50.00	6.25	100.00	12.50	50.00	6.25			125.00	15.63
64	22.5	128.02	5.69	520.00	23.11	150.52	6.69	169.70	7.53					10.00	2.50
49	4	50.00	12.50	75.00	18.75	60.00	15.00					26.00	6.50	5.00	.55
91	9	270.00	30.00	225.00	25.00	190.00	21.11			375.00	41.66	R. 125.00	13.88	8.00	1.03
92	8	96.00	12.00	96.00	12.00	160.00	20.00			220.00	27.50	R. 80.00	10.00	19.00	1.00
93	19	228.00	12.00	332.50	17.50	136.80	7.20			285.00	15.00	R. 142.50	7.50

TABLE I.—Cultural cost of labor required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910—Continued.

No.	Acres.	XI. Cultivating.		XII. Pruning.		XIII. Irrigating.		XIV. Fumigating.		XV. Fumigation labor and materials.		XVI. Spraying.		XVII. Spreading fertilizer.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
94	5.5	R. $165.00	$30.00	$137.50	$25.00	Under XI.								$16.50	$3.00
97	10	115.71	11.57	200.00	20.00	$92.50	$6.25	$52.90	$5.29					18.75	1.87
78	164	2,653.52	16.18	2,335.36	4.24	R.2,609.24	15.91	675.68	4.12
95	13.5	125.00	9.26	254.00	18.81	63.00	4.66			$323.00	$23.93			17.50	1.29
97	14	214.03	15.28	108.00	7.71	104.00	7.43			84.00	6.00			17.80	1.27
98	10	See XXI.
99	3	30.00	10.00	63.00	21.00	32.40	10.80							3.65	1.22
103	30	293.00	9.67	750.00	25.00	285.00	9.50	85.00	2.83					80.00	2.67
102	9	180.00	20.00	213.03	23.67	45.00	5.00	36.00	4.00					9.00	1.00
105	3.75	R. 52.50	14.00	125.25	33.39	10.12	2.70			11.25	3.00
104	21	336.00	16.00	424.00	20.19	223.00	10.62							27.00	1.29
106	7	R. 87.50	12.50	140.00	20.00	Under XI.								Under 11.
107	4	68.00	17.00	60.00	15.00	64.00	16.00			160.00	40.00			4.00	1.00
98	6	55.90	9.32	26.40	4.40	61.92	10.32
108	17	240.00	20.00	413.61	24.33	204.00	12.00			200.00	11.75			68.00	4.00
109	17	192.00	11.29	216.00	12.71	288.00	16.94	120.00	7.05					72.00	4.24
3		See total.
110	3.6	75.00	20.83	60.00	16.67	35.00	9.72			75.00	20.83			18.00	5.00
63	22	300.00	13.64	100.00	4.55	150.00	6.82			250.00	11.36			20.00	.91
111	3½	75.00	22.50	100.00	30.00	50.00	15.00			125.00	37.50
112	6	139.68	23.28	127.38	21.23	35.34	5.89			48.91	8.15			3.90	.65
109	70	See XVI.								452.74	6.47
113	6	94.50	15.75	88.89	14.81	72.00	12.00			272.70	45.45
114	3.5	100.00	28.57	90.00	25.71	50.00	14.29			78.00	22.29			5.00	1.43
115	2	17.00	8.50	18.60	9.30	13.00	6.50			40.00	20.00			1.00	.51
116	2.5	50.00	20.00	33.75	13.50	15.00	6.00							18.00	7.20
117	2	60.00	30.00	35.00	17.50	15.00	7.50			20.00	10.00
118	3	48.00	16.00	100.00	33.33	18.00	6.00			66.00	22.00
119	5	36.00	7.20	80.55	16.11	40.15	8.03			165.00	33.00			12.00	2.40
120	6	90.00	15.00	175.00	29.17	50.00	8.33	36.00	6.00					6.00	1.00
121	10	120.00	12.00	77.00	7.70	80.00	8.00	72.00	7.20			$40.00	$4.00	8.00	.80
122	5	100.00	20.00	50.00	10.00	81.67	16.33	40.00	8.00					10.00	2.00
157	10	208.35	20.84	75.00	7.50	33.35	3.33			125.00	12.50			33.35	3.33
124	19	400.00	21.05	500.00	26.32	145.00	7.62	60.00	3.16					120.00	6.32
125	18	197.50	10.97	425.00	23.61	138.50	7.69	104.00	5.77					188.00	10.44
126	3	60.00	20.00	72.00	24.00	22.50	7.50			60.00	20.00			22.50	7.50
26	9.25	249.70	27.00	132.40	14.30					185.00	20.00
128	9	110.00	12.22	120.00	13.33	64.00	7.11			155.00	17.22			21.10	2.34
129	16	See total.								144.50	9.03
130	3	43.20	14.40	110.00	36.66	14.00	4.66			78.00	26.00			4.00	1.33
131	9	76.80	8.53	321.00	35.66	174.50	19.39			216.50	24.05
132	6	110.76	18.46	85.00	14.17	129.24	21.54			90.00	15.00			4.62	.77
133	3	45.60	15.20	130.00	43.33	19.24	6.41			40.00	13.33
134	5.25	67.50	12.86	77.00	14.67	36.00	6.86			150.00	28.57
86	54	See XXI.										198.65	3.68
135	4.5	56.00	12.45	75.00	18.00	18.00	4.09			54.00	12.00
136	3.5	56.00	16.00	50.00	14.29	35.00	10.00			132.37	37.82
62	418	7,459.58	17.85	3,977.51	9.51	5,788.45	13.85	1,967.94	4.70					845.10	2.02
131	10	166.65	16.66	177.25	17.73			11.09	1.10
132	10	182.00	18.20	82.00	8.20	84.00	8.40			150.18	15.02			53.10	5.31
153	6	R 228.30	38.05	200.61	33.43	115.56	19.26			79.56	13.26			Under XI.
154	2	R. 40.00	20.00	35.00	17.50	Under XI.				20.00	10.00			17.00	8.50
29	9	80.05	8.89	117.75	13.08	92.05	10.23	103.70	11.52
155	9.75	150.00	15.38	117.14	12.01	56.28	5.77			287.43	29.48			17.50	1.80
156	15	375.00	25.00	400.00	26.67	60.00	4.00			225.00	15.00			75.00	5.00
Total	3,658.4

No.	Acres.	XVIII. Other tree care.		XIX. Superintending.		XX. Administration.		XXI. Not segregated.		Total labor.		Remarks.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
		Frost prot.
2	300	$326.62	$1.09	$3,000.00	$10.00	$7,075.25	$23.58			$46,839.02	$156.13
3	40	F. P. 29.30	.73			1,615.64	40.39			4,028.68	100.72	No cost to water.
4	140	2,990.00	21.36	2,260.00	16.14	6,125.00	43.75			18,995.00	135.68
5	219	15.00	.07			5,215.00	23.81			24,131.89	110.19
6	5									170.00	34.00	Did no fumigating.
8	26.5	20.00	.75							1,496.93	56.48
9	20	143.50	7.18							2,088.22	104.42
10	10							$1,550.00	$155.00	1,550.00	155.00	Labor not segregated.
11	5									295.00	59.00	No fumigation nor water cost.
12	10									1,230.00	123.00	Trees double set.
19	20	530.00	26.50							1,969.72	98.49	R. Some pruning under other tree care.
20	14							1,457.65	104.11	1,637.65	116.97	Labor only partly segregated. No water cost nor fumigation.
23	10	46.00	4.60							426.00	42.60	R. Horse hire and fertilizer spreading included in cultivation.
24	13	25.50	1.96							1,173.00	90.21
27	9	9.00	1.00							802.00	89.11
21	120					1,223.46	10.19	2,320.22	19.34	6,723.16	56.03
17	4	10.00	2.50							328.88	82.22
14	10	16.50	1.65							452.50	45.25
35	5	30.00	6.00							306.00	61.20	No fumigation.
34	5	25.00	5.00							296.00	59.20	Do.
36	70	451.30	6.45	560.00	8.00	560.00	8.00			3,320.40	47.43
38	9	95.90	10.66							468.10	52.02	Do.
37	2	6.00	3.00							82.50	41.25	Do
55	4.5	48.30	10.73							156.95	34.85	Do.
30	5.5	50.00	9.09							313.75	57.05
42	8	24.00	3.00							374.00	46.75
61	100	2,440.00	24.40	1,320.00	13.26	4,388.82	43.89			13,169.58	131.69

TABLE I.—Cultural cost of labor required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910—Continued.

No.	Acres	XVIII. Other tree care.		XIX Superintending.		XX. Administration.		XXI. Not segregated.		Total labor.		Remarks.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
39	5	$30.00	$6.00							$380.00	$76.00
33	8	16.00	2.00							271.20	33.90	No fumigation.
32	18	111.00	6.16							675.70	37.53	Do.
41	12	358.35	29.86							971.20	80.93	Do.
40	15	585.00	39.00							1,425.00	95.00	Do.
50	4.5	30.64	6.81							238.65	53.04	Do.
51	5	20.00	4.00							334.00	66.80	No fumigation, little pruning, small fertilizer.
52	5	40.00	8.00							250.00	50.00	No fumigation.
53	5	100.00	20.00	$100.00	$20.00					474.10	94.82
43	9	46.45	5.16							Z. 739.10	82.13
44	4	25.00	6.25							340.00	85.00	Do.
45	9	30.00	3.33							605.00	67.20	Do.
82	5									263.50	52.70
83	5									335.51	67.10
54	15	300.00	20.00	325.00	21.67	$325.00	$21.67			1,755.00	117.00
57	11	27.50	2.50							475.65	43.24	Do.
25	5	40.00	8.00							471.00	94.20
81	110	2,843.00	25.84	1,698.73	15.44	3,489.00	31.72			16,915.00	153.76
59	30	460.00	15.33			210.08	7.00			2,249.54	74.98
58	12	50.00	4.16							796.00	66.32	Do.
60	10			150.00	15.00			$323.35	$32.33	617.35	61.73	Do.
56	18	356.25	19.79							1,160.62	64.48
65	35	125.00	3.57							1,467.50	41.93
66	6	25.20	4.20							456.48	76.08
70	15	66.67	4.44							1,085.00	72.33
71	7.2	18.00	2.50							336.30	46.71
72	10.5	125.00	11.90							1,035.00	98.55
73	14	Under XII.								854.92	61.07	XVIII under XII, and XIII under XI
75	22	155.00	7.05							850.00	38.64	No fumigation.
76	6									270.00	45.00
79	2.5									145.00	58.00
68	7									564.65	80.67
69	13	290.00	21.54							1,081.89	83.22
137	8	150.00	18.75							648.32	81.04
138	1	R. 21.60	21.60							76.60	76.60	R. Frost protection.
139	7	30.59	4.37							484.30	69.18
140	2.5									180.60	72.24	R. Not segregated—hired.
141	2									181.00	90.50
142	48	R. 706.90	14.69					1,060.00	22.09	3,179.54	66.21	R. Includes $4.88 per acre frost protection.
143	4	5.00	1.25							190.30	47.58
144	15	25.00	1.66							1,212.25	80.80
145	5	8.00	1.60							302.75	60.55
146	3	.78	.26							226.11	75.37
147	3	60.00	20.00							195.85	65.28
148	10	60.00	6.00							476.40	47.64	R. Work hired.
149	3.5	70.00	20.00							276.12	78.89
150	22	25.72	1.16							1,344.98	61.13
80	7	38.90	5.56							1,116.75	159.53
1	422	2,348.00	5.56			5,686.00	13.47			31,795.00	75.34	XI includes V.
48	3	8.18	2.73							170.33	56.77	Spraying but no fumigation.
47	3	92.00	30.66							287.00	95.65	Do.
84	3.75									345.60	92.15	XI includes V.
85	2							175.00	87.50	175.00	87.50	No fumigation, repairs, nor insurance.
88	3	18.80	6.27							208.15	69.39	XI includes V.
89	50					1,200.00	24.00	4,232.58	84.65	5,839.70	116.79
90	8	5.00	.63	100.00	12.50					455.00	56.89
64	22.5	540.00	24.00							1,508.04	67.02
49	4	25.00	6.25							246.00	61.50	Spraying, but no fumigation.
91	9	285.00	31.66							1,475.00	163.86	XVI includes materials.
92	8	40.00	5.00							700.00	87.50	Do.
93	19	142.50	7.50							1,286.30	67.70	Do.
94	5.5	16.50	3.00							335.50	61.00	XVII under XI.
67	10	32.13	3.21							481.99	48.19
78	164	Under XIII.		2,651.88	16.17	4,788.80	29.20			15,714.48	95.82	XIII includes XVIII.
95	13.5	490.00	36.29							1,272.50	94.23
97	14	43.75	3.12							571.55	40.81
96	10					R. 106.38	10.64	531.90	53.19	638.28	63.83	Ranch of 65 acres.
99	3									129.05	43.02	No fumigation.
103	30	100.00	3.33	500.00	16.67	528.00	17.60			2,618.00	87.27
102	9	33.75	3.75							516.78	57.42
105	3.75									199.12	53.09	XI includes V.
104	21	75.00	3.57			379.47	18.07			1,464.47	69.74	No fumigation.
106	7									227.50	32.50	No fumigation; XIII under XI.
107	4	3.25	.81							359.25	89.81
98	6	11.18	1.86	23.63	3.94	46.32	7.72			225.35	37.56	No fumigation.
108	17	25.50	1.50			340.00	20.00			1,591.11	93.59
109	17	200.00	11.76	200.00	11.76	170.00	10.00			1,458.00	85.76
3
110	3.6	8.00	2.22							271.00	75.27
63	22	100.00	4.55	360.00	16.36					1,280.00	58.19	Little pruning.
111	3½	40.00	12.00							390.00	117.00
112	6									355.21	59.20
100	70			420.00	6.00			5,654.87	80.78	6,527.61	93.25
113	6									528.09	88.01
114	3.5	50.00	14.29			4.90	1.40			377.90	107.98
115	2	3.00	1.50							92.60	46.30	Cultivating cost low.
116	2.5	5.00	2.00							121.75	48.70	No fumigation. Trees close set.
117	2									130.00	65.00
118	3									232.00	77.33
119	5	21.00	4.20							354.70	70.94
120	6	10.00	1.67							367.00	61.17
121	10	300.00	30.00							697.00	69.70
122	5	41.67	8.33							323.34	64.66
157	10									475.05	47.50
124	19	59.50	3.13							1,284.50	67.60
125	18	64.50	3.58							1,117.50	62.06
126	3	22.50	7.50			18.75	6.25			278.25	92.75
26	9.25	13.87	1.50							580.97	62.80

TABLE I.—Cultural cost of labor required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910—Continued.

No.	Acres.	XVIII. Other tree care.		XIX. Superintending.		XX. Administration.		XXI. Not segregated.		Total labor.		Remarks.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
128	9	$22.50	$2.50							$492.60	$54.72
129	16							$2,922.00	$182.69
130	3	13.50	4.50							262.70	87.55
131	9	36.95	4.10							825.75	91.73
132	6	20.28	3.38							439.90	73.32
133	3	16.80	5.60							291.64	97.20	R. Includes spreading of fertilizer produced on place.
134	5.25									330.50	62.96
86	54	20.15	.37			$1,767.00	$32.72	4,258.00	78.86	6,243.80	115.63
135	4.5	68.00	15.11							274.00	60.88
136	3.5	10.00	2.86							285.37	81.54
62	418	1,316.82	3.15	$6,736.60	$16.10	6,721.44	16.08			34,813.44	83.26
151	10									354.90	35.49
152	10	332.06	33.21							883.34	88.34
153	6	10.80	1.80							634.83	105.80	Spreading fertilizer under cultivating.
154	2									112.00	56.00	Cultivating includes irrigating.
29	9	134.50	14.95							528.05	58.67
155	9.75	135.00	13.85	540.00	55.38					1,303.35	133.67
156	15	200.00	13.33							1,335.00	89.00
Total	3,658.4									320,296.35	[1] 92.51

[1] Average cost of labor per acre.

TABLE II.—Cultural cost of materials required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910.

No.	Acres.	I. Chemical fertilizer.		II. Barnyard manure.		III. Water.		IV. Fumigation.		V. Forage and grain.		VI. Taxes.		VII. Maintenance and repairs.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
2	300	$12,060.00	$40.20	$1,808.78	$6.03	R. (No cost.)		$8,589.46	$28.63	R.		$2,613.08	$8.71	$3,194.31	$10.65
3	40	1,800.00	45.00			R. (No cost.)		760.68	19.01	$764.87	$19.12	296.42	7.41
4	140	7,100.00	50.71	2,000.00	14.29	$2,569.88	$18.36	1,400.00	10.00	1,050.00	7.50	1,618.75	11.56	2,537.50	18.12
5	219	7,715.37	35.23			5,882.34	26.86	Under XV.		1,662.21	7.59	2,338.92	10.68	2,082.69	9.51
6	5	280.00	56.00	50.00	10.00	100.00	20.00	R.		75.00	15.00	26.00	5.20	R.
8	26.5	750.00	28.30	50.00	1.89	257.00	9.70	337.00	12.72	374.00	14.11	81.31	3.06	100.00	3.77
9	20	819.20	40.96	674.40	33.72	808.80	40.44	Under XV.		391.40	19.57	221.60	11.08	217.40	10.87
10	19	400.00	40.00			R.		R.		300.00	30.00	98.00	9.80	150.00	15.00
11	5	56.25	11.25	20.00	4.00	71.35	14.27	R.		150.60	30.12	28.65	5.73	42.00	8.40
12	10			520.00	52.00	240.00	24.00	Under XV.		See XI.		56.00	5.60	R.
19	20	640.00	32.00	M&L468.60	23.43	250.00	12.50	147.36	7.37	365.00	18.25	247.78	12.39	300.00	15.00
20	14	400.00	28.57	40.00	2.86	R.		R.		320.00	22.86	121.35	8.66	100.00	7.14
23	10	480.00	48.00			240.00	24.00	200.00	20.00	Under XI.		87.00	8.70	R.
24	13	750.00	57.70	25.00	1.92	500.00	38.46	Under XV.		180.00	13.85	178.00	13.69	262.50	20.00
27	9	738.00	82.00	232.65	25.85	202.50	22.50	Under XV.		202.50	22.50	92.70	10.30	99.00	11.00
21	120	1,323.55	11.03	1,430.76	11.92	268.03	2.23	Under XV.		1,648.84	13.74	829.20	6.91	255.53	2.13
17	4	185.12	46.28	46.20	11.55	24.00	6.00	Under XV.		38.25	9.56	48.00	12.00	4.50	1.12
14	10	280.00	28.00	250.00	25.00	100.00	10.00	Under XV.		150.00	15.00	65.00	6.50	25.00	2.50
35	5	100.00	20.00			42.00	8.40	60.00	12.00	85.00	17.00	24.00	4.80	R.
34	5	200.00	40.00			35.00	7.00	50.00	10.00	55.00	11.00	15.00	3.00	R
36	70	2,557.35	36.53	164.55	2.35	527.40	7.53	93.35	1.35	914.70	13.07	179.55	2.56	126.10	1.80
38	9	244.47	27.16	212.01	23.56	69.60	7.73	R.		164.90	18.32	15.26	1.70	155.27	17.25
37	2	65.00	32.50			17.50	8.75	R.		27.50	13.75	27.00	13.50
55	4.5	126.00	28.00	85.80	19.07	110.65	24.59	37.00	8.22	86.40	19.20	17.30	3.84	28.40	6.31
30	5.5	155.00	28.18	159.80	29.05	104.30	18.96	133.00	24.18	96.30	17.51	64.00	11.64	R.
42	8	250.00	31.25			70.00	8.75	130.00	16.25	150.00	18.75	20.00	2.50	5.00	.63
61	100	4,996.54	49.97	190.05	1.90	1,127.73	11.28	1,170.69	11.71	1,834.34	18.34	360.36	3.60	1,308.51	13.09
29	5	200.00	40.00	100.00	20.00	35.00	7.00	70.00	14.00	145.00	29.00	12.80	2.56	20.00	4.00
33	8	270.00	33.75	75.00	9.37	76.80	9.60	R.		80.00	10.00	42.70	5.33	R.
32	18	838.50	46.60	110.00	6.11	202.50	11.25	R.		225.00	12.50	93.15	5.17	R.
41	12	240.00	20.00	153.35	12.78	105.00	8.75	72.00	6.00	T.H.166.70	13.89	39.40	3.28	62.50	5.20
40	15	700.00	46.66	20.00	1.33	150.00	10.00	125.00	8.33	275.00	18.33	41.70	2.78	65.55	4.37
50	4.5	136.51	30.37	46.64	13.60	41.75	9.28	42.70	9.50	T.H. 84.21	18.71	11.30	2.51	52.62	11.70
31	5			12.50	2.50	35.00	7.00	30.00	6.00	100.00	20.00	7.50	1.50	17.50	3.50
52	5	130.00	26.00			31.50	6.30	20.00	4.00	100.00	20.00	22.00	4.40	90.00	18.00
53	5	195.00	39.00	140.00	28.00	45.00	9.00	59.00	11.80	70.00	14.00	12.00	2.40	5.00	1.00
43	9	294.00	32.67			192.65	21.41	130.00	14.44	223.00	24.78	53.00	5.89	93.00	10.33
44	4	70.00	17.50			35.00	8.75			200.00	50.00	29.00	7.25	50.00	12.50
45	9	400.00	44.44	25.00	2.78	105.00	11.67	60.00	6.67	250.00	27.78	40.00	4.44	130.00	14.44
82	5	328.00	65.60	225.00	45.00	137.50	27.50	Under XV.		100.00	20.00	67.00	13.40	100.00	20.00
83	5	R. 400.00	80.00	Under I.		74.91	14.98	Under XV.		75.72	15.14	59.01	11.80
54	15	624.00	41.60	236.00	22.40	127.00	8.46	146.00	9.73	285.00	19.00	36.00	2.40	70.00	4.66
57	11	73.35	6.67	366.65	33.33	96.25	8.75	55.00	5.00	343.75	31.25	41.25	3.75	45.85	4.17
25	5	152.00	30.40	225.00	45.00	104.00	20.80	Under XV.		87.50	17.50	52.57	10.51	50.00	10.00
81	110	3,653.09	33.21	3,634.70	33.04	2,133.10	19.40	1,044.85	9.49	5,085.80	46.23	2,057.66	18.72	517.36	4.70
59	30	1,170.00	39.00	480.00	16.00	288.10	9.60	406.12	13.54	630.00	21.00	72.31	2.41	200.00	6.67
58	12	276.00	23.00	180.00	15.00	116.60	9.71	50.00	4.16	500.00	41.66	32.00	2.67	100.00	8.33
60	10	390.00	39.00	38.00	3.80	75.00	7.50	141.05	14.10	T.H.180.09	18.01	24.00	2.40
56	18	187.50	10.42	1,546.50	85.92	187.50	10.42	240.00	13.33	421.88	23.44	45.00	2.50	150.00	8.33
65	35	2,604.00	74.40	1,400.00	40.00	945.00	27.00	R. 650.60	18.57	420.00	12.00	546.00	15.60	105.00	3.00
66	6	140.00	23.33			157.50	26.25	Under XV.		132.30	22.05	66.51	11.09	41.05	6.84
70	15	333.33	22.22			300.00	20.00	Under XV.		208.33	13.89	133.33	8.89	16.67	1.11
71	7.2	108.00	15.00	252.00	35.00	190.80	26.50	Under XV.		180.00	25.00	57.60	8.00
72	10.5	400.00	38.10	125.00	11.90	252.00	24.00	Under XV.		45.00	4.29	105.00	10.00	90.00	8.57
73	14	217.56	15.54	307.51	21.97	308.00	22.00	314.98	22.50	280.00	20.00	168.11	12.01	36.40	2.60
75	22	520.00	23.66	250.00	11.36	245.67	11.17	R.		T.H.275.00	12.50	103.40	4.70
76	5	328.00	54.67	175.00	29.17	90.00	15.00	Under XV.		104.40	17.40	68.16	11.36	75.00	12.50
79	2.5	R 150.00	60.00	Under I.		56.25	22.50	Under XV.		22.50	9.00	50.00	20.00	27.50	11.00
68	7	200.00	28.57	170.00	24.29	62.22	8.89	Under XV.		175.00	25.00	56.30	8.04	3.89	.56
69	13	630.00	48.46	560.00	43.08	475.61	36.59	Under XV.		205.15	15.78	109.07	8.39	45.70	3.52
167	8	244.16	30.52	21.84	2.73	222.56	27.82	Under XV.		113.68	14.21	198.96	24.87

TABLE II.—Cultural cost of materials required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910—Continued.

No.	Acres.	I. Chemical fertilizer.		II. Barnyard manure.		III. Water.		IV. Fumigation.		V. Forage and grain.		VI. Taxes.		VII. Maintenance and repairs.[1]
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
138	1	$39.78	$39.78			$8.11	$8.11	Under XV.		$19.27	$19.27	$11.43	$11.43
139	7	157.50	22.50	$26.25	$3.75	113.75	16.25	Under XV.		87.50	12.50	28.42	4.06
140	2.5	190.50	76.20			60.00	24.00	Under XV.		See XI.		27.00	10.80
141	2	42.00	21.00	42.00	21.00	40.00	20.00	Under XV.		54.66	27.33	25.33	12.67	$6.67	$3.33
142	48	1,487.75	31.00			1,600.00	33.33	$538.50	$11.22			550.25	11.46	215.00	4.48
143	4	318.20	79.55			104.00	26.00			98.00	24.50	39.60	9.90	4.80	1.20
144	15	330.00	22.00			233.25	15.55	Under XV.		281.25	18.75	182.70	12.18	333.30	22.22
145	5	375.00	75.00	35.00	7.00	100.00	20.00	104.00	20.80	65.00	13.00	62.50	12.50	16.67	3.33
146	3	150.00	50.00			29.73	9.91	Under XV.		35.43	11.81	37.80	12.60	49.62	16.54
147	3	187.50	62.50			12.00	4.00			T. H. 18.60	6.20	22.50	7.50
148	10	520.00	52.00	256.00	25.60	285.00	28.50	Under XV.		R.		200.00	20.00
149	3.5	113.70	32.49			26.60	7.60					14.81	4.23
150	22	1,427.00	64.86	301.00	13.68	476.64	21.67	Under XV.		616.00	28.00	275.00	12.50	35.00	10.00
80	7	560.00	80.00	443.35	63.33	231.00	33.00	Under XV.		136.00	19.43	110.00	15.71	146.74	6.67
1	422	R. 43,373.00	R. 102.78	Under I.		5,578.00	13.22	Under XV.		Under XI.		5,658.00	13.41	168.00	24.00
48	3	78.00	26.00	71.10	23.70	25.71	8.57	14.00	4.67	122.80	40.95	17.14	5.71	5,205.00	12.33
47	3	84.00	28.00	40.00	13.33	21.00	7.00	20.00	6.66	150.00	50.00	25.00	8.33	16.77	5.59
84	3.75	320.00	85.33	70.00	18.67	90.00	24.00	Under XV.		Under XI.		29.50	7.87	25.00	8.33
85	2	6.00	3.00	30.00	15.00	17.50	8.75			Under XI.		5.23	2.61
88	3	111.00	37.00			49.83	16.63	Under XV.		Under XI.		21.14	7.05
89	50	R. 1,948.63	38.97	Under I.		1,293.70	25.87	Under XV.		Under XXI.		515.97	10.32	16.50	5.50
90	8	320.00	40.00	256.00	32.00	190.12	23.77	Under XV.		62.50	7.81	43.75	5.47	420.00	8.40
64	22.5	1,535.00	68.22	650.45	28.91	531.90	23.64	613.64	27.27	402.30	17.88	281.25	12.50	15.63	1.95
49	4	50.00	12.50	50.00	12.50	35.00	8.75	20.00	5.00	180.00	45.00	13.00	3.25	87.50	3.89
91	9	600.00	66.67			250.00	27.78	Under XVI and XV.		200.00	22.22	60.00	6.67	50.00	12.50
92	8	350.00	43.75			80.00	10.00	Under XVI and XV.		160.00	20.00	32.00	4.00	100.00	11.11
93	19	1,729.00	91.00			190.00	10.00	Under XVI and XV.		R. 356.25	18.75	57.00	3.00	95.00	5.00
94	5.5	280.00	50.91	225.00	40.91	180.00	32.73			135.00	24.55	55.00	10.00	75.00	13.63
67	10	400.89	40.09	40.00	4.00	226.40	22.64	138.75	13.87	123.63	12.36	52.33	5.23	30.40	3.04
78	164	4,342.72	26.48	Under I.		4,393.56	26.79	4,254.16	25.94	1,079.12	6.58	1,969.64	12.01	1,349.72	8.23
95	13.5	650.00	48.15	145.00	10.74	375.00	27.77	Under XV.		R. 155.00	11.49	198.00	14.66
97	14	485.00	34.64	33.00	2.36	284.48	20.32	Under XV.		119.28	8.52	68.46	4.89	15.00	1.06
96	10	400.00	40.00	315.00	31.50	194.18	19.42			89.28	8.93	52.44	5.24	31.23	3.12
99	3	210.00	70.00	15.08	5.60	62.40	20.80			112.50	37.50	29.55	9.85	1.50	.50
103	30	1,310.00	43.67	645.00	21.50	240.60	8.02	150.00	5.00	211.80	7.06	717.30	23.90	111.18	3.71
102	9	202.50	22.50			216.00	24.00	264.00	29.33	270.00	30.00	153.00	70.00	49.50	5.50
105	3.75	128.73	34.33	40.02	10.67	37.50	10.00	Under XV.		Under XI.		21.27	5.67
104	21	750.00	35.71	70.00	3.33	192.10	9.15			144.69	6.89	217.85	10.37	20.29	1.95
106	7	231.00	33.00	R. 150.00	21.43	37.32	5.33			R. 91.35	13.05	28.21	4.03
107	4	200.00	50.00	125.00	31.25	100.00	25.00	Under XV.		90.00	22.50	38.99	9.75	4.00	1.00
98	6	259.20	43.20	54.57	9.10	63.10	10.52			37.26	6.21	27.00	4.50	6.52	1.08
108	17	800.00	47.06	500.00	29.41	340.00	20.00	Under XV.		255.00	15.00	255.00	15.00	85.00	5.00
109	17	686.90	40.41	588.78	34.64	861.33	50.67	400.74	23.57	203.66	11.98	161.33	9.49	283.33	16.66
13
110	3.6	168.58	46.82	116.60	32.22	105.12	29.20	Under XV.		72.00	20.00	38.88	10.80	9.00	2.50
63	22	500.00	22.73	125.00	5.68	353.54	16.07	Under XV.		179.08	8.14	203.28	9.24	409.20	18.60
111	3.½	98.00	29.40	85.00	25.50	30.78	9.23	Under XV.		52.33	15.70	38.36	11.51
112	6	392.76	65.46			161.04	26.84	Under XV.		100.86	16.81	24.00	4.00
100	70	3,173.35	45.33	3,515.00	50.22	2,002.00	28.60	Under XV.		Und. XXI.		728.80	10.34
113	6	184.68	30.78	276.84	46.14	217.08	36.18	Under XV.		R. 100.02	16.67	63.84	10.64	25.02	4.17
114	3.5	200.00	57.14	85.00	24.29	52.50	15.00	Under XV.		93.33	26.66	39.44	11.27	11.65	3.33
115	2	40.00	20.00			30.00	15.00	Under XV.		50.00	25.00	30.00	15.00
116	2.5	108.40	43.36	25.00	10.00	20.83	8.33			45.83	18.33	11.67	4.67	8.33	3.33
117	2	75.00	37.50	125.00	62.50	10.00	5.00	Under XV.		32.00	16.00	12.80	6.40	5.63	2.80
118	3	190.00	63.33			54.00	18.00	Under XV.		60.00	20.00	34.92	11.64
119	5	450.00	90.00			50.00	10.00	Under XV.		60.00	12.00	40.00	8.00
120	6	200.00	33.33			133.34	22.22	54.00	9.00	133.33	22.22	33.33	5.56
121	10	275.00	27.50	171.00	17.10	180.00	18.00	140.00	14.00	200.00	20.00	50.00	5.00	45.00	4.50
122	5	66.67	13.33	100.00	20.00	41.67	8.33	65.00	13.00	166.67	33.33	33.34	6.66	25.00	5.00
157	10	700.00	70.00			150.00	15.00					177.50	17.75	41.67	4.17
124	19	1,156.00	60.84	360.00	18.95	210.00	11.05	288.00	15.15	970.00	51.05			170.00	8.95
125	18	817.00	45.39	90.00	5.00	229.00	12.73	166.00	9.22	334.00	18.55	56.60	3.14	197.50	10.97
126	3	90.00	30.00	25.00	8.33	18.75	6.25	Under XV.		112.50	37.50	10.50	3.50
26	9.25	119.80	12.95			16.65	1.80					76.00	8.00
128	9	200.00	22.22	120.00	13.33	66.00	7.33	Under XV.		318.75	35.41	53.00	5.89	153.33	17.03
129	16	330.00	20.62			250.00	15.62	Under XV.		395.00	24.69
130	3	80.00	26.60	350.00	116.67	60.00	20.00	Under XV.		110.00	36.67	48.30	16.10	19.51	6.50
131	9	358.40	39.82	31.80	3.53	200.00	22.22	Under XV.		223.00	24.77	47.20	5.24	34.30	3.81
132	6	140.00	23.33			212.28	35.38	Under XV.		166.14	27.69	360.00	60.00	6.48	1.08
133	3	92.00	30.67			24.00	8.00	Under XV.		64.29	21.43	20.37	6.79	8.58	2.86
134	5.25	258.75	49.30	6.00	1.14	197.00	37.52	Under XV.		75.00	14.29	135.00	25.72	60.00	11.42
86	54	2,105.47	38.99					683.76	12.66	608.72	11.27	980.00	18.15
135	4.5	110.00	24.44	115.00	25.55	30.92	6.87	Under XV.		R. 71.46	15.88	20.61	4.58
136	3.5	21.46	6.14	25.00	7.14	51.33	14.67	Under XV.		17.78	5.08	18.66	5.33	10.95	3.13
62	418	11,296.08	27.02	432.12	1.03	3,406.70	8.15	3,400.00	8.13	3,743.62	8.97	3,720.20	8.90
151	40	266.00	26.60			180.00	18.00					57.60	5.76
152	10	414.59	41.46	76.96	7.69	145.50	14.55			365.32	36.53	34.10	3.41	21.30	2.13
153	6	166.60	19.43	284.21	47.37	280.00	46.67			139.62	23.27	56.64	9.44	10.98	1.83
154	2	102.00	51.00	20.00	10.00	45.90	22.50					41.72	20.86	10.00	5.00
29	9	317.20	35.25	286.90	31.88	236.95	26.33	283.90	31.54	120.00	13.33	71.05	7.89
155	9.75	574.00	58.87	469.16	48.12	219.37	22.50			138.44	16.25	160.87	16.50	158.44	16.25
156	15	1,050.00	70.00			375.00	25.00					266.67	17.78	67.67	4.51
Total	3,658.4

[1] See total labor and materials.

TABLE II.—Cultural cost of materials required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910—Continued.

No.	Acres.	VIII. Frost protection.		IX. Insurance premium.		X. Incidental.		Total materials.		Labor.		Materials and labor.		Remarks.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
2	300	$1,429.25	$4.98	$259.26	$0.86			$30,019.14	$100.06	$46,839.02	$156.13	$76,858.16	$256.19	Water, forage and grain without cost.
3	40					$168.60	$4.22	3,790.57	94.76	4,028.68	100.72	7,819.25	195.48	No cost to water; no repairs nor insurance.
4	140	1,000.00	7.14	245.00	1.75	437.50	3.13	19,958.63	142.56	18,995.00	135.68	38,953.63	278.24
5	219	336.14	1.63	781.83	3.57			20,819.50	95.07	24,131.89	110.19	44,951.39	205.26
6	5			R.				531.00	106.20	170.00	34.00	701.00	140.20	No fumigation, repairs, nor insurance.
8	26.5					90.00	3.40	2,039.31	76.95	1,496.93	56.48	3,536.24	133.43
9	20	100.00	5.00	25.60	1.28	49.00	2.45	3,307.40	165.37	2,088.22	104.42	5,395.62	269.79
10	10							948.00	94.80	1,550.00	155.00	2,498.00	249.80	No fumigation nor water cost.
11	5			2.70	.54			371.55	74.31	295.00	59.00	666.55	133.31	Do.
12	10			R.				816.00	81.60	1,230.00	123.00	2,046.00	204.60	No repairs nor insurance.
19	20			15.00	.75			2,433.74	121.69	1,969.72	98.49	4,403.46	220.18	M. & L. (material and labor).
20	14			20.00	1.43			1,001.35	71.52	1,637.65	116.97	2,639.00	188.49	No fumigation nor water cost.
23	10			R.		40.00	4.00	1,047.00	104.70	423.00	42.60	1,473.00	147.30	No repairs nor insurance.
24	13			20.00	1.55	45.00	3.46	1,960.50	150.63	1,173.00	90.21	3,133.50	240.84
27	9			4.50	.50			1,571.85	174.65	802.00	89.11	2,373.85	263.76
31	120					750.93	6.26	6,506.84	54.22	6,723.16	56.03	13,230.00	110.25
17	4			1.62	.41			347.69	86.92	328.88	82.22	676.57	169.14
14	10	50.00	5.00					920.00	92.00	452.50	45.25	1,372.50	137.25
35	5			R.		9.00	1.80	320.00	64.00	306.00	61.20	626.00	125.20	No repairs nor insurance.
34	5			R.				355.00	71.00	296.00	59.20	651.00	130.20	Do.
36	70			14.00	.20	69.00	.99	4,646.00	66.36	3,320.40	47.43	7,966.40	113.79
28	9			R.				861.51	95.72	468.10	52.02	1,329.61	147.74	No fumigation nor insurance.
37	2			15.00	7.50			152.00	76.00	82.50	41.25	234.50	117.25	No fumigation nor repairs.
15	4.5							491.55	109.23	156.95	34.85	648.50	144.08
30	5.5			11.10	2.02	16.05	2.92	739.55	134.46	313.75	57.05	1,053.30	191.51	No repairs.
42	8					24.09	3.00	649.00	81.12	374.00	46.75	1,023.00	127.87
61	100			82.54	.83	283.20	3.83	11,453.96	114.55	13,169.58	131.69	24,623.54	246.24
39	5							582.80	116.56	380.00	76.00	962.80	192.56
33	8	25.00	3.13	1.05	.13			570.55	71.31	271.20	33.90	841.75	105.21	No fumigation nor repairs.
32	18	10.00	.56	4.50	.25			1,483.65	82.44	675.70	37.53	2,159.35	119.97	Do.
41	12			20.20	1.69	11.00	.92	870.15	72.51	971.20	80.93	1,841.35	153.44
40	15					21.85	1.46	1,399.10	93.26	1,425.00	95.00	2,824.10	188.26
29	4.5							415.73	92.38	238.65	53.04	654.38	145.42
31	5							202.50	40.50	334.00	66.80	536.50	107.30	Small amount of fertilizer.
22	5			9.00	1.80	10.00	2.00	412.50	82.50	250.00	50.00	662.50	132.50
53	5							526.00	105.20	474.10	94.82	1,000.10	200.02
43	9			24.00	2.67			1,009.65	112.19	739.10	82.13	1,748.75	194.32
44	4			12.00	3.00			396.00	99.00	340.00	85.00	736.00	184.00
45	9							1,010.00	112.22	605.00	67.20	1,615.00	179.42
52	5			2.25	.45			959.75	191.95	263.50	52.70	1,223.25	244.65
55	5					10.12	2.02	619.76	123.94	335.51	67.10	955.27	191.04	II under I.
54	15					79.00	5.26	1,703.00	113.51	1,755.00	117.00	3,458.00	230.51
57	11			4.60	.41			1,026.70	93.33	475.65	43.24	1,502.35	136.57
25	5					117.00	23.40	788.07	157.61	471.00	94.20	1,259.07	251.81
81	110	270.00	2.45	854.57	8.04			19,281.13	175.28	16,915.00	153.76	36,193.13	329.04
59	30			15.00	.50	20.41	.68	3,281.94	109.40	2,249.54	74.98	5,531.48	184.38
58	12							1,254.60	104.53	796.00	66.32	2,050.60	170.85
60	10					28.80	2.88	876.94	87.69	617.35	61.73	1,494.29	149.42
56	18			56.25	3.13			2,834.63	157.49	1,160.62	64.48	3,995.25	221.97
65	35			10.50	.30			6,680.50	190.87	1,467.50	41.93	8,148.00	232.80	IV includes XIV.
66	6			6.30	1.05	15.75	2.63	559.41	93.24	456.48	76.08	1,015.89	169.32
70	15			1.67	.11			993.33	66.22	1,085.00	72.33	2,078.33	138.55
71	7.2			.83	.12			789.23	109.62	336.30	46.71	1,125.53	156.33
72	10.5							1,017.00	96.86	1,035.00	98.55	2,052.00	195.41
73	14			5.60	.40	28.00	2.00	1,666.16	119.02	854.92	61.07	2,521.08	180.09
75	22							1,394.07	63.39	850.00	38.64	2,244.07	102.03	No fumigation.
76	5			2.70	.45			843.26	140.55	270.00	45.00	1,113.26	185.55
79	2.5	10.00	4.00	6.00	2.40			322.25	128.90	145.00	58.00	467.25	186.90	Total fertilizer under I.
68	7			4.67	.67			672.08	96.02	564.65	80.67	1,236.73	176.69
69	13			16.53	1.27			2,042.06	157.09	1,081.89	83.22	3,123.95	240.31
137	8							801.20	100.15	648.32	81.04	1,449.52	181.19
138	1	10.00	10.00	.27	.27	1.18	1.18	90.04	90.04	76.60	76.60	166.64	166.64
139	7			8.75	1.25			422.17	60.31	484.30	69.18	906.47	129.49
140	2.5					5.00	2.00	282.50	113.00	180.60	72.24	463.10	185.24
141	2			.40	.20			211.06	105.53	181.00	90.50	392.06	196.03
142	48	60.00	1.25	35.00	.73			4,486.51	93.47	3,179.54	66.21	7,666.05	159.68
143	4			4.00	1.00	7.20	1.80	575.80	143.95	190.30	47.58	766.10	191.53
144	15			15.00	1.00			1,375.50	91.70	1,212.25	80.80	2,587.75	172.50
145	5			.83	.17	8.33	1.67	767.33	153.47	302.75	60.55	1,070.08	214.02
146	3					13.05	4.35	315.63	105.21	226.11	75.37	541.74	180.58
147	3			4.20	1.40	36.00	12.00	280.80	93.60	195.85	65.28	476.65	158.88
148	10			30.00	3.00	30.00	3.00	1,321.00	132.10	476.40	47.64	1,797.40	179.74	R. Work hired.
149	3.5	20.00	5.71	1.40	.40			211.51	60.43	276.12	78.89	487.63	139.32
150	22			14.64	.67	26.18	1.19	3,283.20	149.24	1,344.98	61.13	4,628.18	210.37
89	7			45.20	6.45			1,693.55	241.92	1,116.75	159.53	2,810.30	401.45
1	422	846.00	2.00	Under XX.		520.00	1.23	61,180.00	144.97	31,795.00	75.34	92,975.00	220.31	II and XVII under I. Labor included in VIII.
48	3			4.50	1.50			350.11	116.70	170.33	56.77	520.44	173.47
47	3			5.00	1.66			370.00	123.31	287.00	95.65	657.00	218.96
84	3.75			6.00	1.60			515.50	137.47	345.60	92.15	861.10	229.62
85	2							58.73	29.36	175.00	87.50	233.73	116.86	No fumigation, repairs, insurance, etc.
88	3			3.75	1.25			202.27	67.43	208.15	69.39	410.42	136.82
89	50	100.00	2.00	120.00	2.40	150.00	3.00	4,548.30	90.96	5,839.70	116.79	10,388.00	207.75	Includes II.
90	8			.75	.09	20.00	2.50	908.75	113.59	455.00	56.89	1,363.75	170.48
64	22.5			11.93	.53	73.58	3.27	4,187.55	186.11	1,508.04	67.02	5,695.59	253.13
49	4							398.00	99.50	246.00	61.50	644.00	161.00

TABLE II.—Cultural cost of materials required in producing lemons on 143 ranches in California in 1910—Continued.

No.	Acres.	VIII. Frost protection.		IX. Insurance premium.		X. Incidental.		Total materials.		Labor.		Materials and labor.		Remarks.
		Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Pe- acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
91	9			$7.50	$0.83	$20.00	$2.22	$1,237.50	$137.50	$1,475.00	$163.86	$2,712.50	$301.36
92	8			8.00	1.00	24.00	3.00	654.00	81.75	700.00	87.50	1,354.00	169.25
93	19					47.50	2.50	2,474.75	130.25	1,286.30	67.70	3,761.05	197.95	V includes team hire.
94	5.5			5.00	.91			955.00	173.64	335.50	61.00	1,290.50	234.64
67	10			1.20	.12	3.33	.33	1,016.93	101.68	481.99	48.19	1,498.92	149.87
73	164	$478.88	$2.92	168.92	1.03			18,036.72	109.98	15,714.43	95.82	33,751.20	205.80
95	13.5					40.00	2.96	1,563.00	115.77	1,272.50	94.23	2,835.50	210.00
97	14							1,005.22	71.79	571.55	40.81	1,576.77	112.60
96	10			.46	.05	23.64	2.36	1,106.23	110.62	638.28	63.83	1,744.51	174.45
99	⅔	4.50	1.50	1.65	.55			437.10	145.70	129.05	43.02	566.15	188.72	No fumigation.
103	30			21.30	.71			3,407.18	113.58	2,618.00	87.27	6,025.18	200.85
102	9			5.63	.63	19.13	2.12	1,179.76	131.08	516.78	57.42	1,696.54	188.50
105	3.75					9.00	2.40	236.52	63.07	199.12	53.00	435.64	116.16
104	21			24.84	1.18			1,425.77	67.88	1,464.47	69.74	2,890.24	137.62	No fumigation.
106	7			.95	.14	13.13	1.88	551.96	78.86	227.50	32.50	779.46	111.36	II includes XVII; V includes team hire.
107	4					12.00	3.00	569.99	142.50	359.25	89.81	929.24	232.31
98	6			.79	.13	16.20	2.70	464.64	77.44	225.35	37.56	689.99	115.00	No fumigation.
108	17			42.50	2.50	42.50	2.50	2,320.00	136.47	1,591.11	93.59	3,911.11	230.06
109	17							3,186.13	187.42	1,458.00	85.76	4,644.13	273.18
3												20,514.43	113.97	Totals only.
110	3.6			.43	.12			510.01	141.66	271.00	75.27	781.01	216.93
63	22			15.36	.70			1,785.45	81.16	1,280.00	58.19	3,065.46	139.35
111	3.½			2.35	.70	2.35	.70	309.17	92.74	390.00	117.00	699.17	209.74
112	6					12.60	2.10	991.26	115.21	355.21	59.20	1,046.47	174.41
100	70	466.70	6.67					9,880.85	141.16	6,527.61	93.25	16,408.46	234.41
113	6			.78	.13			868.26	144.71	528.09	88.01	1,396.35	232.72	Vi ncludes team hire.
114	3.5			.64	.18			482.56	137.87	377.90	107.98	860.46	245.85
115	2			1.00	.50			151.00	75.50	92.60	46.30	243.60	121.80
116	2.5	10.00	4.00	1.60	.64			231.66	92.66	121.75	48.70	353.41	141.36	No fumigation.
117	2			1.00	.80			262.00	131.00	130.00	65.00	392.00	196.00
118	3					7.20	2.40	346.12	115.37	232.00	77.33	578.12	192.70
119	5			2.40	.48			602.40	120.48	354.70	70.94	957.10	191.42
120	6			10.00	1.67	10.00	1.67	574.00	95.67	367.00	61.17	941.00	156.84
121	10			8.66	.86			1,069.66	103.96	697.00	69.70	1,766.66	176.66
122	5			6.92	1.38	40.00	8.00	545.27	109.03	323.34	64.66	868.61	173.69
157	10			.92	.09	66.67	6.67	1,136.76	113.68	475.05	47.50	1,611.81	161.18
124	19	42.00	2.21	14.00	.75			3,210.00	168.95	1,284.50	67.60	4,494.50	236.55
125	18	24.00	1.33	4.50	.25	43.00	2.39	1,961.60	108.96	1,117.50	62.06	3,079.10	171.02
126	3			3.75	1.25	6.00	2.00	266.50	88.83	278.25	92.75	544.75	181.58
26	9.25					92.50	10.00	304.95	32.75	580.97	62.80	885.92	95.55
128	9	40.00	4.44	19.85	2.20	37.50	4.17	1,008.40	112.02	492.60	54.72	1,501.00	166.74
129	16							(1)	(1)	(1)		4,042.50	252.65
130	3			1.80	.60			669.60	223.20	262.70	87.55	932.30	310.75
131	9					16.35	1.81	1,001.05	111.20	825.75	91.73	1,826.80	202.93
132	6			13.86	2.31			898.76	149.79	439.90	73.32	1,338.66	223.11	Taxes high. Ranch in residence section near L. A.
133	3	37.29	12.43	.63	.21	6.00	2.00	253.16	84.39	201.64	67.20	544.80	181.59
134	5.25			6.00	1.14	20.00	3.81	757.75	144.34	330.50	62.96	1,088.25	207.30
86	54	22.67	.42	138.50	2.56			4,539.12	84.05	6,243.80	115.63	10,782.92	199.68
135	4.5	25.00	5.55			9.00	2.00	381.90	84.87	274.00	60.88	655.99	145.75	Team hire under V.
136	3.5	75.00	21.42	1.09	.31	9.34	2.67	230.61	65.89	285.37	81.54	515.98	147.43
62	418			521.50	1.25			26,525.17	63.45	34,813.44	83.26	61,338.61	146.71
151	10					5.25	.52	508.85	50.88	354.90	35.49	863.75	86.37
152	10			19.05	1.90	37.90	3.79	1,114.69	111.46	883.34	88.34	1,998.03	199.80
153	6			.65	.11	13.50	2.25	902.20	150.37	634.83	105.80	1,537.03	256.17
154	2			.57	.28			219.29	109.64	112.00	56.00	331.29	165.64
29	9							1,316.00	146.22	528.05	58.67	1,844.05	204.89
155	9.75			3.65	.37	24.37	2.50	1,768.30	181.36	1,303.35	133.67	3,071.65	315.03
156	15			18.33	1.22	133.33	8.89	1,911.00	127.40	1,335.00	89.00	3,246.00	216.40
Total	3,658.4							376,403.98		320,296.35		721,257.26	(1)

[1] Average cost per acre: Materials, $108.71; labor, $92.51. Total average cost per acre, labor and materials, $197.15.

THE YIELD OF LEMONS IN CALIFORNIA.

Table III, following, shows the average annual yield of lemons per acre from 1906–7 to 1910–11 on the acreage of the principal lemon shippers and associations in California. The record includes practically every important lemon-growing section in California and nearly every large lemon planting of bearing age in the State. It covers not less than 700 groves. The average yield for the five-year period is 196.2 packed boxes per acre, making an average annual cultural cost of producing the fruit in the field of $1 per packed box.

These data do not include depreciation on the groves, buildings, stock, machinery, tools, irrigation plant, or other equipment, or interest on the investment. The investment represents about $1,000 per acre. The investment in equipment per acre represents about $60.

TABLE III.—The yield of lemons per acre, 1906–7 to 1910–11, inclusive.

Association or individual account.	1910-11		1909-10		1908-9		1907-8		1906-7
	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.
		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.
No. 2	30	4,435	30	6,402	30	6,077	30	3,195	30	5,832
No. 3	120	32,229	120	28,842	120	29,786	120	30,477	120	29,257
No. 6	437	72,500	302	57,944	191	25,596
No. 8	140	20,871	140	20,815	140	28,350	140	15,263	140	9,614
No. 12	195	29,474	168	14,073	186	21,315
No. 14	119	29,625	114	25,192	114	24,084
No. 16	85	15,527	93	8,744
No. 18	675	109,203	104	25,376	116	28,177	101	24,716	77	18,638
No. 29	100	13,200	100	6,800	150	19,200	150	18,400	150	18,403
No. 31	200	17,317	80	6,792	45	2,827
No. 32	1	100
No. 36	188.9	44,654	150.1	46,465	150.1	56,814	150.1	44,613	150.1	36,020
No. 37	832	216,522	800	176,587	760	204,716	710	150,719	650	94,463
No. 38	180	24,236	180	13,599	180	23,585	180	32,830	180	29,621
No. 39	407	68,000	380	36,637	400	57,649	410	64,415	375	28,332

TABLE III.—The yield of lemons per acre, 1906–7 to 1910–11, inclusive—Continued.

Association or individual account.	1910–11		1909–10		1908–9		1907–8		1906–7
	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.
		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.
No. 40	300	75,271	300	114,767	300	104,528	30¢	79,046	300	68,306
No. 43	211	30,253
No. 44	141.5	35,866	129	28,576	146	35,366	145.5	22,473	104.5	14,672
No. 47	110	31,943	110	36,192	110	42,120	110	37,752	120	37,440
No. 48	238	109,033
No. 58	30	4,816	30	2,252	30	7,981	30	4,690	10	709
No. 59	15	2,382
No. 60	42	19,466	42	9,930	42	15,263	42	12,493	54	11,484
No. 61	344	60,060	340	28,461	340	55,538	330	47,017	350	39,552
No. 62	213	72,189	213	61,919	370	109,354	390	68,451	375	52,081
No. 63	110	11,424
No. 64	200	40,569	225	34,127	225	36,356
No. 65	418	94,387	418	95,270	418	73,370	418	46,469	418	38,567
No. 66	55	10,752
Total	6,137.4	1,296,294	4,568.1	895,762	4,563.1	1,008,052	3,756.6	702,929	3,603.6	537,434
Average boxes per acre		211.2		196.1		220.9		187.1		149.1
Five-year average, boxes per acre		196.2

THE COST OF HANDLING THE LEMONS FROM THE TREE TO THE CAR IN CALIFORNIA.

Table IV following shows the cost of handling 1,391,711 boxes of lemons from the tree to the car in 1910–11, including the cost of picking, the cost of hauling to the packing house, and the cost of packing the fruit, including the loading on the car. These costs average 88.888 per packed box, making the f. o. b. cost of a box of California lemons approximately $1.89.

TABLE IV.—The cost of handling lemons per packed box from the tree to the car, season 1910–11.

Account.	Boxes shipped.	Cost of picking.	Cost of hauling.	Cost of packing.	Total.
	Number.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
No. 4	31,781	28.5	1.5	59.8	89.8
No. 6	4,149	30	3	50	83
No. 8	72,500	25	7	60	92
No. 10	60,627	20	3.5	52	75.5
No. 11	49,200	25	3	60	88
No. 12b	72,189	29.4	3	67	99.4
No. 14	20,871	26	5	55	86
No. 20	15,527	22.2	4	75	101.2
No. 25	109,203	22	5	65	92
No. 36	13,200	20	2	50	72
No. 39	17,317	30	4.5	57	91.5
No. 45	216,522	25	5	58.08	88.08
No. 46	68,000	30	4	65	99
No. 48	75,271	31.76	3	66.3	101.06
No. 51	30,253	25	5	68.7	98.7
No. 52	35,866	25	7	63.6	95.6
No. 56	31,943	22.2	2.5	79	103.7
No. 57	114,902	23	3	53.75	79.75
No. 64	40,569	29.6	3	65.8	98.4
No. 65	94,387	21.6	2.61	53.3	77.51
No. 66	145,460	27.8	3.5	51	82.3
No. 69	47,738	24	4	62	90
No. 71	24,236	17	2	54.5	73.5
Total or average	1,391,711	25.3	3.9	59.6	88.8

SUMMARY OF THE COST OF PRODUCING LEMONS IN CALIFORNIA, INCLUDING TRANSPORTATION AND MARKETING CHARGES.

	Per box.
Cultural costs	$1.00
Cost of picking, hauling, and packing	.888
Cost of freight	.84
Average cost of refrigeration, 1909–1911	.026
Average cost of selling	.070
Total cost laid down in the market	2.824

The average number of lemons per box is 27½ dozen. The average wholesale cost of California lemons laid down in the markets of the United States, based on the cost of production, cost of transportation, and cost of selling, is 10½ cents per dozen.

THE CITRUS PROTECTIVE LEAGUE OF CALIFORNIA,
G. HAROLD POWELL,
Secretary and Manager.

It will be noticed that the table showing the cost of the several orchards of the San Diego Fruit Co. shows a less cost per acre. This results, in part, from the fact of its small charge for water, and that some items of cost included in this larger and more comprehensive table are entirely omitted.

COST OF PICKING, CURING, AND PACKING.

Mr. President, the tables previously submitted have given the cost of preparing the land, planting the trees, and the care and cultivation of the orchard. I desire now to take up the cost of picking, hauling, and packing the fruit ready for shipment to market. This is demonstrated by tables made up from actual experience, as in the case of the tables previously submitted. I am about to call to the attention of the Senate a table giving the numbers of the associations, taken as evidence, 23 in number, including approximately 700 groves; number of boxes of lemons shipped, and in separate columns the cost of picking, hauling, and packing per box, followed by the total for the entire shipment for each item of expense. Then the average per box for each item of expense is given, and the total per box for all. This table shows the average cost of caring for the fruit from the field where it is grown to the car in which it is packed for shipment as I have described the process, taking these several associations, to be 88.8 cents per box. The fruit of these associations is usually harvested, not by the grower, but by trained gangs of labor in the employ of the association to which he belongs. The association also picks the fruit. The figures given in the table above are comprehensive and exact, except the cost of hauling, which, in a few cases, has been conservatively estimated.

The table is as follows:

Cost of handling lemons, per packed box, from the tree to the car, season 1910–11.

Account.	Boxes shipped.	Cost of picking.	Cost of hauling.	Cost of packing	Total.
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
No. 4	31,781	28.5	1.5	59.8	89.8
No. 6	4,149	30	3	50	83
No. 8	72,500	25	7	60	92
No. 10	60,627	20	3.5	52	75.5
No. 11	49,200	25	3	60	88
No. 12b	72,189	29.4	3	67	99.4
No. 14	20,871	26	5	55	86
No. 20	15,527	22.2	4	75	101.2
No. 25	109,203	22	5	65	92
No. 36	13,200	20	2	50	72
No. 39	17,317	30	4.5	57	91.5
No. 45	216,522	25	5	58.08	88.08
No. 46	68,000	30	4	65	99
No. 48	75,271	31.76	3	66.3	101.06
No. 51	30,253	25	5	68.7	98.7
No. 52	35,866	25	7	63.6	95.6
No. 56	31,943	22.2	2.5	79	103.7
No. 57	114,902	23	3	53.75	79.75
No. 64	40,569	29.6	3	65.8	98.4
No. 65	94,387	21.6	2.61	53.3	77.51
No. 66	145,460	27.8	3.5	51	82.3
No. 69	47,738	24	4	62	90
No. 71	24,236	17	2	54.5	73.5
Total	1,391,711
Average		25.3	3.9	59.6	88.8

TOTAL COST OF PRODUCTION.

I have endeavored in what I have already said to inform the Senate of the actual cost of producing lemons from the preparation of the ground for the trees to the loading of the boxes of fruit packed for use on the cars ready for shipment, segregating the items. In some of the tables the cost per acre has been given. But as the tariff on lemons is levied by the pound I have had the expenses in each case reduced to boxes, which contain 72 pounds of fruit each, and had them brought together in such a way as to show the actual cost of the fruit to the producer on the car ready to be transported to market. The average cultural cost per acre on 143 groves covering 3,658.4 acres is $197.15. The average yield per acre as shown hereafter is 196.2 boxes, making the average cultural cost per box approximately $1. The average cost of handling from the tree to the car is 88.8 cents per box, making a total cost of about $1.888 per box on board car.

COST OF TRANSPORTATION.

This leaves us still to consider the cost of transportation to market. This at the present time must be by rail and not by water and is easily ascertained. The freight to all points from Salt Lake City east, except to the southeastern territory, and therefore in the markets where chiefly the home production comes in competition with foreign fruit, was, as fixed by the railroads, $1 per hundredweight. After the tariff rate on lemons was increased by the tariff law of 1909, the railroad companies advanced the rate from $1 per hundredweight to $1.15. This increase was contested by the growers, before the Interstate Commerce Commission, as unreasonable. Pending the hearing and decision of this question, as a result of an injunction issued by the United States Circuit Court in southern California, the full rate of $1.15 has been paid during the pending of the litigation, but the extra 15 cents was deposited with a trust company to be held until the legality of the $1.15 rate was finally determined. It will then be paid either to the railroad companies or back to the growers, in conformity to the decision.

The Interstate Commerce Commission decided, in favor of the growers, that the increased rate was unreasonable. In the meantime the new Commerce Court was established, and the matter was appealed to that court and decided against the shippers, reversing the decision of the commission in their favor on technical grounds and referring the case back to the commission. The case was then retried before the commission, which reaffirmed its original decision, and on a second appeal by the railroads to the Commerce Court that court sustained the $1 rate established by the commission. The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The weight of a box of lemons is 84 pounds. Therefore the rate is $1 per hundredweight, or 84 cents per box. Adding this freight charge to the cost of production, as given above, we find that it costs the California grower to lay down his lemons in New York or any other of the eastern cities $2.728 per box, exclusive of refrigeration, which in the last two years has added an average of 2.6 cents per box to the transportation charge. From these data it will be seen that the average cost of placing a box of lemons on the cars in California is $1.89; the average transportation charge is 86.6 cents per box; the average selling cost is 7 cents per box, making a general wholesale cost of California lemons in the market of $2.824 per box, or at the rate of 10¼ cents per dozen, an average box containing 27½ dozen lemons.

COST OF PRODUCING AND SHIPPING THE FOREIGN PRODUCT.

This brings us to a comparison between the cost of production and shipment in California and in Italy, our chief competitor. As I have already said, the cost of producing the foreign product is more difficult to arrive at, and the data I am able to furnish is not as accurate or satisfactory as that given of the cost at home. But the main items of cost and expense are easily ascertained, and that alone will enable Senators to make such comparison as will satisfy them of the necessity for a protective tariff on our lemons and that the present tariff is reasonable and just.

The information I am about to submit is not in the form of mere estimates in respect of the main items of cost and expense. It does not come alone from public reports in either the foreign country or our own, or both. As I have already said, the data was obtained in large part by personal investigation by a competent and reliable man sent to Italy for the purpose and made on the ground. I submit for the consideration of the Senate the following statement, showing such cost and expense from information gathered as I have stated, which may be relied upon as fairly correct:

The wages paid to laborers who work in the groves are as follows: Superintendent or custodian, about 56 to 77 cents per day; ordinary laborers, 39 to 58 cents; women, 19 to 34 cents; boys, 29 to 34 cents.

The wages paid to laborers who work in the packing houses are as follows: Foreman, 77 to 97 cents; women graders, 29 to 37 cents; men, 58 to 77 cents; boys, 23 to 39 cents; girls, about 23 cents per day.

The lemon groves are small, varying from a few trees to several acres. The trees are planted very close together, from 9 to 15 feet apart, making a large fruit-bearing surface. The groves yield on the average about 300 boxes per acre, the variations in commercial orchards ranging from 246 to 450 boxes.

The cost of bringing a lemon grove into bearing includes the value of the land, which may vary from $50 to $200 per acre, including water; the cost of preparing the land for planting, which is estimated by growers in the Palermo district to vary from $25 to $75 per acre; the trees, which are usually grown by the growers, but which cost $20 per hundred or less in large quantities when purchased, or $32.40 per acre of 162 trees; the cost of planting, which varies from $5 to $10 per acre. One of the best-known growers in the Palermo district estimates that it costs on the average of 1,500 lire per hectare to prepare the land, purchase and plant the trees, or an equivalent of $117.16 per acre; adding to this the cost of the land and water, a planted grove may represent an outlay of $167.16 to $317.16 per acre.

The cost of bringing the grove into bearing after it is planted varies with the method of handling young orchards. Where the land is given over entirely to the young trees, the cultural expenses equal about one-third the annual average cost of caring for a grove in full bearing, or from $10 to $30 per acre. The expense for five years would vary from $50 to $150 per acre, and at eight years from $80 to $240 per acre, making a grove of five years old cost in total, exclusive of taxes, from $217.16 to $467.16 per acre, and at 8 years old, when the trees should be in good bearing, from $247.16 to $557.16 per acre.

COST OF DOMESTIC PRODUCT AND FOREIGN IMPORTS COMPARED.

This brings us to a comparison of the cost of production here and abroad. I have submitted this data, the result of much labor and painstaking effort, to arrive at the truth, and to enable those Senators who stand upon the doctrine of difference in cost of production as the basis of fixing tariff rates to act intelligently on this question, so important, so vital to one of the greatest and most important industries in my State. I am asking no favors from any Senator. My people have no right to ask favors when it comes to making laws. What I ask for is justice and fair dealing. The men who have put millions into this industry, many of them having invested in it all they have in the world, are entitled to justice. No Member of Congress has the right to deny it to them. The lawmaker who seeks to use the reduction of the tariff on lemons for political or partisan advantage is trifling with his duty and bartering away the property rights of the people of my State.

I am not going to leave it open to anyone to say that he is not informed on the subject. There is no excuse for one dealing in glittering generalities on an important question like this when the facts are at hand. The facts that can not be disputed show that the difference in the cost of production here and abroad is so great that to deny this industry protection would mean its absolute and speedy ruin, leaving the consumers at the mercy of the foreign importers and reducing the revenues of the Government more than two millions of dollars a year. It proves more than that. It proves that the tariff now existing does nothing more than to put the home producer on an equal footing with the foreign producer in the markets of this country, if it does that much. I am presenting this question upon the facts. They must speak for themselves.

The comparative cost of production in Italy and in this country may be fairly stated as follows:

	California.	Italy (approximate).
Cultural cost per box	$1.00	$0.30
Picking and other grove expenses	.253	.14
Hauling from grove to packing house	.039	.08
Packing and loading charges	.596	.39
Total	1.888	.91

The difference in the cultural and handling costs is approximately 97.8 cents per box, not considering interest on investment or depreciation on the buildings, stock, equipment, groves, or the purchase of equipment.

COST OF TRANSPORTATION.

The cost of transportation is another important matter to be considered. I have shown that the freight rates to domestic growers to all points where their fruit comes in contact with the foreign product is 84 cents per box at the rate now in force. The net cost to the Italian importer to New York is not over 30.4 cents per package of 85 pounds, or 35.8 cents per hundredweight. The freight rate, which was recently raised to provide a rebate for the shipper to fight the tariff, according to a statement furnished by the office of the American consul at Palermo, includes a rebate of 6 cents per package to the shipper whenever the number of boxes is over 1,000, also a rebate of 4 cents since April 1, 1911, for the defense of the Italian lemon trade. The freight charges to various cities on imported lemons and the difference between the amount charged as between foreign and domestic shippers is as follows:

The freight rate per 100 pounds on imported lemons, based on the 30-cents-per-box rate, is 35.8 cents to New York; from Palermo to Pittsburgh, Pa., including the ocean and carload rates in the United States, 65.8 cents; from Palermo to Cincinnati, Ohio, or Chicago, Ill., 75.8 cents. The rate from California to these points is $1 per 100 pounds, making a difference of 64.2, 34.2, and 24.2 cents per 100 pounds in favor of the imported lemons to these cities, respectively. The difference per box in favor of the Italian lemons is to New York, 53.6 cents; to Pittsburgh, Pa., 28.1 cents; to Cincinnati, Ohio, and Chicago, Ill., 19.6 cents.

A more complete showing of the cost of transportation will be found in the following tables.

Railroad freight rates on imported oranges and lemons in the United States from five seaports to six interior points, 85 pounds per box.

From—	To—	Rates in cents per 100 pounds.
		Oranges.		Lemons.
		Carload.	Less than carload.	Carload.	Less than carload.
New York	Pittsburgh, Pa.	30	39	30	39
	Cincinnati, Ohio	40	57	40	57
	Chicago, Ill.	40	65	40	65
	Poplar Bluff, Mo.	[1] 83	[1] 128	[1] 83	[1] 128
	Shreveport, La.	75	124	75	124
	Houston, Tex.	[1] 132	[1] 223	[1] 132	[1] 223
Boston	Pittsburgh, Pa.	30	39	30	39
	Cincinnati, Ohio	41	49	38	49
	Chicago, Ill.	47	57	38	57
	Poplar Bluff, Mo.	[1] 92	[1] 121	[1] 81	[1] 121
	Shreveport, La.	75	124	75	124
	Houston, Tex.	[1] 141	[1] 216	[1] 130	[1] 216
Philadelphia	Pittsburgh, Pa.	28	31	28	31
	Cincinnati, Ohio	38	49	38	49
	Chicago, Ill.	38	57	38	57
	Poplar Bluff, Mo.	[1] 81	[1] 120	[1] 81	[1] 120
	Shreveport, La.	75	124	75	124
	Houston, Tex.	[1] 130	[1] 216	[1] 130	[1] 216
Baltimore	Pittsburgh, Pa.	27	33	27	33
	Cincinnati, Ohio	37	49	37	49
	Chicago, Ill.	37	57	37	57
	Poplar Bluff, Mo.	[1] 80	[1] 120	[1] 80	[1] 120
	Shreveport, La.	75	124	75	124
	Houston, Tex.	[1] 129	[1] 215	[1] 129	[1] 215
New Orleans	Pittsburgh, Pa.	50	90	50	90
	Cincinnati, Ohio	44	83	44	83
	Chicago, Ill.	47	90	47	90
	Poplar Bluff, Mo.	[1] 63	[1] 94	[1] 63	[1] 94
	Shreveport, La.	25	60	25	60
	Houston, Tex.	13½	21½	13½	21½

[1] Combination based on St. Louis.

According to data received from the Interstate Commerce Commission, October 11, 1911, foreign lemons are shipped from New York, Brooklyn, or Jersey City to western points in carload lots of a minimum weight of 20,000 pounds, the packages measuring 27 by 14 by 13 inches in diameter and estimated to weight 85 pounds per box. The half boxes measure 27 by 14 by 6½ inches and are estimated to weigh 45 pounds per half box.

The freight rate on lemons from California to the five points mentioned above is $1 per hundredweight in carload lots of 26,200 pounds minimum weight, or of 33,000 pounds in collapsible bunker cars, with the bunkers thrown up. The lemons are shipped at an estimated weight of 84 pounds per box.

The table following shows the rate per hundred pounds and per box on lemons in carload quantities from Italy, and from California to New York, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and Chicago, with the difference in favor of the Italian lemons:

Rates on California and Italian lemons to New York, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and Chicago.

To—	Per hundredweight.			Per box.
	Carload lots.		Difference in favor of Italy, per hundredweight.	Carload lots.		Difference in favor of Italy, per box.
	California.	Italy.[1]		California.	Italy.
New York	$1.00	$0.358	$0.642	$0.84	$0.304	$0.536
Pittsburgh	1.00	.658	.342	.84	.559	.281
Cincinnati	1.00	.758	.242	.84	.644	.196
Chicago	1.00	.758	.242	.84	.644	.196

[1] Based on rate of 30.4 cents per box of 85 pounds to New York and not including transfer charge in New York of 3 cents per box. From the 30.4-cent rate a rebate of 6 cents should be deducted on all lots of 1,000 boxes or over.

The foregoing were compiled from data from the Interstate Commerce Commission, and show the freight rates in force August 3, 1911.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. WORKS. I do.

Mr. THOMAS. I should like to ask the Senator if he has considered, or if his attention has been called to the fact, that the California growers dispose of their product in the central part of the country, in the State of Colorado, for example, by charging the consumer the New York price plus the rate of the freight from the seaboard to the interior points? There seems to me to be a protective tariff to-day in the shape of a railroad rate that is largely prohibitive of any competition from Sicily, in so far as it affects the interior of the country, where an enormous amount of the lemon crop is consumed, we being entirely at the mercy of those freight rates, and therefore compelled to pay them. I should like to ask the Senator whether that is not a very considerable protection in itself as to a very large portion of this crop, since it is taken advantage of and added to the cost price to the consumer?

Mr. WORKS. No, Mr. President; though it may exist, I do not know of any such custom as that to which the Senator refers. I am not pretending to dispute what he says about it, because I am not informed on the subject; but if it should be true, it is no protection. The competition between California and the Italian growers is almost entirely in the eastern market. I imagine that very few Italian lemons will be found in Denver, for example.

Mr. THOMAS. That is true, Mr. President, and for the reason which I gave. There is no competition between the California lemon grower and the Italian lemon grower in the interior of the country, because the freight rate is prohibitive, and because it is prohibitive it is added by the California lemon grower to the cost of his product to the consumer.

Mr. WORKS. I do not understand that to be so, Mr. President; but if it be so, of course the farther the Italian shipper has to carry his fruit west the greater the freight rate he has to pay. I have been comparing the eastern market and Illinois, for example, for the purpose of showing the difference. The farther they go into the interior of this country, of course the greater the freight rate they must pay in order to compete with the California product.

WAGES.

The matter of wages is an important one in determining what is a just measure of protection to our home industry. Mr. Powell, before referred to, has made a careful and systematic investigation of the wages paid in Italy, and has tabulated the result of his investigation.

Under the heading of "Wages paid in the lemon districts in Italy," he says:

The wage of the different kinds of labor in the Italian groves depends on the section, the conditions under which it is employed, and the class of work. In a general way most of the labor is paid by the day, sometimes as a straight wage, at others with a lower wage and with part payment in wine, bread, or other privileges.

The laborers are composed of men, women, and children. The heavy work in the groves is done by men, the wages varying from 40 to 55 cents per day. The picking of the fruit, carrying it to the sheds, and stemming it may be done by men, women, or by children. The preliminary wrapping and grading of the fruit in the groves is usually done by women and the packing in the groves by men. In the packing houses the heavy work is done by men, but the sorting and wrapping is done by women and children.

According to Dr. Lorenzoni (loc. cit.) 30 per cent of the agricultural day laborers in some of the coast districts of Sicily is composed of women, and in some sections 30 per cent is made up of boys.

The custodians in charge of the groves are paid by the day, the month, or the year, either in cash or part in cash and part in privileges, such as house rent, garden, gun license, wine, wheat, etc.

As a general rule wages are higher on the north coast of Sicily than on the coast from Messina to Syracuse, the grove laborers in the former region receiving about 50 cents per day as compared with 40 on the latter coast.

According to a statement furnished the writer by Dr. Lorenzoni in April, 1911, the average wage of the ordinary men laborers in the groves is 2½ lire (48½ cents) per day. The men fruit pickers are paid 20 centimes per day more, or about 52 cents. In the packing houses the men are paid from 3 to 3½ lire (57.9 to 67.55 cents) per day; the women, on the average, from 1 to 1.20 lire (19.3 to 23.16 cents) per day, and the boys about the same wage as the women.

The wage question was investigated by the writer in the district in the Province of Palermo and along the Messina-Catania coast in the spring of 1911.

The table following shows the range in wages found in the grove labor in Sicily with a comparison of the wages paid in the lemon groves of California at the same period:

Wages paid to laborers working in lemon groves in California and in Italy, 1911.

[Unless otherwise stated, all labor paid by the day.]

	California.	Italy.
General superintendent	$75 to $150 per month
Custodian or superintendent		3 lire to 4 lire with privileges ($0.579–$0.772).
Foremen	$55 to $150 per month
Subforeman	$50 to $100 per month
Teamsters	$56.50 to $65 per month
Irrigators	$1.80 to $2.25
Ordinary laborers		2 to 3 lire ($0.386–$0.579).
Pruning foreman	$2 to $4.50
Pruners	$1.75 to $3	2.50 to 4 lire ($0.48½–$0.772).
Picking foreman	$2.25 to $3.50
Pickers	$1.50 to $2.50	2.40 to 3 lire ($0.463+–$0.579).
Carriers:
Men		2.40 to 3 lire ($0.463+–$0.579).
Boys		1.50 to 1.75 lire ($0.29–$0.338).
Stemmers (women)		Do.
Boy helpers		Do.
Girl helpers		1 to 1.50 lire ($0.193–$0.29).
Women sorters or other labor		1 to 1.75 lire ($0.193–$0.338).
Sprayers	$2 to $3
Fumigators	$2.10 per day to 50 cents per hour.
Other grove labor	$1.75 to $2.50

The table following shows the range in wages found in the labor in the packing houses in Sicily with a comparison of the wages paid in the packing houses in California at the same period:

Wages paid to laborers working in the lemon-packing houses in California and in Italy, 1911.

[Unless otherwise stated, wages are per day.]

	California.	Italy.
Manager	$500 to $3,000 per year
Foremen	$75 to $150 per month	4 to 5 lire ($0.772–$0.965).
Subforemen	$60 to $85 per month
Forewomen		2 lire ($0.386).
Graders:
Men	$1.75 to $3
Women		1.50 lire ($0.29).
Wrappers (women)		Do.
Lemon packers	4 to 8 cents per box; $2 to $4.50 per day.	3.50 to 4 lire ($0.676–$0.772).
Pressmen	$2 to $3.15	Do.
Helper to pressman		2 lire ($0.386).
Car loaders	$2 to $3.15
Truckmen	$1.75 to $3
Porter to carry boxes		3 lire ($0.579).
Box makers	$2 to $4.50	4 lire ($0.772).
Other packing-house labor.	$1.75 to $3
Boy helpers		1.20 to 2 lire ($0.232 to $0.386).
Girl helpers		1.20 lire ($0.232).
Clerical help	$50 to $100 per month	$20 to $30 per month.

The difference in the cost of labor in this country and abroad is here clearly shown and is very marked. This difference alone should establish the right of the lemon growers of this country to a protective tariff.

But I desire to follow this subject of expense to the foreign grower still further covering the cultural cost, cost of picking, of hauling the fruit to the packing house, and the final packing for export. I again quote from Mr. Powell:

The cultural costs on the better groves appear to vary from $65 to $100 per acre and the yields from 250 to 350 boxes per acre, making the cost per box vary from $0.186 to $0.40 per box. In the Alcantara Valley the cost varied from $0.15 to $0.208 per box; in the Province of Messina, according to the International Institute of Agriculture, from $0.194 to $0.222 per box; in Palermo, Messina, Syracuse, and Catania, according to the Italian minister of agriculture, from $0.209 to $0.322 per box. According to Dr. Cheney the cost per box based on one of the highest authorities is $0.104, and according to Marasa, whose statement was prepared at the request of the importers of lemons in New York, to be used in the effort to reduce the duty on lemons, $0.414 without taxes and $0.457 with taxes.

The average cost of the cultural expenses, including taxes, would probably not exceed $0.30 per box, while it might reach 40 to 45 cents per box as an average maximum cost. This means that it costs on the average $90 per acre to produce 300 boxes of lemons, which the foregoing data show to be conservatively stated.

THE COST OF PICKING.

There is not a wide variation in the cost of picking, stemming, or packing the fruit in a preliminary way in the orchards. A man or woman will pick about 5,000 to 7,000 lemons per day for export, or the equivalent of 15 to 20 packed boxes. He may pick 8,000 to 10,000 for by-products. In a grove in the Palermo district, where the operations were studied as representative of the district, the following labor picked, stemmed, graded, and packed on the average 40 boxes daily:

2 pickers at 3 lire per day, who also carried the fruit to the packing house after stemming	6.00
1 stemmer at 3 lire per day	3.00
2 boys to carry baskets to stemmer and help stem the fruit at 1½ lire per day	3.00
2 women to grade and wrap fruit at 1½ lire per day	3.00
2 men to pack and nail boxes at 4 lire per day	8.00
1 boy helper in packing house at 2½ lire per day	2.50
Total lire (=$4.92)	25.50

The cost per box in this grove was 12.3 cents; 5.8 cents for picking, stemming, and delivering to packing house and 6.5 cents for the grading, wrapping, and placing in the box. A large proportion of the fruit that is delivered to the packing house is unwrapped. In the groves on the level land the cost of picking, sorting, and packing is often cut down 2 cents a box. In groves where the conditions of labor are still more difficult the cost may be raised a cent or two per box above the figures given.

Marasa gives the total cost of picking, stemming, and storing at 11 cents and the sorting, wrapping, and placing in the box at 5 cents, a total of 16 cents. In many of the groves the fruit is packed under the trees and there is no delivery of the fruit to the grove packing houses

WAGES PAID IN PICKING THE FRUIT.

A prominent business man and lemon grower furnishes the following data showing the wages paid to the different people concerned in the picking of the fruit in the Palermo district in May, 1911:

Foreman, 5 lire per day; pickers (men), 2.40 to 3 lire; women and boys, 1.50 to 2 lire; men to carry fruit to packing house, 2.40 to 3 lire; carters to haul the fruit to Palermo, 3 lire per load of 20 boxes, or 2.9 cents per box for distances from 7 to 19 kilometers (4.35 to 11.8 miles).

COST OF HAULING FRUIT TO PACKING HOUSE.

The cost of hauling the fruit to the packing house in Palermo varies with the distance and the method of transporting. In a few groves located in the foothills in the Monreale district, the lemons are packed out to the wagon road on mule back at a cost of about 3 cents per box per mile. The average haul will not equal a mile and only a small proportion of the crop is handled in this manner.

According to data furnished by Mr. De Soto, the cost of hauling by cart to Palermo, distances of 5 kilometers (3.10 miles) varies from 3 to 4 cents per box; 10 kilometers (6.21 miles), 5 to 6.75 cents. On trips of this distance a cart is loaded with 20 to 24 boxes. From Carini to Palermo, a distance of 16 to 18 miles, the cost is about 13 cents per box; from Bagheria, about 11 miles distant, 6 to 8 cents per box; from Montelepre, 11 to 12 miles distant, 9 to 10 cents per box. On the long trips a cart is loaded with 12 to 16 boxes. The cost of delivery by cart to Palermo varies from 3 cents per box, with a possible average of 6 to 8 cents per box.

The carload rate from Santa Christine Gela on the Messina line to Palermo is 80 lire ($15.44) per car of 10,000 to 11,000 kilos (22,046 to 24,251 pounds).

A box of lemons in Italy is estimated at 42 kilos (92.6 pounds), making the rate per box 5.9 to 6.5 cents per box. The cost of unloading the car in Palermo varies from 2 to 3 lire (38.6 to 57.9 cents), or at the rate of about one-sixth of a cent per box. The cost of hauling from the car to the packing house in Palermo varies from eight-tenths of a cent to 1 cent per box, making a total cost of delivery of about 6.8 to 7.6 cents per box.

The cost of delivering the fruit to the packing house varies from 3 to 13 cents where the fruit is hauled out of the grove on mule back, making an average cost of 6 to 8 cents per box.

THE PACKING OF THE FRUIT FOR EXPORT.

The final packing of the fruit is done in the packing houses of the exporters in Palermo or other ports of export. The packing houses are located in the business part of the cities near the water front. The house is frequently the ground floor of a dwelling; or the box making and repairing, the receiving, and shipping rooms, and the packing room may occupy the entire structure. There is little equipment in an Italian packing house. All the labor is performed by hand and from one-half to three-fourths of the labor is performed by women and children. The only equipment of note is the rows of benches into which the fruit is graded and the baskets used in grading and carrying the fruit in the packing house. The packing operation consists in unpacking the fruit as it comes from the groves, regrading, wrapping, packing the lemons into boxes and nailing on the covers and hoops. The packed boxes are then carted to the wharf, lightered in small boats to the steamer which is anchored a short distance away, and are loaded in the vessel that carries them to their destination.

In the packing operations, the labor is usually divided into crews, consisting of 1 foreman, 1 woman sorter, 3 women wrappers, 1 boy to hand the fruit to 1 man packer, and 1 nailer to every 4 packers.

In one large house where the operations were studied in detail the wages paid in May, 1911, were: Women, 1 lira each; boys, 2 lire; packers, 4 lire; nailer, 3½ lire; and foreman, 4 lire per day.

The wages paid to the different kinds of packing-house labor in Palermo, 1911, is as follows:

	Per day.
Foreman	$0.80 to $1.00
Men packers	.70 to .75
Box nailers	.70 to .80
Porter to carry fruit to nailer, etc	.60 to .70
Women graders and wrappers	.20 to .25
Boy helpers	.20 to .40

The working hours are from 7 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 12 noon to 5 p. m.

THE COST OF PACKING THE FRUIT FOR EXPORT.

During 1911 the exporters in Palermo invoiced the costs of the packing operations about as follows: Empty boxes of American sides, tops, and bottoms, 80 centimes (15.4 cents); foreign-made boxes, 85 centimes (16.4 cents); the cost of packing, which includes labor of all kinds, nails, paper, tinsel, etc., from 50 to 60 centimes (9.65 to 11.58 cents), the usual invoice being about 55 centimes (10.6 cents); the transportation from the packing house to the lighter, from 0.25 to 0.45 lira (4.8 to 8.7 cents); and the cost of lightering, from 0.04 to 0.32 lira (8 mills to 6.2 cents), the usual lighterage charge being 0.10 lira (1.9 cents). According to the invoices of the exporters, the average cost of the packing-house expenses from the time the fruit reaches the packing house till it is placed on the steamer is about 35 cents per box. Some of the exporters add insurance to the invoice, amounting to about 0.5 centime (9.6 mills). There is a charge also of 13 lire per invoice ($2.51) made by the consular agency, which adds from a small fraction of a cent to a cent and a half or more per box. Including the consular invoice, the insurance, and the packing and transportation to the steamer, the cost varies from 36 to 42 cents per box, with an occasional higher cost for fruit handled under unusual conditions. All of these costs are matters of official record, the consular invoice on lemons being a statement of the unit value that enters into a shipment of lemons.

After this segregation of the different items of expense incurred in the production of the fruit and its preparation for shipment and loading on steamer, the following table shows the total cost by arriving, as in case of the domestic grower, at a fair average of such expenses.

THE TOTAL COST OF PRODUCING AND HANDLING LEMONS IN ITALY.

From the foregoing data it will be seen that the cost of producing lemons in Italy may vary approximately, as follows:

	Cost.	Average.
Cultural cost, per box	$0.15 -$0.45	$0.30
Picking, stemming, and delivering to packing house	.058- .11	.084
Preliminary grading and packing in grove	.05 - .065	.057
Delivery from grove to packing house at point of shipment	.03 - .13	.08
	.36 - .42	.39
Packing house charges, loading on steamer	.648- 1.175	.911

COMPARISON OF TOTAL COST.

This leaves us only to compare the cost of the foreign grower with that of the producer in this country to arrive at the difference in cost here and abroad. The comparative cost is as follows:

	Italy.	California.
Cultural cost, per box	$0.30	$1.00
Picking, stemming, and delivering to packing house in grove	.084	.253
Preliminary grading and packing in grove	.057	.....
Delivery from grove to packing house at point of shipment	.08	.039
Packing-house charges and loading for shipment	.39	.596
Total	.911	1.888
Freight to New York	.30	.84
Total cost of production and freight	1.211	2.728
Difference in cost of production	.....	.978
Difference in cost of freight	.....	.54
Total difference in favor of Italian producer	.....	1.518

This shows that it costs the California grower $1 more to grow a box of lemons and prepare it for shipment than it costs a grower in Italy. If we add to this the difference in the freight rate of 84 cents a box that our people must pay with that of 30 cents net that is paid by the importer of lemons from Italy, we have a difference of $1.52 as the cost of production and freight on lemons to New York in favor of the foreign producer.

It may be relied upon that this is a fair showing of the actual difference in the cost of these competing lemon growers. It can not be said that it is accurate or exact, for that is impossible. But it is sufficient to show that no reduction can be made in the present tariff without sacrificing the interests of our own growers.

Mr. President, so far I have considered only the interests of the producers. The rights and interests of the consumers have not yet been touched, nor have I considered the effect of the present tariff upon the revenues of the Government. Leaving those out of the question for the present, no one can deny that as between the foreign and domestic growers the tariff now in force is none too high to protect our own growers and put them on an equality with their foreign competitors. Therefore, there can be but two reasons advanced, if we are to leave politics out of the controversy, for reducing the tariff: One is that the reduction will benefit the consumer by reducing the price of lemons; the other, that such reduction will increase the revenue of the Government. Of course the proposition to put lemons on the free list leaves the latter out of consideration and can appeal only to the believer in free trade. I shall proceed to show that neither of these claims is founded on the facts as they exist, but that experience under the present and previous tariff laws shows that the higher tariff has not increased the price of lemons to the consumer, and that it has increased and not diminished the revenues of the Government. The best and most practical way to disprove the claim that the increase in the tariff rate in 1908 increased the price to the consumers is to take the actual figures showing the prices at which lemons have been selling at retail for several years past.

I submit for this purpose tables of prices, weekly, for the years 1905 to 1911, inclusive, in New York, Baltimore, Washington, Boston, Kansas City, and Minneapolis:

Retail prices per dozen lemons.

NEW YORK CITY, 1904 TO SEPTEMBER, 1911.

[From files New York Evening Sun.]

Month.	Week of year.	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
January	1	.....	20–25	.....	35	25	40–50	.....	25–40
	2	.....	20	25	30	25	50	.....	25–40
	3	.....	20	.....	30	25	35	.....	25–40
	4	.....	20	.....	30	25	35	.....	25–40
February	5	.....	20	.....	30	25	35	.....	25–40
	6	.....	20	15–25	30	25	35	.....	20–40
	7	.....	.....	15–25	30	25	35	.....	25–40
	8	.....	20–25	15–25	30	25	35	.....	25–40
March	9	20	25	15–25	30	25	35	.....	25–40
	10	20	25	15–25	30	25	25	.....	25–40
	11	20	25	15–25	25	25	25	.....	25–40
	12	25	25	15–25	25	25	25	.....	20–40
	13	20	25	15–25	25	25	25	.....	20–25
April	14	20	25	15–25	25	25	20	.....	20–25
	15	20	25	.....	25	25	20	.....	20–25
	16	20	25	.....	25	25	20	.....	20–25
	17	20	20–25	15–25	25	25	20	.....	20–30

Retail prices per dozen lemons—Continued.

NEW YORK CITY, 1904 TO SEPTEMBER, 1911—continued.

Month.	Week of year.	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
May	18	20	20	15–25	25	25	20	.....	20–30
	19	.....	20	25	.....	25	12–20	.....	20–30
	20	20	20	25	25	25	12–20	.....	20–30
	21	20	20	25	.....	25	12–20	.....	25–35
June	22	20	20	25	25	25	12–20	.....	35
	23	20	20	25	25	25	20	.....	35
	24	20	20	25	20	25	20	.....	35
	25	20	20	25	20	25	20	.....	35
	26	20–25	20	25	25	25	.....	.....	35
July	27	25	25	25	25	25	20	.....	25–35
	28	20	25	25	25	25	20	.....	25
	29	20	25–30	25	25	25	20	.....	25
	30	20	30	25	25–30	25	20	.....	25
August	31	20	30	30	30	25	20	.....	25
	32	20	30	30	30	25	20	.....	25
	33	20	30	30	20–30	25	20	.....	25
	34	20	30	30	20–30	25	20	.....	25
	35	20	30	30	20–30	25	20	20	25
September	36	20	30	30	25–35	25	20	20	25
	37	20	30	35	25–35	25	20	20–30	.....
	38	20	30	35	.....	.....	.....	30	.....
	39	20	30	35	25–35	25	.....	30	.....
October	40	20	30	30–40	25–35	25	.....	30	.....
	41	20	30	40	25–35	25	.....	30	.....
	42	20	30	30–40	25	25	.....	30	.....
	43	25	30	30–35	25	25	.....	30–40	.....
November	44	20–25	.....	30–40	25	25	.....	30–40	.....
	45	.....	35	30–40	25	25	.....	30–40	.....
	46	20–25	35	35	25	25	.....	30–40	.....
	47	25	30	35	25	25	.....	30–40	.....
	48	25	30	35	25	25	.....	30–40	.....
December	49	25	.....	35	25	25–40	.....	30–40	.....
	50	25	.....	35	.....	40	.....	30–50	.....
	51	25	.....	35	25	40	.....	30–50	.....
	52	25	25	35	25	40	.....	25–50	.....

NEW YORK CITY, JAN. 1, 1904, TO APRIL, 1911, INCLUSIVE.

[From data furnished by a New York retail grocer.]

Month.	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
January	13	12	12	18	13	15	16	13
February	12	11	11	17	11	14	13	16
March	15	12½	19	16	13	13½	14½	15
April	13	12	15	22	11	.....	15	16
May	12	13	20	21	12	12	.....	.....
June	14	15	21	28	16	19	14	.....
July	16	25	20	.....	15	26	26	.....
August	18	36	19	11	15	14	24	.....
September	19½	.....	32	18	18	19	27	.....
October	24	38	47	19	24	15½	27	.....
November	17	24	26	19	19	22	27	.....
December	14	14	22	13	15	21	18	.....

Wholesale price and size per box furnished by grocer, to which 20 per cent was added to obtain retail price.

BALTIMORE, MD., JAN. 1, 1905, TO MAY 20, 1911.

[From city newspapers.]

Month.	Week of year.	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
January	1– 7	12–15	15–25	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	8–14	12–15	10–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	15–21	12–15	10–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	22–28	12–15	10–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	29–31	.....	.....	.....	15–20	15–20	.....	.....
February	2– 7	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	8–14	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	5–21	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
	22–28	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	20–25	15–20
March	1– 6	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20
	7–13	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20
	14–20	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20
	21–27	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20
	28–31	.....	10–15	15–20	.....	.....	.....	.....
April	1– 7	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20
	8–14	12–15	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20	15–20
	15–21	12–15	10–15	15–20	10–15	15–20	15–20	15–20
	22–28	10–12	10–15	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	15–20
	29–30	10–12	.....	.....	.....	.....	15–20	15–20
May	1– 7	10–12	10–15	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	15–20
	8–14	10–12	10–15	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	15–20
	15–21	10–12	10–15	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	15–20
	22–28	10–12	15–20	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	.....
	29–31	.....	.....	.....	15–20	10–15	.....	.....
June	1– 7	12–15	15–20	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	.....
	8–14	12–15	15–20	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	.....
	15–21	12–15	15–20	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	.....
	22–28	18–20	15–20	20–25	15–20	10–15	15–20	.....
	29–30	.....	15–20	20–25	.....	.....	.....	.....
July	1– 7	18–20	15–20	20–25	15–20	10–15	20–25	.....
	8–14	18–20	15–20	20–25	15–20	20–25	20–25	.....
	15–21	18–20	15–20	20–25	15–20	20–25	20–25	.....
	22–28	18–20	15–20	20–25	10–15	20–25	20–25	.....
	29–31	18–20	.....	.....	.....	20–25	20–25	.....

Retail prices per dozen lemons—Continued.

BALTIMORE, MD., JAN. 1, 1905, TO MAY 20, 1911—continued.

Month.	Week.	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
August	2- 7	18-20	15-20	20-25	10-15	20-25	20-25	.....
	8-14	18-20	15-20	20-25	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	15-21	18-20	15-20	20-25	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	22-28	18-20	15-20	20-25	10-15	15-20	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	20-25	10-15	.....	20-25	.....
September	1- 7	18-20	15-20	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	8-14	18-20	20-30	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	15-21	20-40	30-40	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	22-28	20-30	30-40	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	29-30	20-30	30-40	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
October	1- 7	20-30	30-40	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	8-14	20-30	30-40	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	15-21	20-30	30-40	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	22-28	20-30	30-40	15-20	10-15	15-20	20-25	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	20-25	15-20	20-25	.....
November	1- 6	20-30	30-40	15-20	20-25	15-20	20-25	.....
	7-13	20-30	30-40	15-20	20-25	15-20	20-25	.....
	14-20	20-30	30-40	15-20	20-25	15-20	20-25	.....
	21-27	20-30	30-40	15-20	15-20	20-25	20-25	.....
	28-30	.....	.....	15-20	.....	.....	.....	.....
December	1- 7	20-30	30-40	15-20	15-20	20-25	20-25	.....
	8-14	20-30	30-40	15-20	15-20	20-25	20-25	.....
	15-21	20-25	30-40	15-20	15-20	20-25	15-20	.....
	22-28	20-25	30-40	15-20	15-20	.....	15-20	.....
	29-31	20-25	30-40	.....	.....	.....	15-20	.....

WASHINGTON, D. C., JAN. 1, 1905, TO NOVEMBER, 1910.

[From city newspapers.]

Month.	Week.	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
January	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	25	.....	20	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
February	2- 7	.....	.....	25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	20-25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	16	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	25	.....	.....	.....	.....
March	1- 6	.....	.....	25	.....	.....	16	.....
	7-13	.....	.....	25	.....	17-25	17	.....
	14-20	.....	.....	20	.....	.....	17	.....
	21-27	.....	.....	20-25	.....	.....	17-20	.....
	28-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	17	.....
April	1- 7	.....	.....	25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	25	16	.....	16	.....
	15-21	.....	18	25	.....	15	18	.....
	22-28	.....	18	25	16	.....	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	18	.....	.....
May	1- 7	.....	.....	25	15	17-20	15	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	25	15	.....	18	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	25	15	.....	15	.....
	22-28	.....	22	25	17	22	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	25	.....	.....	.....	.....
June	1- 7	.....	22	25	17	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	22	25	17	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	20-25	25	17-20	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	20-25	16	18	.....	17	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
July	1- 7	.....	20	25	.....	.....	17	.....
	8-14	.....	20-25	25	.....	.....	20	.....
	15-21	.....	20-25	25	.....	.....	23	.....
	22-28	.....	20-25	20-30	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
August	2- 7	.....	20-25	.....	15-18	.....	20	.....
	8-14	.....	20	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	15-25	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	15-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
September	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	10-30	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	10-30	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
October	1- 7	.....	.....	25-30	.....	20	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	20-25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	35	20-25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	30-35	20-25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
November	1- 6	.....	30	25	.....	.....	.....	.....
	7-13	.....	.....	25	35	.....	.....	.....
	14-20	.....	25-30	.....	15	.....	22	.....
	21-27	.....	25-30	.....	25-30	.....	.....	.....
	28-30	.....	25-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
December	1- 7	.....	23	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	25	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	20	25	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	24	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	18	.....	.....	.....

BUFFALO, N. Y., JAN. 1, 1905, TO DECEMBER, 1909.

[Principally from newspapers.]

Month.	Week.
January	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	25
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	25
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	25
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	25
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
February	2- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	25
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	25
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	25
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	25

Retail prices per dozen lemons—Continued.

BUFFALO, N. Y., JAN. 1, 1905, TO DECEMBER, 1909—continued.

Month.	Week.	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
March	1- 6	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	25
	7-13	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25	25
	14-20	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	20	25
	21-27	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	20	25
	28-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
April	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	25
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	25
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	30
May	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	21-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
June	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
July	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	35	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	.....	.....
August	2- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
September	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	20	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	25	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
October	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
November	1- 6	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	7-13	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	14-20	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	21-27	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	28-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
December	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	.....	30	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

BOSTON, MASS., JAN. 5, 1905, TO MAY 12, 1911.

Month.	Week.
January	1- 7	15-25	20-30	25-35	20-30	25-30	20-35	20-30
	8-14	25	15-30	20-35	20-30	25-30	20-35	20-35
	15-21	20-25	20-30	25-35	15-25	20-30	25-35	20-30
	22-28	20-30	20-30	20-35	20-30	20-30	25-35	20-30
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	15-30	20-30	.....
February	2- 7	20-30	20-30	20-35	15-30	20-30	25-35	20-30
	8-14	25	25	20-30	20-30	20-30	25-35	20-35
	15-21	20-35	20-30	.....	10-25	20-30	20-30	20-35
	22-28	20-25	20-30	.....	10-25	20-30	20-30	20-35
March	1- 6	25	20-30	20-30	20-25	20-30	20-35	20-35
	7-13	20-25	20-30	20-30	20-25	20-30	20-35	20-35
	14-20	20-25	20-25	20-30	15-25	20-30	20-35	20-30
	21-27	20-25	30	20-30	15-25	20-25	20-35	20-30
	28-31	15	20-30	15-25	.....	.....	.....	20-30
April	1- 7	15-25	20-30	20-30	20-30	20-30	20-30	20-35
	8-14	15-25	20-30	15-25	20-30	20-30	20-30	20-35
	15-21	15-25	25-30	.....	20-30	20-30	20-25	20-35
	22-28	15-25	25-30	10-25	15-25	20-30	20-25	20-35
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	20-25	20-25	.....
May	1- 7	15-25	20-25	10-20	15-25	20-25	20-25	20-35
	8-14	15-25	20-25	25-25	10-25	15-20	20-25	20-35
	15-21	10-25	20-30	20-25	10-20	15-25	20-25	.....
	22-28	15-25	20-30	20-25	15-20	20	20-25	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	20-25	15-20	.....	.....	.....
June	1- 7	20-30	20-30	20-30	20-30	20-25	20-25	.....
	8-14	15-25	25-30	20-25	20-30	15-20	20-25	.....
	15-21	15-20	20-30	20-25	20-30	20	.....	.....
	22-28	15-25	20-30	20-25	20-25	20-30	25-40	.....
	29-30	10-20	25-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
July	1- 7	10-20	25-30	20-25	20-25	30-40	30-40	.....
	8-14	10-20	20-30	20-25	25-30	30-40	35-45	.....
	15-21	10-20	20-25	15-25	25-30	30-40	30-40	.....
	22-28	25-35	20-25	15-25	20-30	40	30-40	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	25-30	30-40	30-40	.....
August	2- 7	25-30	20-30	25-30	20-30	25-35	30-40	.....
	8-14	35	20-30	25-30	20-30	25-35	30-40	.....
	15-21	40	25-30	25-30	20-30	25-35	20-40	.....
	22-28	35	25-30	25-30	25-30	30-40	20-35	.....
	29-31	.....	35	25-30	.....	.....	.....	.....
September	1- 7	30-35	35	30-35	25-30	20-30	20-35	.....
	8-14	30-35	30	25-30	25-30	20-30	25-35	.....
	15-21	30	30	.....	20-30	20-35	20-35	.....
	22-28	30-40	25-40	25	25-30	25-35	20-35	.....
	29-30	30	.....	25	.....	.....	20-35	.....
October	1- 7	30	25-40	30	25-30	20-25	25-35	.....
	8-14	25-35	25-40	30	30-30	20-30	25-35	.....
	15-21	20-30	35-50	25-30	25-30	20-25	25-40	.....
	22-28	20-30	25-50	25-30	25-30	20-30	25-50	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	15-30	20-30	.....	.....

Retail prices per dozen lemons—Continued.

BOSTON, MASS., JAN. 5, 1905, TO MAY 12, 1911—continued.

Month.	Week.	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
November	1- 6	30	20-40	25-30	20-30	25-35	30-50	.....
	7-13	30	20-40	20-35	20-30	25-35	25-50	.....
	14-20	25-30	25-50	20-30	15-25	35-50	25-40	.....
	21-27	25-30	10-25	20-25	15-25	35-50	25-40	.....
	28	.....	20-25	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
December	1- 7	25-30	25-40	20	15-20	35-50	25-35	.....
	8-14	25-30	25-40	20-30	20-30	35-50	25-35	.....
	15-21	25-30	25-40	20-30	15-30	35-40	25-35	.....
	22-28	25-30	10-20	20-30	15-25	30-40	20-35	.....
	29-31	25-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	20-35	.....

KANSAS CITY, MO., JAN. 1, 1905, TO MAY 14, 1911.

[From city newspapers.]

Month.	Week.
January	1- 7	.....	.....	15	15	15	.....	15
	8-14	.....	10	15	10	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	15	15	10	10	.....	15
	22-28	.....	.....	15	15	.....	.....	10
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
February	2- 7	.....	10	.....	10	10	13	15
	8-14	.....	9	.....	15	10	.....	15
	15-21	.....	10	.....	8	10	.....	15
	22-28	.....	10	.....	.....	10	.....	15
March	1- 6	.....	12	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	7-13	.....	12	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	14-20	.....	12	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	21-27	.....	12	20	10	10	13	.....
	28-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
April	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	.....	10	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	18	.....	10	10	15
	15-21	.....	10	18	10	10	.....	.....
	22-28	12	10	18	10	10	.....	15
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
May	1- 7	12	.....	18	10	10	.....	.....
	8-14	12	.....	18	10	10	.....	.....
	15-21	10	12	20	10	10	.....	.....
	22-28	10	15	20	10	10	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
June	1- 7	10	18	18	12	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	10	18	18	10	10	.....	.....
	15-21	10	18	18	12	10	17	.....
	22-28	15	18	18	12	12	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
July	1- 7	12	20	17	12	20	23	.....
	8-14	15	20	18	12	20	23	.....
	15-21	15	20	18	12	18	23	.....
	22-28	18	20	18	12	20	20	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
August	2- 7	18	15	18	12	12	20	.....
	8-14	20	15	18	15	13	20	.....
	15-21	20	23	.....	15	12	20	.....
	22-28	20	20	20	15	13	13	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
September	1- 7	20	25	25	12	12	10	.....
	8-14	20	23	13	15	13	10	.....
	15-21	25	25	.....	12	12	10	.....
	22-28	20	15	.....	12	12	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
October	1- 7	.....	.....	20	12	12	.....	.....
	8-14	20	.....	20	12	13	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
November	1- 6	.....	17	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	7-13	.....	15	.....	10	12	.....	.....
	14-20	.....	15	13	10	12	.....	.....
	21-27	.....	15	.....	10	10	.....	.....
	28-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
December	1- 7	.....	13	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	15	.....	.....	10	15	.....
	15-21	.....	.....	.....	10	17	.....	.....
	22-28	15	15	18	10	15	15	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., JAN. 1, 1905, TO DECEMBER, 1910.

January	1- 7	14	15	15	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	12	12½-13	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	12	12	15	.....	14	.....	.....
	22-28	13	10	.....	12	.....	16	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	15	.....	.....
February	2- 7	.....	12	12-15	12-15	.....	18	.....
	8-14	10-13	15	12-18	14	14	15	.....
	15-21	.....	10	12	10-15	14	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	13	14	15	.....	17	.....
March	1- 6	12	11	.....	12-15	.....	17-19	.....
	7-13	.....	.....	12	10-18	12	15	.....
	14-20	10	.....	16	12-15	12	15	.....
	21-27	12	15	12	15-20	.....	15	.....
	28-31	.....	.....	12-15	.....	.....	.....	.....
April	1- 7	10-24	.....	.....	10-15	12	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	15	13	8-15	12-14	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	13	.....	10-15	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	12	.....	8-16	12-15	17	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	12	15-17	.....
May	1- 7	.....	15	.....	15-18	.....	15-18	.....
	8-14	.....	15	.....	15	12	.....	.....
	15-21	10	14-15	.....	10-15	12	15-20	.....
	22-28	10	15-18	16	12-15	12	15-18	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	12-20	.....	.....	.....

Retail prices per dozen lemons—Continued.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., JAN. 1, 1905, TO DECEMBER, 1910—continued.

Month.	Week.	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911
		Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.	Cents.
June	1- 7	10	.....	18	12-18	12-16	15	.....
	8-14	10	17-20	.....	.....	17	.....	.....
	15-21	18	.....	16	12-20	.....	18-25	.....
	22-28	17	.....	.....	15-20	12-15	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
July	1- 7	17	.....	20-22	.....	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	15-77	.....	18-30	15-20	.....	25-35	.....
	15-21	27-33	.....	.....	15-20	20	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	18	.....	15-20	.....	20-40	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	18-20	20-25	.....	.....
August	2- 7	24-31	15-18	18-25	15-18	18-22	20-30	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	15-20	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	18	.....	.....	20-22	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	18-20	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	20-25	.....	.....	.....	.....
September	1- 7	.....	.....	.....	14-20	15-20	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	18-20	.....	10-20	.....	.....
	15-21	.....	25	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
October	1- 7	22-25	.....	.....	14-16	.....	.....	.....
	8-14	.....	.....	.....	.....	18-20	.....	.....
	15-21	20-23	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	22-28	22	.....	.....	12-17	14-20	.....	.....
	29-31	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
November	1- 6	19-20	.....	.....	.....	12-17	.....	.....
	7-13	20	10-24	20	.....	.....	25	.....
	14-20	18-20	20-25	20	12	.....	.....	.....
	21-27	10	20	.....	15	.....	20	.....
	28-30	.....	18	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
December	1- 7	10	15	18	15	12	10-20	.....
	8-14	15-18	.....	.....	14	.....	.....	.....
	15-21	10-15	.....	20	15	.....	18	.....
	22-28	10	15	10	.....	.....	.....	.....
	29-31	10-12	.....	.....	.....	.....	14-17	.....

I call attention also to another table touching this question, namely, one showing the wholesale price of Italian lemons in New York each month of the years 1909 to 1912, as follows:

Average wholesale price of all Italian lemons sold in New York City per month, 1909 to 1912.

	Per box.	Per dozen.
1909.		Cents.
April	$2.05	7.45
May	1.79	6.54
June	2.74	10
July	3.26	11.85
August	2.13	7.75
September	2.62	9.53
October	3.62	13.17
November	3.76	13.67
December	3.69	13.42
1910.
January	3.25	11.82
February	2.41	8.76
March	2.82	10.26
April	2.96	10.77
May	2.34	8.51
June	3.37	12.26
July	4.22	15.35
August	3.67	13.35
September	4.30	15.64
October	4.78	17.38
November	3.13	11.38
December	2.42	8.80
1911.
January	2.55	9.27
February	3.78	10.12
March	2.44	8.87
April	2.77	10.07
May	3.86	14.06
June	3.74	13.60
July	3.55	12.91
August	2.60	9.46
September	3.26	11.8
October	3.68	13.4
November	2.52	9.2
December	2.51	9.2
1912.
January	3.43	12.5
February	3.45	12.5
March	2.52	9.2
April	2.48	9.0
May	2.64	9.6
June	2.84	10.3
July	2.72	9.9
August	4.02	14.6
September	6.33	23.0
October	3.52	12.8
November	3.81	13.5
December	3.89	14.1

Average number of dozen per box, 27½.

I can not stop to compare these prices in detail. It would take up too much time and is wholly unnecessary. They show that there could have been no increase or variation of the price of lemons to the consumer as a result of the increase of the tariff in the Payne-Aldrich Act or of any previous tariff law. Numerous changes in prices, up and down, appear all through these tables. But the changes have been just as great during the existence of the same rate of tariff from one month or week or day to another, without reference to, and evidently unaffected by, the tariff rate in force. It appears that in New York, for a short time, in the early part of January, 1909, there was a rather marked increase in price, but it was only for a few days, when the price fell back to the normal of former years and has continued there, with the usual fluctuations not depending on the tariff rate ever since. These figures are conclusive and unanswerable on this important branch of the question.

The two tables following show the retail prices of lemons, 300-per-box size, as reported by the district managers of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, in cents per dozen from May 15 to December 1, 1912. These data have been accumulated by determining the retail price charged by three to eight leading grocers in the following cities in the eastern United States: Boston, New York, Baltimore, Washington, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Louisville, and in eastern Canada in Toronto, Montreal, and St. John.

The lemons used in eastern Canada are exclusively Italian, and are duty free. These tables show that the retail price in Canada is the same as that in the eastern United States, and is conclusive evidence that the duty on lemons does not affect the retail price.

Retail prices of lemons in eastern United States and eastern Canada, 300 size, in cents per dozen.

Date.	Boston.	New York.	Baltimore.	Washington.	Buffalo.	Pittsburgh.	Cincinnati.	Indianapolis.	Toronto.	Montreal.	St. John.
1911.
May 15	23	27	16	25	23	20	23	25	20	20	20
June 1	28	26	30	34	28	33	35	30	28	25	28
June 15	28	27	25	35	30	33	28	24	34	25	27
July 1	27	27	21	30	31	33	25	23	30	25	28
July 15	37	27	24	35	35	35	25	30	31	25	29
Aug. 1	31	32	.....	25	32	18	20	.....	30	25	32
Aug. 15	27	26	18	25	28	18	30	25	29	20	32
Sept. 1	28	24	.....	30	26	23	30	20	28	30	32
Sept. 15	34	21	19	29	28	19	.....	18	29	30	31
Oct. 1	35	22	23	30	34	20	.....	.....	28	30	30
Oct. 15	30	28	27	30	46	22	.....	28	30	30	30
Nov. 1	38	27	25	35	29	26	.....	28	30	30	30
Nov. 15	27	26	25	35	29	21	30	26	.....	30	28
Dec. 1	28	28	19	30	25	18	25	.....	20	35	28
Dec. 15	22	28	19	23	25	16	20	22	20	35	30
1912.
Jan. 1	16	25	20	23	22	16	25	18	26	30	30
Jan. 15	22	26	20	23	23	23	27	22	28	30	30
Feb. 1	25	26	19	25	21	22	27	28	30	35	30
Feb. 15	25	26	22	30	31	23	30	27	30	25	30
Mar. 1	30	26	20	29	22	21	30	23	30	.....	30
Mar. 15	22	25	19	24	26	26	30	24	20	.....	30
Apr. 1	20	25	20	25	22	24	27	24	24	.....	30
Apr. 15	23	23	20	25	23	23	30	24	28	.....	30
May 1	20	25	20	24	19	23	.....	23	20	.....	30
May 15	21	23	18	25	23	16	40	22	30	.....	30
June 1	20	23	19	30	16	18	30	24	28	.....	30
June 15	24	24	20	30	26	28	40	22	20	.....	30
July 1	23	25	20	.....	21	28	.....	21	25	.....	30
July 15	18	27	22	.....	29	22	.....	21	20	35	30
Aug. 1	22	27	19	.....	23	16	30	23	30	30	30
Aug. 15	25	28	21	.....	26	29	30	21	30	.....	30
Sept. 1	29	27	24	.....	21	29	40	32	40	30	30
Sept. 15	46	51	45	.....	38	37	60	40	40	30	30
Oct. 1	31	41	35	35	30	28	40	28	30	25	30
Oct. 15	33	42	.....	33	28	25	30	.....	37	25	30
Nov. 1	34	34	30	35	22	30	40	30	30	25	32
Nov. 15	36	29	30	.....	31	32	40	28	24	25	28
Dec. 1	34	30	28	.....	27	37	30	26	30	20	.....

Therefore some one else must be interested in reducing the tariff besides the consumer. But it sounds better in the public ear to cry out against injustice that they pretend is being done the poor consumer. And this false cry is convincing some unthinking people, who do not investigate the question for themselves, that the price of lemons to the retail purchaser has actually been increased by the tariff.

Mr. President, it is not the man who buys his lemons in this country that is affected, nor is it the consumer in this country that is complaining of the tariff. He has no reason to complain. It is the importer, the promoter, the broker, and others who deal in foreign lemons who are making this fight for free lemons or a reduced tariff. The importers in New York and the exporters in Sicily have levied tribute at different times on every box of lemons imported into this country to raise a fund to fight the tariff, and, unfortunately, Members of Congress have been found who have been willing to make the fight for the foreign importer and foreigners who make their living by handling the foreign product here, against their own countrymen and upon the specious but wholly unfounded claim that it is done in the interest of the domestic consumer. Over one-half of the imports of lemons into the United States are controlled by 11 New York Italian importers, as will be seen from the following statement showing the receivers of foreign lemons at New York City and the percentage of importations handled by each during the period November 1, 1911, to October 31, 1912. The first 11 firms controlled 51.3 per cent of the total imports. About 90 per cent of the total imports are received in the port of New York. The names of the importers sufficiently disclose their nativity. The table is as follows:

Receivers of foreign lemons in New York and percentage of imports handled by each from Nov. 1, 1911, to Oct. 31, 1912.

Receiver.	Total boxes.	Per cent.
Zito & Co	144,868	10.476
P. Sciortino	86,281	6.240
S. S. Steiner & Co	75,456	5.457
S. Ameroso & Co	74,992	5.423
Dominici Bros	73,116	5.287
A. Sacca & Co	59,541	4.306
G. Lo Cicero	56,006	4.050
G. De Lutio	55,308	2.551
G. Cirincione	35,143	2.541
F. Di Anci	34,458	2.492
A. Caramusa	34,193	2.473
Mercadante Regan & Co	33,508	2.423
Cuccio & Morello	30,177	2.182
P. Castiglione	29,360	2.123
F. Cuttietta	28,634	2.071
Cap. Maniscalco	27,964	2.022
F. M. Maniscalco	24,692	1.785
De Luccia & Co	21,988	1.590
P. Tramantana	20,336	1.470
G. Brandina	19,924	1.441
C. V. Smith	19,470	1.408
O. F. Maniscalco	19,055	1.378
P. Lauricella	17,602	1.273
C. Greco	16,970	1.227
L. Zerillo	16,801	1.215
J. Crochiolo	16,515	1.194
B. Follina	16,496	1.193
G. Puccio	16,286	1.178
B. Trioli	14,233	1.029
G. Mannino	14,214	1.028
P. Bajata	13,787	.997
B. Mussachia	12,473	.902
F. Z. Madonia	11,546	.835
Ig. Saitta Di M	10,753	.778
G. Viviano	9,023	.652
Hart & Truckwell	9,132	.660
A. Maniscalco	8,164	.590
V. Pedone	7,917	.573
C. Cavalerro	7,792	.563
F. Minaldi	7,623	.551
G. Giamance	7,129	.515
A. Grilli	6,306	.456
G. Cappadonia	6,179	.446
P. Giambanci	6,117	.442
C. Zito	6,095	.441
G. & M. Ziot	6,003	.428
A. Montano	5,109	.370
P. Scogli	4,686	.339
O. Maniscalco, jr	4,048	.336
Sgobel & Day	3,569	.258
Saitta Bros	3,534	.255
L. G. Marino	3,328	.241
S. Gangiolosi	3,238	.234
Ant. Brucato	2,902	.210
R. Mocu	2,842	.205
C. Cameci	2,830	.204
Capt. Izzo	2,289	.165
G. Noto	2,251	.163
G. Brocita	1,919	.139
Fr. F di Piro	1,847	.134
F. Fuschia	1,738	.126
Pedone & Gambine	1,603	.116

All other importers handled less than one-tenth of 1 per cent each.

The means resorted to to arouse prejudice against the domestic lemon industry and the people that are behind the movement to reduce the tariff is very well shown in an article written by Agnes C. Laut in a late issue of the Sunset Magazine. It was written, I am informed, on her own initiative and upon her own investigation of the facts, and not at the instance or at the instigation of interested parties. She says:

How many people who know about the picturesqueness of the citrus groves in sunny California also know about "a slush fund" of $200,000 a year manipulated by the Lemon Trust of Italy to smash the system of cooperation that sustains those citrus groves of the Southwest? How many know about "rebates" of 5 cents a box on every sale of Italian lemons auctioned off in New York to create a "lobby" fund for the purpose of smashing California lemons? How many know that when Collector Loeb, of New York, and Wickersham, of Washington, and the Fruit Exchange of New York went after that "rebate" among the fruit brokers—which is contrary to

New York law—"the rebates" on sales were discontinued and a "rebate" given by the foreign steamship companies on every box of lemons shipped from Italy in order to knock the tariff off that protects California lemons? You see the point, don't you?—ships that fly a foreign flag can not be prosecuted by the United States Government for "rebating" to an Italian trust, and the Italian trust uses its "rebate" fund ($50,000 it amounted to in three months) to tamper with legislation in Washington.

There are still funnier features to this human-nature side of the citrus industry. When the Lemon Trust of Palermo, which consists of some 60 Italian firms primarily controlled and directed by 11 men with headquarters in New York—not many of whom are American citizens—laid out its campaign to capture the markets of the United States, it realized that it must first of all smash—utterly smash—the citrus growers' union of California. Why? Because the citrus growers' union has wiped out all speculators, all brokers. It deals directly with the jobber. It has its own salaried salesmen on every market in the world. It sells almost from farm to table—or straight into the hands of the jobber who caters to the retailers. Whereas the Lemon Trust of Italy is purely a speculative concern. In the days before there was a California citrus league to deal direct with buyers the fruit brokers of New York have depressed prices by throwing a glut of Italian fruit suddenly on the market, then buying up every box of available lemons and oranges in America. Then, presto, up leaped prices from 10 cents and 50 cents and $1 a box to $6 and $8 and $11 a box. Since the citrus growers of California formed their cooperative league to deal directly with the buyer such wild fluctuations of prices have been unknown. The ruling price has been created wholly and solely by supply and demand. Only two years ago, when the California supply of lemons had been exhausted, the Italian lemon brokers of New York, in order "to jack up" prices, deliberately shipped out of the country a cargo of 800,000 pounds.

Now, the citrus growers of Italy had several very important advantages over the citrus growers of the Southwest.

They not only got "rebates" on auctions, which were against the law, and "rebates" on steamship freights, which were contrary to law but could not be punished, but they also received "rebates" from the customs, owing to alleged decay. It has been usual, and rightly so, for the United States customs to allow "rebate" of duties charged on all fruits that subsequently showed decay. Oddly enough the samples of Italian fruits examined by the customs appraiser ran such a high percentage in decay that Collector Loeb investigated. It was found that as much as $200,000 in a few months had been allowed as "rebate" duty on decayed fruit, when the fruit was not decayed at all.

The next advantage possessed by the Foreign Fruit Trust was in the way of freight tariffs. The freight rate on California citrus—oranges and lemons—runs 82 to 84 cents plus refrigeration and precooling charges, or, say, about 90 cents a box to points east of the Rockies. The freight rate from Italy to points east of the Rockies runs 30 cents less 6 cents of a "rebate" on all shipments over 1,000 boxes.

Yet another point. Wages in Italy are only one-third wages in California.

Now, to equalize conditions California had asked duties of 1½ cents a pound on lemons, 1 cent a pound on oranges. If you figure out 330 lemons to a box—fewer oranges—and 70 to 75 pounds to the box, the duty runs from 3 to 4 cents a dozen. Has the price been pushed up by the duty for the eastern consumer? It has uniformly ruled lower. There has been no more sudden jumping of the price up from a few cents a box to $6 and $8 and $11. Another point: In Canada citrus fruits enter duty free; yet the price of oranges and lemons rules in Canada a few cents a dozen—6 to 10—higher than in the United States. Why? Not the extra freight, for the freight rate is the same from California to Montreal as from California to New York. Why, then, is the price slightly higher in duty-free Canada than in the United States with duties of 1 cent and 1½ cents a pound? Because in Canada the prices are controlled by the fruit brokers' rings and the Foreign Trust. In the United States, as long as the citrus grower deals directly with the buyer, eliminating speculators' profits, the price is kept purely on a basis of supply and demand. High prices rule only during seasons when frosts have touched the groves, and these seasons of high prices, such as the current year of 1912–13 is bound to be, are only a third the high prices formerly prevailing under the manipulation of the Foreign Fruit Trust.

Now, I am not a high-tariff advocate, but a free trader; but this strikes me as one of the exceptions that proves the rule. It strikes me as a little anomalous that a foreign fruit trust should set itself to do three things to a purely domestic American industry:

First. Jack up and control prices on one of the great staple necessities of living.

Second. Create "a slush fund" by illegal rebates to smash a growing American industry.

Third. Write an agreement with a firm of Wall Street lawyers to give them half that "slush fund" if they could "induce" Congress to remove the duty equalizing conditions for California fruit growers as against Italian.

Now, for the funny features of the Foreign Fruit Trust's manipulations. "Barkers" and "posters" began mysteriously to appear in such summer resorts as Coney Island, Atlantic City, etc., calling on passers-by "to smash the California Fruit Trust." Petitions were circulated through the crowd for signatures against the duty that protected California fruit. An agent of the California cooperative union saw these petitions to Congress being signed by hundreds of youngsters—a foreign rabble—not over 10 and 12 years of age. Now, if there is one thing the California citrus growers' league is not it is a trust. Its selling is a direct transaction from producer to jobber, and it takes not a cent of profit to its managers, but only a deduction for salaries, turning 97 per cent of the jobber's price back to the shipper, less the freight charges. Yet the "barkers" and "posters" represented California fruit growers as a "trust."

It is only fair to say that the attorney and representatives of the foreign dealers deny the accuracy of this statement, in some particulars, especially as to the size of the fund raised to influence legislation. But the size of the fund is not so material. That such a fund was raised, in the manner stated, and for the purpose indicated, can not be denied. And I am assured that it would have been larger if these conspirators against the best interests of our country had not fallen out among themselves. It is in this way and for this purpose that the effort to arouse public sentiment has been carried on and the aid of politicians seeking votes procured.

The temptation for some Members of Congress to contend for free lemons is great in some quarters, notably in some of the New York congressional districts, and, in fact, in the whole State of New York, because of the large Italian vote there which can be easily reached by this means. There are other sections in this country where similar conditions exist and where like results may be reached by favoring the countrymen of this class of voters. It may mean the gain or loss of a congressional district or a whole State in more than one of the States in the Union.

I am not here to say that any Member of Congress, in this body or elsewhere, would submit to this temptation. But any Senator who will take the pains to investigate the whole subject with a view of arriving at the truth will be forced to the conclusion that there is no just or even plausible reason for reducing the tariff on lemons other than that of political gain to individuals or to a political party.

The extent to which tribute was laid upon lemons imported into this country to raise the funds to employ lobbyists and influence action in favor of free lemons in the interest of the importer of the foreign product is more clearly shown by an extract I have taken from a letter of a man interested in the sale of lemons in the New York market to my predecessor in office, Hon. Frank P. Flint. The letter was written January 11, 1911. In it he says:

> Now as to the article which appeared recently in McClure's Magazine, that any reader would know is an output of the importers and paid for by them. As I advised you under date of June 25 last, the importers levied an assessment of 5 cents per box on every box of foreign lemons to create a fund which they aimed to so expend as to secure legislation that would reduce the present tariff on lemons, and the amount collected to date now amounts to, in round figures, between sixty and seventy-five thousand dollars. The special committee in charge of this fund is Scortine, Dominici, and Zito, who have employed Messrs. William C. Beers and Harrison Osborne, both located in this city, to disburse said fund in any way they think advisable without rendering an account therefor. It was under the supervision of these last two men that this magazine article was manipulated, and up to date out of this 5-cents-per-box fund there has been turned over to these gentlemen, Beers and Osborne, a total of about $23,000. On the 9th instant there was a meeting of the Fruit Importers' Union, and some of the members called upon Beers and Osborn for an accounting of the money turned over to them, and they replied by saying that their agreement was that they should make no accounting whatsoever, and they declined to do so. Funds are advanced to Beers and Osborn in lump sums of two, three, or five thousand dollars. I will note here that effort was first made to get the Outlook to publish the article which appeared in McClure's, but the Outlook refused to publish it.

I suppose Senators are fully aware that Osborne and Beers have been carrying out their part of the bargain by which this great industry of my State was to be sacrificed in the interest of foreigners, for they have been lobbying here diligently and persistently for months for free lemons. Near the close of the last Congress they did get lemons on the free list in the House, but they were saved in the Senate. It was learned before this time that the lemon importers of New York and the exporters of Palermo had organized to bring about a reduction of the tariff on lemons and, if possible, remove the tariff entirely. They were most active in this effort. In addition to the raising of funds necessary to carry on the campaign by levying on every box of lemons imported and the employment of lobbyists, as I have stated, they stamped on every box of their lemons "If lemons were free of duty this box would cost you $1.20 less." This was a plain falsehood, and known to be so, because the full tariff on lemons was only $1.12 a box. But aside from this, we have ample and unanswerable proof that the claim was not made in good faith. No one believed that the whole or probably any part of the tariff would go to the consumer in the way of cheaper lemons. This last winter the California crop of lemons was mostly destroyed by an unusual and destructive frost. As a result very few domestic lemons went to New York and other eastern cities. It practically gave the market to the foreign product, just as it will if the proposed reduction of the tariff becomes a law. What was the result? The following table giving the quantity of foreign lemons delivered in the New York market and the prices received shows:

	Boxes.	Price per box.
Nov. 1, 1909, to June 17, 1910	938,210	$2.74
Nov. 1, 1910, to June 17, 1911	884,456	3.29
Nov. 1, 1911, to June 17, 1912	987,270	2.71
Nov. 1, 1912, to June 17, 1913	1,139,164	4.36

It will be noticed that because of the short crop in California from November 1, 1912, to June 17, 1913, there was an increase of foreign lemons over the highest number of any previous year for the same time of 150,000 boxes, and the price to the consumer was increased $1.65 a box. This shows how the lemons will be $1.20 a box cheaper if the California lemons are driven out of the market by an unjust tariff as they were temporarily by cold weather. But the work of the enterprising foreign dealers did not stop with the efforts I have disclosed. They raised the cry that the high tariff was robbing the sick and the poor, and that it was being done at the instance of a powerful trust amongst the fruit growers in California. This cry was echoed on the floors of Congress. When it was declared with melting sympathy that the high price of lemons to the sick in the hospitals was caused by the tariff, and these unfortunates should be protected by Congress, an investigation was instituted in 15 of the largest hospitals in the city of New York to see how this might be. The number of patients in each and the number of boxes of lemons used for the year previous was ascertained, and it was shown that they had used four-fifths of 1 lemon a year for each patient. It is only just to say that this included day patients as well as more permanent ones. But if we exclude them, possibly the hospitals used on an average 1 full lemon a year for each of its patients.

I may call attention to another effort of the foreign dealers to accomplish what they were striving for. At Brighton Beach, N. Y., and, as was stated by the men engaged in it, at other places, a strenuous effort was made to secure signers to petitions to Congress for free lemons. At one of the stands in the crowd flaming red posters were posted containing the following:

(Poster.)

The high cost of living concerns you!

A petition to Congress asking for the repeal of the duty on lemons.

California produces 40 per cent of the supply of lemons used in the United States. The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill put a duty of $1.20 per box on lemons, which is a big advantage to the Lemon Trust in maintaining the present high prices. Lemons are absolutely needed in various ways for medicine, food, and flavoring purposes. The independent dealers are trying to have the present tariff repealed, and, if successful, are pledged to reduce the cost accordingly, thus making lemons cheaper.

They want your assistance in their efforts and respectfully ask you to sign the petition to Congress to take this burdensome duty off an article that is an everyday necessity.

Sign the petition for lower prices.

Men employed for the purpose were on hand with bundles of petitions, as follows:

(Petition.)

———, 1911.

To the House of Representatives of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

GENTLEMEN: We, your petitioners, residents of ———, respectfully request the repeal of the burdensome duty on lemons which was enacted by the Payne-Aldrich bill into a law, at the expense of the great masses of population on the Atlantic seaboard, for the purpose of doubling the wealth of 10 or a dozen millionaires of California and also for the purpose of paying the wages of tens of thousands of Japanese soldiers, who exclusively monopolize the labor of the California lemon orchards, thus depriving American laborers of opportunity of labor and wages.

Respectfully, yours,

——— ———.

In this way signers to the petitions, many of whom were children, were obtained to be forwarded to Congress; how many I do not know.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. WORKS. I do.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. May I ask the Senator from California whether or not he has a table showing the price received by the California lemon growers for their boxes of lemons and the price at which the same boxes are sold in the eastern market?

Mr. WORKS. The tables I shall submit will include all of those things. I am endeavoring to cover the whole ground.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The statement has been made that when the rate on lemons was increased in the Payne-Aldrich bill the railway companies immediately added an equivalent amount to the freight charge for transporting lemons from California to the eastern seaboard for consumption. Is that true or not, within the knowledge of the Senator?

Mr. WORKS. If the Senator had honored me with his presence, he would know that I have covered that whole subject.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. It may be due to the fact that I was out of the Senate Chamber.

Mr. WORKS. I have covered the subject just as fully as I know how, giving the exact facts. I am doing the best I can to disclose the whole situation.

These varied and persistent efforts of lobbyists and others had their effect. Some people, even in Congress, began to believe at least some of the mendacious things they said. On August 3, 1911, an amendment was offered to the tariff bill then pending placing lemons on the free list. It was offered by the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. It was solemnly asserted in support of the amendment that the tariff had been increased "at the demand of the California Lemon Trust"; that is was "just about as clear an example of the giving of special privileges by tariff rates as it is possible to obtain"; that lemons to many people of foreign birth and descent are a necessary of life; and that "the only purpose of the increase of the tariff was to raise the price of lemons in the markets of the East and increase the profits of the California Lemon Trust." These assertions could not very well have been further from the truth. The increase was not made on demand of the California trust. There is no such trust, and never has been. The increase was not made upon the demand or even at the request of the fruit growers of California or anyone interested in the industry in the State. I do not know whether lemons are a necessity to people of foreign birth or not. On that question I give way to the superior knowledge of the gentleman who made the assertion, whose constituency is largely made up of Italians, who have their own peculiar reason for wanting lemons on the free list in the interest of their countrymen. The amendment passed the House, but was defeated in the Senate. In conference the House stood firmly to their amendment. It was again asserted:

It is going to drive the Sicilian and the Italian lemon out of the American market, and the people of this country and the hospitals and eleemosynary institutions that require lemons at the sick bed are going to be placed in the hands of one of the most drastic trusts that exists in the United States.

Solemn words of warning, dire predictions, and high-sounding claims of a most "drastic trust" were these. But the warnings were not needed, the predictions were unfounded, and the assertion of a trust was untrue.

But, Mr. President, the people who had misled good men into the belief by the influence of the lobby, false petitions, and misrepresentations that these things were actually true were not ungrateful, although, temporarily at least, the efforts in their behalf had failed.

As another potential means of securing free lemons, the Italians of New York formed a political organization. It was known as the "National Italian Democratic League." This political organization was prompt to show its appreciation of the efforts made in the interest of importers of foreign lemons. It is said to have contributed large sums to the late Democratic campaign, but this I have not been able to verify. The league gave a magnificent banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria within a few days after a Democratic House had voted to remove the tariff on lemons. The chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, who offered the amendment striking off the tariff, was the guest of honor on that auspicious and delightful occasion, and other members of the Democratic Party, favorable to free lemons, and also the chairman of the Democratic congressional committee and other distinguished Members of the House were not absent; and, last but not least, Mr. Harrison Osborne, the paid lobbyist already mentioned and with whom doubtless the other gentlemen were well acquainted, was conspicuous on the happy occasion.

The gathering was presided over by Giovanni Dominici, whose name sufficiently indicates the place of his nativity and who happened to be one of the leading lemon importers and who, with many others present, was deeply interested in free lemons. I have here a beautiful picture of the assembly; it shows Mr. Dominici as presiding and the distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee as the guest of honor on his right. If the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD were only an illustrated publication I would ask to have it inserted in connection with my remarks.

Now, Mr. President, no one believes—certainly I do not—that any of these distinguished gentlemen present on this great occasion, and whose duty it was to legislate justly and without prejudice against the interests of my people, would allow themselves to be improperly influenced by this touching evidence of the regard and appreciation of the Italian importers for the men who had so valiantly striven in their interest. But, sir, on the face of it, it did look bad for the California fruit growers. I am sorry it occurred.

The following interesting account of the banquet was given in the Fruitman's Guide, of New York, in its issue of August 26, 1911:

ITALIAN DEMOCRATS DINE—BANQUET IN HONOR OF O. W. UNDERWOOD AT WALDORF—SICILY LEMON IMPORTERS CREDITED WITH PULLING WIRES FOR LOWER LEMON TARIFF—DINNER GIVEN IN A HURRY.

NEW YORK, August 25, 1911.

Sicily lemon importers and other Italian importing interests seemed in a hurry to pay their respects to members of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, for they made OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, chairman of the committee, a guest of honor at the first annual dinner of their political organization, held in the Waldorf-Astoria last Wednesday night. The particular political organization of the Italian importers is styled the National Italian Democratic League. This dinner, it seems, was a decidedly hurried affair. It is stated that the whole affair was planned and executed inside of 48 hours. It was originally intended to be in honor of all the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, but Mr. UNDERWOOD was the only one who got there. Several of his colleagues in the House sat at the speaker's table, however.

Giovanni Dominici, one of the leading lemon importers of the city and president of the Italian League, presided at the banquet. Besides he and Mr. UNDERWOOD, there were present these Congressmen: C. Y. Fornes, of New York; F. E. WILSON, of Brooklyn; JEFFERSON M. LEVY, of New York; JAMES T. LLOYD, of Missouri, chairman of the National Democratic Congressional Committee; Martin W. Littleton, of Long Island; and W. I. MCCOY, of New Jersey. Joseph Auerbach was one of the speakers. Among others present were ex-Justice Gildersleeve; Antonio Succa; Justice Russell, of special sessions; G. Solari, president of the Italian Chamber of Commerce; S. Sailta, the lemon broker; and former Coroner Peter Acitelli.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, the guest of honor, was the principal speaker. He made a speech whacking Mr. Taft for signing the Payne tariff bill and turning down the bills offered by the Democrats in the extra session of Congress. He applauded the President's stand on reciprocity. The Italians cheered Mr. UNDERWOOD'S speech and the band played "Dixie." Mr. UNDERWOOD is from Alabama.

There were several members in the trade who received invitations to attend, but who found at the last moment that they could not possibly go. In view of the fact that some secrecy attended the hurried plans for the dinner, and because of the fact that a strong working interest is active for a further reduction in the duty on Sicily lemons, certain members of the trade are busy attaching unusual significance to the entertainment provided for the Democrats. It is openly asserted that the Italian element here is looking to the Democratic party for help, and that wires are being pulled in the hope of action at the next session of Congress on the lemon tariff. Importers generally deny the imputation expressed in the conviction of the trade. The National Italian Democratic League is less than one year old, but it seems to be more or less of a mighty precocious infant.

I protest earnestly against making this great industry of my State the victim of selfish partisanship or the greed for political gain. If it can be shown to the satisfaction of any Senator who desires to act wholly upon the facts as they exist that the present tariff should be reduced as a matter of right and justice, I have nothing to say against his action in voting against this tariff. That being shown to his satisfaction, it is not only his right but his plain duty to vote for a reduction of the tariff. As I said in the beginning, the question is one of right and justice and not of politics or expediency, and should be so treated.

REVENUE TO THE GOVERNMENT.

I pass now to the question of revenue to the Government. So long as the Government is dependent for its revenue on a tariff on foreign imports no tariff that is supplying it in part with the needed support should be taken off unless it is doing injustice to some one. If the home industry does not need protection and the imposition of the tariff has the effect to increase the price of the commodity, the Government might well surrender the revenue for the common good and make it up some other way. But I have shown, I think conclusively, that there is no such reason in this case. No resident of this country has been injured by the increase in the tariff on lemons and no one would be benefited in the slightest degree by its reduction. On the other hand, to take off or materially reduce the tariff will destroy the industry in this country, throw thousands of employees out of work, and put us at the mercy of the foreign producers. The experience of the Government under the different tariff laws shows that under the first three years of the last enactment, known as the Payne-Aldrich law, the increase of revenue from this source was 37.1 per cent above the annual average revenue collected under the Dingley Act.

The following table shows the amount realized under the different tariff laws from the tariff on lemons from 1898 to 1912, inclusive:

Imports of lemons entered for consumption in the United States during years ended June 30, 1898 to 1910, inclusive.

Year ended June 30—	Rate of duty.	Quantity (pounds).	Value.	Duty.
1898[1]	1 cent per pound	133,347,050	$2,521,985.32	$1,333,470.50
1899[1]	do	208,634,448	4,399,160.72	2,086,344.48
1900[1]	do	159,384,389	3,655,946.85	1,593,843.89
1901[1]	do	148,334,112	3,516,877.29	1,483,341.12
1902[1]	do	162,962,091¼	3,318,908.82	1,629,630.92
1903[1]	do	152,775,867	3,087,244.22	1,527,758.67
1904[1]	do	164,042,415	3,507,679.55	1,640,424.15
1905[1]	do	139,079,003	2,904,975.44	1,390,790.03
1906[1]	do	138,689,148	2,934,195.34	1,386,891.48
1907[1]	do	153,930,739	4,254,230.50	1,539,307.39
1908[2]	do	178,437,835	4,388,247.95	1,784,378.35
1909[2]	do	135,175,888	2,623,170.38	1,351,758.88
1910[2]	do	[3]34,921,762	729,336.85	349,217.62
	1½ cents per pound	[4]125,620,672	2,407,126.15	1,884,310.25
Total 1910.		160,542,434	3,136,463.00	2,233,527.87
1911	1½ cents per pound	134,957,306	2,985,393.47	2,024,356.48
1912	do	145,622,842	3,368,489.97	2,184,342.68

[1] Imports and Duties, 1894 to 1907, by W. W. Evans, compiled under the direction of the Committee on Ways and Means, from annual reports on commerce and navigation.

[2] Department of Commerce and Labor, Bureau of Statistics. Imported merchandise entered for consumption in the United States, and duties collected thereon, 1908, 1909, and 1910.

[3] July 1 to Aug. 5, 1909; act of 1897.

[4] Aug. 6, 1909, to June 30, 1910; act of 1909.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WORKS. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. In connection with what the Senator has said, before he starts off on the subject of revenue, I wish to ask him if he has considered the advisability of calling the attention of the committee that is now investigating the lobby to the particular lobby that the Senator mentions?

Mr. WORKS. The matter has been called to the attention of the committee by some one, not by me; and Mr. Powell, who has been mentioned here as representing the fruit growers in California, has been before the committee and has been examined. I do not know whether they have reached the other side of the question or not.

Mr. NORRIS. I had particular reference to the men the Senator mentions who were engaged in the importation of lemons, and who, for the purpose of advocating free lemons, were raising a contribution on all the lemons imported.

Mr. WORKS. I had understood, not directly from the committee, but indirectly, that Mr. Osborne and Mr. Beers, the two principal gentlemen I have mentioned, had been subpœnaed to appear before the committee, but my understanding is that they have not yet been examined.

Mr. NORRIS. It seems to me that the facts disclosed by the Senator would well warrant an investigation of more importance than a great deal of the lobby matter that has been investigated.

Mr. WORKS. I think the Senator is right about that. I think there never was a worse case of lobbying than that which has been carried on against the lemon industry in California.

So if Congress shall take off two-thirds of the tariff on foreign lemons we will lose that proportion of the $2,000,000 a year in revenues and receive absolutely nothing in return unless home-grown lemons are driven out of the market. This can hardly appeal to the believers in a tariff for revenue only, and certainly it should receive no support from any Senator who believes in a protective tariff.

OTHER ALLEGED REASONS WHY THE LEMON GROWERS OF CALIFORNIA SHOULD NOT BE PROTECTED.

Mr. President, I submit that I have already shown that the lemon industry of California needs and is justly entitled to the protection given it by the existing tariff; but the emissaries of the foreign producers and those engaged in the traffic in foreign lemons in this country have endeavored to prejudice home growers and dealers in the minds of Members of Congress and the public by various misleading and unfounded charges. For example, they have circulated stories, and they have been repeated on the floors of Congress, that the California fruit growers employ oriental servile labor only, that they can not now and never will be able to supply the market in this country, and therefore any tariff that will keep foreign lemons out of the market will deprive the people of their use entirely, and that the lemon industry in the State is a great Fruit Trust held and controlled by rich men.

I know from my own personal knowledge that these charges are unfounded. I happen to live in the very midst of the greatest citrus-fruit growing section of the world, and have lived there for 30 years, and have seen the industry grow from almost nothing to the magnificent proportions it has now assumed. So, Mr. President, as to the general condition and nature of fruit growing and marketing in my State, the people employed in the industry, and the importance of it not only to my own State, but to the whole Nation, I do not speak from hearsay only, but from my own personal knowledge and observation covering all these years, and practically the history and growth of the industry from the very beginning. But I am not going to ask the Senate to take my word for what I say here. I am able to prove what I assert by unanswerable evidence—from facts that can not be refuted or denied.

Let me call the attention of the Senate first to the charge that the California fruits are produced by oriental labor. If this were so, it would not affect the justice of the claim of the growers to a protective tariff; but it is true only in a very limited degree. The conditions in California are peculiar and can not be understood readily in States where these conditions do not prevail. Farmers and horticulturists in the State have been compelled by these conditions, against their own will and desire, to employ Chinese and Japanese labor to carry on a part of their work because no other help in certain lines of work could be had under any circumstances or at any price. They have used every means reasonably available to secure and hold native help. The larger growers have built comfortable and attractive dormitories, lodging and boarding houses, reading rooms, and separate cottages for families. This has attracted more and more American laborers to the fruit ranches, and the foreign element has gradually grown less and less and is confined now almost entirely to the more servile and poorest paid kinds of labor.

I have called for and obtained statistical data on this branch of the subject that establishes clearly what I have said as to the limited number of foreign laborers now being used in producing and preparing the fruit for market. One of the gratifying features of the work is that in the packing houses which are maintained in the country and contiguous to the groves, suitable employment is afforded to hundreds of American women outside of the cities, and many country homes and families are supported and maintained in this way.

The San Diego Fruit Co., to which I have already referred, has furnished me a table showing the amounts paid by that company to native and foreign laborers. It is interesting and refutes the charge that the California fruit is produced by foreign and poorly paid labor. It is as follows:

Statement of cash wages paid to white labor and Japanese labor for year 1910, by San Diego Fruit Co., National City, Cal.

Month.	White labor.	Japanese labor.
January	$5,031.61	$2,188.67
February	5,586.07	2,484.13
March	6,484.66	2,507.25
April	6,287.78	1,680.69
May	6,093.68	1,560.64
June	6,393.77	1,303.49
July	3,847.49	1,094.10
August	4,174.75	1,127.42
September	3,182.90	1,071.18
October	3,763.76	1,573.69
November	5,150.07	1,716.86
December	5,544.17	2,715.01
	61,450.71	21,021.12

This shows that about two-thirds of the amount paid for labor is paid for American help in that county. But taking the whole State, carefully prepared statistics show, as I have stated, that there are employed in the citrus industry in California 25,000 people, of whom only 3,500 are orientals. This shows a little less than one-seventh of oriental labor devoted to the citrus industry.

I have also secured from the Citrus Protective League a more full and complete tabulated statement, covering the southern California field and Tulare County, which shows the approximate number of orientals employed in the groves and packing houses at the height of the season:

Approximate number of oriental laborers employed in citrus groves and packing houses at height of season.

Redlands-Highlands territory	300
San Bernardino, Colton, Rialto, Etiwanda, and Cucamonga	275
Riverside district	499
Upland-Ontario-Cucamonga district	400
Territory from Pomona to Glendora	294
Covina territory	55
Azusa-Glendora district, not included above	295
Duarte-Monrovia territory	40
Semi-Tropic Fruit Exchange territory (Los Angeles County)	338
San Diego County	248
Orange County	115
Ventura County	275
Santa Barbara County	28
Tulare County	200
Total	3,362

Mr. CLAPP. Will the Senator pardon me for an interruption?

Mr. WORKS. Certainly.

Mr. CLAPP. Is the Senator prepared to state—I see the table does not—whether there is any difference in the wages paid to the American and oriental laborers?

Mr. WORKS. My understanding is that there is no difference in wages paid, except where the labor performed is different.

Mr. CLAPP. I mean for the same labor.

Mr. WORKS. For the same labor the same wages are paid.

The claim that this country can not produce enough lemons to supply the home markets is equally without foundation. At the present time the domestic supply is about 54 per cent of the total consumption, and the percentage has been steadily increasing year by year. I have touched very generally on the subject in the course of these remarks. I desire now to meet this claim specifically and by data that will show its complete falsity. In support of my position I now submit, first, a table showing the total consumption of lemons in this country for the fiscal years 1903 to 1912, inclusive. This table is based on the imports of lemons plus the total domestic production.

Total consumption of lemons in the United States, 1903 to 1912, inclusive.

Year ending June 30—	Quantity (pounds).	Boxes.[1]
1903	204,981,912	2,733,092
1904	236,975,221	3,159,670
1905	228,472,321	3,046,298
1906	239,599,002	3,194,653
1907	243,067,706	3,240,903
1908	285,809,353	3,810,924
1909	280,954,459	3,745,939
1910	295,456,708	3,939,424
1911	300,356,524	4,004,754
1912	305,423,140	4,072,309

[1] Estimated 75 pounds of fruit each.

I now submit also a table showing the yield of lemons per acre in boxes for the years 1906–7 to 1910–11, covering from 3,603.6 to 6,137.4 acres. The yields are based on the total acreage shipped through 29 associations or individual shippers. It includes the shipments of several hundred growers. The association or account number is given in the first column, next the number of acres, and then the number of boxes shipped each year and the average for the five-year period.

It is as follows:

Yield of lemons per acre, 1906–7 to 1910–11, inclusive.

Account.	1910–11		1909–10		1908–9
	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.
		Boxes.		Boxes.		Boxes.
No. 2	30	4,485	30	6,402	30	6,077
No. 3	120	32,229	120	28,842	120	20,788
No. 6	437	72,500	302	57,944	191	35,596
No. 8	140	20,871	140	20,815	140	28,959
No. 12	195	29,474	168	14,073	186	21,915
No. 14	119	29,625	114	25,192	114	24,084
No. 16	85	15,527	93	8,744
No. 18	675	109,203	104	25,376	116	28,177
No. 29	100	13,200	100	6,800	150	19,200
No. 31	200	17,317	80	6,792	45	2,827
No. 32	1	100
No. 36	188.9	44,654	150.1	46,465	150.1	36,824
No. 37	832	216,522	800	176,587	760	204,716
No. 38	180	24,236	180	13,599	180	20,585
No. 39	407	68,000	380	36,637	400	57,649
No. 40	300	75,271	300	114,767	300	104,528
No. 43	211	30,253
No. 44	141.5	35,866	129	28,576	146	35,366
No. 47	110	31,943	110	36,192	110	42,129
No. 48	238	109,033
No. 58	30	4,816	30	2,252	30	7,981
No. 59	15	2,382
No. 60	42	19,466	42	9,930	42	13,203
No. 61	344	60,000	340	38,461	340	55,598
No. 62	213	72,189	213	61,919	370	109,354
No. 63	110	11,424
No. 64	200	40,569	225	34,127	225	36,356
No. 65	418	94,387	418	95,270	418	75,370
No. 66	55	10,752
Total	6,137.4	1,296,294	4,568.1	895,702	4,563.1	1,008,652
Average		211.2		196.1		220.9

Account.	1907–8		1906–7
	Acreage.	Shipments.	Acreage.	Shipments.
		Boxes.		Boxes.
No. 2	30	3,195	30	5,502
No. 3	120	30,477	120	25,237
No. 6
No. 8	140	15,263	140	9,014
No. 12
No. 14
No. 16
No. 18	101	24,716	77	18,638
No. 29	150	18,400	150	18,400
No. 31
No. 32
No. 36	150.1	44,613	150.1	36,020
No. 37	710	150,719	650	94,469
No. 38	180	32,830	180	29,621
No. 39	410	64,415	375	39,332
No. 40	300	79,046	300	68,506
No. 43
No. 44	145.5	22,473	104.5	14,072
No. 47	110	37,752	120	37,440
No. 48
No. 58	30	4,690	10	569
No. 59
No. 60	42	12,403	54	11,484
No. 61	330	47,017	350	39,562
No. 62	390	68,451	375	52,081
No. 63
No. 64
No. 65	418	46,469	418	38,567
No. 66
Total	3,756.6	702,929	3,603.6	537,684
Average		187.1		149.1

Five-year average, boxes per acre 196.2.

It will be noticed that the average for the several years, taken separately, is from 149.1 to 220.9 boxes per acre, and that the average of the whole for the five years is 196.2 boxes per acre. It should be noticed, also, that the number of acres has increased in case of these 29 fruit ranches from 3,603 to 6,137 acres. This results in part from the fact that some of the orchards came into bearing after the year 1906–7, and in others the acreage was increased as the years passed.

Another table shows the following result more briefly and concisely stated:

Yield of lemons per acre, 1906–7 to 1910–11, inclusive.

Year	Acres.	Boxes.
		Total.	Average per acre.
1906-7	3,603.6	537,434	149.1
1907-8	3,756.6	702,929	187.1
1908-9	4,563.1	1,008,052	220.9
1909-10	4,568.1	895,762	196.1
1910-11	6,137.4	1,296,294	211.2
5-year average	4,525.7	888,094	196.2

The facts are further established by the following table of acreage and shipment of fruit:

Acreage and shipments, in boxes, of lemons, with average shipments per acre, California, 1898–1910.

Year.	Acreage.[1]	Shipments (in boxes).[2]	Average shipments per acre (boxes).
1898	6,518	363,800	55.8
1899	7,458	281,800	37.8
1900	8,519	451,500	53.0
1901	[3]10,635	912,300	85.8
1902	15,119	878,000	58.1
1903	14,412	826,500	57.3
1904	[3]11,496	868,000	75.5
1905	[3]10,943	1,338,500	121.8
1906	11,572	1,182,200	102.2
1907	12,506	1,097,300	87.7
1908	16,718	1,585,000	94.9
1909	18,439	2,057,072	111.6
1910	20,365	1,606,752	79.1

[1] Acreage obtained by dividing total number of trees in the State as reported by the State board of equalization by 75, the estimated average number of trees per acre.
[2] Shipments obtained from number of cars given in the official Fruit World Record and multiplying by 312 boxes per car for years 1898 to 1907, inclusive, 320 in 1908, 332 in 1909, and 336 in 1910.
[3] Number of trees in San Diego County not reported. Increase or decrease was averaged by taking preceding and following years' figures.

This gives us the number of boxes per acre that the California lands will produce. I call attention now to the amount of land in the State adapted to the growth of lemons for the purpose of refuting the claim made that this country is unable to produce enough lemons to supply the home demand. Here is a letter from one of the large growers in Ventura County, showing the lands available in that one county in southern California:

SANTA PAULA, CAL., October 6, 1911.

Mr. G. HAROLD POWELL,
Citrus Protective League, Los Angeles, Cal.

DEAR MR. POWELL: Replying to yours of the 2d instant inquiring as to the lemon plantings of the last three years and also as to the available lemon acreage in this county suitable for lemon planting will say that I have gone into this matter as carefully as my time would permit, and the figures show as nearly as I am able to get them that in 1909 there was planted in this county 731 acres; 1910, 390 acres; in 1911, 200 acres; or a total of 1,321 acres.

The available lemon territory in this county upon which water either has been developed or can be readily developed, and which said land is comparatively free from frost and suitable to lemon culture, is about as follows:

On the south side of the Santa Clara River, 20,000 acres; on the north side of the Santa Clara River, 10,000 acres.

There are now planted and in full bearing several orchards on the south side of the river, which demonstrates the feasibility of growing lemons there. These orchards have never been touched by frost and bear well; in fact, no frost-prevention methods are used. On practically all of this territory artesian water can be developed at a depth of from two to three hundred feet.

The territory on the north side of the river includes the lands known as the Saticoy slope and extends to Ventura. These lands are also free from frost and are suitable to grow lemons upon, although very few lemons have as yet been planted there. There is an abundance of water of gravity flow in the Santa Clara River to irrigate every acre on the north side of the river.

Trusting this is the information which you desire, I am,

Very truly, yours,

C. C. TEAGUE.

Mr. Powell in a letter transmitting this letter of Mr. Teague to him says on this subject:

I am inclosing a copy of a letter from the Limoneira Co., setting forth the acreage available for lemon planting in Ventura County. From conversations which I have had with Mr. Teague since this letter was sent I am convinced that his statement of the acreage is very conservative. We have not yet completed the investigation of available lemon land, but up to date we find the following available acreages: In the San Antonio district, including the area from Azusa to Pomona, and including Covina also, there are available about 1,600 acres for planting; in the vicinity of Upland, including Ontario and Cucamonga, there are at least 10,000 acres; in Riverside and vicinity, 2,500 acres; in Ventura County, 30,000 acres; at Corona, 1,750 acres; Tulare County, 9,000 acres of excellent lemon land and a very much larger acreage that can be developed as the population increases; making a total of 53,350 acres.

I will give you figures a little later on Los Angeles County, which contains several thousand acres, and San Diego County, which also contains several thousand acres.

Since Mr. Powell's letter was written, the facts with reference to the quantity of available lands suited to lemon culture in California have been carefully gathered and put in tabulated form with the following result. The table follows.

As tending to throw further light——

Mr. BRISTOW. If it will not inconvenience the Senator, would he give us that result, if it is not lengthy?

Mr. WORKS. I was endeavoring to save all the time of the Senate I could, and therefore I have been passing over these tables, but as the Senator from Kansas asks for it I will state the facts as shown by this table; it is not very long.

Acreage of land available for lemon planting in California in 1911.

San Antonio district, including the region from Azusa to Pomona	1,600
Riverside and vicinity	2,500
Upland-Cucamonga district	10,000
Ventura County	30,000
Corona	1,750
Tulare County	9,000
San Diego County	4,000
Santa Barbara County	2,000
San Fernando Valley	20,000
Orange County	10,000
Other districts in Los Angeles County	5,000
Total	95,850

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield further to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. WORKS. I do.

Mr. BRISTOW. That, as I understand it, is land that is under water or that can be put under water?

Mr. WORKS. Certainly. If not it would not be available for that purpose. Lemons can not be grown except upon irrigated land in the State of California.

As tending to throw further light on this branch of the subject I submit, also, for the information of the Senate, a table showing the total exports of lemons from Italy from 1898 to 1911, and the proportion coming to the United States. The data is taken from official Italian statistics furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture.

It is as follows:

Exports of lemons from Italy, 1898 to 1911, inclusive.

Calendar year ended Dec. 31—	Quantity.	Value	Exports to the United States
	Pounds.		Per cent.
1898	325,504,061	$3,149,486	41.3
1899	369,473,041	3,234,489	35.6
1900	311,563,577	3,000,286	29.2
1901	368,801,294	3,228,610	29.2
1902	490,033,960	3,432,077	35.3
1903	459,622,020	3,218,948	31.2
1904	514,137,472	3,600,745	37.3
1905	452,903,655	3,171,899	32.1
1906	559,524,096	4,337,525	37.1
1907	559,549,378	4,408,635	37.8
1908	540,327,398	4,257,229	32.6
1909	564,516,049	4,447,811	29.4
1910	569,431,646	5,483,550	31.5
1911	570,706,431	5,491,974	28.5

Also, the following table showing the number of boxes of lemons coming into New York from Italian ports for the years 1903 to 1911, inclusive; and another showing the number of boxes and their weight received at the same port from the same source:

Boxes of lemons received in New York from Italian ports, 1903 to 1911, inclusive.

Year ended Dec. 31—	Ports of export.
	Palermo.	Messina.	Naples.	Total.
1903	1,506,850	339,000	57,850	1,903,700
1904	1,581,500	316,900	71,950	1,970,350
1905	1,298,250	98,100	35,600	1,431,950
1906	1,468,800	159,100	75,600	1,703,500
1907	1,647,925	101,400	211,100	1,960,425
1908	1,625,525	85,250	117,350	1,828,125
1909	1,514,375	2,975	99,350	1,616,700
1910	1,574,075	20,200	112,950	1,707,225
1911	1,438,250	162,925	62,625	1,663,800

In the Provinces of Palermo and Syracuse 75 per cent of the lemons are exported and about 25 per cent are used in the manufacture of citrate of lime. In the Provinces of Messina and Catania 75 to 80 per cent of the fruit is sometimes used in the manufacture of by-products, the remainder entering into the export trade.

Boxes, weight of fruit, and average weight of fruit per box of lemons received in New York from Italian ports, 1903 to 1911.

Calendar year ended Dec. 31—	Boxes.	Weight of fruit (pounds).	Average net weight of fruit per box.
1903 [1]	1,903,700	129,986,250	68.3
1904	1,970,350	135,961,377	69.0
1905	1,431,950	104,071,443	72.7
1906	1,703,500	133,742,382	78.5
1907	1,960,425	147,472,044	75.3
1908	1,828,125	131,151,357	71.7
1909	[2] 1,616,700	117,981,693	73.0
1910	[2] 1,702,225	123,862,502	72.5
1911	1,663,800	115,069,578	69.2

[1] Bulletin 160 B. P. I., loc. cit.
[2] Monthly Summary of Commerce and Finance of the United States, December, 1910.

These figures show conclusively that if California is protected in her industry she will be able to supply the people of the United States with all the lemons needed, and that she will do so is apparent from the additional acreage planted to lemons each year. But if the tariff on lemons is taken off or materially reduced, the lands adapted to lemon growing, and which, in the interest of the whole country should be devoted to that purpose, will inevitably be applied to other uses more profitable but less important to the people generally. This is an industry that for the common good should be fostered and encouraged and not destroyed by unfriendly and unwise legislation.

IS THE LEMON BUSINESS IN CALIFORNIA A TRUST?

Now, Mr. President, what of the claim that the lemon industry in California is a rich man's business and is controlled by a trust? Big business, working through great combinations of wealth, stifling competition and destroying little business, has very justly become unpopular in this country. Therefore, when the politician or the demagogue wants to cast discredit upon any business or enterprise, he denounces it as a trust. The lemon industry in my State has not escaped this character of unjust and unfounded assault. The advocate of free lemons for votes has raised this cry. It has been reiterated on the floors of Congress, whether maliciously and for political effect or through ignorance of the true facts and conditions I do not know. But for whatever purpose this assault has been made upon this great industry, or whatever the motives behind it may be, I propose to show that the charge is utterly false and groundless. I shall do this by disclosing to the Senate the conditions that exist in California as affecting the fruit industry as clearly as I can, the manner in which the business is carried on, the nature and characteristics of the various cooperative associations and other organizations through which the business is conducted, the necessity for such cooperation on the part of the growers, and from this demonstrate clearly to Senators that these so-called combinations are in no sense trusts or combinations intended to or which can control prices or prevent competition.

As I have said in respect of the matter of wages so I say with respect to the general subject of growing and marketing fruit—the conditions are peculiar in California and not well understood. The fruit when ready for shipment is 3,000 miles away from its best and greatest markets, markets that it must reach if the business is to grow and succeed. The fruit is perishable and must be protected from the elements in its transportation and handled with the greatest care. The grower is compelled to ship his fruit by rail. Many of the cars must be refrigerated in summer and carefully protected from the weather in the winter. Notwithstanding the claim is made that this is a rich man's business, most of the orchards, hundreds of them, are small 5 and 10 acre tracts or less, owned by men who have invested their all in the venture and who, with their families, are entirely dependent upon their fruit for a living. In the San Dimas district, for example, which is one of the largest in the State, 300 growers own 1,180 acres of lemons. The unit lemon acreage is 3.94 acres. In the Hollywood-Cahuenga district 35 growers own 344 acres, making the unit size 9.83 acres. In the Pomona district 75 growers own 200 acres, making the unit size 2.67 acres. At Santa Barbara 70 growers own 407 acres, making the unit size 7.96 acres. At Tustin 55 growers own 580 acres, making the unit size 10.50 acres. In the Whittier district 90 growers own 318 acres, making the unit size 3.53 acres. There are three corporations that own between 500 and 1,000 acres of lemons. There are between 2,000 and 2,500 growers of lemons in the State, practically all of whom live on their places and manage their properties. The average grove contains 5, 10, or 15 acres, more or less.

A recent inventory made by the Citrus Protective League shows that 11,185 acres of lemons are owned by 1,179 growers, making an average of 9.5 acres per grower. One thousand and forty-four of these growers owned less than 10 acres; 109 between 10 and 20; 39 between 20 and 50; 6 between 50 and 100; 8 between 100 and 250; 1 between 250 and 500; and 2 owned more than 500 acres.

In the early history of lemon growing in California it was demonstrated that the small grower who could not load at least one full car for shipment at a given time could not do business alone. He could not ship in small quantities on account of prohibitive freight rates. He could not sell successfully as against his larger competitors in the eastern markets, the brokers and agents that he was compelled to employ thousands of miles away were often unreliable and fleeced him of his profits, and the balance was generally on the wrong side of the ledger. The buyers in California divided the territory among themselves and fixed the price to be paid the growers. He could not, with his small crop, afford to build and maintain such a packing house and curing facilities as were absolutely necessary to put his fruit in the market in proper condition. He could not, alone and without cooperation with others, secure the necessary water supply for irrigation. It was clearly shown that the case of the small grower acting alone was hopeless. He could not do business. With the larger grower the case was different. He could control his shipments and govern his agents. A remedy for this condition, so desperate for the small grower, was sought and has, by degrees, been worked out so that he stands on an equality with the larger growers and dealers. This was done by a system of cooperation on the part of the small growers in the same neighborhood. The difficulty was not alone in shipping and marketing the fruit, but in packing it, and cooperation was necessary even in the cultivation of the fruit. Water for irrigation must be had, and this made it absolutely necessary to organize water companies, composed of the fruit growers, each grower to share in the water according to the size of his orchard, the usual custom in mutual companies being to issue one share of stock for every acre of land owned by the landowners whose lands were to be irrigated.

The first important organization formed was a neighborhood fruit association. This association was the agent of the growers who became members of it. Its duties were to establish a packing house and prepare the fruit for shipment. In some cases, at the will of the members, this has been extended to the pruning and fumigation of the trees and the picking of the fruit, all of which call for peculiar knowledge and skill. The association makes no profit, but renders the services at actual cost, and each member pays his proportionate share of that expense according to the amount of his fruit handled. Then followed the local fruit exchange, another agent of the growers, whose duty it is to look after the shipping of the fruit for the association, its care and inspection in transit, and the selection and control of the agents and brokers through whom the fruit is marketed. Later there came the subexchange and the central exchange, which acted as agent for the district exchanges in providing better facilities and greater convenience. The central exchange makes no profit, but charges up the expenses and collects them from the shippers as in case of the association. This organization is broader in its scope than the district exchange or the association. It is not a neighborhood affair, but is open to all growers in the State and includes not only individual growers but the associations also.

As the business grew in magnitude and importance still another organization was formed with a like purpose known as the Citrus Protective League. It also takes in all individual growers and associations that desire to become members. Its duties are to look after all questions of railroad rates, tariff, and other legislative matters affecting the interests of the fruit growers. Most of the information and data used by me in preparing what I have said on this subject has been furnished by the Citrus Protective League through its very painstaking and efficient secretary and manager. Among other things, he has furnished me with a very interesting and instructive history and status of cooperative marketing of citrus fruits in California. I submit this statement for the consideration of the Senate:

HISTORY AND STATUS OF COOPERATIVE MARKETING OF CITRUS FRUITS IN CALIFORNIA.

The idea of cooperative marketing of citrus fruits in California originated in the necessities of the industry.

Citrus fruits only thrive in a semiarid country and require constant irrigation. They require a high elevation along the foothills skirting the mountains, which necessitates extensive pumping plants and many miles of pipe or ditch lines. The large amount of capital and labor required to produce the orchard has limited holdings to an average of 10 acres to each grower, which is the equivalent of an ordinary farm of 160 acres in the Mississippi Valley, both in the amount of capital required to purchase or produce it and in the amount of labor required to maintain it.

As no single grower could procure the water for his orchard cooperation in the procurement of water became necessary, for the expense of water development is usually prohibitive, except in a large way. The investment required for the usual water system is from a quarter of a million to a million dollars. To secure a water supply cooperation was necessary, and this was the origin of the cooperative idea in California.

When the orchards were grown and producing the growers faced the question of marketing the crop, for the local market was soon more than supplied. The difficulties confronting them were almost insurmountable. Between them and the markets of the country extended 2,000 miles of desert, with severe climatic conditions, with a perishable commodity to transport, with no facilities for preservation or inspection of the fruit while in transit or upon its arrival at markets. The growers were the prey of all kinds of middlemen, brokers, and commission men, who in various ways manipulated the fruit to the loss of the grower, the result being that frequently the grower did not receive enough for his fruit to pay the freight.

A few years of experience with these conditions convinced the growers that they must pack and sell their own fruit. To properly pack the fruit requires a packing house with all its appurtenances and facilities, requiring an investment of from five to fifty thousand dollars. The average grower could not make such an investment and was not educated or trained to handle that department of the business. This condition led to a further extension of the cooperative idea whereby many growers joined together in a cooperative way and erected packing houses and employed men skilled in the business to operate them. And this was the second step in the cooperative idea.

Further experience in the handling of the fruit demonstrated the fact that the fruit must be carefully picked and handled for it to reach the markets without decay, and this was found to be the work of skilful men trained in the work. In the earlier history of the business some of the growers could pick and deliver their fruit in good condition, others could not, and in the pooling system which followed, the cooperative packing, the careful grower and picker suffered a loss from the methods of the careless grower. This condition led to the plan of employing one trained gang of pickers to do the picking for all the growers to insure uniformity of careful methods. And this was the third feature of the cooperative idea.

Further experience in the business made it apparent that the growers could not successfully do their own fumigating and that it was difficult to secure good work by contract. The citrus fruit being only at home in a warm climate, which fosters the production of all kinds of scale and insect pests, it is necessary to fumigate the trees frequently with a cyanogen gas, which is the work of an expert. The growers found that by clubbing together and employing skilful men with the necessary paraphernalia that this work could be more effectively done. And this was the fourth feature of the cooperative movement.

The difficulties of the growers in marketing their product at such great distance from point of production were in securing proper accounting and reliable brokers and agents at the various marketing points. The unbearable loss to the growers and the huge profits to the operators, who were preying upon the business, led to the idea of cooperative marketing.

THE EXCHANGE METHOD OF COOPERATIVE MARKETING.

The group of growers owning a packing house on a cooperative plan is called an association, and as early as 1890 associations were being formed. At that time each association attempted to do its own marketing, meeting with great difficulties, especially in not having sufficient quantity of fruit to justify the employment of agents who would be loyal to their interest, and being the prey of brokers and commission men throughout the country who frequently represented the buyer rather than the grower, and who frequently failed to make returns. These difficulties about the year 1893 led to the grouping of the various associations in each locality into what was called local exchange, in order that there might be a sufficient amount of fruit moved to justify the employment of a better class of agents, in order that the growers might reap some return upon their investment which they had not been able to do up to that time.

The growers found the local exchange to be an improvement over previous conditions, but was still not sufficient for the proper protection of the fruit or to secure adequate marketing methods. It was found necessary for the growers to have inspectors for the fruit at all division points on all the various transcontinental lines to see that the fruit was being properly protected, by a sufficient quantity of ice when refrigeration was required, and by proper ventilation during the ventilating season; that it was necessary to secure a wide distribution of the fruit because it was not then a fruit which was being generally consumed and was supposed to be more of a luxury than a staple food by the consuming public. It was also found necessary to have agents who would stimulate the distribution and sale of the fruit, who would devote themselves to that work to the exclusion of all other. It was also found necessary to obtain prompt information with regard to the various markets in the country to prevent a scarcity at some markets and a glut in others. All these facilities involved an expense too great for any local exchange, and therefore it became necessary to form a larger organization, which was done in the year 1895 by the formation of the Southern California Fruit Exchange, which was formed by the election of one director from each local exchange. This organization has continued from time to time with but slight change of plan. In 1905 the name of the Southern California Fruit Exchange was changed to the California Fruit Growers' Exchange.

The idea of the exchange was broadly democratic. Its duties were to employ agents at all the principal marketing points throughout the United States and Canada, define the duties of such agents, and place them under bonds; to gather full information each day of the condition of each market throughout the country, and furnish the same daily to each association in the form of a bulletin; to faithfully and impartially perform whatever services the association required in the way of marketing their fruit, and make prompt account of returns; to appoint inspectors at each division upon all of the principal lines of railroads to care for the fruit arriving or passing, and at the close of each year make an assessment against each shipper for a pro rata share of the expense on a basis of the number of boxes shipped.

Under this arrangement each shipper reserved to himself the right to determine the amount of his production, the time of shipment, the place of sale, and the price at which he would sell. The agent of the exchange at each marketing point acts directly under the orders of the owner of each car shipped. The general exchange never sells a car or makes any order with regard to a car of fruit, but is simply the medium through which the order passes from the shipper to the agent on the ground. This relation is with great particularity and exactitude set forth in a written contract between the general exchange on the one hand and the local exchange and associations on the other appended hereto, and is still more clearly defined to the agents on the ground by the instructions issued by the exchange thereto attached.

THE LEGAL STATUS OF THE EXCHANGE AND ASSOCIATIONS.

The unit in these operations is the grower who owns on an average 10 acres of citrus trees. The primary organization is the association, which on an average embraces about 50 growers, or 500 acres for each packing house. The association is usually a corporation under the laws of California, without pecuniary profit, it being stated in the articles and by-laws that packing, picking, and handling the fruit will be done at actual cost pro rata on the boxes shipped from each grower. The usual method is to issue the stock to each grower in proportion to the number of acres of orchard which he owns. In some instances it is issued on the basis of the number of boxes shipped and in some other instances each member has one vote regardless of his acres or production. The only property owned by this association is its packing house and appurtenances. It accumulates no profit and declares no dividends.

The proceeds of the sale of the fruit for each grower are returned to him, less packing expenses. In some instances the fruit is graded and pooled each month, each grower receiving his proportion for the amount of each grade furnished each month. In other instances the fruit for the entire season is pooled, each grower receiving his proportion for each grade for the year, and in other instances the fruit is handled and shipped for each grower individually. There are now 110 of these associations affiliated with the California Fruit Growers' Exchange.

The secondary organization in this system is the local exchange, which usually comprises all of the associations in a colony or in a locality, but in some instances several colonies are embraced in one local exchange, and in very large colonies there are two or more local exchanges.

The local exchange is a corporation without profit under the laws of California, with nominal capital stock, usually one share for each association belonging to it, and one director for each association. This local exchange is a local clearing house for shipment, and its duties are to order cars and see that they are spotted at the various packing houses; to keep a record of all shipments made and destinations, and receive all returns from the various agents at the various marketing points; to aid in securing information as to markets; to transmit the orders of each association with regard to handling of cars; to keep a constant check on the business and see that orders for fruit are promptly filled, that collections are promptly made, and to afford a medium through which information from the general exchange and the agents throughout the country pass to the association which ships the fruit.

The final organization is the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, which now has a capital stock of $1,600 and a director representing each local exchange. The California Fruit Growers' Exchange is a corporation under the laws of California, but without profit. It makes no earnings and declares no dividends. It neither buys nor sells fruit nor any other commodity. It exercises no control whatever, directly or indirectly, over the buying or selling of fruit or any other commodity. It simply furnishes facilities for the use of such people as wish to avail themselves of them at a pro rata share of the cost.

The associations affiliated with the California Fruit Growers' Exchange shipped 10,843,831 boxes, or 28,123 cars, of citrus fruit during the past season, 1910–11, which is 61 per cent of the California production and is 40 per cent of the total consumption of oranges in the United States and 35 per cent of the total consumption of lemons in the United States. During this past year this fruit averaged $1.89 free on board cars and brought $20,600,000.

The membership in this organization is entirely voluntary. Any grower may withdraw from any association at the end of any year, and any association may withdraw from any local exchange and any local exchange may withdraw from the general exchange.

About one-third of the entire shipment is sold on open auction. All fruit sold in the following cities is at auction, to wit: Boston, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and New Orleans. At other points there is untrammeled competition between the various associations and there is not uniformity in price.

There is a great variation in grades, quality, and appearance of fruit, and naturally in all markets fruit sells upon its merits. They widely vary in price. Usually the eastern auction commands the highest price and the cities are naturally larger consumers than the smaller places. As these fruits are perishable and must under necessity be promptly sold, it would not be possible to manipulate the markets even though the growers were so disposed, for any scarcity in one market to advance prices would lead to a plethora in the next with a corresponding reduction.

There are in addition to the California Fruit Growers' Exchange about 40 independent cooperative associations and individual grower shippers, which with the exchange handle 85 per cent of the citrus crop of California. The independent cooperative associations conduct their operations along the same general lines as outlined above.

The Citrus Protective League of California is a voluntary organization, formed in March, 1906, by representatives of growers, shippers, and shipping organizations in nearly all of the citrus-growing localities in the State to handle the public-policy questions that affect the industry as a whole.

Its purpose is to represent the grower and shipper in handling such questions as railroad rates and transportation problems, customs tariff, and other Government relations, State and Federal legislation that apply directly to the citrus business, and all of the questions of a general nature that affect the upbuilding of the industry except the marketing of the fruit.

The league is directed by an executive committee of nine and by a secretary and manager, the executive committee having been appointed by an administrative committee of 30 of the principal growers and shippers, who act as a governing committee, and who were selected from the representative delegates who organized the league in 1906. The Citrus Protective League represents about 90 per cent of the industry.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield further to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. WORKS. I do.

Mr. BRISTOW. I was interested in the Senator's discussion as to the number of acres which each farmer owns in the lemon-producing region. As I remember there are but two who own more than 500 acres, who are the large lemon producers. I wanted to inquire if the nature of the business is such that the men owning the smaller orchard can better or more economically handle his crop. For instance, the experience in the prairie country is that the most successful farmer is the farmer who can give his personal attention to his farm, and the big farmer farms at a heavier expense than the smaller farmer.

Mr. WORKS. Undoubtedly that is true, Mr. President, with respect to the growing of lemons in so far as the cultivation of the farm is concerned. These organizations are for the purpose of handling the fruit after it is ready for the market, and cooperation for that purpose seems to be absolutely necessary for their protection, for the reasons I have attempted to state.

Mr. BRISTOW. I understood that, but the impression has been circulated, to some extent at least, that the lemon business is a business which the large corporations engage in successfully and that the small farmer is being crowded out in the interest of the big concerns.

Mr. WORKS. That would be true except for the very thing I have been talking about. The small growers have been able to associate themselves together and by cooperation to meet just exactly that condition, and that having been done they can operate their ranches just as successfully and just as cheaply as the big growers.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. WORKS. I yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will apologize to the Senator in advance if he covered the point upon which I am going to ask a question. I was unavoidably called from the Chamber during the first part of the Senator's address. Can the Senator state, or has the Senator stated, the proportion of domestic product to the entire consumption of lemons in this country?

Mr. WORKS. Yes; I have endeavored to cover that thoroughly.

Mr. GALLINGER. Could the Senator restate it offhand?

Mr. WORKS. I could not; it is contained in the tables. If the Senator ever finds time to read what I have said, I think he will find that covered.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will endeavor to acquaint myself with it.

I will ask the Senator one other question, and that is as to the possibility, if the lemon industry is adequately protected against the cheap labor of Sicily, and other countries perhaps, of this country producing practically all the lemons that would be consumed here.

Mr. WORKS. That I have covered completely. I have shown, I think, conclusively that there is ample land in California adapted to the growth of lemons to supply the demand. From what I know about that, I have no doubt whatever.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will excuse me for again interrupting him, four years ago I voted against the increase in the duty on lemons proposed in the Payne-Aldrich bill, believing that a cent a pound was enough. Now, I want to inquire of the Senator from California if the duty should have remained at a cent a pound, or should be now placed at a cent a pound, whether, in his judgment, that would be a satisfactory protective duty for the lemon business.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, from my investigation of this whole subject—and I have endeavored to investigate it conscientiously—I am satisfied that a tariff of a cent a pound would be sufficient to protect the industry. On the other hand, I think that the increase in the tariff under the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was a great incentive to landowners in California to increase their lemon planting, and that it has been advantageous in that way. I have no doubt in the world but that the lemon growers of California would cultivate the fruit successfully under a rate of 1 cent a pound.

Mr. BURTON. Will the Senator pardon me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. WORKS. I yield.

Mr. BURTON. What has been the course of prices of lemons since the passage of the tariff act of 1909?

Mr. WORKS. I have also covered that subject.

Mr. BURTON. I was unfortunately not here.

Mr. WORKS. I have included in my remarks a table showing the exact prices paid for lemons in the larger cities—the eastern cities—covering several years. There has been practically no change in the price of lemons to the consumer at retail, or, for that matter, at wholesale, on account of the tariff. I think the figures show that quite conclusively.

Mr. BURTON. That is, the increase of rate has not increased the price?

Mr. WORKS. It has not.

Mr. BRISTOW. I apologize to the Senator again for interrupting him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. WORKS. I yield.

Mr. BRISTOW. Shortly after we passed the last tariff bill—that is, the 1909 bill—the railroad companies increased the rates on citrus fruits from California east so as to take up, as it appeared to me, a part of the advantage which Congress had undertaken to give the lemon growers of California. I wanted to ask the Senator if that increase in the rate was maintained by the companies and was that taken out of the help which Congress undertook to give the lemon growers by this additional duty?

Mr. WORKS. That also I have covered quite thoroughly.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am sorry, but I did not hear that part of the Senator's address.

Mr. WORKS. I have been unfortunate in having Senators come in after I have covered a subject. I am very willing and anxious to inform the Senator on that subject. Briefly stated, the facts are that the rail rate was increased, and the lemon growers have been contesting that rate ever since. It first went to the Interstate Commerce Commission and was decided in favor of the growers. It was appealed to the Commerce Court and the case was reversed and sent back. It was again tried in the Interstate Commerce Commission, and again the commission held in favor of the growers—that the rate of $1.15 was excessive. As I remember it, it again went to the Commerce Court, and that decision was affirmed, and it is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States.

In the meantime, under an injunction that was issued, there was an order of court made that the whole amount of $1.15 a hundred should be paid into the court, but 15 cents of that was to be held by the court until the case was finally determined, and then either returned to the grower or paid to the railroad companies, as the case may be.

As further showing the nature of the relations between the growers and these different organizations, I also submit the forms of contracts between the neighborhood associations and what is called the subexchange, and between the subexchange and the central exchange, mentioned in the above history, and between the individual grower and his local association.

They are as follows:

This agreement, made and entered into this — day of ——— A. D. 191—, by and between the ———, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of this State, with its principal office in ———, California, the party of the first part, and several corporations and parties who have signed this agreement, parties of the second part, said corporations and parties being hereafter designated as second parties.

Whereas the system of marketing and handling citrus fruits devised by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange has been approved by the parties hereto as a satisfactory system of cooperative marketing, now, in consideration of the foregoing, the parties of the second part do hereby severally agree to market all fruit now controlled by them or that may hereafter come under their control during the term of this agreement through said first party, it being understood and agreed that the said party of the first part has entered into an agreement with the California Fruit Growers' Exchange for the sale of said fruit in accordance with the general plan adopted by said exchange, to which plan and agreement reference is hereby made, and the same is hereby made a part of this agreement.

The said party of the first part is hereby authorized to retain as brokerage, from the net proceeds rendered to it by the agents of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, or from any other sales of fruit under this agreement, such sum of money as their board of directors may from time to time designate or deem sufficient to cover the expenses incurred in making such sales. Should the actual expenses incurred by the said party of the first part during the term of this agreement amount to less than the fund derived from the brokerage so retained, then the surplus shall be refunded to the said parties of the second part, according to the number of boxes of fruit shipped by each, the board of directors adjusting the rebate upon an equitable basis. Should the actual expenses incurred by the said party of the first part during the term of this agreement amount to more than the fund derived from the brokerage so retained, then the said parties of the second part agree to pay an assessment to be levied upon them to make up the amount of the deficiency, said assessment to be levied upon the number of boxes shipped by each of the said parties of the second part, but oranges, lemons, and other citrus fruit, as well as auctions and agents' sales, may be assessed on a separate basis, and for different amounts: Provided, That whatever difference, if any, is made by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange in its charges for marketing oranges, lemons, and other citrus fruit, respectively, shall be followed and carried out in the adjustment of moneys retained by the party of the first part from the said parties of the second part.

The party of the first part agrees to use its best efforts to sell and dispose of the fruit controlled by the said parties of the second part, but it is expressly understood that in so doing it acts only as the agent of the said parties of the second part, and assumes no responsibility or financial liability therefor further than it agrees to turn over to the several parties of the second part the cash proceeds of all sales of their fruit as soon as received, retaining the brokerage for expenses, as above provided.

The parties of the second part further agree to pay to the party of the first part as liquidated damages the sum of 25 cents a box on all citrus fruits controlled by them, which, through any fault of their own, they fail to deliver to the party of the first part, loaded on cars at shipping station of said party of the second part.

This agreement shall continue in force until the 1st day of September, 1920: Provided, That any of the parties hereto may withdraw from and cancel this agreement during the first 15 days of August in any year, by giving notice in writing during said period to the party of the first part.

In witness whereof, the said corporations have each hereunto caused its corporate name and seal to be affixed by its president and secretary duly authorized by resolution of its board of directors, duly passed and adopted, and all other parties have hereunto signed their individual names and affixed their individual seals.

———— ————,

[SEAL.] By ———— ———— President.
By ———— ———— Secretary.

———— ————,

[SEAL.] By ———— ———— President.
By ———— ———— Secretary.

Contract between central exchange and subexchanges.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT GROWERS' EXCHANGE CONTRACT.

This agreement, made this — day of ————, 1910, by and between the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, a corporation organized under the laws of California, party of the first part, and sundry parties consisting of corporations, partnerships, and individuals affiliated with the party of the first part, and who execute this agreement, parties of the second part:

Witnesseth: That whereas it has been deemed necessary by the parties of the second part to associate themselves together and cooperate in the matter of developing the citrus industry and marketing its products for the following named

PRINCIPAL PURPOSES AND OBJECTS.

To lessen the cost of marketing by creating agencies who will act for each member.

To insure the collection of sales.

To facilitate the collection of damage claims.

To encourage the improvement of the product and the package.

To increase the consumption of citrus fruit by developing new markets and to aid in supplying all the people with good fruit at a reasonable price.

To secure a fair and just government of all bodies affiliated with these parties, democratic in principle, and through which at all times all policies shall be controlled by the majority will of the shippers connected therewith in just proportion to shipments made. That the business engaged in, being interstate in character, to secure at all times full compliance with the laws of the United States concerning interstate commerce, and to that end prevent any organization connected therewith from having any power or authority in contravention of the laws of the United States concerning such business, the general plan being to unite in securing those results which are beneficial to all alike, but at the same time preserving to each shipper complete independence of action as to all his shipments. Thereupon the following stipulations are agreed to in lieu of all previous agreements:

First. The party of the first part shall be considered the general agent of all the parties of the second part in all matters concerning the marketing of citrus fruit, and such other matters as are incident thereto within the limitations hereinafter provided, with power to provide a suitable place for doing business.

To elect or appoint a suitable official force to supervise the business, at such salaries as may from time to time be considered proper by the directors of the party of the first part.

To employ a force of sales agents stationed at various points throughout the United States, Canada, and such other countries as may be decided upon as will be sufficient to dispose of the products of the second parties in all available territory.

To organize and maintain a claim department for the handling of all claims.

To maintain a legal department to take care of the necessary litigation and furnish advice to the various organizations connected herewith.

To maintain an advertising bureau for the purpose of stimulating consumption and demand.

To create any other department, or incur any other expense which may be deemed necessary by the board of directors of the party of the first part to protect all these interests of the parties of the second part of a general nature, and which will affect all alike within the scope of the duties of the first party as herein provided.

COOPERATION.

It is agreed that all of the information obtained by the party of the first part; all of the facilities established by it; all of the books or records maintained by it; all of the agencies, both general or local, shall always be at all times available to the second parties or their accredited representatives.

The second parties will at all times cooperate for whatever object may, within the law, be deemed to be for the general good. They will each and all abide by and be bound by all the contracts, agreements, and sales made by the party of the first part for any member of such organization, and will promptly ratify any action taken by the party of the first part or any of its authorized agencies in behalf of any or all of the parties of the second part within the scope of the authority of such agencies.

LIFE OF AGREEMENT.

This agreement shall continue in force and effect until the 1st day of September, 1920, and during that period the parties of the second part and all associations, corporations, partnerships, or individuals connected with such second parties, or shipping through such second parties or any of them, will ship all their citrus fruits through the parties of the first part and the marketing agencies by it established, and for such period of time will consign all shipments to the party of the first part at some point where the said party of the first part has representation, through and by the local exchange with which each association is affiliated: Provided, however, That any party to this agreement may withdraw therefrom on the 1st day of September of any year, and be no longer bound by the stipulations herein agreed upon, by filing a written notice of withdrawal with the party of the first part 10 days or more before any such date; and said second party agrees that if it shall at any time during the life of this agreement fail to ship all its citrus fruits as hereinbefore agreed upon, or shall dispose of all or any of it elsewhere, or otherwise than as herein agreed upon, that it will forfeit and pay as liquidated damages to the party of the first part an amount equal to 25 cents a box on all such citrus fruits which are or may be shipped or sold otherwise than as stipulated in this contract, providing the first party was ready and willing to receive and handle such fruit.

RESERVED RIGHTS OF SHIPPERS.

It is understood, however, that each shipper reserves to itself the right to regulate and control its own shipments, to use its own judgment, and decide for itself when and in what amounts it shall ship; to what markets it shall ship; where its products shall be sold; and, except at auction points, the price it is willing to receive, fully reserving the right of free competition with all other shippers, including other members of this organization, unhampered and uncontrolled by anyone.

EXPENSES.

First. All fruit, however sold, shall be assessed alike per box in proportion to the carriers' estimated weight to pay salaries and expenses of the general manager, general eastern agent, and their assistants and all employees, rents, and expenses of the Los Angeles office of the party of the first part, including all telegrams and general items of expense, such as printing, supplies, inspection of fruit, etc.; also to pay the expense of establishing a claim department for the purpose of making and collecting claims against railroad companies and other corporations and individuals, including the salary of a claim agent and all necessary assistants and clerks and all other necessary expense; also to pay all necessary legal expenses, including salaries of one or more attorneys for necessary legal advice and all legal expenses necessary to prosecute claims and suits in courts, both Federal and State, and before the Interstate Commerce Commission; also to pay all expenses of proper and judicious advertising for the purpose of extending and increasing the sale of the citrus fruit of the parties of the second part; also to pay all proper expenses of extending the sale of said fruit in foreign countries and all other necessary and proper expense that may be incurred in protecting and furthering the interests of the said parties of the second part, excepting that fruit sold by the local exchanges at their expense and risk, either at auction or at private sale, at such points as the board of directors may from time to time determine shall be excluded from these charges and assessed an arbitrary charge to be fixed by the board of directors of the party of the first part.

Second. All fruit sold, at auction or on commission, except as hereinbefore provided, shall, in addition to expense named in first paragraph, be assessed alike per box in proportion to carriers' estimated weight to pay the salaries and expenses of agents, inspectors, and other expenses as may accrue in auction agencies.

All auction and commission charges shall be borne by the respective shipments and deducted from the proceeds of sale of each car or shipment.

Third. All fruit sold otherwise than herein provided shall, in addition to expense named in first paragraph, be assessed alike per box in proportion to carriers' estimated weight to pay all expenses connected with the marketing of the same not provided for in subdivision No. 1 of this article, including all salaries, brokerages, office and incidental expenses of the various agents (not including auction agency expenses).

ASSESSMENTS.

The said party of the first part shall make a statement within 30 days after the 1st day of September of each year, and a readjustment of such statement once a month, covering all shipments for that season, made up to the time of the statement or readjustment, and levy an assessment on the parties of the second part according to the number of boxes shipped. Such assessment shall be due within three days from date on which it is made. In the event of failure to pay any such assessment within 10 days from its date the party of the first part may refuse to handle any fruit for the delinquent party until all assessments past due have been paid.

BONDS OF AGENTS.

Agents shall be selected and employed by the party of the first part, on salaries or brokerage, and each shall be required to furnish a satisfactory bond in some responsible guaranty company for the faithful performance of his duties.

INFORMATION AS TO PRICES.

The party of the first part shall require its agents to keep it fully informed as to the condition of the market, the arrival and condition of the fruit, the wholesale and retail prices of fruit in their respective districts, and furnish such other information as may be required of them, and such information shall be immediately transmitted by said party of the first part to all the parties of the second part.

QUOTATIONS BY SECOND PARTIES.

No schedule of prices or quotation shall be issued or be distributed by any of the parties of the second part, except through the party of the first part.

NO SPECIAL AGENTS.

None of the parties of the second part shall employ any traveling man, agent, or solicitor for the sale of its fruit.

COPIES TO SECOND PARTY.

Copies of all correspondence or other matters in any manner affecting the interests of the parties of the second part shall be promptly forwarded by the respective agents to the parties of the second part whose interests are involved.

MONEY DIRECT TO SECOND PARTIES.

The party of the first part shall cause the fruit furnished by said several parties of the second part to be sold for the account of the party of the second part furnishing the fruit, and full report and account sales shall be promptly rendered therefor, and payment of money made direct to the party of the second part shipping such fruit, and a copy of the account sales shall be rendered to the party of the first part. Said party of the second part shall be required to report promptly to the said party of the first part the nonpayment of any drafts and acceptances received by them in settlement for fruit.

ESTIMATES.

Each of the parties of the second part shall furnish to the secretary of the party of the first part an estimate of the number of cars of each variety of fruit controlled by said second party as often as called for by the board of directors of said first party.

CARLOADS.

That whenever in this contract the word "car" occurs, as relating to a carload of fruit, it shall be considered as containing the minimum fixed by the carriers.

RESPONSIBILITY OF FIRST PARTY.

The party of the first part agrees to use its best efforts to sell, market, and dispose of the fruit belonging to said parties of the second part as aforesaid, but it is expressly agreed between the parties hereto that the said party of the first part in the sale and disposal of said fruit acts only as an agent of the said parties of the second part and shall not be held liable for any loss that may result in disposing of such fruit, except as herein provided.

LOSSES.

The only losses assumed by the party of the first part are those arising from financial failures or default of purchasers after having positively accepted the fruit, and which default is not due to complaint of the buyer of the quality, condition, or grade of the shipment, and these losses shall be assessed to the parties of the second part on a percentage based upon the gross f. o. b. returns for the year.

Citrus fruit, dried fruits, green deciduous fruit, and nuts shall each, respectively, prorate its own loss.

CLAIMS.

The party of the first part shall maintain a claim department for the collection of all claims against railroads and transportation companies, and at the request of any of the parties of the second part, the party of the first part shall to the best of its ability collect and prosecute on behalf of the party in interest any claim for overcharge or loss and damage not herein provided for, and also, upon the approval of its board of directors, bring suit and prosecute the same in the courts, all at the expense of the party of the first part.

INTERESTS OF PARTIES.

All matters of business involving the interests of the parties hereto not herein specified, shall be determined by the said party of the first part, or by a meeting of representatives from said parties of the second part, as hereinafter provided.

BOARD OF REPRESENTATIVES.

To aid in carrying out the provisions of this agreement a board of representatives is hereby created, to which each of the exchanges parties of the second part shall be entitled to appoint one representative, to hold at the pleasure of the appointing party, such party having the right to remove or change its representative at any time: Provided, That all appointments, removals, and changes shall, by the party making the same, be certified in writing to the party of the first part, and shall take effect when so certified. The representatives so appointed shall constitute such board, and its due organization and powers shall not be affected by the failure of any party to make or certify its appointment of a representative. The president of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange shall be ex officio chairman of said board, but in case of his absence or failure to perform his duties as such chairman, the board shall elect a chairman for the time being. The board shall elect its own secretary, who shall keep a record of its proceedings.

Meetings of said board of representatives shall be immediately called by the acting secretary of the board of directors of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange at the request of any two members of said board. Said meetings shall be held in the office of the party of the first part at 11 o'clock a. m., on the next regular meeting day of the board of directors of the party of the first part. Notice of said meetings to be given to all the representatives of the parties of the second part by notice through the United States post office, mailed on the day of calling such meeting. Representatives of a majority of the total shipments of the previous season at any meeting called as herein provided, shall constitute a quorum.

Said board shall have the supervision of all matters pertaining to carrying out the provisions of this agreement, as advisory to the board of directors of the party of the first part; and upon request of any two members of said board of directors, any question as to carrying out any of the provisions of this agreement shall, by said board of directors be referred to said board of representatives.

At any meeting of said board of representatives, upon demand by any representative, the vote on any question under consideration shall be taken upon a percentage basis, in which case each representative shall have the same percentage of the total vote as the party appointing him shipped of the total of all fruit shipped by the parties of the second part hereto for the year ending August 31 last prior to said meeting.

When any vote on any question pertaining to the carrying out of any provision of this agreement shall have been taken by said board of representatives, the fact of such vote and the result shall be certified to the board of directors of the party of the first part and the California Fruit Growers' Exchange shall take notice of the result of such action as instructions from the second parties to the contract and carry on the business as directed by such vote of the representatives of said second parties.

ASSOCIATIONS AND GROWERS' CONTRACTS.

Every exchange becoming a party to this agreement shall furnish to the party of the first part a copy of the contracts between associations and growers or the local exchange and the growers or associations, each of which contracts shall in terms ratify this agreement.

In witness whereof the said corporations have each hereunto caused its corporate name and seal to be affixed by its president and secretary thereunto duly authorized by resolution of its board of directors, duly passed and adopted.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT GROWERS' EXCHANGE.

[SEAL.] By ——— ———, President.
By ——— ———, Secretary.

AZUSA-COVINA-GLENDORA FRUIT EXCHANGE.

[SEAL.] By ——— ———, Secretary.
By ——— ———, President.

—

Agreement between association and members (the growers).

UNIFORM CROP AGREEMENT.

(Recommended by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange for use by all of its affiliated associations.)

This agreement, made the — day of ——— A. D. 191—, between the ——— association, a corporation incorporated under the laws of the State of California, and having its principal place of business at ———, in said State, and affiliated with the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, a corporation incorporated under said laws for the purpose of marketing California citrus fruits, the party of the first part, and the undersigned citrus fruit growers of ———, said State, the parties of the second part, witnesseth:

SALE AND DELIVERY OF FRUIT.

1. That, for and in consideration of the sum of $1, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged by each of the second parties, and of the covenants and agreements herein contained, each of the second parties hereby sells and conveys, and agrees to pick, haul, and deliver to the first party, at its packing house at ———, in said State, for the purpose of packing, selling, and marketing all the citrus fruits now growing upon his land and premises, and all that during the term of this agreement may be grown upon his land and premises, or any other lands or premises owned by him and situated in the county of ———, said State, at such time or times, and from time to time, and in such quantities, as the first party or its agent may direct.

PACKING AND MARKETING.

2. The first party agrees to receive, pack, sell, and market all of said fruit whenever a market may be found for the same, which in the judgment of the first party and in accordance with its rules and regulations, shall justify such selling and shipment.

PROCEEDS.

3. The first party agrees to pay to each of the second parties the amount received for his said fruit, less its regular charges for packing, shipping, selling, and marketing the same.

WITHDRAWAL OF LAND.

4. If any of the second parties shall, in good faith, sell his said lands, or any part thereof, he shall be released from this agreement as to all lands sold and conveyed upon giving notice in writing thereof to the first party.

TERM OF AGREEMENT.

5. This agreement shall continue in full force and effect from the date hereof until November 1 of the year of the date hereof, and for a further term next thereafter of five years.

SUSPENSION OF AGREEMENT.

6. Any of the second parties to this agreement may be released therefrom and terminate and end the same as to him by filing a written notice of his desire to be so released with the party of the first part during the first 15 days of August of any year during the term of this agreement.

BY-LAWS.

7. The by-laws of the first party and the contract between the first party and its local exchange, and the contract between such local exchange and the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, shall be parts of this agreement and shall be binding upon each of the second parties, except in those particulars in which it is expressly herein stipulated to the contrary.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

8. The packing, selling, and marketing of the said fruit shall be done in accordance with the rules and regulations of the first party now or hereafter adopted and observed by it.

PURPOSE AND POSSESSION.

9. Each of the second parties fully understands that the purpose, among others, of this agreement is to maintain and to increase to its greatest efficiency the present cooperative fruit selling and marketing agency known as the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, whose stockholders are the representatives of various subexchanges, and the stockholders of which said subexchanges are the representatives of the various and numerous fruit associations of the State of California, of which the first party is one; and that to accomplish this purpose it is necessary that each of the parties of the second part shall strictly and fully comply with and perform the stipulations of this agreement on his part, and therefore each of the second parties expressly stipulates and agrees that he will not sell or otherwise dispose of his said fruit to any person or corporation other than to said first party, as herein provided; and that in case he shall fail, refuse, or delay to pick and deliver his said fruit to the first party within five days after demand therefor, the first party shall have the right, at its option, at any time or times thereafter, and from time to time, to enter into the possession of his said premises and to pick his said fruit, or any part thereof, and take the same to the packing house of the first party and pack, sell, and market the same, all at his cost and expense, which said cost and expense shall and may be retained by the first party out of any moneys received from the sale of any of his fruit.

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

10. The actual damages which will be sustained by the first party because of the failure or refusal of any of the second parties to pick and deliver his said fruit as herein provided, and the further detriment and injury to the first party because of the effect of said breach upon the California Fruit Growers' Exchange and its efficiency, and the expenses to which the first party will be put and the damage caused by outlays incurred and to be incurred by it in providing means for selling and marketing the said fruit, are impossible now to estimate or fix, and therefore the same are estimated and agreed upon as 25 cents for each box of fruit grown or sold, which sum shall be allowed in any action brought by the first party to recover damages for the breach of this agreement by any of the second parties, should the first party elect, as it may elect, to bring such action.

In witness whereof the said corporations have each hereunto caused its corporate name and seal to be affixed by its president and secretary, duly authorized by resolution of its board of directors, duly passed and adopted, and all other parties have hereunto signed their individual names and affixed their individual seals.

——— ASSOCIATION,
By ——— ———, President.
By ——— ———, Secretary.

——— ———, owning — acres.
——— ———, owning — acres.
——— ———, owning — acres.

It will be seen by this history and the several contracts mentioned that every growers' association is left perfectly free to sell its fruit where and at such price as it pleases. Neither the association, the exchange, nor the protective league has any control over prices unless the grower voluntarily gives this right, independently of his written contract. The fruit is transported by and under the direction of the exchange, but it is sent wherever the association orders it to be sent. It is sold through agencies appointed by the exchange, but the association fixes the price at which it is to be sold, and neither the exchange nor the agent or broker has any right to vary from this price.

The Senate should understand that these associations are mere neighborhood cooperative associations; that there are hundreds of them, and that competition exists as between those associations as well as between other persons who are dealers.

The grower is under no coercion whatever. He may sever his connection with any one of the organizations at the end of any year on the short notice provided in the contracts. Besides this, only a part of the fruit growers belong to these organizations. There are many entirely independent shippers. Only about 60 per cent of the fruit raisers of the State belong to the exchange, 20 per cent belong to other associations, 5 per cent are independent grower-shippers, and 15 per cent sell their fruit to others in California or in other ways.

Senators must see from this showing that the joining together of the growers in this way for their mutual benefit has none of the elements of a trust. It does not fix or control prices or interfere with competition in any way whatever.

RATES OF TARIFF UNDER EARLIER STATUTES.

It may be interesting, in this connection, to notice what has been the policy of the Government in the protection of citrus fruits by a protective tariff in years past. It will show that from the beginning until now lemons and their by-products have been protected. I submit a statement of tariff legislation affecting this industry from 1790 to 1909.

It is as follows:

THE RATE OF DUTY ON CITRUS FRUITS AND THEIR BY-PRODUCTS ENTERING THE UNITED STATES FROM 1790 TO 1909, INCLUSIVE.—NO. 9.

There has been a duty in one form or other on citrus fruits and some of their by-products for more than 100 years. Beginning with the tariff act of August 10, 1790, the rates of duty under the successive tariff acts are as follows, the table having been submitted and approved by the United States Treasury Department, No. 9. (No. 9, tariff acts passed by the Congress of the United States, 1790 to 1909, Document No. 671, House of Representatives, Sixty-first Congress, second session.)

RATES OF DUTY ON CITRUS FRUITS, BY-PRODUCTS OF CITRUS FRUITS AND PACKAGES, FROM 1789 TO 1909.

Act of July 4, 1789: On all other goods, wares, and merchandise, 5 per cent on the value thereof at the time and place of importation.

Act of August 10, 1790: Oranges, lemons, and limes, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Act of June 7, 1794: Oranges, lemons, and limes, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Act of March 26, 1804, and reenacted each year thereafter until February 17, 1813: Seventeen and one-half per cent ad valorem on oranges, lemons, and limes.

Act of July 1, 1812: Oranges, lemons, and limes, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Act of July 14, 1832: Lemons and limes exempted from duty.

Act of September 1, 1841: On all articles admitted free or which are chargeable with a duty of less than 20 per cent, a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem.

Act of August 30, 1842: Oranges and lemons, in boxes, barrels, or casks, 20 per cent ad valorem. Citric acid, 20 per cent ad valorem. All volatile and essential oils, 20 per cent ad valorem, not otherwise specified. Essences, not otherwise enumerated, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Act of July 30, 1846: Oranges, lemons, and limes; orange and lemon peel, 20 per cent ad valorem. Lemon and lime juice, 10 per cent ad valorem. Citric acid, 20 per cent ad valorem. Oil, volatile, essential, or expressed, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Act of March 3, 1857: Oils, volatile, essential or expressed, 24 per cent ad valorem. Oranges, lemons, and limes: orange and lemon peel, 8 per cent ad valorem. Citric acid, 4 per cent ad valorem. Lemon and lime juice, 8 per cent ad valorem.

Act of March 2, 1861: Oranges, lemons, and limes; orange and lemon peel; lemon and lime juice, 10 per cent ad valorem. Oils, volatile, essential, or expressed, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Act of August 5, 1861: Limes, lemons, and oranges, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Act of July 14, 1862: Citric acid, 10 cents per pound. Lemon and orange oil, 50 cents per pound.

Act of June 30, 1864: Lemons, oranges, fruits preserved in their own juice and fruit juice, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Act of July 14, 1870: Oranges and lemons, 20 per cent ad valorem; limes and shaddocks, 10 per cent ad valorem. Citrate of lime, free. Orange and lemon peel, free.

Act of June 6, 1872: Orange buds and flowers, free.

Act of March 3, 1883: Oranges, in boxes of capacity not exceeding 2½ cubic feet, 25 cents per box; in one-half boxes, capacity not exceeding 1¼ cubic feet, 13 cents per half box; in bulk, $1.60 per thousand; in barrels, capacity not exceeding that of the 196-pound flour barrel, 55 cents per barrel. Lemons, in boxes of capacity not exceeding 2½ cubic feet, 30 cents per box; in one-half boxes, capacity not exceeding 1¼ cubic feet, 16 cents per half box; in bulk, $2 per thousand. Lemons and oranges in packages not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, 20 per cent ad valorem. Limes, 20 per cent ad valorem. Citric acid, 10 cents per pound. Fruits preserved in their own juice and fruit juice, 20 per cent ad valorem. Lemon and orange oils, limes and orange flower, free. Casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other vessels of American manufacture, exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks when returned as barrels or boxes, free. Citrate of lime, free. Lemon and lime juice, free. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or otherwise preserved, free. Fruits preserved in sugar, spirits, or molasses, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Act of October 1, 1890: Oranges, lemons, and limes in packages of capacity of 1½ cubic feet or less, 13 cents per package; in packages of capacity exceeding 1½ cubic feet and not exceeding 2½ cubic feet, 25 cents per package; in packages of capacity exceeding 2½ cubic feet and not exceeding 5 cubic feet, 50 cents per package; in packages of capacity exceeding 5 cubic feet, for every additional cubic foot or fractional part thereof, 10 cents in bulk, $1.50 per 1,000; and in addition thereto a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem upon the boxes or barrels containing such oranges, lemons, or limes. Articles of the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States, exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks, when returned as barrels or boxes, free. Citric acid, 10 cents per pound. Citrate of lime; lemon juice, lime juice, and sour-orange juice; lemon, lime, orange, and neroli or orange flower oil, free. Orange peel and lemon peel, preserved or candied, 2 cents per pound. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or otherwise prepared, free. Fruits preserved in their own juices, 30 per cent ad valorem. Fruits preserved in sugar, sirup, molasses, or spirits, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Act of August 27, 1894: Oranges, lemons, and limes, in packages, at the rate of 8 cents per cubic foot of capacity; in bulk, $1.50 per 1,000; and in addition thereto a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem upon boxes or barrels containing such oranges, lemons, or limes: Provided, That the thin wood, so called, comprising the sides, tops, and bottoms of orange and lemon boxes of the growth and manufacture of the United States, exported as orange and lemon box shooks, may be reimported in completed form, filled with oranges and lemons, by the payment of duty at one-half the rate imposed on similar boxes of entirely foreign growth and manufacture. Citric acid, 25 per cent ad valorem. Citrate of lime, lemon, lime and sour-orange juice, lemonade, lemon limes, neroli or orange flower, and orange oil, free. Orange peel and lemon peel, preserved or candied, 30 per cent ad valorem. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or otherwise prepared, free. Fruits preserved in their own juices, 20 per cent ad valorem. Fruits preserved in sugar, sirup, or molasses, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Act of July 24, 1897: Oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks or pomelos, 1 cent per pound. Boxes, barrels, or other articles containing oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks or pomelos, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That the thin wood, so called, comprising the sides, tops, and bottoms of orange and lemon boxes of the growth and manufacture of the United States, exported as orange and lemon box shooks, may be reimported in completed form, filled with oranges and lemons, by the payment of duty at one-half the rate imposed on similar boxes entirely of foreign growth and manufacture. Citric acid, 7 cents per pound. Citrate of lime, lemon juice, lime juice, and sour-orange juice, orange, lemon, limes, and neroli or orange flower oil, free. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved or candied or dried, free. Orange peel or lemon peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 2 cents per pound. Fruits in brine, free. Fruits preserved in sugar, molasses, spirits, or their own juices, 1 cent per pound and 35 per cent ad valorem.

Act of August 5, 1909: Lemons, 1½ cents per pound; oranges, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks or pomelos, 1 cent per pound. Boxes, barrels, or other articles containing oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks or pomelos, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That the thin wood, so called, comprising the sides, tops, and bottoms of orange and lemon boxes of the growth and manufacture of the United States, exported as orange and lemon box shooks, may be reimported in completed form, filled with oranges and lemons, by the payment of duty at one-half the rate imposed on similar boxes of entirely foreign growth and manufacture. Citric acid, 7 cents per pound. Citrate of lime; fruits in brine; lemon juice, lime juice, and sour-orange juice, all the foregoing not containing more than 2 per cent of alcohol, orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or dried; lemons, limes, and neroli or orange flower oil, free. Orange peel or lemon peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 2 cents per pound. Fruits of all kinds preserved or packed in sugar or having sugar added thereto, or preserved or packed in molasses, spirits, or their own juices, if containing no alcohol, or containing not over 10 per cent of alcohol, 1 cent per pound and 35 per cent ad valorem.

It will be seen that only once during all these years was the tariff on lemons taken off. By the act of 1832 lemons and oranges were placed on the free list. There is greater reason now than ever before to protect this industry. It has grown much more important to the country, and the expense of maintaining it has greatly increased. Wages have largely increased, and taxes, fumigation, fertilization, and other items of expense have grown largely in the orchards of this country. This is very clearly shown by the tabulated items of expense of two of the larger growers, which I submit for the consideration of the Senate, as follows:

Riverside Orange Co. (Ltd.).

[150 acres of lemon groves.]

Year.	Taxes.		Water.		Fumigation.		Fertilizer.
	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
1891[1]	$114.13	$0.76	$250.02	$1.67
1892	365.47	2.44	250.02	1.67
1893	488.73	3.26	353.60	2.35
1894	542.60	3.62	300.94	2.01
1895	424.40	2.81	291.91	1.95
1896	503.22	3.36	347.58	2.32
1897	640.74	4.27	272.85	1.82
1898	653.18	4.36	426.83	2.83
1899	624.72	4.17	343.07	2.29
1900	815.29	5.44	637.98	4.25
1901	649.53	4.33	607.69	4.05	$682.55	$4.55	$7,256.26	$15.04
1902	689.28	4.60	835.59	5.57	515.79	3.44	4,894.22	32.63
1903	691.18	4.61	880.60	5.87	931.66	6.21	5,211.40	34.74
1904	799.76	5.33	1,027.83	6.85	1,176.39	7.84	5,452.71	36.35
1905	780.52	5.26	769.42	5.13	2,570.08	17.13	4,826.10	32.17
1906	809.53	5.40	741.12	4.94	3,605.74	24.04	5,950.77	39.67
1907	1,089.51	7.26	952.99	6.35	3,550.28	23.67	7,561.61	50.41
1908	1,373.52	9.18	900.00	6.00	603.80	4.03	7,439.03	49.53
1909	1,492.68	9.95	1,339.34	8.93	788.90	5.26	12,555.71	83.71
1910	1,513.91	10.10	1,843.45	12.32	1,616.79	10.78	14,963.17	99.75
1911	1,450.62	9.67
1912	1,600.40	10.67

[1] Starts with planting of trees.

Riverside Trust Co. (Ltd.).

[303 acres of lemon groves. Bearing for entire period.]

Year.	Taxes.		Water.		Fumigation.		Fertilizer.
	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.	Total.	Per acre.
1901	$2,192.32	$7.24	$1,231.85	$4.07	.....	.....	$4,340.55	$14.33
1902	2,352.26	7.76	1,688.60	5.57	$498.64	$1.65	7,385.50	24.37
1903	2,014.45	6.64	1,779.55	5.87	341.25	1.13	13,561.84	44.76
1904	2,995.59	9.88	2,076.55	6.85	2,387.53	7.88	9,160.04	30.23
1905	2,928.94	9.66	1,634.90	5.39	635.89	2.08	14,091.13	46.51
1906	2,835.72	9.35	1,546.33	5.10	1,574.65	5.20	12,263.72	40.47
1907	2,808.15	9.26	1,984.67	6.55	9,043.53	29.85	18,097.85	59.72
1908	4,543.18	14.99	1,715.00	5.66	5,210.53	17.20	21,683.88	71.56
1909	4,469.34	14.75	2,870.45	9.47	7,827.45	25.98	19,095.13	63.35
1910	4,913.98	16.21	4,011.46	13.24	2,541.79	8.39	31,139.14	102.77
1911	4,481.62	14.79	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
1912	5,073.80	16.74	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

These cover the expense of taxes, water, fumigation, and fertilizer. They show very clearly the gradual increase of the expenses from year to year. For example, in case of the Riverside Orange Co., taxes increased gradually from 76 cents to $10.67 an acre, water from $1.67 to $12.32, fumigation from nothing for the first 10 years to as high as $24.04 an acre in one year, and fertilizer from nothing for the first 10 years to $99.75 an acre in 1910. This is accounted for in part for the first few years by the fact that the trees were small, but the later years show a steady increase of these items of expense not accounted for in that way.

The account of the Riverside Trust Co. shows a similar condition. And this is the experience of all orchards that are properly cared for.

It would be a suicidal policy to deprive one of our chief industries of protection under such conditions.

Mr. President, the demand for a regulation of the tariff downward is being made and political parties have responded to the demand mainly, I am afraid, through political policy and to make votes. But, whatever the motive, it is a demand that should receive careful and conscientious consideration at the hands of law makers and of all classes and political parties. Unnecessary burdens upon the people should not be imposed or continued through too high or uncalled-for tariff exactions. I am a thorough believer in confining tariff levies to such amounts as are necessary to protect deserving industries and enterprises that really need protection. I do not believe in throwing our markets open to the world where that course will destroy or materially check the advance of meritorious and needed enterprises and hinder the growth of our own home industries. At the same time the public good must be considered with the same conscientious care as that of the producer who calls for the protection of his business. Indeed, the common good should be uppermost in mind as a guide in this as in all other kinds of legislation. In this, as in all other cases where legislation is proposed, the good of the whole people must be kept constantly in remembrance and individual interests must be subordinated to the common good. With these principles fully in mind I have tried to deal fairly with this question and to ask for nothing that is not fair and just as between the man who grows and supplies the fruit and the people who buy and consume it. I am thoroughly convinced that the reduction of the tariff on citrus fruits would not benefit the consumer in the least. I am equally convinced that the fight that is being made to reduce the tariff is not being made by or in the interest of the consumer or the people of this country. It is being carried on by and in the interest of the foreign growers and their agents and brokers and importers in this country, themselves largely foreigners, and all of them in consideration alone of their own interests without the least concern for the consumer.

The hearings had on this question of the tariff will show that the foreign producers, importers, and dealers appeared by their paid attorneys and in their own behalf alone. The consumer has had no hand in it except as he has been used by these interests hostile to our home industries. The funds necessary to bring about free lemons, or a tariff so low as to be practically the same, have been raised by a tax imposed by parties interested in the foreign competitors, upon every box of foreign-grown fruit imported into our markets. If they can bring about such legislation it will practically destroy domestic competition, give them a monopoly of the trade, and place the consumer in this country completely at their mercy. Does the Democratic Party want to put itself in the position of destroying so important an industry in a great and growing State at the behest and wholly in the interest of foreign competitors without the slightest benefit to home consumers? Our astute Democratic friends may think this a popular move that will make their party votes. It will, in the Latin quarter of the city of New York and a few other places where Democratic votes are not needed, but not elsewhere. Looking at it as a purely political move supposed to be popular, no graver mistake could be made. The people in California will resent it. Just-minded people all over the country who believe in fair dealing toward our own people will resent it, and it will, as an act of injustice always does, react upon the party that perpetrates it. I appeal to the good sense, the justice, and the patriotism of Senators to see that no such reduction of the tariff is made as will destroy or impair this great and important industry of my State.

Mr. President, I have consumed considerable time, and I must confess I am somewhat weary. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS], I understand, is desirous of submitting some remarks upon the subject, and, if it be agreeable to the Senate, I should be very glad to suspend at this point and to be allowed to take up the discussion again to-morrow. I expect to-morrow to discuss the tariff on sugar, English walnuts, olives, and olive oil, all of which are important industries in my State. I submit, Mr. President, whether consent will be given to my request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the Senator from California.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say to the Senator from California that no other Senator is scheduled to speak to-morrow, and doubtless the Senator from California will have the opportunity he desires.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, I have prepared what I am going to submit to the Senate this afternoon, and I prefer not to be interrupted until I have finished my remarks, though at that time I shall be very glad to answer questions, if Senators wish to ask them.

Mr. President, it is not my purpose to discuss at this time the details of any particular schedule; that should be done later during the reading of the bill; but there are some general observations which I wish to submit having a direct bearing on this legislation and the policies and principles involved, including the reasons for the proposed changes.

As far as our fiscal policy is concerned, the country has come to the parting of the ways, and when the pending bill is passed we shall have an opportunity to determine whether such radical changes can be made without greatly impairing business activity and the general prosperity. If the results are like those which have followed previous changes along similar lines, there will be no question about the verdict of the country when it again has an opportunity to pass on this action. If, on the other hand, it is found that the changes have demonstrated their soundness, then the question of a tariff policy will have been settled for a long term of years. It is undoubtedly true that the Democratic Party is doing what a large minority of the people of the country understands it promised to do, the reasons given for these promises being sufficient to persuade this minority of the voters—many of whom have had no experience with hard times—to support radical changes in the tariff. Whether this is being done wisely as to details or not is quite another question. The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House in discussing the so-called Underwood bills of last year, on being challenged on the floor of the House of Representatives at different times, stated that as far as he knew and as far as it could be done protection had been eliminated from the at that time pending legislation. As the bill which we are now considering is much more drastic than they were from a protection standpoint, undoubtedly he and all others who agree with him would make the same answer now. It is not of any particular importance to try to determine whether this leading Democrat or that leading Democrat is in favor of free trade, for the Democratic Party has at different times advocated all shades of tariff principles, from declaring protection is robbery to advocating a tariff for revenue with incidental protection. What we are concerned with is the fact that the Republican Party believes in placing a duty on articles of home production, raising sufficient revenue by so doing, and at the same time protecting the labor and capital engaged in the industry from unequal competition. This bill provides, as far as it can be done, for raising the required tariff revenue from those articles which our people are not large factors in producing, a glaring example of this being the putting of many food products on the free list, the assigned purpose being to reduce the cost of living, and at the same time making up the loss in revenue by putting a duty on bananas, another food product which we do not produce.

Let us consider the principal reasons which have been assigned for this radical downward revision of the tariff, this change in our fiscal policy. Briefly stated they are—

First. To reduce the cost of living.

Second. To curb the power and operations of the trusts, including the selling of surplus products abroad at lower prices than at home.

Third. To develop competition.

Fourth. To bring about a different distribution of wealth.

And it is proposed to do all this without injury to or destroying legitimate industry.

In my opinion a change in the tariff will have little, if any, influence in affecting any of these questions, and I propose to discuss my reasons for this conclusion.

The first of these contentions, the cost of living, has been frequently debated and I think no one at this time places great reliance on lessening it by reductions in the tariff; undoubtedly there may be some reduction in prices, but the real test is the relation between prices and income. Very largely prices are regulated by supply and demand; they do not advance or decline locally, necessarily, but the conditions which produce changes are frequently world-wide; great changes are not due to variation in the cost of production to anything like the same extent that they are influenced by the cost of distribution and both causes contribute infinitely less to the real cost of living, net cost, than the demand for what, based on the conditions of the past, may be called luxuries. We demand electric lights; modern heating and ventilating apparatus; bathrooms in every possible place; the automobile; the telephone; the telegraph; the wireless; talking machines; delivery systems, including those provided by the Post Office Department; and all kinds of foods packed, canned, and bottled, instead of sold in bulk.

The cost of advertising is also a material element and is paid by the consumer, and we go on to the end of our daily requirements and complain because we pay more for these things than our forefathers paid for the simplest necessities. We do in most cases pay more for the same article than we did 10 or 20 or 30 years ago, but so do the people of all other countries; that, however, is not the test which determines the prosperity of the people.

[Furnished by Printer's Ink.]

Newspaper advertising (retail and general)	$250,000,000
Direct mail advertising (circulars, form letters, etc.)	100,000,000
Magazine advertising	60,000,000
Farm and mail-order advertising	75,000,000
Novelty advertising	30,000,000
Billposting	30,000,000
Outdoor (electric sign, painted sign, etc.)	25,000,000
Demonstration and sampling	18,000,000
Street car advertising	10,000,000
House organs, etc	7,000,000
Distributing	6,000,000
Theater program, curtain, and miscellaneous	5,000,000
Grand total	616,000,000

Similar estimates were furnished by the Business Bourse, placing the total at $682,000,000 annually.

Many of the Democratic Members who spoke on the tariff question in the House followed a well-established precedent and included in their remarks long tables showing the difference in cost of many articles at other times and now; all that is admitted, but it proves nothing; these same speakers never take the trouble to prepare wage statistics for the same periods; fortunately we have some sources from which absolutely definite comparisons may be made, viz., the report of the British Board of Trade in 1909, a most careful investigation and analysis of relative conditions in Great Britain and the United States, as well as our census, consular, and bureau reports. The British board summarized its conclusions as follows:

The workman's wages would be higher in the United States by about 130 per cent with slightly shorter hours, while on the other hand his expenditures for food and rent would be higher by about 52 per cent.

And again the report states that—the average weekly family income in certain specified trades in the United Kingdom, including building, engineering, printing, and common labor, is $7.74. The average weekly family expenditure for food is $4.93, or 63.6 per cent of the family income. In the United States the average weekly family wage in the same trades is $19.25, and the average weekly family expense for food is $8.03, or 41.7 per cent. The difference in favor of the wage in the United States amounts to 21.9 per cent of the average weekly wage, or $4.20 a week.

There are volumes of evidence, much of which I have collected and some of which I will print at this time, showing that conditions in this country relating to the cost of living are world-wide. For instance, the following from the Economist, London, March 16, 1912, shows the condition in Germany:

The official statistics of prices issued by the German Government show that the highest level that has been touched since prices began to rise several years ago was reached in January. Of the 39 articles embraced in the statistics not less than 21 showed higher prices than in December, while only 9 were lower and 9 were unchanged. As compared with January, 1911, the prices this year (1912) are 14.6 per cent higher, and as compared with February, 1909, when a low record was made, 21.8 per cent higher. The upward movement in January was most marked in grains, textile products, and minerals. Grains showed an average rise of 3.62 marks per metric ton as compared with December, textile products 3.34, and minerals 3.03 marks.

This is a much more rapid advance than has taken place in the United States during these years, as is evidenced by the following figures:

The average wholesale prices in the United States in 1910, as measured by the prices of 257 commodities included in an investigation by the Bureau of Labor, was 4 per cent higher than the average of 1909 and 16.6 per cent higher than in 1890, and wholesale prices in 1910 were 19.1 per cent higher than in 1900. Comparisons with Great Britain and Germany are used because the standards of living, the cost of food, and so forth, come nearer to conforming to those of the United States than do those of other countries. In all cases with the increase in the cost of commodities has come an increase in wages. In 1907 the average wages per hour in the chief manufacturing and mechanical industries of this country were 3.7 per cent higher than in 1906, the regular hours of labor per week were 0.4 per cent lower than in 1906, and the number of employees in the establishment was 1 per cent greater than in 1906.

These figures, as noted, are from the Bureau of Labor's investigation into the subject. This investigation also shows that the retail price of food, according to the consumption in representative workingmen's families, was 4.2 per cent higher in 1907 than in 1906. For 1907 the advance in retail prices over 1906 was greater than the advance in wages per hour; the purchasing power of an hour's wages, as measured by food, was slightly less in 1907 than in 1906, the decrease being one-half of 1 per cent.

Compared in each case with the average for the years from 1890 to 1899, the average wages per hour in 1907 were 28.8 per cent higher, the number of employees in the establishments investigated was 44.4 per cent greater, and the average hours of labor per week were 5 per cent lower.

The retail price of the principal articles of food was 20.6 per cent higher in 1907 than the average price for the 10 years from 1890 to 1899. Compared with the average for the same 10-year period the purchasing power of an hour's wages in 1907, as measured in the purchase of food, was 6.8 per cent greater, and wages had increased 28.8 per cent, while food had increased but 20.6 per cent.

The following table shows the per cent of increase or decrease in wages per hour, hours of labor per week, the purchasing power of wages in 1907 in the manufacturing and mechanical industries as compared with years preceding, back to and including 1890 and as compared with the average for the 10 years—1890 to 1899:

Per cent of increase (+) or decrease (—) in 1907, as compared with previous years, in employees, hours per week, wages per hour, full-time weekly earnings per employee, retail prices of food, and purchasing power of hourly wages and of full-time weekly earnings per employee, measured by retail prices of food, 1890 to 1907.

Year.	Per cent of increase (+) or decrease (—) in 1907 as compared with previous years.
	Employees.	Hours per week.	Wages per hour.	Full-time weekly earnings per employee.	Retail prices of food, weighted according to family consumption.	Purchasing power, measured by retail prices of food, of—
						Hourly wages.	Full-time weekly earnings per employee.
Average 1890–1899	+44.4	—5.0	+28.8	+22.4	+20.6	+ 6.8	+1.5
1890	+52.3	—5.7	+28.4	+21.2	+17.8	+ 9.1	+2.9
1891	+48.4	—5.5	+28.4	+21.4	+16.2	+10.6	+4.5
1892	+45.6	—5.5	+27.8	+20.8	+18.4	+ 8.0	+2.1
1893	+45.3	—5.3	+27.7	+20.9	+15.5	+10.6	+4.7
1894	+53.5	—4.8	+31.6	+25.3	+21.0	+ 8.8	+3.6
1895	+49.8	—5.1	+31.0	+24.4	+23.3	+ 6.3	+ .9
1896	+46.5	—4.8	+29.2	+23.0	+20.3	+ 2.3	—2.6
1897	+43.1	—4.6	+29.3	+23.4	+25.2	+ 3.3	—1.5
1898	+35.7	—4.7	+28.5	+22.5	+22.2	+ 5.2	+ .3
1899	+28.8	—4.2	+26.3	+20.9	+21.2	+ 4.2	— .2
1900	+24.9	—3.7	+22.1	+17.6	+19.3	+ 2.3	—1.5
1901	+21.2	—3.2	+19.3	+15.6	+14.6	+ 4.0	+ .8
1902	+16.8	—2.4	+14.8	+12.1	+ 8.7	+ 5.5	+3.0
1903	+14.2	—1.7	+10.7	+ 9.0	+ 9.3	+ 1.3	— .3
1904	+14.9	— .9	+10.1	+ 9.1	+ 8.0	+ 2.0	+1.1
1905	+ 8.1	— .9	+ 8.3	+ 7.4	+ 7.3	+ .9	+ .1
1906	+ 1.0	— .4	+ 3.7	+ 3.3	+ 4.2	— .5	— .9

This demonstrates that until 1907 the purchasing power of an hour's wages increased each year, and from incomplete data at hand it is believed the same condition has existed since 1907. In fact, there is no evidence to show that the cost of living—net—is rising; it seems to be about stationary, for the statistics furnished by the census reports and Bureau of Labor show that wages per hour have, from 1896 to 1910, increased 31 per cent, while during the same period the commodities consumed by the wage earner have increased in price 33 per cent. The average increase in the price of commodities has been slight, even if there has been any since 1910, while there have been many increases in wages.

It is not possible to get accurate figures since 1910, but those available indicate that the rate of wage per hour has increased much faster than the cost of commodities which the workman buys.

On this question of cost of living I quote with approval from an article in Cotton, June, 1913, by Wilfred I. King, instructor in political economy, University of Wisconsin:

The careful investigation made by the British Board of Trade recently as to wages and prices in different countries proves quite conclusively that the cost of living is much lower for the American workingman than for his British cousin, while the cost of living in Great Britain is considerably lower than in Germany—that is, for an hour's work the wages of the American employee will buy a larger supply of such commodities as he needs than he could obtain for a like amount of effort if he worked in a British establishment. Similarly, the German workman obtains less for an hour's work than the Britisher in the same occupation and very much less than the American similarly employed. The study of the British Board of Trade merely verifies the results as shown by many less complete investigations of a like nature. It is a thoroughly established fact that the cost of living is relatively low in the United States, Canada, and Australia and very high in such countries as India, China, and Japan. True, prices are lower in the Orient than in America, but wages are very much lower in proportion.

It is proven beyond a doubt by abundant and reliable statistics that the cost of living of the workingman is much less to-day in the United States and in England than was the case a century ago; in fact, it seems a reasonably safe assertion to say that it is to-day considerably less than half what it was a hundred years since. The workingman, like the other citizens, has shared in the prosperity brought about by invention, discovery, and the organization of industry. The United States has been especially prosperous, and the best data available indicate the cost of living to be not more than a third of what it was in the days of Washington and Jefferson. As measured by the standards of the past, the cost of living is very low.

Many persons believe the tariff to be responsible for the upward turn of the cost of living. The tariff to-day is a little if any higher than formerly. I have contended, and I believe it to be true, that a reduction in the tariff would somewhat, though not greatly, reduce the cost of living. I see, however, no reason to believe that the tariff is in any way responsible for the cessation in the fall of the cost of living. The phenomena is the same in the low-tariff England and high-tariff United States, France, and Germany.

After an investigation of all the reasons for the probable increase in the cost of living, noting the influence of gold-output monopoly, the tariff, and the cost of distribution, I incline to the opinion that it is due in a greater degree to density of population or less land per capita than to any and perhaps all other reasons combined.

The following statement by Prof. Frank Fetter, in the president's address to the last meeting of the American Economic Association, expresses this view with clearness and force:

It is the result of forces pointed out by Ricardo, Malthus, and Mill. The law of diminishing return is at work. Population is pressing upon the means of subsistence. The West no longer offers free fertile lands to all comers, and as a result the price of foods is advancing, affecting not only the United States but Europe.

Whenever population increases faster than the land supply, wages tend to fall. Great density of population means less land per capita, less food per capita, less living room, less prosperity. In the United States, Canada, New Zealand, and Australia population is comparatively scattered and real wages are high. In Germany, France, and Italy population is more dense and real wages are lower. In Japan, India, and China population is overcrowded and wages are at the level of bare subsistence. After population reaches a certain density, more people means more poverty. The United States has passed this point, and as long as we leave open our ports to the floods of immigration from low-wage countries, just so long will our population increase rapidly and only marvelous progress in invention can keep real wages from falling.

The following table shows the composition of the family income in the American group. It is seen that the higher income is not due to the increased earnings of other members of the family than the head.

Weekly family income.	Number of families reporting.	Average weekly family income from—
		Husband.	Wife.	Children.				Other.
				Under 16 years.	16 to 20 years.	21 years and over.	Total.
Under $9.73	67	$8.16	$0.26	$0.07	.....	$0.12	$0.19	$0.14
$9.73 and under $14.60	532	11.53	.25	.11	$0.23	.07	.41	.22
$14.60 and under $19.47	1,036	15.16	.29	.20	.50	.21	.91	.63
$19.47 and under $24.33	545	17.14	.27	.33	1.03	.73	2.09	1.49
$24.33 and under $29.20	437	19.11	.55	.28	2.94	1.18	4.40	2.04
$29.20 and under $34.07	224	19.14	.30	.46	4.98	3.88	9.32	2.62
$34.07 and under $38.93	131	19.98	.44	.62	6.54	4.56	11.72	3.99
$38.93 and over	243	22.34	.36	.40	9.75	13.88	24.03	3.91

Weekly family income.	Average weekly family income.	Average number of children at home.	Average persons per family.
Under $9.73	$8.76	1.78	3.78
$9.73 and under $14.60	12.42	2.06	4.08
$14.60 and under $19.47	16.99	2.46	4.54
$19.47 and under $24.33	21.51	2.88	5.02
24.33 and under $29.20	26.19	3.07	5.27
$29.20 and under $34.07	31.38	3.63	5.82
$34.07 and under $38.93	36.13	3.82	6.10
$38.93 and over	50.33	4.20	6.38

The following table shows for England and Wales and for the United States the average weekly family income and the average amount and per cent of the expenditures for food, the families being classified according to weekly family income:

Limits of weekly family income.	Average weekly family income.	Average number of children living at home.	Expenditure on food (excluding wine, beer, and spirits).
			Average amount.	Percentage of income.
UNITED KINGDOM.
$6.08 and under $7.30	$6.56	3.3	$4.34	66.18
$7.30 and under $8.52	7.77	3.2	5.05	65.04
$8.52 and under $9.73	8.80	3.4	5.42	61.64
UNITED STATES.
$9.73 and under $14.60	12.42	2.06	5.91	47.62
$14.60 and under $19.47	16.99	2.46	7.50	44.15
$19.47 and under $24.33	21.51	2.88	8.86	41.19
$24.33 and under $29.20	26.10	3.07	9.86	37.78

The following table shows the comparative cost in the two countries of the articles in the average British budget:

Cost of the average British workingman's weekly budget (excluding commodities for which comparative prices can not be given) at the predominant prices paid by the working classes of England and Wales and the United States.

Commodity.	Quantity in average British budget.	Predominant range of retail prices.		Cost of quantity in British budget in—
		England and Wales, exclusive of London (October, 1905).	United States (February, 1909).	England and Wales.	United States.
Sugar	5½ pounds	$0.041 per pound	$0.056 to $0.061 per pound	$0.218	$0.309
Cheese	¾ pound	$0.142 per pound	$0.203 per pound	.107	.152
Butter	2 pounds	$0.269 per pound[1]	$0.324 to $0.355 per pound	.537	.679
Potatoes	17 pounds	$0.051 to $0.071 per 7 pounds	$0.117 to $0.167 per 7 pounds	.147	.345
Flour	10 pounds	$0.162 to $0.203 per 7 pounds	$0.233 to $0.274 per 7 pounds	.259	.360
Bread	22 pounds	$0.091 to $0.112 per 4 pounds	$0.218 to $0.233 per 4 pounds	.558	1.242
Milk	5 quarts	$0.061 to $0.081 per quart	$0.086 to $0.096 per quart	.355	.456
Beef	4½ pounds	$0.137 per pound[2]	$0.122 to $0.162 per pound	.619	.629
Mutton	1½ pounds	$0.129 per pound[2]	$0.132 to $0.167 per pound	.193	.223
Pork	½ pound	$0.152 to $0.172 per pound	$0.117 to $0.147 per pound	.081	.066
Bacon	1½ pounds	$0.142 to $0.183 per pound	$0.172 to $0.203 per pound	.243	.284
Total cost of the above				3.317	4.735
Index numbers { England and Wales, October, 1905; United States, February, 1909				100	143
Index numbers { Adjusted for February, 1909				100	138

[1] Mean of colonial or "foreign" and Danish.

[2] Mean of British or home-killed and of foreign or colonial.

From the above table it appears that the English housewife would have to pay $4.755 at American prices for the same quantities of those articles of food which cost at English prices in October, 1905, $3.317, or, as adjusted to the prices of February, 1909, about $3.44. Her weekly expenditure in the United States would thus be raised on the adjusted prices about $1.30, or 38 per cent. During these years of increasing prices for commodities and increasing wages the tariff has not been increased; in fact, it was lowered in 1909 without, in my judgment, materially affecting either prices or wages or the net results of labor here. Those in authoritative position in the Democratic Party are evidently hedging on this assigned reason for putting their party in office, for the President, in his recent message to Congress urging immediate action on currency legislation, which, it is true, is necessary, but which has no connection whatever with tariff legislation, gives as one of the reasons for early action that it was necessary in order to make tariff legislation more effective. The head of the business department in the present administration, Secretary Redfield, who is regarded by many as an expert in tariff matters, stated in a recent interview relating to the high cost of living that a change in the tariff could not in any sense be considered a cure-all, that it was simply a step in removing obstacles which prevent the easy exchange of products, and then he added:

> But no intelligent man expects it to be more than a step. What, then, is the principal benefit arising from the tariff bill? To my thinking it is a moral and mental benefit.

I doubt if Mr. Secretary Redfield used that language on the stump during the campaign last year.

And another eminent Democrat, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, who may now properly be termed an expert on this subject, in his speech in the House of Representatives April 25, 1913, in opening the debate on the bill, made the following references to the cost of living:

> On the other hand, we know in many countries not maintaining a high protective tariff, although the cost of living has increased to some extent, the actual cost to each individual is far less and has increased proportionately less than it has to the people of the United States.

So have wages increased less, and food has increased more rapidly than wages.

> Although we have reduced the tariff in the interest of the consumer in this bill, it would be untrue to say that the effect of this reduction is going to be immediate. There are many reasons why we can not promise this to the people, but there is one which is quite sufficient. Under all the laws of trade supply and demand must regulate prices. The retail merchants of the country have fixed their prices to-day on goods now on their shelves, which were bought under conditions fixed by Republican legislation.

I make this comment on that statement that, of course, if other merchants are able to buy cheaper and sell cheaper the holder of goods at the time this bill passes will have to make his prices conform to those of his rivals in trade.

I agree with those who have declared that there is likely to be a decline in the prices of some commodities, but it will result from a decrease in purchasing power rather than from tariff changes. If the purchasing power of our people is injured, those who produce, manufacturers, agriculturalists, and labor alike, must expect less demand for their products or services and at lower rates. No interest in a community can be injured without affecting all others, and that wave of demoralization will spread to the remotest sections of our country It is true that there is discontent, but explaining it by charging it to the cost of living, and the reason for that to the tariff, is the diagnosis of an incompetent; in this case the Democratic Party. For I repeat, the net cost of living, that which results after all bills are paid at the end of the year, notwithstanding our extravagance and wastefulness, is the lowest in the world; that is, our people are larger net savers than any others, and figuring with this condition as a basis, the net results during the period since the passage of the Dingley bill in 1897 have been the best in our history, probably the net savings per capita have been more than twice, and perhaps more than three times, as great as they were during the first half century of our existence as a Nation. How does it profit a man to buy his necessities at low prices if his income is only sufficient for that purpose? How much better his condition, even if he is paying high prices, if his income enables him to do it and have a balance at the end of the year.

In the tariff plank adopted by the Democratic national convention at Baltimore in 1912 is found this declaration:

> Articles entering into competition with trust-controlled products and articles of American manufacture which are sold abroad more cheaply than at home should be put on the free list.

To make this declaration in any way workable it would be necessary to determine what a trust-controlled product is and what a trust is. No definition of a trust has been proposed which is entirely satisfactory. The Cabinet officer who just now is eking out an insufficient salary by devoting his time to Chautauqua lectures once declared that any company or corporation which manufactured one-half of the total output of a definite product is a trust. Possibly this defines a trust as well as it can be done, in which case, however, there are comparatively few in the United States. It is true that it is quite common to speak of this trust, or that trust, or the other trust, but in many cases the company or corporation to which reference is made does not manufacture 15 or 10 or even 5 per cent of the goods produced in that industry; therefore such a concern would be far removed from the trust as defined by Mr. Bryan. Even if anyone could define a trust with accuracy, has this plank of the Democratic platform had any influence in controlling the proposed free list? The slightest examination of this schedule will show that in most instances there is no connection between trust-made products and others which have been put on the free list. Products like wheat, flour, fruits, meats, oats, potatoes, rye, shoes, leather, the products of leather, and many other similar articles too numerous to mention, all of which are intensely competitive in their production, have been treated exactly as would be a trust-made product; therefore it seems to be a fair conclusion that no attention has been paid in the proposed bill to that part of the quotation from the platform. This is also true of the rest of the quotation relating to sales abroad, but to that I wish to refer in more detail. It seems to be impossible for a Democrat to understand that it is good public policy for domestic manufacturers to dispose of their surplus product wherever a market can be found, even if the price obtained is less than the cost of manufacturing.

The only times when this policy is adopted in this country is when a surplus is produced which can not be marketed at home without closing down or curtailing the production of a plant, in which case it may be sold abroad at whatever price can be obtained for it. I maintain that this is sound policy, which is of distinct advantage to the manufacturer and his shareholders, to the laborer employed in the industry, to all those living in the community where the goods are manufactured, and as a result to the country as a whole. And I would go further, for while we only sell our surplus under these conditions we might well adopt the methods followed in Germany; that is, to sell the entire output of a factory abroad at lower prices than similar grades of goods are sold at home. By following our usual policy our manufacturers are operating at a disadvantage, for frequently goods which are manufactured for our market, and which can be disposed of in that market at satisfactory prices, when sent to other markets to which they are not suited must be sold at a great sacrifice even if they can be sold at any price. The Germans study the requirements of the trade which they are after and manufacture the kind of goods which are suitable for that trade, the kind which it is accustomed to and for which there is an established demand, confining themselves to the styles and the colors required in that market. Our manufacturer may go into the same market with goods of similar texture and value to the goods of the German manufacturer, but they may not have suitable colors or they may not be put up in forms that meet the requirements of the trade, so they do not find the ready market which is found for the goods of our competitor, the result being that in Germany large industries are being developed, steady employment is furnished to a great number of people, lines of transportation are established by German capital and are profitably employed in transporting this product and the trade which it develops, and the German Navy is provided with a fleet of transports without the necessity of maintaining them in time of peace. We are never going to reach a satisfactory stage in the development of our foreign trade until we cater to the exact wants of our customers; until we have established lines of steamers to carry our own products; until we have established banks in the countries with which we are doing business through which the trade can be financed; in fact, until we have adopted all of the up-to-date policies which are commonly practiced in the countries which are our rivals in developing trade with nonmanufacturing countries.

But to come back to the question of disposing of our surplus manufactures. Those directly interested are the furnishers of the capital employed in the industry and the laborers engaged in the manufacturing of these goods. What labor wants is steady employment at remunerative wages. All employers recognize the fact that steady employment is a great factor in developing efficient and contented workmen. What capital wants is steady employment with reasonable returns. Neither condition can be insured if an industry is absolutely dependent on the home market, which varies in volume with the season, with the condition of the crops, and with the condition of general business. Let me illustrate what this means to both the manufacturer and to the laborer. I will use as examples several industries which have furnished me with figures taken from their own books and checked up as to their accuracy as far as it has been possible to do by comparing them with annual reports and other similar sources of information. One of the best and most convincing arguments in favor of the policy of selling surplus products wherever and whenever a market can be obtained is shown in the shoe trade. Shoe manufacturers agree that when a factory is running three-fourths of the time the cost of manufacturing the average shoe is 5 cents a pair greater than would be the cost if it were running full capacity and full time; and if it were running one-half of the time the cost of manufacturing shoes would be 10 cents a pair greater than if the factory were running all the time at its full capacity. These figures would vary somewhat in the manufacture of different grades of shoes, but they are substantially correct if an average is taken.

The testimony is almost universal among shoe manufacturers who have studied the question carefully that the average profit made per pair of shoes in all factories in the United States is about 7 cents. Let us take as an example shoes costing the manufacturer $2.50. These would be sold to the retailer at from $2.55 to $2.60 per pair. The retailer sells them at from $3.50 to $4 per pair; the cost to retail shoes being about 30 per cent of the retail selling price. In such a case the manufacturer would make somewhat less than 7 cents a pair and the retailer would make from nothing to 25 cents per pair, dependent on the varying cost of selling the shoe in towns of different sizes and in different sections of the country. Now, if the manufacturer were running his factory at 75 per cent of its capacity, instead of the shoes costing him $2.50 they would cost $2.55; if he were running at one-half of its capacity, instead of the shoes costing him $2.50 they would cost $2.60; in one case he would only be making a profit of 2 cents a pair, while in the other case he would be losing 3 cents a pair. Therefore, to get the best results it is absolutely essential that he run his factory at full capacity. On account of seasonable changes in styles and shapes of shoes it is difficult to run a shoe factory at full capacity more than three-fourths of the time.

Let us take the case of a manufacturer who makes a profit of 8 cents a pair on his output if he runs his factory at full capacity. If he ran it at full capacity three-fourths of the time and shuts down one-fourth of the time, his profit would be 3 cents a pair; but if he sold three-fourths of his output at full price and the balance, one-fourth, at cost, he would make 6 cents a pair on his total output. Let us assume that he manufactures 1,000,000 pairs a year when running at full capacity; he would make 8 cents a pair, or his profit for the year would be $80,000. If he ran full capacity, but sold one-fourth of his product at cost, his profit would be $60,000. If he ran three-fourths of the time at full capacity and shut down his factory one-fourth of the time, his profit would be $22,500. In other words, he could afford to run his factory at its full capacity, selling one-fourth of the output at a loss of 15 cents a pair, and come out at the end of the year with the same net profit that he would if he ran his factory three-fourths of the time at its full capacity and shut down for the remainder of the year.

Now, what is the result as far as the people employed in such a factory is concerned? The average wage paid to a shoe employee in Massachusetts is about $560 annually. If the employee only works three-fourths of the time, his income will be reduced to $420. In other words, he would have $140 less annual compensation than if the factory were run full time. This would necessarily reduce rentals and directly affect every person having anything to sell in that community and indirectly affect every person in it. Furthermore, if any surplus output is sold in foreign countries it influences shoe manufacturing in those countries, making their factories far less dangerous competitors than they would be if they had control of their own markets. This course of reasoning will apply with equal force in every industry, though the illustration can not be as pointedly made as in the case of shoes on account of the variety of material going into other products and the great variety of the production as well as variations in prices. But let us take, for example, the conversion costs in textile manufacturing.

FIRST EXAMPLE.

WORSTED.

Figures showing increases in costs due to decreases in per cent of production.

Top making.

[Conversion costs of making tops based on full-time production of 350,000 pounds of tops per week.]

	Conversion cost.	Increase in conversion cost.
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Full-time production	100
Three-fourths time production	110.9	10.9
One-half time production	132.4	32.4
One-fourth time production	196.5	96.5

Worsted spinning.

[Conversion costs of making worsted yarns, based on full-time production of 175,000 pounds of 2/30s per week.]

	Conversion cost.	Increase in conversion cost.
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Full-time production	100
Three-fourths time production	106.4	6.4
One-half time production	119.1	19.1
One-fourth time production	157.4	57.4

Worsted cloth—weaving.

[Conversion costs per yard of weaving worsted cloth, based on a full-time production of 300,000 yards of cloth per week.]

	Conversion cost.	Increase in conversion cost.
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Full-time production	100
Three-fourths time production	114.8	14.8
One-half time production	136.7	36.7
One-fourth time production	192.1	92.1

Worsted cloth, dyeing and finishing.

[Conversion costs of dyeing and finishing, based on same production.]

	Conversion cost.	Increase in conversion cost.
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Full-time production	100
Three-fourths time production	119.5	19.5
One-half time production	139.2	39.2
One-fourth time production	170.7	70.7

SECOND EXAMPLE.

COTTON.

Cotton spinning.

[Conversion costs of making cotton yarn, based on full-time production of 75,000 pounds per week of 2/30s combed yarn.]

	Conversion cost.	Increase in conversion cost.
	Per cent.	Per cent.
Full-time production	100
Three-fourths time production	113.2	13.2
One-half time production	140	40
One-fourth time production	219	119

THIRD EXAMPLE.

WORSTED MANUFACTURING.

A worsted manufacturer finds under conditions which have existed during the last six months that he could only run 52 looms, and the actual figures have shown that the goods which he has manufactured on this basis have cost 10.23 cents more per yard than if he ran 96 looms his full capacity, from which he figures that if he closed down his factory it would cost 28 per cent of the actual cost of his output when running 96 looms and that it would cost 39 per cent of his actual cost if running 52 looms. Many worsted manufacturers have testified that the profit in manufacturing ordinary goods is not far from 10 cents a yard; therefore if this mill were running at one-half its capacity the profit would be nothing. How much better would it be in every way to run the mill at full capacity, even if one-half of the goods had to be sold abroad at cost, for in that case the manufacturer would have a profit of 10 cents per yard on his entire output for six months of the year, and he could even sell one-half of his output at 10 cents a yard less than cost and come out as well at the end of the year in dollars and cents as he would if he only ran his mill at one-half of its capacity six months and closed it down the rest of the year; in fact, he would be better off in every way, because he would not have disrupted his organization and his plant would be in better condition than if it had been idle. This mill is one of the most economically managed in Massachusetts. The evidence shows that in most cases if mills were idle one-third of the time instead of one-half that there would be no profit.

FOURTH EXAMPLE.

A cotton mill having 62,000 spindles, with a capacity of 75,000 pounds of yarn a week, shows the fixed charges connected with the plant—office, and general charges which can not be cut off during a shutdown—amount to 6 cents per pound. In other words, this plant could run full capacity, sell half of its output at 6 cents per pound less than cost, and be as well off from the stockholder's standpoint as it would be by running one-half of the time at its full capacity and closing down the remaining six months, in addition to continuing the employment of its workmen and all the other incidental advantages.

FIFTH EXAMPLE.

A cotton mill capitalized at $1,500,000, operating 135,000 spindles, running full time, produced 30,000,000 yards of colored cotton goods during the last six months; the net earnings, based on actual results of this operation, were one-sixteenth of a cent a yard, or $20,700 for the six months. If this mill had been forced to curtail production by shutting down for one-fourth of the time, its production would have been reduced to 23,000,000 yards, which reduction, combined with the increased burden of fixed charges, would have changed the profit of one-tenth of a cent per yard into a loss of four-tenths of a cent per yard—or an actual loss of $93,600. In other words, the manufacturer by running his mill at full capacity could have sold one-fourth of the mill's output at a loss of twenty-two one-hundredths of a cent per yard and come out without loss for the six months.

SIXTH EXAMPLE.

A worsted mill producing 5,000,000 yards annually shows a fixed charge of 8 cents per yard. Running three-fourths of full time this charge would be increased to 10.7 cents per yard; if running at half time to 16 cents per yard; and one-fourth time to 32 cents per yard. In this mill, figuring a profit of 12 cents a yard, it would, if running full capacity, make a net profit of $200,000; if running three-fourths capacity make a net profit of $50,000; if running one-half capacity make a net loss of $100,000; if running one-fourth capacity make a net loss of $250,000.

SEVENTH EXAMPLE.

A cotton mill using 100,000 spindles and weaving 6,000 pieces of 64 square 38½-inch goods, the difference of the cost running the mill 12 months and 9 months was found to be three-tenths of a cent per yard, and in round numbers would be about $50,000 a year. This case applies to a cloth which sells at about 4½ cents per yard. And in all of the examples given it goes without saying that the differences would vary somewhat with more or less expensive goods.

Taking all of these instances, and they could be multiplied by as many as there are mills in the United States, can there be any question about the advisability of the policy of running manufacturing plants at their full capacity, either from the standpoint of capital, labor, or the community at large, and could there be any greater folly than the declaration in the Baltimore platform "because some goods are sold abroad at a price less than the prevailing price in this country, that the duty shall be removed?" It might be possible that for other reasons there should be no duty imposed in such cases, but that the duty should be removed for such a reason seems to be an incredible piece of stupidity and lack of appreciation of one of the very fundamentals in conducting a profitable manufacturing business.

In all of these instances it is clearly demonstrated that it is not the manufacturer who is most affected by closing down a plant, but the workman. The manufacturer may be, in dollars and cents, as well off to close his plant a quarter of the time as he would be by running it all the time and selling his surplus product abroad at the price he could obtain for it, but in the first place the workman would only receive three-fourths of the wages he would receive if the plant were run at full capacity all the time, and therefore while, as I have stated, the closing down of a plant affects the capital invested, it is particularly burdensome on the workman and through him indirectly affects the whole community.

President Wilson has stated in a recent address that he "believes a Democratic tariff will whet the industrial wits," but such a tariff is much more likely to sharpen the appetites of the worker than the wits of the employer, who in many cases, as can be easily demonstrated, is obliged to work his wits overtime in order to make a living under present conditions and rates of duty. The President's solemn assurance, contained in his message to Congress, that a reason for changing the tariff was to develop competition and increase our foreign trade must have been made without any careful examination into the real conditions of our trade—either foreign or local. The fact is, the United States has been developing its foreign trade more rapidly than any country in the world in the last decade, or since the Republican Party returned to power in 1897. I submit herewith some figures which substantially demonstrate this:

Imports of merchandise.

INTO GREAT BRITAIN.

1890	$2,047,000,000
1901	2,510,000,000
1910	3,300,000,000
1911	3,311,000,000
1912	3,623,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 25 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 32 per cent.

INTO GERMANY.

1890	990,000,000
1901	1,290,000,000
1910	2,309,000,000
1911	2,271,000,000
1912	2,449,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 30 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 76 per cent.

INTO THE UNITED STATES.

1890	789,000,000
1901	823,000,000
1911	1,527,000,000
1912	1,653,264,934
1913	1,812,021,160

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 4 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 85 per cent.

Exports of domestic merchandise.

FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

1890	$1,282,000,000
1901	1,362,000,000
1910	2,094,000,000
1911	2,210,000,000
1912	2,371,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 6 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 62 per cent.

FROM GERMANY.

1890	791,000,000
1901	1,054,000,000
1910	1,779,000,000
1911	1,928,000,000
1912	2,115,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 33 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 83 per cent.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

1890	845,000,000
1901	1,460,000,000
1911	2,013,000,000
1912	2,204,322,400
1913	2,465,761,910

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 72 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 38 per cent.

Exports of manufactured goods.

FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

1890	$1,118,000,000
1901	1,104,000,000
1911	1,799,000,000
1912	1,875,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 0.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 63 per cent.

FROM GERMANY.

1890	511,000,000
1901	688,000,000
1911	1,141,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 34 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 65 per cent.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

1890	178,000,000
1901	465,000,000
1911	907,000,000
1912	1,020,000,000

Increase from 1890 to 1901, 16 per cent.
Increase from 1901 to 1911, 95 per cent.

The increase in importations in the last two years has been more than one-third as much as the total importations in 1890, while the increase in exports in the same time have been more than one-half as much as the total exports in 1890.

The Democratic platform, as well as the President and others in authority in that party, by declaration and inference, gives the impression that one of the reasons for reducing the tariff is to develop competition domestic or foreign; the new free list, however, and the reductions made generally bear no relation to competition, for they include changes in articles in which competition is the keenest, as well as those in which home production practically supplies the local market. In other words, the policy as marked out has been to reduce without regard to facts, to import more and to produce less, without regard to local conditions. As there may be some doubt as to the correctness of this statement, I will give some examples of reductions where there is now active foreign competition, and will ask why the duties in these items should be lowered, and if the result can mean anything except additional importations, which must lessen employment for our capital and labor. To do this I will not go beyond the limit of this Chamber to find articles with which to prove my contention. There are many concerns in the United States engaged in the production of the articles to which I refer.

The ink wells in the desks in this Chamber are made in Austria. Under the present tariff they pay a duty of 60 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule B, par. 98.) The proposed law places a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule B, par. 86.)

Bone letter openers found on the desks of Senators are made in France. Under the present tariff they pay a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule N, par. 463.) The proposed law imposes a duty of 30 per cent ad vadorem. (See Schedule N, par. 379.)

Hairbrushes in some of the Senate offices are made in England; those in the Republican cloakroom were made in Japan. Under the present tariff they pay a duty of 40 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule N, par. 423.) The proposed law places a duty on hairbrushes of 35 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule N, par. 345.)

Penknives made in England are sold in the stationery room. The present tariff places the following duties on penknives: Valued at not more than 40 cents a dozen, 40 per cent ad valorem; valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 50 cents a dozen, 1 cent each and 40 per cent ad valorem; valued at more than 50 cents and not more than $1.25 a dozen, 5 cents each and 40 per cent ad valorem; valued at more than $1.25 and not more than $3 a dozen, 10 cents each and 40 per cent ad valorem; valued at more than $3 a dozen, 20 cents each and 40 per cent ad valorem. (See Schedule C, par. 152.) The proposed law places a duty on penknives—those valued at not more than $1 a dozen at 35 per cent ad valorem and on those valued at more than $1 a dozen at 55 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule C, par. 130.)

Pens in the stationery room are made in England. The present tariff places a duty on pens at 12 cents a gross. (Schedule C, par. 186.) The new law places a duty on them at 8 cents a gross. (Schedule C, par. 158.)

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. WEEKS. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator has just referred to the fact that the present duty upon pens is 12 cents a gross, and the pending bill reduces it to 8 cents a gross, or a difference of 4 cents a gross. I wish to ask the Senator if he thinks the contemplated reduction of 4 cents a gross will ever be realized by the ultimate consumer who buys pens and pays about 5 cents a dozen for them?

Mr. WEEKS. Of course it will not.

Mr. SMOOT. All it means is that it simply gives the foreign manufacturer a better chance to take this market.

Mr. WEEKS. That is it, exactly.

German razors, as well as razors of other foreign makes, are used to shave Senators in the Senate barber shops. The duty on razors under the present law is: Valued at less than $1 a dozen, 35 per cent ad valorem; valued at $1 and less than $1.50 a dozen, 6 cents each and 35 per cent ad valorem; valued at $1.50 and less than $2 a dozen, 10 cents each and 35 per cent ad valorem; valued at $2 and less than $3 a dozen, 12 cents each and 35 per cent ad valorem; valued at $3 or more a dozen, 15 cents each and 35 per cent ad valorem. (Schedule C, par. 152.) Under the proposed law razors are placed at the same rate of duty as penknives, 35 per cent ad valorem on those valued at not more than $1 a dozen and 55 per cent ad valorem on razors valued at more than $1 a dozen. (Schedule C, par. 130.) As further evidence that the duty now imposed on razors has little influence on the price compared with the cost of distribution I instance the case of a local manufacturer who has a contract to supply a distributing house a large order of razors at $3 a dozen; the same razor retails at $1.75 apiece.

Souvenir post cards with pictures of our public buildings on them made in Germany may be found on sale in the Capitol Building, and no other could be found for sale in Washington until the duty was increased on these cards in the Payne-Aldrich bill, which increase enormously developed the output of local factories without increasing the cost to the consumer; in fact, the price was lowered. It is worthy of note that a reduction has been made in the pending bill which may mean going back to the same conditions which existed before 1909.

Many of the mineral waters which are found in the cloakroom are imported from Europe, although there are great quantities of American bottled waters on the market. Among these the Apollinaris water is bottled in Germany, and it is interesting to note that the French vichy served in the cloakroom bears the colors of France and the label reads "Property of the French Republic."

Ginger ale is largely produced in this country, and yet imported ginger ale is sold in the restaurant, as well as a great variety of mineral waters. The duties on these mineral waters in the present law are in—

Pints, 20 cents a dozen bottles; quarts, 30 cents a dozen bottles. (See Schedule 8, par. 312.)

Under the proposed law the duty will be—

Half pint, 10 cents a dozen bottles; pints, 15 cents a dozen bottles; quarts, 20 cents a dozen bottles.

We are large producers of matches in this country, and yet if a Senator wishes to light a cigar in the cloakroom he finds a Vulcan safety match manufactured in Sweden. A very large number of dishes served in the Senate restaurant are prepared from imported articles, many of which are produced in the United States. And lists of this character could be extended almost without limit. If competition is desired and not destruction, why reduce duties in the cases I have instanced?

Do those who appeal for reduction of duties make their appeal because there is not domestic competition? This reason would be as fallacious as in the case of foreign competition, for there is ample local competition in the production of most of the articles affected by the pending bill.

A few instances will conclusively demonstrate this statement. There can be no denial of active domestic competition in every article produced on the farm on which the duty has been lowered and which has been put on the free list, but there may be some doubt of the correctness of my statement if applied to manufacturing concerns. It is, however, easily demonstrated. Take the cases of cotton, shoes, and wool as examples. There are in the United States 1,324 concerns manufacturing cotton, employing 378,880 people, and producing the larger percentage of these goods used in local consumption. Most of these manufacturers are stock companies and there is a public market for the shares, but there never has been any charge that there is a combination of any kind in this industry from the planting of the cotton to the marketing of the product; while it frequently happens that the same persons are active in the management of more than one mill. I can not find even in such cases that the mills with which the same men are connected make more than 5 per cent of the total product manufactured in this country and there has never been a suggestion that any attempt has been made to control or fix the price of cotton goods.

Take the case of shoes—this industry has been built up under conditions that have tended greatly to increase rather than diminish competition; there are 1,918 concerns engaged in this industry and I do not find a single instance where those interested in one of these are in any way interested in any other. Generally speaking they are private corporations or copartnerships and no single concern produces more than 4 per cent of the product of this country.

The same reasoning applies to the manufactures of wool; it is true that there has been complaint that the tariff favored those engaged in manufacturing worsteds at the expense of woolens, and talk of the Woolen Trust has been so long repeated that many people really believe there is one yet; the most active and effective competition we have in the textile industry is in this one. It was prostrated after the Wilson bill was passed, has been only relatively prosperous at any time since, and is to-day being conducted at a loss, without any hope for the future if this bill becomes a law. The only basis for the charge that there is a trust connected with the industry is the size of the American Woolen Co., yet this company only operates about 12½ per cent of the looms and 14.4 per cent of the spindles engaged in the woolen and worsted industry, and the company manufactures both worsted and woolens in the proportion of about 2 to 1.

The fact is there is intense competition in all of these industries; there is not a syllable of testimony to the contrary. Yet the product of one is greatly reduced, the reductions in another have already brought its earning capacity to a minus quantity, and our market in the case of the third has been thrown wide open to the world without any possibility of resulting benefit to the manufacturer or workmen engaged in it or even to the consuming public.

It has not been infrequently the case during the revision of the tariff that employers have stated to committees of the Senate and House, and to the public in other ways and even to their employees, that in case certain definite action were taken it would be necessary for them to either reduce wages or close down their mills.

The slightest investigation of results which might come from a tariff revision justifies such assertions, for it goes without saying that the management of a mill wishes to run its property and make it profitable, and operations will be continued even though there be no profit, and frequently when a small loss is incurred, because closing down means a disruption of organization, the losing of many good and skilled employees who go elsewhere for employment; and even without these reasons, the fixed charges incident to the business entail a very material loss.

I quote from a letter written me by Mr. Arthur Lyman, an old and well-known manufacturer of Massachusetts, under date of May 14, which relates to this subject. He says:

> Business is already held up in anticipation of lower rates, and delay in passing the bill will simply aggravate this situation. Large orders given unreservedly months ago are held back by the buyers, who refuse to give details as to patterns or colors. This, of course, involves the stoppage of machinery. The stoppages of mills and the discharge of operatives have nothing to do in the way of threats. The real reason is the stoppage of orders and consequently the impossibility of making sales. No mill will stop as long as the goods can be sold at cost or even at a little less, because the continuing expenses of interest, taxes, depreciation, loss of skilled labor, etc., are exceedingly heavy items and much heavier here than they are abroad.

This statement, made by Mr. Lyman, who I understand is not an active Republican, undoubtedly states the case exactly as it is, and yet for the first time in the history of the Government we have an authoritative statement from the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and apparently from the Secretary of Commerce, that in case mills are closed down an investigation will be made as to the efficiency of the management of the property. During this session a majority of this body passed a measure which prohibited the expenditure of any part of a certain appropriation made to carry out the provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Act in the case of labor unions and farmers' organizations. In other words, the Government has said we will not prosecute labor organizations for violating the statute law, encouraging thereby labor unions to try to bring about the results which they desire; and now we have an authorized governmental official in high position declaring that if the managers of large properties protect their stockholders by doing the only thing possible in order to prevent losing money—that is, by closing down plants or reducing wages—that they will be investigated and something will be done; just what, nobody knows. It is evidently an attempt to intimidate the managers of American industries. Certainly the latter are now, under this administration, between the devil and the deep sea.

Let us see for a moment whether such a policy as is now contemplated by the Secretary of Commerce can be undertaken with the probability of results which will be beneficial to labor or to anyone else, and I will call the Secretary of Commerce himself as a witness to testify that this can not in all probability be done.

August 21, 1911, a resolution passed the House of Representatives providing for an investigation of the Taylor system, which is designed to bring about scientific management in manufacturing establishments, and which at that time was being introduced into Government arsenals at Watertown, Mass., and Rock Island, Ill. The committee appointed under this resolution to investigate this system was composed of three members—William B. Wilson, now Secretary of Labor; William C. Redfield, now the Secretary of Commerce and the mouthpiece for this propaganda; and John Q. Tilson, at that time a Republican Representative from Connecticut. They reported to the House March 9, 1912, the result of their investigation, and I find in that report this statement:

> A great amount of good work has been done by Mr. Taylor and others in working out the details of scientific methods of shop management, but neither Mr. Taylor nor anyone else has presented to this committee a system so complete as to justify a recommendation that it be imposed in its entirety in any Government shop.
>
> Any radical change in factory management should be gradual evolution out of that which has preceded. The present systems, or lack of systems, with their good and their bad points, are themselves the result of long evolution. No drastic or radical change in them should be suddenly or even quickly imposed by fiat from above. Men have become accustomed alike to the good and the bad that are in the systems under which they work. They know and approve the good; they know how to combat the evil. They are naturally and properly suspicious that motives purely selfish may be behind the sudden change. Confidence is a plant of slow growth. Neither the Taylor system nor any other should be imposed from above on an unwilling working force. Any system of shop management ought to be the result of mutual conference and mutual consent, and that takes time.

And, again, the report says:

> Conditions vary in different shops, and a system which would be effective in one might not be so effective in another. The work and responsibility of selecting, evolving, or introducing a system suitable to a particular shop must in a great measure depend upon the intelligence of the management.

This is undoubtedly a correct statement, for there is every reason to believe that it accorded with the results of the investigation made. Certainly it was not intended to be unfriendly to organized labor, for the Secretary of Labor, who was chairman of that committee, is a union-labor man, and neither of the other members of the committee had any prejudice against labor in making the report. If it is impossible in a Government shop to determine what is efficient management, and if it is necessary to, as this report says, prevent drastic or radical change in shops so that they should not be suddenly or even quickly imposed by fiat from above, how is it going to be possible to go into a private concern, even if the Government is authorized and justified in doing so, and determine whether that concern can be so run as to bring profitable results under the conditions imposed by this or any other tariff? The whole suggestion is of the bulldozing variety, intended to as far as possible coerce American manufacturers to continue running their plants without reduction of wages and without regard to net results obtained, hoping that some fortunate circumstance will occur which will prevent the utter collapse of business, which its framers know is likely to result from the passage of this bill.

If, however, Secretary Redfield has changed his mind since making the above-mentioned report, I suggest that he make a personal examination of the declared purpose of Gov. Foss to transfer his industry to Canada. That is a case where the Secretary can determine conditions at a glance, for he has been engaged in the same industry, and it is reported that he is rather familiar with conditions at the Foss shops. Of course, he can deal with this case without the fear of the charge of prejudice against the manufacturer, for Gov. Foss is an old friend and a political associate.

In the tariff plank of the Baltimore platform of last year this expression is used in speaking of protection:

> It is a system of taxation which makes the rich richer and the poor poorer.

A declaration which has frequently been made by the Democratic Party in convention assembled and which has such a succulent sound that it is constantly repeated by Democratic orators in political campaigns, who at the same time urge in effect the claim that the Democracy is the great leveler and is striving to make the rich poorer and poor richer, without regard to methods or means or results.

The whole subject is too broad a one to attempt to discuss at this time, but it has some application to the action which has been taken in preparing this bill, and especially in applying to many industries in which the people of Massachusetts are engaged, the suggestion that stockholders are getting too large returns and employees too little. If this is not the reason for the radical reductions in such industries as cotton, woolens, worsteds, and shoes, why have they been selected for the drastic treatment given them? Massachusetts is a great manufacturing State; very largely its prosperity depends on the steady and remunerative employment of its capital and labor engaged in manufacturing industries. It leads all other States in the manufacturing of shoes, cotton, woolen and worsted goods, and assuming for the moment that the rich in the case of these three industries are the stockholders and the poor are the employees, it is fair to consider whether the radical cuts in the products of these industries have been justified on the ground that the stockholders, or those furnishing the capital, are getting richer or unreasonable returns for their capital, while those employed in the industries are getting poorer or less than reasonable remuneration for their services.

This is a question which can be pretty definitely demonstrated, because there are many communities in Massachusetts in which such a large percentage of the population is employed in one or two industries that directly or indirectly it may be asssumed that their welfare is dependent upon them. I have spoken of Massachusetts as a great manufacturing State. There are employed in her manufacturing industries 497,549 people, which, with those dependent on them and associated with them in some way, compose a majority of the population of the State.

For many years Massachusetts has had on its statute books provision for the establishment and maintenance of mutual saving banks. These banks are not money-making concerns in any respect. After paying for the cost of operation all profits except a small surplus which is set aside each year go to depositors. They are privately managed and publicly supervised. Their investments are carefully regulated by the laws of the State and the losses as a result of their operations have been negligible. These banks are not operated for the benefit of the rich or even the well-to-do, but are operated for the benefit of those citizens who for manifest reasons have not had sufficient experience to safely invest their savings, and they are an encouragement to citizens to save their money. That they are not intended for other classes is indicated by a provision in the law which limits the amount of deposit which any one person may have in a bank to $1,600, which includes accumulated interest; furthermore, the rate of interest which these banks have averaged to pay—slightly under 4 per cent for a term of years—is not sufficiently remunerative to warrant the average investor depositing his money in them even if it were possible for him to do so. As a matter of fact, if a well-known man who had business connections of such a character that it might be assumed he could safely invest his own money should attempt to deposit $1,000 in any of the larger savings banks of the State he would be told to take his money and go his way; that the banks were not organized for his benefit, but for those who in all probability could not wisely and safely invest their own savings. Therefore the deposits in Massachusetts savings banks must indicate, in fact must be the most conclusive proof of, the financial condition of people in very moderate circumstances; if so, the increase in these deposits throughout the whole Commonwealth is a striking demonstration of their prosperity.

Massachusetts at the present time has about three and a quarter millions of people, not many more than one-fifteenth of the population of Great Britain or Germany or France, which are our great rivals in manufacturing industries, and yet the deposits in the Massachusetts savings banks are very nearly equal to the deposits in the savings banks of each of those great countries, and they have been increasing at leaps and bounds during the period of great prosperity which followed the passage of the Dingley tariff bill in 1897. The following is a statement of these deposits and the number of accounts outstanding for a term of years:

Number and amount of deposits in savings banks in the State.

	Open accounts.	Deposits.
1900	.....	$540,403,686
1905	.....	662,808,312
1906	1,908,141	694,081,141
1907	1,971,644	706,940,596
1908	1,973,926	709,519,730
1909	2,040,894	743,101,481
1910	2,100,970	770,814,452
1911	2,137,534	802,220,707
1912	2,200,917	838,635,097

The latter shows that practically two-thirds of the people of Massachusetts, barring the possibility that a person has a deposit in more than one savings bank, have deposits in our mutual banks, which in itself indicates their popular character. I have said that these have been years of great prosperity, which is true, generally speaking, though there have been variations in this prosperity. This is particularly shown in the deposits of 1908, which are only $2,500,000 greater than those of 1907, owing to the panic of that year.

In addition to these mutual savings banks, Massachusetts has a system of cooperative banks which provide funds for building operations, enabling a man in small circumstances to deposit in these banks and obtain through such deposits money for his building operations on the most advantageous terms. The last returns show that there were 162 such banks, and that the deposits were $74,484,048, an increase of $6,910,667 over the returns of the previous year. These banks are used by substantially the same class of people who use the mutual savings banks. They are also under the supervision of the State, and their losses in operation have been substantially nothing. In addition to this the Commonwealth charters trust companies, which do a trust business, but also a general banking business, so that they are, in effect, State banks. The deposits in the 65 trust companies of the State are $283,200,553. These deposits are to a considerable extent those of trustees and others of a similar character.

While the trust companies can not be put in the same class as mutual savings banks, because they frequently hold the deposits of business men of large affairs and do a regular banking business, they are not so generally used for such a purpose as are national banks, and to some degree show the prosperity of other classes than the active business men of the State. These statements show that during recent years there has been prosperity among the citizens of Massachusetts in the employed classes where a large percentage are connected with those industries referred to and many others which will be affected by this legislation. The reductions made in the duties imposed in the pending bill must necessarily result in increased importations, and it would be of interest to be told how these workmen are to be benefited if we are to buy in other countries goods which they now produce.

It is impossible without a considerable amount of labor, which would not be justified, to give the total dividends paid by Massachusetts industries, because very many of the larger businesses, especially in the shoe industry, are either private corporations or copartnerships, and no statement of the dividend return or profits obtained is possible, although we do know that in the shoe industry the average profit on a pair of shoes is less than 7 cents a pair and that it has not varied materially from that figure during the period to which I am referring, though the present profits in shoemaking are undoubtedly less per pair than they were in the period between 1900 and 1910.

Therefore in order to demonstrate that the returns on capital have not increased in the same ratio or in fact increased at all during much of this period it is necessary to take individual communities which are largely dependent on a single industry. By so doing I think I can show that the returns of the rich—if the rich are called stockholders in manufacturing industries; and, by the way, there are tens of thousands of stockholders in our cotton and wool industries frequently having small holdings which represent the savings of the owner for many years or for a lifetime—have been diminishing while the prosperity of the workers themselves has been increasing; and in order to do this I will take as examples the city of New Bedford, where, generally speaking, high-grade cotton goods are manufactured; the city of Fall River, where, substantially speaking, a lower grade of cotton goods is manufactured; the city of Lawrence, where the manufactures are about equally divided between cotton and worsted goods; the city of Brockton, the largest shoe-manufacturing center of the United States; the city of Lynn, which is one of the great shoe centers and also the location of a part of the plant of the General Electric Co. I speak of these typical places, because the returns on capital invested, except in the case of Brockton, can be figured much more definitely than in other cases, and they illustrate as well as would others the argument which I am going to develop.

The two savings banks in New Bedford held at the end of the year, October 31, 1912, $28,427,468.38, and the table which follows shows the increase each year for the past ten.

Deposits of the 2 savings banks in New Bedford, Mass., and the annual increase for the years 1903 to 1912, as of record of Oct. 31, each year enumerated.

	Total deposits.	Annual increase in deposits over previous year.
1903	$22,872,940.57	.....
1904	23,212,115.36	$339,174.79
1905	23,977,969.25	765,853.89
1906	25,052,499.20	1,074,529.95
1907	26,092,321.05	1,039,821.85
1908	26,565,101.28	472,780.23
1909	26,815,115.64	250,014.64
1910	27,287,737.13	472,621.49
1911	27,772,533.73	484,796.60
1912	28,427,468.38	654,934.65

In addition to the above, New Bedford has three national banks and a trust company, having a total deposit of $14,747,000. The wages in the mills of New Bedford have been frequently increased, the last change being in the spring of 1912, when they were increased 10 per cent; but while the wages of the employees have been increased and the deposits in savings banks show that the employees are reasonably prosperous, dividends have not shown the same tendency.

The total capital of the mills of New Bedford amounts to $37,126,300. The dividend paid in 1912 was $1,647,000, or 4.4 per cent on the capital. The dividend paid in 1911 was $2,020,475, or 5.5 per cent on the capital invested. The dividend paid in 1910 was $3,057,000, or 9.50 per cent on the then outstanding capital. No mill during that period increased its dividend and about one-half of the mills decreased their dividends. In many cases the dividends of 1911 and 1912 were not earned, but were paid out of the surplus which had been accumulated in the past, and it will be noted also that the capital stock of the New Bedford mills outstanding is only about one-half the replacement value of the mills, which, if figured at $20 a spindle, would be $60,000,000.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WEEKS. Yes.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I recall having heard that the stock of those mills was watered to a great extent, not the particular mills the Senator quotes, but the woolen and cotton mills of Massachusetts. Can the Senator state what the fact is, whether the capital that he referred to was genuine capital or whether it was watered?

Mr. WEEKS. I am coming to that in a moment. I will say that it is impossible to water the stock of any Massachusetts corporation under the Massachusetts laws. That statement applies to all Massachusetts corporations. I will come to that point later. The statement, however, has no basis whatever, I will say to the Senator from Nebraska.

Therefore the average dividends of the past three years, which on the outstanding capital were 6¼ per cent, would have been on the replacement value exactly 4 per cent. Can it be said with these figures before us that the mill owners of New Bedford are growing richer or profiting unduly at the expense of the mill operatives who have, during this period of decreasing dividends, received an increase in their pay of 10 per cent and who are evidently making material savings, as is evidenced by bank deposits?

In the case of Fall River, substantially the same result is found. There are in Fall River 32 mills which paid an average dividend from 1900 to 1912 of 5.99 per cent.

The outstanding capital of the Fall River mills is $30,710,000, an average of $10.20 per spindle. The cost of building a new mill of the character of those located in that city at $18 a spindle would mean a capitalization of $55,000,000; therefore the dividends for the period referred to, instead of averaging 5.99 per cent per annum, would have averaged 3.4 per cent on the replacement value.

Deposits of the 4 savings banks in Fall River, Mass., and the annual increase for the years 1903 to 1912, as of record of Oct. 31, each year enumerated.

	Total deposits.	Annual increase in deposits over the previous year.
1903	$18,989,449.94
1904	18,728,393.04	[1] $261,056.90
1905	19,148,997.36	420,604.32
1906	20,226,852.47	1,077,855.11
1907	21,397,906.21	1,171,053.74
1908	21,268,287.82	[1] 129,618.39
1909	22,086,238.37	817,950.55
1910	22,507,084.95	420,846.58
1911	22,958,636.47	451,551.52
1912	23,906,325.08	947,688.61

[1] Decrease.

Can it be possible that anyone would contend that with increased earnings and increased savings of the workmen and the decreased dividends, as is illustrated in the case of Fall River, the stockholders there are getting richer and the employees are getting poorer?

Brockton, as I have suggested, is the leading shoe manufacturing center of the United States. It is a comparatively new city, but there are situated at Brockton several of the largest shoe industries in Massachusetts, and, substantially speaking, the people of that community are engaged in or dependent upon this industry. The savings deposits in Brockton's banks do not show the deposits which would be expected in such a prosperous city, the reason being that many savings banks in communities around Brockton and contiguous to it are older than those in that city and many of the employees of the Brockton factories come from adjoining towns, so that the deposits in Brockton do not properly demonstrate the prosperity of its people.

There has been substantially no change in the volume of business at the Brockton factories during the past year, and as but one of the factories is capitalized it is impossible to state what the net earnings have been, but it is a fair statement that the net profits for a pair of shoes is no larger than heretofore, and on account of the increased cost of leather it is quite likely less; yet the savings deposits show an increase of 100 per cent in 10 years. I append a table showing this increase.

Deposits of the 3 savings banks in Brockton, Mass., and the annual increase for the years 1903 to 1912, as of record of Oct. 31, each year enumerated.

	Total deposits.	Annual increase in deposits over previous year.
1903	$4,789,521.29
1904	5,197,318.24	$407,796.95
1905	5,755,849.28	558,531.04
1906	6,349,609.16	593,759.88
1907	6,580,281.97	230,672.81
1908	6,644,601.41	64,319.47
1909	7,210,126.26	565,524.82
1910	7,991,770.88	781,644.62
1911	8,769,169.48	777,398.60
1912	9,638,010.28	868,840.80

Similar conditions obtained in Lynn, where the savings banks show an increase of $4,400,000 in 10 years, although the shoe factories do not indicate increased net earnings and the General Electric dividend has not been changed.

Deposits of the 3 savings banks in Lynn, Mass., and the annual increase for the years 1903 to 1912, as of record of Oct. 31, each year enumerated.

	Total deposits.	Annual increase in deposits for the previous year.
1903	$10,080,753.35
1904	10,522,014.26	$441,260.90
1905	11,155,553.26	633,539.00
1906	11,842,986.23	727,432.97
1907	12,042,910.68	199,942.45
1908	11,911,347.73	[1] 131,562.95
1909	12,524,671.99	613,324.26
1910	13,166,803.76	642,131.77
1911	13,823,034.45	656,230.69
1912	14,490,834.39	667,799.94

[1] Decrease.

Senators will recall the labor troubles which disturbed business in Lawrence during 1912, affecting the earnings and dividends of Lawrence mills; yet the savings deposits increased in that city $692,239.50 for the year and show a gain of 42 per cent in 10 years, while in no instance has there been an increase in mill dividends since 1907, while several corporations are now reducing.

Deposits of the 3 savings banks in Lawrence, Mass., and the annual increase for the years 1903 to 1912, as of record of Oct. 31, each year enumerated.

	Total deposits.	Annual increase in deposits over previous year.
1903	$14,129,627.89
1904	14,853,220.64	$723,592.75
1905	16,057,307.13	1,204,086.49
1906	17,254,413.79	1,197,106.66
1907	17,898,460.04	644,046.25
1908	17,516,557.74	[1] 381,902.30
1909	18,464,364.02	947,806.28
1910	19,018,433.14	554,069.12
1911	19,494,732.18	476,299.04
1912	20,186,971.68	692,239.50

[1] Decrease.

ARE CORPORATIONS ENGAGED IN MANUFACTURING IN NEW ENGLAND OVERCAPITALIZED?

I have already indicated in the case of New Bedford, Fall River, and Lawrence that they are not capitalized for more than about one-half of their replacement value. At this point I wish to insert the following list of New England manufacturing corporations recently prepared by a trade paper:

Mill.	Capital.	Spindles.	Capital per spindle.	Replacement value.	Undercapitalization.
Androscoggin	$1,000,000	69,798	$14.62	$1,395,960	$395,960
Appleton Co	450,000	67,414	6.67	1,483,108	1,083,108
Atlantic Cotton	1,000,000	105,000	9.52	2,100,000	1,100,000
Bates Manufacturing Co	1,200,000	82,000	14.63	1,640,000	440,000
Boott Mills	1,000,000	158,136	6.32	3,162,720	2,162,720
Boston Duck	350,000	20,708	16.90	414,160	64,160

Mill.	Capital.	Spindles.	Capital per spindle.	Replacement value.	Undercapitalization.
Boston Manufacturing Co	$600,000	63,232	$9.47	$1,393,304	$793,304
Cabot Manufacturing Co	800,000	66,064	12.10	1,321,280	521,280
Chicopee Manufacturing Co	600,009	90,384	6.64	1,807,680	1,247,680
Continental Mills	1,500,000	100,000	15.00	2,000,000	500,000
Dwight Manufacturing Co	1,200,000	220,000	5.45	4,400,000	3,200,000
Edwards Manufacturing Co	1,100,000	103,000	10.68	2,000,000	900,000
Everett Mills	1,400,000	110,000	12.73	2,200,000	800,000
Fisher Manufacturing Co	500,000	50,000	10.00	1,000,000	500,000
Great Falls	1,500,000	136,000	11.03	2,720,000	1,220,000
Hamilton Manufacturing Co	1,800,000	118,260	15.23	2,365,200	565,200
Hill Manufacturing Co	750,000	110,000	6.82	2,200,000	1,450,000
Jackson Co	600,000	55,000	10.91	1,100,000	500,000
Lancaster Mills	1,000,000	80,000	12.50	1,760,000	600,000
Lawrence Manufacturing Co	1,250,000	111,000	11.16	2,000,000	970,000
Lyman Mills	1,470,000	110,000	13.36	2,209,000	830,000
Massachusetts Mills	1,800,000	128,000	14.06	2,560,000	760,000
Massachusetts Mills in Georgia	2,000,000	100,000	20.00	2,000,000	.....
Merrimack Manufacturing Co	4,400,000	346,000 [1]	12.94	6,800,000	2,400,000
Nashua Manufacturing Co	1,000,000	97,768	10.23	1,955,360	955,360
Naumkeag Mills	1,500,000	101,000	14.85	2,020,000	720,000
Newmarket Manufacturing Co	600,000	61,000	9.84	1,220,000	620,000
Pepperell Manufacturing Co	2,556,000	250,000	10.04	5,000,000	2,444,000
Salmon Falls Manufacturing Co	600,000	60,000	10.00	1,200,000	600,000
Suncook Mills	850,000	102,054	8.32	2,041,080	1,191,000
Thorndike Co	675,000	82,972	8.14	1,794,460	974,440
Tremont & Suffolk	2,000,000	230,000	8.70	4,600,000	2,600,000
York Manufacturing Co	1,800,000	100,000	18.00	2,000,000	200,000
American Linen Co	800,000	104,500	7.66	1,881,000	1,081,000
Ancona Co	300,000	39,136	7.15	704,448	404,448
Arkwright Mills	450,000	68,432	6.58	1,221,776	771,776
Barnard Manufacturing Co	495,000	79,232	6.25	1,426,170	931,170
Bourne Mills	1,000,000	91,258	10.95	1,642,644	642,644
Border City Manufacturing Co	1,000,000	121,228	8.25	2,182,104	1,182,104
Chace Mills	1,200,000	116,668	10.28	2,100,024	900,024
Cornell Mills	400,000	45,040	9.00	810,720	410,720
Connecticut Mills	300,000	29,412	10.20	529,416	229,416
Davis Mills	1,250,000	127,000	9.85	2,540,000	1,290,000
Davol Mills	500,000	44,672	11.19	804,096	304,096
Flint Mills	1,160,000	101,000	11.47	1,818,000	658,000
Granite Mills	1,000,000	118,894	8.41	2,140,092	1,140,092
Hargraves Mills	800,000	111,690	7.16	2,010,420	1,210,420
King Philip Mills	1,500,000	135,072	14.11	2,701,440	1,201,440
Luther Manufacturing Co	350,000	51,616	6.78	829,088	479,088
Laurel Lake Mills	600,000	59,808	10.03	1,076,544	476,544
Merchants Manufacturing Co	1,200,000	134,336	9.00	2,418,048	1,218,048
Mechanics Mills	750,000	56,432	13.27	1,015,776	265,776
Narragansett Mills	400,000	43,744	9.12	791,292	391,292
Osborn Mills	750,000	70,332	10.66	1,435,976	675,976
Parker Mills	800,000	111,684	7.16	2,010,312	1,210,312
Pocasset Manufacturing Co	1,200,000	120,016	10.00	2,160,228	960,228
Rich. Borden Manufacturing Co	1,000,000	101,024	9.90	1,818,432	818,432
Sagamore Manufacturing Co	1,200,000	141,726	8.47	2,551,104	1,351,104
Seaconnet Mills	600,000	68,384	8.74	1,230,932	630,932
Shove Mills	550,000	73,552	7.48	1,323,936	773,936
Stafford Mills	1,000,000	100,576	9.94	1,810,368	810,368
Stevens Manufacturing Co	700,000	65,000	10.77	1,170,000	470,000
Tecumseh Mills	750,000	78,960	9.50	1,421,280	671,280
Troy C. & W. Manufactory	300,000	60,304	5.96	905,472	605,472
Union Cotton Manufacturing Co	1,200,000	110,128	10.90	1,982,304	782,304
Wampanoag Mills	750,000	87,096	8.42	1,567,728	817,728
Weetamoe Mills	500,000	45,504	11.35	819,072	319,072
F. R. Iron Works	2,000,000	468,000	4.28	8,424,000	6,424,000
Acushnet Mills	500,000	105,336	4.76	2,106,720	1,606,720
Bristol Mills	1,000,000	67,040	14.90	1,340,800	340,800
Butler Mills	1,500,000	100,000	15.00	2,200,000	700,000
City Mills	750,000	65,315	11.48	1,306,300	556,300
Dartmouth Mills	1,800,000	200,000	11.11	4,000,000	2,200,000
Gosnold Mills	1,650,000	82,232	20.00	1,809,104	149,140
Grinnell Mills	1,000,000	128,000	7.84	2,816,000	1,816,000
Hathaway Mills	800,000	108,328	7.39	2,383,216	1,532,216
Holmes Mills	1,200,000	60,000	20.00	1,200,000	.....
Kilburn Mills	1,500,000	125,000	12.00	2,750,000	1,250,000
Manomet Mills	2,000,000	127,000	15.75	2,540,000	540,000
Nashawena Mills	2,500,000	125,000	20.00	2,750,000	250,000
N. B. Cotton Mills	1,000,000	65,000	15.40	1,430,000	430,000
Nonquit Cotton Mills	2,400,000	130,000	18.46	2,600,000	200,000
Page Mill	1,000,000	63,000	15.87	1,386,000	386,000
Pierce Mill	600,000	116,000	5.17	2,556,000	1,956,000
Potomska Mill	1,200,000	110,000	10.98	2,200,000	1,000,000
Soule Mill	1,260,000	93,000	13.55	2,772,000	1,512,000
Taber Mill	1,300,000	71,000	18.31	1,562,000	262,000
Wamsutta Mill	3,000,000	229,000	13.11	4,580,000	1,580,000
Whitman Mill	2,000,000	185,000	10.81	4,070,000	2,070,000
Amoskeag Mills	5,760,000	[2] 600,000	.....	13,500,000	7,740,000
Pacific Mills	3,000,000	[2] 300,000	.....	11,500,000	8,500,000
Arlington Mills	8,000,000	[2] 100,000	.....	10,000,000	2,000,000
Hamilton Woolen Co	1,000,000	[2] 63,000	.....	2,250,000	1,250,000
Total	117,326,000	10,468,599	.....	222,970,630	105,644,630

[1] Has 24-machine printing plant.
[2] Large worsted plants in addition to cotton equipment.

This list does not include all cotton and worsted manufacturers in Massachusetts or in Maine or New Hampshire. It does, however, represent most of the leading industries, and they are typical of those which are not here enumerated.

In this list the total capital outstanding is $117,326,000, while the replacement value would be $222,970,000. The capital as above given does not include either surplus or profit and loss. The number of spindles is 10,469,599, or the outstanding capital represented is $10.50 per spindle. Therefore, based on replacement value these properties are capitalized at $105,644,000 less than their value.

A few individual instances of representative mills will emphasize this contention. Take, for instance, the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., of New Hampshire, which is one of the oldest and the largest cotton mills in the United States, having an outstanding capital of $5,760,000 and operating 600,000 spindles, in addition to a considerable worsted plant. The dividends paid by this corporation annually have been as follows:

	Per cent.		Per cent.		Per cent.
1831	None.	1859	8	1887	10
1832	None.	1860	9	1888	10
1833	None.	1861	9	1889	10
1834	6	1862	10	1890	10
1835	15	1863	15	1891	10
1836	8	1864	9	1892	10
1837	4	1865	10	1893	7½
1838	3	1866	22	1894	5
1839	9	1867	20	1895	5
1840	None.	1868	16	1896	5
1841	6	1869	17	1897	5
1842	4	1870	10	1898	6
1843	7	1871	13	1899	9
1844	9	1872	18	1900	25
1845	15	1873	14	1901	10
1846	35	1874	9	1902	10
1847	30	1875	9	1903	10
1848	3	1876	8	1904	35
1849	23	1877	10	1905	10
1850	6	1878	10	1906	10
1851	4	1879	10	1907	16
1852	7	1880	10	1908	16
1853	8	1881	11	1909	12
1854	8	1882	10	1910	12
1855	6	1883	13	1911	12
1856	4	1884	10	1912
1857	3	1885	10
1858	3	1886	10

The average rate paid during the life of the company has been almost exactly 10 per cent.

The replacement value of this company at $20 a spindle instead of being the capital stock outstanding would be $13,800,000. During the period from 1895 to 1912 the average dividend paid was 12½ per cent on the outstanding stock; this would be about 5 per cent on the replacement value of the plant and less than 7 per cent on the capital, profit and loss, and surplus.

Another representative mill is the Pacific Corporation, of Lawrence, Mass., which has paid dividends at the rate of 10 per cent from the organization of the company in 1853 until 1905, and has paid 12½ per cent since. This has been an especially well-managed concern. The capital outstanding is $3,000,000. The replacement value, figuring replacement at $20 per spindle, would be $11,500,000, so that the dividends for the past 16 years, the years of its greatest prosperity, would average but 3.8 per cent on its replacement value, and would average 4.7 per cent on the capital and profit and loss account, which would be the probable liquidating value of the property if the mill went out of business and the real estate and machinery were thrown away.

One of the best-managed mills of this character is the Great Falls Manufacturing Co., of Somersworth, N. H., which is another illustration of the same general statement. The average dividend paid by this corporation during the 13 years from 1899 to 1912 was 12 per cent; the capital stock outstanding is $1,500,000, the replacement value $2,272,000, so that the average dividend on the replacement value has been 6.66 per cent, and not far from 7.2 per cent on capital and profit and loss.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WEEKS. Yes.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Do I understand that the replacement value is greater than the outstanding capital stock?

Mr. WEEKS. In every instance.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Because the earnings of the company have been used to increase the plant?

Mr. WEEKS. There have been various reasons for that.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I infer that the plant could have been increased in no other way. So the dividends represent only a part of the profit that has been made during the period of years the Senator mentions?

Mr. WEEKS. Every mill corporation charges something to a renewal account every year. It is a part of the operating expenses of the plant. There is no well-managed corporation which does not charge about 5 per cent to a renewal account, or some other similar account, but invariably it is included in the operating expenses of the plant. No manufacturing corporation is conducted on any other basis.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. So the conclusion is that the earnings of the plant of the company during that period are represented not only by the dividends that have been paid but the enormous increase in the value of the plant?

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, I think that the Senator from Nebraska puts the wrong construction on what I have said. No mill in this country or in England or in any other country is operated without making a charge off every year for renewal or replacement, and that charge off is included in the operating expenses. In that way the property is maintained at an efficient standard.

I will admit that probably in many of these cases—you would have to take each individual case and examine it by itself to make an accurate statement, but in many of these cases if there had been no charge off for renewals or no charge off for any other purpose, as is customary among manufacturers, it is quite likely the capital outstanding would be similar to the renewal cost.

All of the cases go to show that the frequently repeated and sometimes believed statement that New England mills are largely overcapitalized and that they are earning excessive dividends is absolutely without foundation; the reverse is really true. Workmen are getting a fair proportion of the earnings, and the bringing in of ten millions of additional cotton goods and forty-eight millions additional woolen goods is going to curtail our production to that extent. These industries are not in condition to warrant such a change, nor should the employees be deprived of the work involved.

How easy it is to use popular phrases in political resolutions, to make statements if they do not have to be proven, to constantly repeat clattertrap until people think it may be true and even those who indulge in it become convinced from repeated repetition, especially as it may not have been denied, that there must be something in it. That is the position in which we find the Democratic Party, the tariff, and the people. The former has constantly repeated statements relative to the tariff and its relations to certain elements in our life, and the latter, always wishing to improve their condition, and properly so, skeptical, no doubt, of the result of this experiment, have concluded to give the Democratic Party a chance to do what it has stated could be done if the tariff were reduced; that is, reduce the cost of living, strangle the trusts, make the rich poorer and the poor richer, and to develop competition, giving every man an equal chance with every other, and this Congress is trying to carry out these promises. I wish it were possible to do these things, but if there is any merit in what I have stated, the people will find that their net income is not increased, but will probably be decreased; that there will be rich and poor, dependent on the brains, industry, and thrift of the individual; that the large corporation is here to stay, under proper control, because it is in many cases the economical way in which to do business; that there is, as there always has been, a chance for every man which is dependent on himself and his own power of initiative; and that there never has been a greater demand for skillful, honest, industrious men than now. And I believe that the people will find that an attempt to change conditions in this way has injured all classes of citizens, who will at the first opportunity proceed to depose those who have been humbugging them and will restore to power the party which has, on the whole, managed the country's affairs with intelligence and honesty.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Before the Senator takes his seat, in view of the glorious picture that has been portrayed to us of the magnificent and prosperous condition of the cities of New England, I should like to know how he accounts for the lamentable condition of the people in Lawrence, Mass., when they engaged in a strike followed by cessation of work and great distress.

Mr. WEEKS. That lamentable condition of the people of Lawrence was largely without basis.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I submit that is not an argument.

I heard the Senator say a moment ago, when the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] made some reference to the cost of pens that that is all humbug. I submit that that may be very conclusive to the Senator, but it is not conclusive to the mill workers of Lawrence, Mass.

Mr. WEEKS. If the Senator from New Jersey had honored me with his attention——

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I did very closely.

Mr. WEEKS. He would have heard me say that the deposits in the savings banks of Lawrence have increased $6,000,000 in the last 10 years, and that they average more than $300 for every man, woman, and child in the city; that they average as high as do the deposits in all the savings banks in the State of Massachusetts, which are the highest of any Commonwealth in the Union and the highest in any part of the world, and those deposits, as he will recall, if he has followed me, are made by the same mill operatives to whom the Senator has referred.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I recall that at the same time the Senator said that the dividends have averaged 12 per cent, and this did not include betterments and additions to the mills.

Mr. WEEKS. I suspected that the Senator from New Jersey had not been following me carefully, because if he had he would have heard me say that the dividends of one mill had averaged 12 per cent for a term of years, but that on its replacement value those dividends would have been only 4 per cent. He would have heard me say if he were listening that the dividends of the mills in Lawrence in no instance have been increased since the year 1907, and in many instances they have been decreased, while the wages of the employees have been increased.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I suppose that that is owing and has been owing to the demand of the organization of labor.

Mr. WEEKS. A mill owner who has any judgment wishes to develop good employees and give them steady employment, and he is willing, if he has any judgment, to pay his employees what their services are worth. I assume that that is generally the case in Lawrence as it is elsewhere.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that the Secretary proceed with the reading of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection——

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. Is the bill before the Senate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair was about to state that it is before the Senate when the Senator from Utah interrupted, the Chair did not know but for some other purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. I understand that the bill was before the Senate, and that the Senators from California and Massachusetts addressed themselves to it.

Mr. SIMMONS. I simply requested that the Secretary proceed with the reading of the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. I so understood.

Mr. President, just before the close of session yesterday we had under consideration paragraph 30, and particularly that portion of the paragraph known as the proviso, to which I offered an amendment increasing the 5 per cent of alcohol to 10 per cent.

During that debate I made a certain statement as to the amount of alcohol in acetate ether, claiming that it was about 10 per cent. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. LANE] questioned that statement first, as others did, and made this statement:

> Mr. President, I should like to say, for the information of Senators who are not familiar with this subject, that it does not require a particle of alcohol to make acetic ether.

Subsequently he qualifies that statement by this statement——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Is the Senator from Utah referring to the remarks made by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. LANE]?

Mr. SMOOT. I am reading from the remarks made by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Well, that is what I thought. What the Senator from Oregon meant to say was that it did not require any alcohol added from the outside to what the fermentation had already produced.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suppose the Senator from Oregon is here, and he can answer for himself. I desire now to continue my statement.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Oregon to what has just been said. The Senator from Utah has stated that the Senator from Oregon had said that it required no alcohol at all.

Mr. SMOOT. Would it not be better for me to complete my statement?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah refuse to yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. SMOOT. I was just asking, Would it not be better for me to complete my statement? Then the Senator from Mississippi can take it up with the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; just repeat it to the Senator from Oregon, and then I need not take it up at all. I was merely defending the Senator from Oregon in his absence and making the point that the amount of alcohol in the final resultant might have been produced within itself or artificially added later.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator from Oregon was in the Chamber when I began to speak, and I supposed he heard every word that I uttered. The Senator from Oregon later made this statement:

> Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, here is the United States Dispensatory, an official document recognized by druggists and physicians all over the world, though not, perhaps, by those of the homeopathic persuasion. I think they recognize it as a fairly good authority, however. It aims to give a true and just statement of the facts. It describes acetic ether as follows:

"A liquid composed of about 98.5 per cent, by weight, of ethyl acetate and about 1.5 per cent of alcohol, containing a little water. It should be kept in well-stoppered bottles, in a cool and dark place, remote from lights or fire."

My statement was also questioned by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], he claiming that the expert of the majority members of the committee had stated that acetic acid did not contain more than 5 per cent of alcohol, and that he relied upon that statement. Afterwards the Senator from Mississippi delivered a statement as to his idea of the case.

Mr. President, in justice to Hon. Thomas J. Doherty, the author of the notes on tariff from which I quoted, in justice to the manufacturers who have written to me claiming that there was about 10 per cent of alcohol in this ether, and in justification of my position yesterday, I have secured from the Congressional Library the United States Dispensatory, but it is not the old issue that was read from by the Senator from Oregon. It is the latest issue. I want now to read from that issue to show that Mr. Doherty was correct, and then to further point to other evidence. On page 100 of that volume, under the head of "Acetic ether," this statement appears:

Acetic ether is a liquid composed of about 90 per cent by weight of ethyl acetate, and about 10 per cent of alcohol containing a little water.

I have here, Mr. President, Merck's 1907 Index. Merck & Co., I suppose, are the largest druggists in the world. I find in that index, on page 183, this in relation to acetic ether:

Acetic ether.—About 90 per cent by weight ethyl acetate, and about 10 per cent alcohol containing a little water.

They give, as their authority for this statement, the United States Pharmacopœia, which, I take it for granted, even the Senator from Oregon [Mr. LANE] will not dispute is good authority.

So, Mr. President, with this information before the Senate, I now again state that the amendment offered by the majority members of the Finance Committee of the Senate will not put acetic ether under paragraph 30, but that it will fall under paragraph 17.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. LANE. Will the Senator allow me a moment in further relation to this matter?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly, Mr. President.

Mr. LANE. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. President, when this matter came up yesterday I was informed by the expert who labors in behalf of the Democratic members of the Finance Committee in getting up these schedules that acetic ether contains on an average about from 2 to 4 per cent of alcohol. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] suggested that I send over to the Congressional Library and secure a copy of the United States Dispensatory, which is the work which is used by pharmacists and consulted by physicians all over America. It is not an official document otherwise in America, but it is recognized as good authority. The Senator from Utah is right about that.

The Library authorities sent me, by a small boy who went after it, the volume from which I read. I did not look at its date; I merely turned to the subject in question and read to the Senate just what the book states, which is exactly what I said yesterday. I will now read it again.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no dispute as to that, Mr. President.

Mr. LANE. The Senator, then, has read it?

Mr. SMOOT. I have already read it, and said that the volume from which the Senator from Oregon read was an older issue than the one from which I have been reading. I suppose the Senator does not deny the statement that I have made.

Mr. LANE. No; not a bit. I now wish to say this, further: I sent over to the Congressional Library again to-day and secured a copy of the American Pharmacopœia, which is the working formula which druggists usually use, and in a smaller and condensed edition, perhaps a bit more accurate than the other authority. The Library officials sent word back to me that they did not have it, and the messenger who brought me the word left this message on my desk: "Senator LANE. You had the latest one—the latest edition."

So, evidently, they were in error, and when they sent me this work I did not look at it. The formula has been changed, I am told, for these reasons: In the conversion of alcohol into acetic acid it requires one more atom of oxygen, and in so far as the process is completed it contains less alcohol. The more pure the ether the less alcohol there is in it. An incomplete distillation and fermentation leaves a larger proportion of alcohol. The medical fraternity, or the gentlemen who have gotten out this work, have changed what is now the common method of making that particular article. It does contain at this time more alcohol. I repeat there has been a change; I acknowledge that.

I am told, however, that there are two varieties of this article upon the market, and that the strictly medical, high-grade acetic ether contains from 2 to 4 per cent of alcohol. I was sure that samples of the commercial article and that which is used in medicine would be submitted here for me to-day so that I might show it to you for your information.

In regard to Merck & Co., I will say that it is a large German manufacturing establishment, which does not manufacture its drugs in America.

Mr. SMOOT. It has an establishment in New York.

Mr. LANE. It has a branch house and an agency in this country. The error in regard to this matter arose as I have stated. There are two kinds of this article—one medicinal, the other commercial.

Mr. SMOOT. But it makes no difference whatever as to the rate of duty under this bill levied upon that article. I wish to now state that what I have just read, of course, conforms strictly to what I said yesterday.

Again, Mr. President, I suppose that, as stated by the Senator from Oregon, he got his information from this expert, just as the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] got his information by running to the back of the Senate Chamber and asking the expert about the price of this acetic ether, and then made his statement to the Senate, after securing the information from the expert.

I want to say to the Senate that I am informed that Mr. Herstein, the expert, was also the expert for the House committee, which sent this bill over to the Senate in the form in which it was referred to the Committee on Finance. If he knew all about that industry, why so many proposed changes by the Senate committee? Why was the change made in this item, if it were true that he had expert knowledge regarding it?

Mr. LANE. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will wait until I get through with my statement, the Senator can then continue. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] made this statement:

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] asked the Senator from Utah the direct question whether, if this commodity fell under paragraph No. 17, it would be an increase of the rate, and the Senator from Utah, as I understood him, said that it would. The rate of duty under the present law is 250 per cent. The Senator from Utah can state in a moment what the rate will be under the proposed law, even if this article comes in under paragraph No. 17.

Mr. President, Merck & Co., as has already been stated, are one of the largest manufacturing chemists in the world. They quote at Darmstadt, Germany, the price of acetic ether as "3 marks 50 per kilo," which means 38 cents per pound, instead of 20, as the expert told the Senator from New Jersey yesterday.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. HUGHES. I stated that price as the American price.

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator say that the American price is less than the price in Germany?

Mr. HUGHES. I say the American price is what I said it was yesterday. The price quoted somewhere else by some other firm has nothing to do with what I said. I quoted the American price yesterday.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, Mr. President, why put any duty here at all upon the article, if it is one-half cheaper in this country than it is in Germany?

I desire also in this connection to call the attention of the Senate to another fact. It is very strange, indeed, that when the Wilson bill, the last Democratic tariff bill, was passed they made this very item carry a dollar a pound.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I yield for the Senator to make another statement furnished by the same expert.

Mr. LANE. It comes from——

Mr. SMOOT. I saw the expert hand it to the Senator, and I am prefectly willing to yield to have the Senator again put in the expert's opinion.

Mr. LANE. Very well.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I hope that we will not bandy words about the experts. The majority have engaged an expert and the minority have engaged an expert, and I think we ought not to question the propriety of those gentlemen furnishing information to either side.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not questioning the propriety of that, Mr. President, but on yesterday the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] and other Senators took me to task because I had stated here upon the floor of the Senate what that particular expert said.

Mr. STONE. I did not take the Senator to task for that.

Mr. SMOOT. I read the RECORD this morning, and I certainly thought so.

Mr. STONE. I took the Senator to task for this: I asked him who his expert was, and he declined to say.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, no, Mr. President; I told the Senator that I would tell him.

Mr. STONE. Yes; but the Senator did not tell me.

Mr. SMOOT. I would have told the Senator, but the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] immediately rose and told the Senator.

Mr. STONE. And inasmuch as there had been given out here in the Senate the authority upon which the statements made by the committee were predicated, namely, the authority of Dr. Herstein, when the Senator from Utah undertook to oppose that statement with the authority of another expert, I thought the Senate had a right to know who the expert was, so that they might weigh the relative merit and value of the two statements.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I said, as the RECORD will show, that I was perfectly willing to state to the Senator who the expert was, but before I could do so the Senator from Mississippi took the floor and delivered a lecture on the rate of 250 per cent, which he claims the present law carries.

Mr. STONE. The Senator said to me in that colloquy in a somewhat petulant manner that I had no right to ask the name of his expert nor was he obliged to give it.

Mr. SMOOT. But I said that I would do so.

Mr. STONE. Yes; the Senator said he would, but he did not.

Mr. SMOOT. Well, Mr. President, I did not have the opportunity. I was perfectly willing to give it, and was going to pick up the document on my desk and read to the Senator what the Senator from Mississippi read.

Mr. President, I have nothing more to say on this particular point. I wanted these facts to appear in the RECORD to justify the statement that was made by Hon. Thomas J. Doherty in the document issued, entitled "Notes on the Tariff, 1913."

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, I should like to place an additional statement in the RECORD. There is clearly ground for difference of opinion here, inasmuch as the authorities differ. I am not trying to gain any advantage in an argument with the Senator. If it be shown that he is right, I am willing to admit it. I only want to clear the matter up and to have it settled by the best authority. I have no prejudice in regard to it.

I have here a catalogue of prices current, of July, 1913, from Powers-Weightman-Rosengarten Co., manufacturing chemists, of Philadelphia, one of the largest concerns in America. Here is a statement based on that catalogue, and Senators will see that it differs from all of the others:

The first and most important grade is acetic ether, 95 per cent; i. e., it is guaranteed to contain 95 per cent of acetic ether, the other 5 per cent being impurities, mainly alcohol. Commercially this is the most important quality as to use and quantity handled. It is used principally as a solvent for gums and for making pyroxylin varnishes, also in connection for making so-called dipping fluids for gas mantles. This grade of acetic ether is made of denatured alcohol. The price quoted in pound bottles, inclusive container, is 30 cents a pound, and considerably less in large quantities. This foreign is less than 20 cents per pound. This grade if imported would pay 20 per cent in duty, as stated in paragraph 30.

The next grade of acetic ether made is the so-called U. S. P., containing about 7 per cent of alcohol, traces of water, the balance being acetic ether. This ether is used for medicinal purposes to a comparatively small extent, and is made—from pure grain alcohol, upon which there is an internal-revenue tax of $2.40 per gallon. This grade when imported would be subject to a tax of 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem under the proposed bill, the tax of 10 cents being intended to compensate for the internal-revenue tax. The foreign price of this grade of acetic ether is about 25 cents per pound.

Now, note the difference—

There is yet another grade of ether, the so-called absolute acetic ether, corresponding to the United States Pharmacopoeia of 1890, and containing only 1½ per cent of alcohol and 97½ per cent acetic ether. This quality is at present absolute.

Under the existing law all the three grades of ether would be subject to a minimum specific tax of 50 cents per pound under paragraph 21.

So you see there are many different kinds of ethers. The chemists change their formulas. The authority quoted by the Senator from Utah states that acetic ether contains about 10 per cent of alcohol, more or less, dependent upon the manner in which and the care with which it is distilled. It is a question that you can not solve closely.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 8, after line 13, to strike out:

31. Extracts and decoctions of logwood and of other dyewoods, and all extracts of vegetable origin suitable for dyeing, coloring, or staining, not specially provided for in this section; all the foregoing not containing alcohol, and not medicinal, three-eighths of 1 cent per pound.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

31. Extracts and decoctions of nutgalls, Persian berries, sumac, logwood, and other dyewoods, and all extracts of vegetable origin suitable for dyeing, coloring, or staining, not specially provided for in this section; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not medicinal, three-eighths of 1 cent per pound.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I move to amend the amendment by striking out all of line 19 and the first word, "berries," in line 20, including the words "Extracts and decoctions of nutgalls, Persian berries."

This motion is not based upon any particular political views, but as a matter of simplicity of administration. The quantity of these articles imported is comparatively insignificant, and the rate of duty is a very small one. As regards the first item, extracts and decoctions of nutgalls, the total amount imported in the year 1910 was three pounds, of the value of $3, the average unit being $1 per pound, and the duty collected 31 cents, an amount sufficient to awaken the attention of finance ministers and students of finance. It was somewhat larger in the following year—yes, considerably larger—but the expected amount of duty which would be collected under this item, as shown in the Tariff Handbook, is $600, while on Persian berries the total amount would only be $563. The proposed equivalent ad valorem duty on the first item would be 3.23 per cent, and 3.76 per cent on the second item. It seems to me, Mr. President, the trouble and cost of collection is altogether greater than the possible revenue would justify.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the only reason for the change suggested by the committee is this: The House placed these articles on the free list along with tanning materials under the impression that they were used for tanning purposes. We were informed that they are not used for tanning purposes, but should be classed among the dyes. So we took them from the free list and put them in with the other dye materials at the same rate. We were told that extracts of Persian berries, sumac, and nutgalls are used in dyeing and not in tanning, and we treated them as the other dyes were treated by placing them in this paragraph.

Mr. BURTON. If the Senator from Maine will yield to me for a question, is not the first article mentioned in the paragraph used principally for tanning?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. No; we were not so informed.

Mr. BURTON. What are Persian berries?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am not informed as to that. I was merely informed that the extract of Persian berries was used only for dyeing and not for tanning, and the same is true of nutgalls.

Mr. BURTON. I think, Mr. President, the first article is used almost exclusively in tanning.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the amendment to the amendment be stated from the desk, Mr. President.

The SECRETARY. In the amendment reported by the committee it is proposed to strike out in paragraph 31, on page 8, line 19, the words "extracts and decoctions of nutgalls, Persian berries," so as to read:

31. Sumac, logwood, and other dyewoods, and all extracts of vegetable origin suitable for dyeing, coloring, or staining, not specially provided for in this section, all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not medicinal, three-eighths of 1 cent per pound.

Mr. JONES. I desire to ask the Senator if the effect of his amendment, if carried, would not be to put these articles on the free list?

Mr. BURTON. I take it the effect would be to place them on the dutiable list at 10 per cent under the basket clause, but, if my motion should prevail, when the free list is reached, I will make the proper motion, and I give notice of it now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I am opposed to the adoption of that amendment. At some other time I shall be prepared to go into the subject as exhaustively as may be demanded.

Mr. SIMMONS. We can not hear what the Senator is saying over here.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If there is order in the Chamber, I think there will be no difficulty in Senators hearing what I have to say.

Mr. SIMMONS. I agree with the Senator about that.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have not had the time this afternoon, Mr. President, to prepare what I desire to say in regard to this proposed amendment. I shall be prepared, however, at any other time at the committee's convenience, but I want to make sure that I will have the right to recur to this amendment at any time. I remember, Mr. President, that in the consideration of the tariff bill in 1909——

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, in the interest of time, if the Senator desires us to pass over this paragraph, in order to allow him time to prepare the matter to which he refers, that can be done.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is just what I was going to suggest. In the consideration of the Payne-Aldrich bill, when a Senator asked to have a paragraph passed over, action was taken accordingly.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If there be no objection, I ask that this amendment be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Paragraph 31 will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 32, page 9, as follows:

32. Extract of chlorophyll, 15 per cent ad valorem; saffron and safflower, and extract of, and saffron cake, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I move to strike out all of line 25 on page 8, and line 1 on page 9 down to the words "ad valorem." I wish to say to the Senate that the reason for that is that saffron and safflower, and extract of, and saffron cake are now upon the free list under paragraph 663, and should be there under this bill, in my opinion.

On that amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BRISTOW. Will the Senator state the reason why these articles should be on the free list?

Mr. SMOOT. Practically none of them are produced in this country. While perhaps not very extensively used, they have been on the free list in many tariff acts, and I do not know why they should be dutiable. I think they ought to be where they are to-day, on the free list.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. COLT (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I desire to know whether the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] is here? I will ask his colleague.

Mr. TOWNSEND. He is not here.

Mr. REED. I am paired with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. TOWNSEND (when the name of Mr. SMITH of Michigan was called). The senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] is absent from the city, but he has a general pair with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. This announcement may stand on all votes to-day.

Mr. STONE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK]. He has not voted, and I do not see him in the Chamber, so I withhold my vote.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]. I transfer that pair so that the Senator from Florida may stand paired with the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL] and will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I announce my pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF], and withhold my vote. I make this announcement for the balance of the day.

Mr. JAMES (after having voted in the negative). I desire to inquire whether the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. JAMES. I have a general pair with that Senator, and therefore withdraw my vote in the negative.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 40, as follows:

YEAS—27.

Bradley	Crawford	Lodge	Sherman
Brady	Cummins	McLean	Smoot
Brandegee	Dillingham	Nelson	Sutherland
Bristow	Gallinger	Norris	Townsend
Burton	Gronna	Oliver	Warren
Catron	Jones	Page	Works
Clapp	Kenyon	Poindexter

NAYS—40.

Ashurst	Johnston, Ala.	Owen	Smith, Ga.
Bacon	Kern	Pittman	Smith, Md.
Bryan	Lane	Pomerene	Smith, S. C.
Chamberlain	Lea	Robinson	Swanson
Clarke, Ark.	Lewis	Shafroth	Thomas
Gore	Martin, Va.	Sheppard	Thompson
Hitchcock	Martine, N. J.	Shields	Thornton
Hollis	Myers	Shively	Vardaman
Hughes	O'Gorman	Simmons	Walsh
Johnson, Me.	Overman	Smith, Ariz.	Williams

NOT VOTING—29.

Bankhead	Fall	Newlands	Stephenson
Borah	Fletcher	Penrose	Sterling
Burleigh	Goff	Perkins	Stone
Chilton	Jackson	Ransdell	Tillman
Clark, Wyo.	James	Reed	Weeks
Colt	La Follette	Root
Culberson	Lippitt	Saulsbury
du Pont	McCumber	Smith, Mich.

So Mr. SMOOT's amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 33, page 9, as follows:

33. Formaldehyde solution containing not more than 40 per cent of formaldehyde, or formaline, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in the present law formaldehyde comes under the basket clause, at 25 per cent ad valorem. The rate proposed in this paragraph is 1 cent per pound. The equivalent ad valorem is only 3.73 per cent, or less than 4 per cent. I should like to ask the Senator having the bill in charge upon what basis formaldehyde was reduced to less than 4 per cent?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I was unable to hear what the Senator said. I heard his inquiry, but not the statement he made.

Mr. SMOOT. My statement was that under the present law formaldehyde enters this country at 25 per cent under the basket clause. It is specifically provided for in this bill at 1 cent per pound. The equivalent ad valorem of the 1 cent per pound on the basis of the importations of 1912 is 3.73 per cent, which is less than 4 per cent. I ask the Senator for what reason formaldehyde should bear a duty of only 3.73 per cent?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator that the Committee on Finance made no change in that paragraph. It came to us in that way from the House, and the committee made no special investigation of the paragraph.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. GRONNA. There must be some mistake about this matter. I will say to the Senator that I do not know what the first cost of formaldehyde solution is, but I do know that it is retailed at 75 cents per gallon, 40 per cent pure. There is a great deal of formaldehyde used by the farmers of the entire country. They use it in treating wheat for smut. There are hundreds and hundreds of thousands of gallons used for that purpose alone. I believe 40 per cent is a large enough duty on this article.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that this duty is less than 4 per cent.

Mr. GRONNA. No, Mr. President; if I understand the English language, it reads:

Formaldehyde solution containing not more than 40 per cent of formaldehyde.

Mr. SMOOT. Forty per cent of formaldehyde; that is the percentage of formaldehyde in the solution. If it contains more than 40 per cent, it comes under another paragraph.

Mr. GRONNA. I did not read the paragraph, Mr. President. I understood it provided for a duty of 40 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, no.

Mr. GRONNA. I see I am mistaken in regard to it. I will look up the matter.

Mr. SMOOT. The only reason I bring this question to the attention of the Senate is because with an equivalent ad valorem duty of only 3.73 per cent I am afraid the production in this country will absolutely cease; and then the consumer, the man who uses formaldehyde for the elimination of smut in his wheat, will pay more than he is paying to-day.

The Senator having the bill in charge has stated that the committee did not make an investigation of this matter. I ask him if, on behalf of the Democratic members of the Finance Committee, he will not make the duty at least 2 cents a pound, which will be not to exceed 7½ per cent ad valorem, upon that item.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, upon reference to the notes I find the reason why the House placed this low rate of duty on formaldehyde. It is used as a disinfectant; and for that reason the low rate of duty given in the House bill was placed upon it.

Mr. SMOOT. That is lower than any other item in the whole schedule, and I can not see why it should be.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should not feel at liberty to agree to the proposal the Senator makes.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I move that, in section 33, page 9, line 4, the figure "1" be stricken out and "2" inserted. That will make an equivalent ad valorem duty upon formaldehyde solution of only about 7½ per cent.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator in whose behalf this increase is called for?

Mr. SMOOT. It is called for in behalf of the manufacturer in this country who makes so much of it. I believe it will require at least that amount to keep him alive here, with the importations that are coming in.

Mr. POMERENE. Who is the manufacturer?

Mr. SMOOT. There are a number of them in this country.

Mr. POMERENE. But who is the one to whom the Senator refers as asking for this increase?

Mr. SMOOT. I have not all my letters here, Mr. President, and I can not now say just exactly who the manufacturers are who are interested in the manufacture of this product. There are a number of them.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. GRONNA. I said a moment ago that I should correct the statement I made as to the percentage of duty on formaldehyde solution. A gallon of formaldehyde weighs seven and a half pounds. It retails for from 75 to 85 cents a gallon. I take it that the wholesale price would be somewhere near 60 cents a gallon. On the basis of 60 cents, the duty would be 6 cents a gallon. I believe the duty is high enough. There is a great deal of formaldehyde used in the United States for various purposes. It is used in preserving milk and in connection with many other agricultural products. I, for one, shall vote against an increase in the rate of duty.

Mr. SIMMONS and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. SIMMONS. I thought the Senator from Utah had finished. I will not interrupt him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Then does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to inquire, for information, about the cost of production of this article.

Mr. SMOOT. I can not state the local cost of production; but I do know that the department states that the formaldehyde that is imported that would come in under this paragraph costs about 25 cents per pound. That is what the record shows.

Mr. NORRIS. This particular paragraph applies to formaldehyde solution.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Where in the bill, if anywhere, is formaldehyde?

Mr. SMOOT. Formaldehyde would take the nonenumerated article rate, as it is not specifically enumerated in the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. What would the rate be, then?

Mr. SMOOT. Under this bill, I think, it is 15 per cent or 10 per cent; I am not quite sure which.

Mr. NORRIS. If that be true, then, under this bill, according to the statement made by the Senator from North Dakota, formaldehyde solution would be cheaper than formaldehyde itself.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator means that the rate on the solution would be less under the 1-cent duty than the rate on formaldehyde itself?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true.

Mr. NORRIS. I mean formaldehyde would come in at a less rate of duty than formaldehyde solution.

Mr. SMOOT. No; the Senator is mistaken there.

Mr. NORRIS. All I know about it is what the Senator from North Dakota has said regarding the amount of formaldehyde by weight in a gallon.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, as there was no change in the House bill, this paragraph can be referred to hereafter. I will look up the letters I have on it. If I feel that an amendment should be made, I will offer it later.

Mr. GRONNA. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah another question before he takes his seat.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator withdraw his amendment?

Mr. SMOOT. I stated that I withdrew my amendment. After looking up the information I have on this particular item as to cost, if I think an amendment ought to be offered I will offer it later.

Mr. GRONNA. I was just about to say to the Senator from Utah that it is hardly fair to the farmer to place his wheat on the free list and then place a heavy duty on such articles as this, which are necessary in treating his wheat in order to get pure seed.

Mr. SMOOT. I am absolutely in sympathy with the Senator. The only object I shall have in offering this amendment, if I do offer it, will be to have the duty sufficiently high so that our local people can take care of the manufacture of the article without being driven out of the industry.

Mr. GRONNA. I was just about to suggest that the Senator ask that this paragraph be passed by until the amendment which I introduced on yesterday, providing for a duty of 12 cents on wheat and a compensatory duty on the products of wheat, is adopted; because I take it the Senators on the other side will not do any such great injustice to a legitimate industry as this bill will do as it stands, and certainly agriculture must be considered a very legitimate industry.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I wish to read a few words from the treatise compiled by Thomas J. Doherty, Esq., special attorney, Customs Division, Department of Justice, compiler of Compilation of Customs Laws and Digests of Decisions Thereunder (Treasury Department, 1908), and of Notes on Tariff Revision (Committee on Ways and Means, 60th Cong., 1908), edited and revised by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to know where the last words are.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. I simply wish to know where the last statement of the Senator appears on these Notes on Tariff Revision—"edited and revised by Mr. SMOOT."

Mr. WILLIAMS. I find upon the first page of this distinguished document by this legal expert on chemistry that it was presented to the Senate of the United States by Mr. SMOOT upon July 7, 1913, and ordered to be printed upon his motion.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I imagine from that that the Senator must have revised and edited it; or, if not, he must have neglected his duty. [Laughter.]

Quoting from this distinguished legal expert upon chemistry, I read:

> Formaldehyde, which may be briefly described as an aqueous solution of formaldehyde gas from the oxidation of methyl alcohol, is most largely used as an antiseptic and disinfectant. It also has many uses in the arts.

I submit that from this infallible—almost papally infallible—authority that must go as the absolute truth. I know nothing about it personally, and I imagine the Senator from Utah does not. Formaldehyde is an aqueous solution of formaldehyde gas from the oxidation of methyl alcohol, and is most largely used as an antiseptic and disinfectant, and also has many uses in the arts.

I suggest that we can not make so valuable a product as that too cheap to the people. If it is an antiseptic whenever you cut your finger and is a disinfectant whenever you get into an unholy and insanitary atmosphere, and if it also has many uses in the arts—I do not know whether the fine arts or the industrial arts, and I do not care—I submit that before the Senator from Utah submits to the Senate any amendment reducing the duty any further he should remember the vast and immense benefit of this product to the people of the United States, in the opinion of this distinguished legal expert on chemistry, and its important relation to the public welfare generally and, as my friend from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] says, to the public health.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 37, page 9, line 18, after the word "gum," to insert "not specially provided for in this section," so as to read:

37. Gums: Amber, and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per pound.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, on page 9, after the word "Gums," I move to strike out all of line 17, all of line 18, and the first word in line 19, in the following words:

Amber, and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per pound.

The reason I offer that amendment is that those items to-day are upon the free list in paragraph 488.

Mr. LODGE. Why not include arabic?

Mr. SMOOT. I will include that in another motion. When we come to arabic, the next item, if advanced in any manner, of course it should be dutiable and should not go on the free list, but raw arabic should be on the free list. Therefore I take it simply down to the word "pound," in line 19, so as to take in amber and amberoid unmanufactured. They are to-day on the free list. Under this bill they are assessed at $1 per pound. Amber, of course, is used in a great many ways. It always has been on the free list, I believe, and should be there now; and I offer that amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, it is proposed by the committee to place amber, which is used for making pipestems, upon the dutiable list at the rate of $1 a pound. Amber chips are upon the free list and they are left upon the free list. So these words were added, "not specially provided for in this section," amber chips being still left upon the free list.

Mr. SMOOT. I am perfectly aware that amber chips are on the free list.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I wished to call the attention of the Senator to that fact.

Mr. SMOOT. I am aware of that fact. The Senator is perfectly correct when he states that amber chips are on the free list. But amber itself has been on the free list in the past. If the Senator will turn to the paragraph in which the rate of duty is provided on pipes he will find an extremely large cut, and there is not only the cut, but under the bill now it is proposed to put a duty on amber of $1 a pound when it has always been on the free list.

I move that it be stricken out, and if that motion is carried I will, of course, then move that it be put upon the free list.

Mr. STONE. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah in what particular public interest does he ask that the tips of meerschaum and other pipes may be put upon the free list?

Mr. SMOOT. Amber chips are now on the free list under this bill. I am not discussing the question of chips. I am discussing the question of amber.

Mr. STONE. Tips, I said.

Mr. SMOOT. Tips are not on the free list and were not there. I simply said that amber is placed at a duty of $1 a pound.

Mr. STONE. I thought the Senator wished them on the free list.

Mr. SMOOT. I want amber, out of which the tips are made, to be placed on the free list, where it is to-day.

Mr. STONE. Why?

Mr. SMOOT. Because it has always been there. It is impossible to produce it in this country. You can not produce it here.

Mr. STONE. Smoking machinery is regarded somewhat as a luxury, and tobacco is. We tax tobacco very heavily and raise enormous revenue on it, and have done so for a long time, on the theory that it is a luxury or, at least, not a necessity. You import amber chips or amber in some form free in order that they may be made into pipestems or parts of pipestems. Why should not the Government of the United States receive some revenue from an importation of that kind brought in for that purpose?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, as I said before——

Mr. STONE. I beg the Senator's pardon, but is it simply because in the long run of Republican tariff bills they have seen proper to favor this industry?

Mr. SMOOT. There is no industry in amber in this country.

Mr. STONE. They do make pipe tips or pipestems out of it.

Mr. SMOOT. But that is in another paragraph entirely. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that on the pipes and the pipe tips he speaks of the rate is reduced from the present rate, but not only that, you take the amber from which they are made that is now on the free list and you impose a duty of a dollar a pound on it. That is a double blow to the man who manufactures the tips and the pipes.

Mr. STONE. Are the tips and pipes manufactured in this country?

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, many of them.

Mr. STONE. I understood the Senator to say they were not manufactured here.

Mr. SMOOT. No; I said there was no industry in amber.

Mr. STONE. That is an industry in amber.

Mr. SMOOT. Amber is the raw material for the manufacture of them, and that is not produced in this country.

Mr. STONE. I take it, then, the Senator is simply following a precedent that has been laid down in some bills he has taken a part in the framing of, and that is the principal reason he has for opposing any change in this bill.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. BRISTOW. May I inquire if there is not some amber produced in the United States? Are there not some amber or amberoids produced in the State of New Jersey, and also are they not produced to some extent in Massachusetts? Is it not a new enterprise in the State of New Jersey? I have understood that it was.

Mr. HUGHES. If the Senator is asking me, I will say that if there is such an industry in my State I do not know of it.

Mr. BRISTOW. I have been so advised.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I think not, for if there had been I would have been besieged by a lot of tariff mongers wanting a tariff on it. But I have not had any application of the kind.

Mr. BRISTOW. I thought that that was probably the cause for taking it from the free list and transferring it to the protective list. I made the inquiry because an authority who was consulted some time ago upon this paragraph said that it was found in small quantities in Massachusetts and to some extent in New Jersey.

Mr. SMOOT. If it is, I do not know of it. I have always understood that it was not produced in this country.

Mr. HUGHES. I will say, if the Senator will permit me, that the reason for putting amber on the dutiable list is quite plain. If the Senator will consult the estimates, he will find it is estimated it will produce about $35,000 of revenue. That is the sole and only reason I have ever heard assigned for taking this and various other items from the free list and putting them on the dutiable list. As the Senator says, they are absolute luxuries and a differential still remains between the raw amber and the finished article, which it is estimated is the highest revenue producer.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator state what that differential is?

Mr. HUGHES. I can not do so without referring to the tables before me.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator will admit that the rates on manufactured pipes and stems have been reduced.

Mr. HUGHES. Yes; and the taxes have been put——

Mr. SMOOT. On amber.

Mr. HUGHES. Exactly, as has been done in a hundred instances or more in the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, that is the policy followed out in many items.

Mr. HUGHES. It makes little or no difference as far as the manufacture of amber and pipes is concerned that the duty instead of being placed altogether upon the finished product is only partly put on the finished product and is partly put on the raw material. From the revenue standpoint it is infinitely better to put this tax upon the raw material, because then every dollar that the consumer pays as a result of the tax goes into the Treasury, none of the raw amber, as far as my information goes, being produced in this country.

Mr. SMOOT. I know of no amber that is produced here; but exactly what I objected to in the bill as a whole is that the Democratic majority are not satisfied with reducing the rate upon the manufactured article, but they have also added a duty upon the raw material from which the manufactured article is made, and particularly raw material that is not produced in this country.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, from every point of view this is a duty which carries out the Democratic theory of tariff for revenue. In the first place it is admitted that it is a luxury. It is the material out of which not only pipestems are made, but it is the material out of which cigarette holders are made. From that standpoint, according to the Democratic theory, it is a proper subject of taxation. Again, it is a product admittedly not made in this country.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. SIMMONS. Probably the Senator from Kansas does not admit that it is not made in this country, but I have heard no one besides that Senator intimate that it is made in this country, and I understood the Senator to say that he did not know whether it is made here or not.

Mr. BRISTOW. I think if the Senator will read up carefully his authority upon this paragraph he will find that this substance is found in New Jersey and Massachusetts, and that the greater part of it comes from Persia. I think if the Senator will review his tariff notes he will find that that is a fact.

Mr. SIMMONS. Then my statement that it is not produced in this country is true. Now, a product which is not only a luxury but which is not produced in this country fills all the requirements of a typical article for the imposition of a duty.

The Senator from Utah has several times referred to the fact that the duty imposed on amber by this bill is a dollar a pound, evidently for the purpose of creating the idea that it is a very high duty——

Mr. SMOOT. Not at all, Mr. President.

Mr. SIMMONS. Because a dollar a pound does sound a little high. But the Senator, in order to have been altogether fair to this side, should have stated that the value of this material ranges from $8.80 to $9.50, so that the ad valorem is only about 11 per cent, which is a very low ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true, Mr. President. I had no intention whatever to intimate, nor did I intimate, what the equivalent is.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is what I was complaining about.

Mr. SMOOT. I simply said that this article—amber at least—is not produced in this country to any extent. It is imported and always has been imported into this country free. It is used in the manufacturing of pipestems and cigarette holders, as the Senator says, and under the bill they have provided a duty of $1 a pound, and they they have also reduced the duty on the manufactured article.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, as I understand the theory of the Senator from North Carolina, this duty is put on amber, the substance out of which articles of luxury are made, in order to raise a revenue for the Government. But, Mr. President, the articles which have been enumerated here and which include also beads and ornaments have to be made in this country in order to get a revenue from amber, because if they are not made in this country amber will not be imported, for I think it is imported for no other purpose and used for no other purpose. Therefore if you destroy the industry amber will come in solely in the manufactured form. It will not come in as raw material unless it is used for other purposes than the manufacture of ornaments and the articles which I have suggested.

Now, if you are going to reduce the duty on manufactured articles and put a duty on the raw material, which never had it before—in the Wilson Act it was free—of course, then you are giving protection inverted, protection to the foreign manufacturer, who gets his amber free in the countries where it is produced.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly; I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if he has in mind the duty placed in the bill upon smokers' articles and pipestems?

Mr. LODGE. I did not understand they were on the free list. I have not examined it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, no; there is a duty of 50 per cent on smokers' articles.

Mr. LODGE. I thought it was reduced.

Mr. SMOOT. It was.

Mr. LODGE. The duty of 50 per cent may be sufficient. I was not speaking in regard to this particular case especially, but to illustrate the general point. If you are putting a duty on a raw material, and if reducing or removing the duty on the manufactured article, you will not get the payment of any duty on the raw material, because it will not be imported.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But if the Senator from Massachusetts will pardon me, the duty on the finished article in this case is five times what it is upon the raw material.

Mr. LODGE. I am not saying it is not discriminating in favor of the finished article, but I speak of it as a general principle. In this case you may have sufficient margin on a 50 per cent duty; I do not know whether you have or not; I have never examined it. I should think it would be ample and that you could afford to put a duty on the raw material. I am speaking of the general principle.

There is another item in this same clause which, now that I am up, I may as well speak about. You put a higher duty on the starch from which dextrine is made than you put on the dextrine which is made from the starch.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, if the Senator will look at the amendment proposed——

Mr. LODGE. I have looked at the amendment proposed. The duty upon starch is 1 cent a pound.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The duty upon dextrine is 1½ cents a pound.

Mr. LODGE. I beg the Senator's pardon, it is three-quarters of a cent a pound. I am speaking of the last part of the amendment, made from burnt starch or British gum.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. On potato starch the duty is a cent a pound; on dextrine, made from potato starch, it is a cent and a half a pound.

Mr. LODGE. Yes; but dextrine——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. On the other starch the duty is only three-quarters of a cent a pound.

Mr. LODGE. Dextrine made from burnt starch or British gum.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Upon corn starch the duty is three-quarters of a cent a pound, and upon potato starch it is 1 cent a pound; and we provided that dextrine made from potato starch should bear a duty of 1½ cents, changing the rate of the House bill from three-quarters of a cent to one-half because of the duty upon potato starch.

Mr. LODGE. Now, I understand the duty on starch that has been made from potatoes is reduced from 1½ cents per pound to 1 cent per pound. Is that right?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That is right.

Mr. LODGE. And on all other starch, including all separate preparations, from whatever substance produced, fit for use as starch, the duty is reduced from 1 cent a pound to one-half of 1 cent per pound. On potato starch—the Senator will correct me if I am wrong—his provision gives a quarter of a cent difference.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. One-half a cent, if the Senator please. It is 1 cent a pound upon potato starch.

Mr. LODGE. Starch is 1 cent under the bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Potato starch.

Mr. LODGE. And dextrine——

Mr. WILLIAMS. One and one-half.

Mr. LODGE. Made from that starch is 1½ cents. In the other case I am speaking of, in the last clause, "dextrine, not otherwise provided for, burnt starch, or British gum, dextrine substitutes, and soluble or chemically treated starch," the duty is three-fourths of 1 cent per pound. On the other starch, from which I understand is made the articles I have just read, the duty is reduced half a cent a pound. Perhaps the Senator can tell me whether that is right.

Mr. BRISTOW. It is 1½ cents in the present law.

Mr. LODGE. If that is the case, the dextrine in the last clause "not otherwise provided for" at half a cent a pound has a benefit of only a quarter of a cent; that is, I think, the raw material is left too high if you are going to cut the manufactured product.

Mr. SIMMONS. What paragraph is the Senator speaking about?

Mr. LODGE. I am reading from the Senate committee amendment, "dextrine, not otherwise provided for, burnt starch or British gum," in paragraph 37. It is a part of the paragraph now before the Senate. In the House bill dextrine and burnt starch or British gum were classified together. The Senate amendment makes a division between them. It gives dextrine what I think is a proper increase, and distinguishes between the dextrine made from potato starch and the dextrine not otherwise provided for, which, I understand, is made from another form of starch. I shall have to turn to another paragraph to find potato starch.

The duty on potato starch is in the agricultural schedule, and I want to call attention to that. On starch made from potatoes the duty is 1 cent per pound. On dextrine the Senate committee has changed the rates, and properly changed them, in my opinion. The dextrine I was speaking about is dextrine made from other kinds of starch. In paragraph 239 it is provided:

All other starch, including all preparations, from whatever substance produced, fit for use as starch, one-half cent per pound.

That is what the second clause of paragraph 37 refers to.

Mr. SHIVELY. Is not the duty on dextrine, not otherwise provided for, three-fourths of a cent a pound?

Mr. LODGE. Yes; it increases it a quarter of a cent.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The differential is a quarter of a cent, and that is plenty.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that there is the same relative increase in both of 50 per cent. It is 1 per cent on potato starch, and on dextrine made from potato starch a cent and a half, a 50 per cent increase, On dextrine made from the other kind of starch the rate is three-fourths of a cent a pound, and on starch it is one-half cent a pound.

Mr. LODGE. I understand it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And there is an increase of 50 per cent, or the same relative increase in each case.

Mr. LODGE. I was going to say, Mr. President, that I understand under the present law this proposed classification is not made; that is, dextrine is one thing, whether made from potato starch or made from other kinds of starch. In the first provision about dextrine—I will have to insist on the difference, because my whole point rests on the second part—the rates of the present law have been restored, and I am very glad of it. I think the article needs that discrimination. It is a large industry in New England, and I am very glad that the old rates have been put back, but under the old law the term "dextrine" covered everything of this character, whether made from one kind of starch or another, and in the new classification you give the manufacturers of the article, as I understand it—it is rather confused, I admit—an advantage of three-fourths of a cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Half a cent.

Mr. LODGE. Half a cent. In the other kind of dextrine you give the advantage of only a quarter of a cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. But the percentage of increase is the same, as the Senator from Massachusetts will observe.

Mr. LODGE. Why should there be a distinction between dextrine made from potato starch and dextrine made from the other starches? I am asking for information. The Senator from Maine understands the starch and potato question much better than I do.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Because the duty upon potato starch is 1 cent a pound, and the duty upon the other kind of starch is one-half a cent a pound. The dextrine made from the potato starch should bear a higher rate of duty, it seemed to the committee, because of the fact that the raw material bore a higher rate of duty.

Mr. LODGE. Well, the other House followed the old law in respect to classification; they treated all dextrines alike, as equally expensive in production, I suppose, and gave them only three-fourths of a cent a pound. Now, a new classification has been agreed upon, by which the dextrine made from potato starch is taken out and given the same advantage, the same compensation as in the present law, whereas the other dextrine, included both in the old law and in the House bill as entitled to precisely the same duty, is given only a quarter of a cent advantage.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is still a 50 per cent differential.

Mr. LODGE. I do not mean to delay further. I merely wished to call attention to the general principle laid down by the Senator from North Carolina about taxing the raw material. If the object is to get revenue, you ought to be very careful that you are not going to destroy the industry that imports the raw material. I do not know that in the case of amber it will have any effect. The duty on smokers' articles is a large one.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does not the Senator from Massachusetts admit that a 50 per cent differential is sufficient in both cases?

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. LODGE. I yield first to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does not the Senator from Massachusetts admit that 50 per cent differential will cover the cost of conversion in both cases?

Mr. LODGE. That is not the view of those who make the article. I am not a manufacturer and can not say of my own knowledge.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I had charge of that one branch of the subject, but I heard no complaint from anybody that a 50 per cent ad valorem duty was not a sufficient tax to cover the conversion charge.

Mr. LODGE. The information I have——

Mr. WILLIAMS. And if the Senator from Massachusetts has any information upon this question from anybody who is impartial and not interested in drawing dollars out of the Treasury, I should like to hear it.

Mr. LODGE. The matter was called to my attention by large manufacturers of these articles.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Now I will ask the Senator from Massachusetts, if he will yield to me for a moment?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly, I yield.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I want to suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that under paragraph 376 all manufactures of amber bear a duty of, 20 per cent, and under the provisions here, according to the statement of the Senator from North Carolina, the amber itself has a duty of 11 per cent only; so that is nearly 100 per cent on the manufactures of it.

Mr. LODGE. I have not looked up the manufactures of amber. I did not know what the rates were, but now I find that the authorities on the other side of the Chamber disagree.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. No.

Mr. LODGE. Wait a minute. It was stated by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] that the duty was 50 per cent on smokers' articles.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. On pipes; that is right.

Mr. LODGE. Now, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. JOHNSTON] says that on all manufactures of amber the duty is 20 per cent.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. On manufactures of amber other than pipes and pipestems.

Mr. LODGE. That is not the explanation made. The Senator did not read that.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. It is only amber chips that are on the free list. The duty on manufactures of amber is 20 per cent. Raw amber bears 11 per cent.

Mr. LODGE. In the case of amber——

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly, I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. OLIVER. I understood the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] to state that this duty was placed on amber for the purpose of producing a revenue of approximately $35,000. Am I correct in that understanding?

Mr. HUGHES. Those are the figures I quoted.

Mr. OLIVER. I find that the principal use of amber is in the making of stems for tobacco pipes, and that the duty on pipes is reduced from 60 per cent to 50 per cent, and that the duty collected on pipes and smoking articles last year amounted to nearly $800,000; that the committee is surrendering a revenue of from $150,000 to $160,000 for the purpose of placing a duty upon amber, from which they expect to gain only $35,000. I am glad to see that our friends on the other side are returning to their old theory of a tariff for revenue only, instead of, as I had begun to suspect, passing a tariff bill for the protection of importers and foreign manufacturers.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator from Pennsylvania will take the duties——

Mr. LODGE. I think I have the floor, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. LODGE. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator from Pennsylvania will take the duty upon amber and take the price of amber, he will find that the duty is about 11 per cent. The distinguished legal authority to whom reference has been made puts it at 10.50 per cent and I put it at 11 per cent. I think perhaps the distinguished legal chemical and amber expert is mistaken, and that perhaps we are right, and perhaps the ad valorem equivalent is 11 per cent. If the duty upon the raw material is 11 per cent and the duty upon the finished article is 50 per cent—reduced from 60 in the old law—will the Senator from Pennsylvania contend that the difference between 11 per cent ad valorem and 50 per cent ad valorem is not sufficient to cover the conversion cost?

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, I said nothing at all about the conversion cost. What I was calling attention to was the fact that our friends on the other side are surrendering a revenue of $160,000 for the sake of getting another revenue of $35,000. I was not arguing from——

Mr. WILLIAMS. We are not surrendering any revenue of any description, because, if we have accurately calculated the duty sufficient to cover the conversion cost, we have neither discriminated against the finished article nor the raw material, all of which is imported into this country.

Mr. OLIVER. I have said nothing about conversion cost or raw material; I was talking about revenue, and revenue alone.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand that, and I am replying to the Senator, and I am saying that we are surrendering no revenue at all. Whatever revenue we may surrender upon one article we get upon the other, because every dollar's worth of the stuff, whether finished or crude, is imported—not a dollar's worth of it is made here.

Mr. OLIVER. Then, Mr. President, I should like the Senator to explain——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, the Senator's contention is that there will be less of the finished product imported and more of the crude article imported.

Mr. OLIVER. Not at all. I contend that there will be less revenue collected under this bill than there is under the present law.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But if that is the effect at all, under the Senator's argument it will be because there will be less of the finished and more of the crude article imported.

Mr. OLIVER. Not at all. I am not talking on that line at all.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Then, how does the Senator explain his assertions?

Mr. OLIVER. I should like the Senator from Mississippi to explain where he is going to get the $125,000 that appears to be lost in this calculation—the difference between $160,000 and $35,000.

Mr. WILLIAMS. We put a duty on the raw amber, which will not prohibit its importation and we put a duty on the finished product which will not prohibit its conversion in America. If we have increased the duty on the raw material so much as to obtain an undue revenue from that in comparison with the finished product, we still preserve the revenue.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, I have not yet found out from what the Senator has said from what he is going to supply that other $125,000 of revenue.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What $125,000?

Mr. OLIVER. There were in 1912 $788,000 of revenue collected from pipes and smokers' articles.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand that.

Mr. OLIVER. While under the pending bill it is estimated that we will collect about $100,000 less.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. You try to make that up by levying a duty, which will bring a revenue of $35,000, on amber, but where is the other $125,000 of revenue coming from?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator is complaining that we have transferred a part of the duty from the finished product to the raw material, which has all got to be imported at a duty of a dollar a pound.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, it seems to me that if you reduce the duty on the unfinished article and import the same amount of the finished article as you did last year, you lose that amount of duty. Is that not correct?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I did not catch the Senator's question.

Mr. LODGE. I say, if you reduce the duty 10 per cent on the finished article—smokers' articles, if that is the classification—and import the same amount as you did last year, you of course would lose a certain amount of revenue.

Mr. WILLIAMS. You would lose 10 per cent.

Mr. LODGE. Precisely.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And if you increase the duty upon the raw material——

Mr. LODGE. Wait a moment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. As the raw material is not produced in this country, you increase the revenue derived from the raw material.

Mr. LODGE. Precisely; but you do not increase it equally with what you lose, for, as the Senator from Pennsylvania has pointed out, you will lose $160,000 by your reduction of 10 per cent——

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. And you add a duty on the raw material, which you estimate will give you $35,000——

Mr. WILLIAMS. How much?

Mr. LODGE. My authority is the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES]. He said $35,000.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not know about what somebody else has estimated. I have very little confidence in these experts and their estimates, but I do know that if you raise the duty at all upon amber—and every bit of the amber that is used in this country is imported—not a dollar's worth less of it will be used, because it is purely a luxury.

Mr. LODGE. I understand that.

Mr. WILLIAMS. You will derive more revenue from the increased duty on amber than you will lose because of the decreased duty upon the finished product.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me, assuming that we import as large an amount of smokers' articles as we did last year, with the duty reduced 10 per cent, as the Senator from Mississippi has just said, of course we will lose 10 per cent on the duty.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And that is $16,000.

Mr. LODGE. $160,000. I thought the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] said.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, no. It would not be that much.

Mr. LODGE. Then, if the loss is only $16,000, and you get $35,000 from the duty on the raw material, you will get an increase of revenue.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Of course we shall.

Mr. LODGE. That is perfectly clear; but I understood the Senator from Pennsylvania to say that there would be a loss of $125,000.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, no; we would lose 10 per cent on $160,000.

Mr. OLIVER. It is 20 per cent of $788,000.

Mr. LODGE. That is what I understood.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If we lose 10 per cent——

Mr. LODGE. Very well; 10 per cent of $788,000 is $78,800.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If we lose 10 per cent because of the reduction of the duty on the finished product made out of raw material, none of which is produced in this country, but all of which must be imported, and if we increase the duty on the raw material just equal to the conversion-cost tax—that is, equal to the exigency—we can not possibly lose any revenue.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. Of course, Mr. President, you can not lose any revenue——

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. I think I still have the floor. Of course you can not lose any revenue if you replace the loss by a new duty on the raw material; but what is the assumption as to the amount of revenue that duty will provide? The Senator from New Jersey and the Tariff Handbook, which you have furnished us, estimate it at $35,000. I now understand that the duty collected last year on smokers' articles was $788,000.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. Let me finish this statement—and 10 per cent of that is something over $78,000.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair must insist upon some little appearance of order being preserved in this discussion. Half a dozen Senators are on their feet now.

Mr. LODGE. The Chair was kind enough to recognize me as having the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. But there are five or six Senators now standing on the floor.

Mr. LODGE. I was attempting, in what I supposed was my own time, to come to an agreement with the Senator from Mississippi as to these figures. I am frank to confess that I am a very poor arithmetician myself, but I suppose 10 per cent of $788,000 is $78,800, or in that neighborhood.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Instead of $160,000.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President——

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair must insist that Senators take their seats, and rise and address the Chair, in order that the Chair may know whom to recognize.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. LODGE. I should like to continue for a moment, if I may. I should like to be told, first, what was the duty collected on smokers' articles.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. $788,000.

Mr. LODGE. $788,000. That was at the 50 per cent rate?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Sixty per cent.

Mr. LODGE. The 60 per cent rate; yes. You have reduced it 10 per cent. If you import the same amount under this bill, you will lose $78,800 of revenue.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I beg the Senator's pardon. While the reduction is 10 per cent, the reduction of the duty is only one-sixth. A reduction from 60 to 50 per cent is a reduction of only one-sixth.

Mr. LODGE. I see. How much does the Senator calculate it to be?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have not calculated it, but I will do so.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. I do not want to detain the Senate on a question of figures. I do not pretend to be strong on figures, and I was trying to learn from the Democratic authorities on the other side, who obviously are strong on figures, just what this amount was. It took me some time to find out how much was collected in the way of duty. But if I may come back to the main point, there is provided here a duty of 20 per cent on amber ornaments; 50 per cent is left on smokers' articles, and there is a duty of $1 per pound put on amber. I do not know the expense of manufacture. I should suppose there was enough margin left on the smokers' articles. About the ornaments, I do not profess to know.

Mr. WILLIAMS. One-sixth of $788,000, in round numbers, would be $130,000.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have at last gotten an authoritative figure. There will be $130,000 loss on the duties collected on smokers' articles. You estimate that you will get $35,000 from raw amber. While I again say I am a poor arithmetician, it seems to me there is a loss of revenue there.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. LODGE. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey, with pleasure.

Mr. HUGHES. I should not be so insistent if the Senator from Massachusetts did not continually quote the statement I made. There is absolutely no relation, or at least not the relation that the Senator insists upon calling attention to, between the duty upon raw amber and all smokers' articles. I simply wish to call the Senator's attention to the fact that this increased duty is gained from amber alone——

Mr. LODGE. Amber alone; certainly.

Mr. HUGHES. And this loss of revenue upon smokers' articles is because of reductions that the committee thought ought to be made on such articles as clay pipes and smokers' articles of that kind, which were carried at an enormous rate of duty. There is no relation between the loss of revenue on all smokers' articles and the duty on amber.

Mr. LODGE. Then the Senator has no idea what revenue is collected from smokers' articles which carry amber?

Mr. HUGHES. Oh, it is impossible to say, because we have not been given any figures on that.

Mr. LODGE. Then we come back to the generally satisfactory conclusion that we do not know anything about it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HUGHES. We know that we will get $35,000 upon amber.

Mr. LODGE. We know that because that has been estimated by the experts.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. But not by Mr. Doherty.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Mississippi has just been saying that he does not put any faith in experts. Now, the Senator from New Jersey says we will get $35,000 because the expert estimates it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me, I will now give him some more calculations.

Mr. HUGHES. Of course, I did not say that, although it does not make any particular difference.

Mr. LODGE. I beg the Senator's pardon; I thought he said we were sure of $35,000.

Mr. HUGHES. But not because the experts said so.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me, the loss of one-sixth of the $783,000 duty on importations I have already given. The value of amber and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum for 1912, was $338,821; and that came in free. Now, it will come in at $1 per pound. The quantity that came in was 35,663 pounds, so that we will gather from that amount a revenue of $35,663.

Mr. LODGE. That seems to me a very reasonable estimate. If we import 35,663 pounds and this bill becomes law, we shall get $35,663 from raw amber. [Laughter.]

But I did not mean to be drawn into this great amber discussion, Mr. President. I rose merely to make the point about dextrine, and I have made the point as I see it. This new classification, although very valuable for the dextrine made from potato starch, has been neglected in the case of the other dextrine. I do not pretend to say why; I do not know, but it has been. I think it ought to have the same differentiation.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Will the Senator from Massachusetts pardon me for one more remark?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have run this out; and while I always hate to confess that I am wrong, as any other human being does——

Mr. LODGE. That is a very proper feeling.

Mr. WILLIAMS (continuing). There will be a decrease of revenue. There is no doubt about it; there will be a decrease of revenue.

Mr. LODGE. I am very glad, Mr. President, that with my inferior mathematical capacity I have succeeded in getting that statement.

I shall not detain the Senate longer on dextrine; but I shall ask simply that this letter from a large manufacturer in my State may be included as part of my remarks. It is a short letter, but I shall not ask to have it read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the letter will be printed as a part of the Senator's remarks.

The letter referred to is as follows:

MATTAPAN, MASS., May 11, 1913.

Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The new tariff proposes to reduce the duty on dextrine, burnt starch, or British gum, dextrine substitutes, and soluble or chemically treated starch from 1½ cents to three-fourths of 1 cent per pound and reduce the duty on starch made from potatoes from 1½ cents per pound to 1 cent per pound; all other starch, including all preparations from whatever substance produced fit for use as starch, from 1 cent per pound to one-half of 1 cent per pound.

Nearly all the dextrine imported into this country is made from potato starch, and nearly all the starch imported is potato starch. Therefore the duty on dextrine, the finished product, will be less than on the raw material starch.

Starch is the raw material of our business and is converted into dextrine or gum by a roasting process, and there is an inevitable shrinkage from 12 to 22 per cent, so it takes considerably more than a pound of starch to make a pound of dextrine or gum. Therefore in order to have a logical tariff the duty on potato starch should be at least one-half cent per pound less than on dextrine and British gum.

You will readily see that under the proposed law there is an actual and very considerable discrimination against the domestic manufacturer, as the duty on the raw material is higher than on the manufactured article.

If the duty on potato starch, the raw material, is 1 cent per pound and the duty on potato dextrine, the finished product, is three-fourths of 1 cent per pound, it will strike at the industry from both sides and make it utterly impossible for the industry to live.

Yours, truly,

HORATIO N. GLOVER & SON.

Mr. LODGE. This letter merely makes the point in regard to dextrine. I do not propose to ask for any vote on the matter of dextrine, but I do want a vote on the duty on crude camphor, of which I spoke yesterday.

I said then all I can say in regard to the matter—that to put a duty on crude camphor is not only to cripple a large industry, the celluloid industry, but camphor is used in medicine; it is used as a preservative against moths; it is used in many ways by people of all classes. To put a duty upon it suddenly, when not a pound of it can ever be produced in this country, seems to me unwise. On that I shall, at the proper time, ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, since the Senator from Mississippi has admitted that he was mistaken in his conclusions, I think the country is entitled to know what the loss of revenue would be. According to my figures, the loss would be $96,333 plus.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, undoubtedly there would be a gain of revenue by reason of the duty upon amber. Undoubtedly there would be some loss of revenue as a result of reducing the duty on smokers' articles from 60 per cent to 50 per cent.

The Democratic theory is, first, a duty for revenue purposes. Secondly, the Democratic theory is to relieve the people of unnecessary taxation, whether it be of a revenue character or a protective character. Where an article is a proper subject of a revenue tax, we impose it; but where the Democratic Party finds that a tax imposed for revenue purposes is so high as to impose an unnecessary burden upon the people, it reduces it.

We found in the Republican tariff a duty of 60 per cent upon smokers' articles. We thought that was too high. We thought, although it was a revenue duty, that it imposed too much of a burden upon the consumer in this country, and we reduced it to 50 per cent. In imposing a duty of 1 cent a pound upon amber we followed out the Democratic theory of a tariff for revenue, and in reducing from 60 to 50 per cent the duty upon smokers' articles we followed out the other part of the Democratic theory, that the consumers of the country should not be unnecessarily burdened, either for revenue purposes or for purposes of protection.

Mr. HOLLIS. Mr. President, referring to the letter that has been placed in the RECORD by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], I desire to read the last paragraph. It says:

If the duty on potato starch, the raw material, is 1 cent per pound, and the duty on potato dextrine, the finished product, is three-fourths of 1 cent per pound, it will strike at the industry from both sides and make it utterly impossible for the industry to live.

Exactly that information was sent to me by a manufacturer in Massachusetts. I went to the subcommittee and got them to make the exact change that is suggested in this letter to the Senator from Massachusetts. The duty on dextrine made from potato starch was increased to 1¼ cents per pound, instead of three-quarters of a cent per pound, as complained of in this letter. So the result is that the Massachusetts manufacturers of dextrine made from potato starch are taken care of exactly as they wished to be.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, evidently the Senator did not listen to what I said. The point I made was about the second mention of dextrine, made from other substances than potato starch.

Mr. HOLLIS. Then I should like to inquire of the Senator what is the object of putting this letter in the RECORD?

Mr. LODGE. To show the testimony on which I acted.

Mr. HOLLIS. But the committee has done just exactly what is suggested in the letter. The letter backs up the committee entirely.

Mr. LODGE. Does it? Just give it to me. [Reading:]

Therefore, in order to have a logical tariff, the duty on potato starch should be at least one-half cent per pound less than on dextrine and British gum.

Mr. HOLLIS. And in response to that letter, or a similar letter which I received, the committee raised the tariff on dextrine made from potato starch. That action was certainly well taken, and the whole matter is cleared up.

Mr. LODGE. They did; and the second point I made was my own. I thought the writer alluded to it; but the second point was my own, and I think it is a sound one. The writer of this letter is a maker of potato starch. I thought he alluded to the second point. However, I think I will let it stand, Mr. President, as it sustains the action of the committee and is good protectionist doctrine.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, in House Document 1503, Sixtieth Congress, second session, at page 642, I find the following in regard to amber:

Amber is a fossil resin, found chiefly in Prussia, either on the seashore, where it is thrown up by the Baltic, or underneath the surface. In this region mining for amber has been carried on for years. Shafts are sunk until a stratum is reached in which amber nodules are found. The largest mass yet discovered weighed 13 pounds. In the United States amber-like resins have been found in Massachusetts, New Jersey, and other places. Amber is used chiefly in the manufacture of mouthpieces for pipes and cigar and cigarette holders and in the preparation of a kind of varnish.

So much for amber. There is another thing here in which I am more interested than amber.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me, I was not aware that amber had ever been found in Massachusetts or that it was an industry of any size or importance in this country. I never heard of it until this afternoon. But I am very glad, if that is the case, that we have been given a liberally protective duty on the production of amber.

Mr. BRISTOW. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON] to the Senate amendment in paragraph 37, which increases the duty on dextrine made from potato starch or potato flour from 1 cent, as found in the House bill, to a cent and a half, which is the same duty that is carried in the existing law. That is, in the bill as it comes from the Senate committee the protective duty for the manufacturer of dextrine made from potato starch or potato flour is exactly the same as in the Payne-Aldrich bill.

If the manufacturers of dextrine in Maine or New Hampshire or Massachusetts or anywhere in New England are entitled to a protection of a cent and a half per pound, why are not the farmers that grow the potatoes from which this product is made entitled to the same protection in this bill that the present law gives them, namely, 25 cents per bushel?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, in answer to the question in regard to the action of the committee in raising the duty upon potato starch, it must be obvious to the Senator from Kansas that if potato starch bore a duty of 1 cent per pound, then the dextrine made from the potato starch ought to bear a duty of more than three-fourths of a cent per pound, as it came to us from the House, which would be less than the duty upon the starch from which it is made. We therefore placed a duty of a cent and a half a pound upon dextrine made from potato starch, and the dextrine made from other kinds of starch has a duty of three-fourths of a cent per pound, which in that case is 50 per cent of the duty upon the starch itself. The duties are relatively the same in each case.

I do not know about the manufacture of dextrine anywhere in New England. I do not know of a single factory there. Certainly there is none in my State of Maine. There are some old starch factories that make potato starch, I believe, somewhere in northeastern Maine. But so far as the duty upon potato starch is concerned, we took it as it came to us from the House. The House Ways and Means Committee gave long hearings to the people interested in the matter, and determined upon those as the proper rates.

Mr. BRISTOW. Nevertheless it is a fact that potato starch and potato flour have a duty of a cent a pound.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes.

Mr. BRISTOW. While dextrine made from potato flour or potato starch has a duty of a cent and a half a pound, the cent and a half a pound on dextrine is exactly the same as the duty in the present law, though the duty is taken off the potato—the raw material that the manufacturer uses in making these products.

Now, the complaint I have against this bill is that it is apparently constructed in behalf of the manufacturer, but the farmer who produces the raw material is not given consideration. The duties of the Payne-Aldrich law on dextrine are maintained, while the potato, which the farmers grow, is put upon the free list. I want to ask the Senator from Maine if he thinks that is fair to the farmers of Maine or Kansas or Minnesota or any other State?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think about all the potato-starch factories there are anywhere are up in Maine, but I will say to the Senator from Kansas that the farmers of Maine would treat with a good deal of humor what he is saying in regard to the use of potatoes, because the potatoes they carry to the starch mills are the small potatoes—the culls; the little potatoes for which there is no other market. It is never the good potatoes that are taken to the starch factories, but only the refuse or the small potatoes. Those are the potatoes that find a market there, and they are ground into starch.

Mr. BRISTOW. Does that justify giving the manufacturer the raw material free, relieving him from the payment of any duty, and still maintaining the same duty on this product that the present law carries?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The manufacturer of starch there has practically always had the potatoes which he uses free, so far as any duty is concerned, because they are the small potatoes, as I have said, and the farmer is usually very glad to find any market for those at a very small price. I do not believe that the duty has made any difference in the price of those potatoes, and, I will say to the Senator from Kansas, neither do I believe it has added a cent in value to the potatoes which were marketable for the farmers of Maine. I believe they never have derived a cent's advantage from this spurious duty upon potatoes, which is put on only to try to make them believe that they have been the beneficiaries of a system in which I think they have not shared.

Mr. BRISTOW. Spurious, when applied to the farmers who grow the potatoes, but not spurious when applied to the manufacturers of starch from the potatoes. Now, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Maine——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have no particular interest in the matter; I have no reason to speak for the starch manufacturers or those who are interested in the manufacture, but I understand the conditions we had to meet, and under which we were to frame the tariff bill. Taking the conditions as we found them, the starch manufacturers are dependent somewhat, as we believe, upon the duties which had been established.

Mr. BRISTOW. The manufacturer seems to have been very well provided for.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from Kansas yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. This has been an interesting but somewhat tedious day. I will ask the Senator from North Carolina if he does not think we ought to adjourn? It is 6 o'clock.

Mr. SIMMONS. I was going to state that the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT], who had necessarily to be absent from the Chamber, requested that this paragraph should go over until to-morrow. That being the case, as we can not act on it to-night, in compliance with his request, which I think is a reasonable and proper one, I am perfectly willing that we shall have an executive session, as I understand one is desired.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seven minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, July 25, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATION.

Executive nomination received by the Senate July 24, 1913.

GOVERNOR OF HAWAII.

L. E. Pinkham, of Hawaii, to be governor of Hawaii, vice Walter F. Frear, term expired.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 24, 1913.

POSTMASTERS.

MISSISSIPPI.

Sidney J. Ferguson, Meridian.

NEVADA.

W. J. Bonner, Mason.
George Foley, Round Mountain.

OHIO.

C. A. Rush, Wickliffe.
Frank Wasmer, Oak Hill.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, July 24, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou, who art the inspiration of every great thought and worthy endeavor, touch our hearts with the magic wand, and move us on toward those qualities of soul which shall survive the empire of decay and be young in glory when the stars have passed away, that we may thus work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure. This we ask in the spirit of the Lord Christ. Amen.

APPROVAL OF THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Journal will stand approved.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the Journal be approved.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama, that the Journal be approved.

The question was taken.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division. Pending that, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Ninety Members present, not a quorum.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 152, nays 58, answered "present" 7, not voting 212, as follows:

YEAS—152.

Abercrombie	Burke, Wis.	Driscoll	Hamlin
Alexander	Byrnes, S. C.	Evans	Hardwick
Ashbrook	Callaway	Fergusson	Hardy
Aswell	Candler, Miss.	FitzHenry	Harrison, Miss.
Baker	Caraway	Flood, Va.	Hay
Baltz	Casey	Floyd, Ark.	Hayden
Barkley	Church	Foster	Heflin
Bartlett	Claypool	Fowler	Helvering
Beakes	Clayton	Gard	Henry
Bell, Ga.	Cline	Garner	Holland
Booher	Collier	Garrett, Tenn.	Houston
Borchers	Connelly, Kans.	Garrett, Tex.	Howard
Borland	Cox	George	Hughes, Ga.
Bowdle	Davenport	Gilmore	Hull
Brockson	Decker	Goodwin, Ark.	Igoe
Brown, W. Va.	Deitrick	Gorman	Jacoway
Buchanan, Ill.	Dickinson	Graham, Ill.	Johnson, Ky.
Buchanan, Tex.	Dies	Gray	Johnson, S. C.
Bulkley	Doolittle	Gregg	Jones
Burgess	Doughton	Gudger	Keating
Kennedy, Conn.	Maguire, Nebr.	Roddenbery	Taylor, Ala.
Kent	Maher	Rothermel	Taylor, Ark.
Kettner	Montague	Rucker	Taylor, Colo.
Kirkpatrick	Moon	Russell	Taylor, N. Y.
Konop	Morrison	Seldomridge	Ten Eyck
Korbly	Murray, Okla.	Sims	Thacher.
Lazaro	Neeley	Sisson	Underwood
Lee, Ga.	O'Hair	Smith, Md.	Vaughan
Lesher	Oldfield	Smith, Tex.	Walker
Lever	Page	Stedman	Walsh
Lieb	Phelan	Stephens, Nebr.	Watkins
Linthicum	Post	Stephens, Tex.	Watson
Lloyd	Prouty	Stone	Weaver
McAndrews	Quin	Stout	Webb
McClellan	Ragsdale	Stringer	Whaley
McDermott	Raker	Sumners	Wilson, Fla.
McGillicuddy	Reed	Talcott, N. Y.	Wingo
McKellar	Reilly, Conn.	Tavenner	Young, Tex.

NAYS—58.

Anderson	Gardner	McKenzie	Sloan
Austin	Gillett	Mann	Smith, Idaho
Barton	Gordon	Mapes	Smith, Minn.
Bell, Cal.	Hulings	Mondell	Switzer
Bryan	Humphrey, Wash.	Morgan, Okla.	Temple
Burke, S. Dak.	Johnson, Utah	Moss, W. Va.	Thomas
Campbell	Johnson, Wash.	Norton	Thomson, Ill.
Cooper	Kelly, Pa.	Payne	Towner
Curry	Kennedy, Iowa	Platt	Treadway
Davis, Minn.	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Roberts, Nev.	Walters
Dillon	Knowland, J. R.	Rupley	Willis
Dyer	La Follette	Scott	Woods
Falconer	Lewis, Pa.	Sells	Young, N. Dak.
Fess	Lindbergh	Shreve
French	McGuire, Okla.	Sinnott

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—7.

Adamson	Kahn	Rubey	Wallin
Crisp	McCoy	Smith, J. M. C.

NOT VOTING—212.

Adair	Dooling	Hughes, W. Va.	Porter
Aiken	Doremus	Humphreys, Miss.	Pou
Ainey	Dunn	Keister	Powers
Allen	Dupré	Kelley, Mich.	Rainey
Ansberry	Eagan	Kennedy, R. I.	Rauch
Anthony	Eagle	Key, Ohio	Rayburn
Avis	Edmonds	Kiess, Pa.	Reilly, Wis.
Bailey	Edwards	Kindel	Richardson
Barchfeld	Elder	Kinkead, N. J.	Riordan
Barnhart	Esch	Kitchin	Roberts, Mass.
Bartholdt	Estopinal	Kreider	Rogers
Bathrick	Fairchild	Lafferty	Rouse
Beall, Tex.	Faison	Langham	Sabath
Blackmon	Farr	Langley	Saunders
Bremner	Ferris	Lee, Pa.	Scully
Britten	Fields	L'Engle	Shackleford
Brodbeck	Finley	Lenroot	Sharp
Broussard	Fitzgerald	Levy	Sherley
Brown, N. Y.	Fordney	Lewis, Md.	Sherwood
Browne, Wis.	Francis	Lindquist	Slayden
Browning	Frear	Lobeck	Slemp
Bruckner	Gallagher	Logue	Small
Brumbaugh	Gerry	Lonergan	Smith, N. Y.
Burke, Pa.	Gittins	McLaughlin	Smith, Saml. W.
Burnett	Glass	Madden	Sparkman
Butler	Godwin, N. C.	Mahan	Stafford
Byrns, Tenn.	Goeke	Manahan	Stanley
Calder	Goldfogle	Martin	Steenerson
Cantrill	Good	Merritt	Stephens, Cal.
Carew	Goulden	Metz	Stephens, Miss.
Carlin	Graham, Pa.	Miller	Stevens, Minn.
Carr	Green, Iowa	Mitchell	Stevens, N. H.
Carter	Greene, Mass.	Moore	Sutherland
Cary	Greene, Vt.	Morgan, La.	Taggart
Chandler, N. Y.	Griest	Morin	Talbott, Md.
Clancy	Griffin	Moss, Ind.	Thompson, Okla.
Clark, Fla.	Guernsey	Mott	Townsend
Connolly, Iowa	Hamill	Murdock	Tribble
Conry	Hamilton, Mich.	Murray, Mass.	Tuttle
Copley	Hamilton, N. Y.	Nelson	Underhill
Covington	Hammond	Nolan, J. I.	Vare
Cramton	Harrison, N. Y.	O'Brien	Volstead
Crosser	Haugen	Oglesby	Whitacre
Cullop	Hawley	O'Leary	White
Curley	Hayes	O'Shaunessy	Wilder
Dale	Helgesen	Padgett	Williams
Danforth	Helm	Palmer	Wilson, N. Y.
Davis, W. Va.	Hensley	Parker	Winslow
Dent	Hill	Patten, N. Y.	Witherspoon
Dershem	Hinds	Patton, Pa.	Woodruff
Difenderfer	Hinebaugh	Pepper
Dixon	Hobson	Peters
Donohoe	Howell	Peterson
Donovan	Hoxworth	Plumley

So the motion to adjourn was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

For the session:

Mr. METZ with Mr. WALLIN.

Mr. HOBSON with Mr. FAIRCHILD.

Mr. SCULLY with Mr. BROWNING.

Mr. SLAYDEN with Mr. BARTHOLDT.

Mr. ADAMSON with Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota.

Mr. FIELDS with Mr. LANGLEY.

Mr. BARTLETT with Mr. BUTLER.

Until further notice:

Mr. AIKEN with Mr. BARCHFELD.

Mr. CARTER with Mr. CALDER.

Mr. CLARK of Florida with Mr. CARY.

Mr. COVINGTON with Mr. FREAR.

Mr. CULLOP with Mr. CHANDLER of New York.
Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia with Mr. GOOD.
Mr. DICKINSON with Mr. GREENE of Vermont.
Mr. DIFENDERFER with Mr. HAYES.
Mr. DONOHOE with Mr. HINEBAUGH.
Mr. FRANCIS with Mr. KELLEY of Michigan.
Mr. GALLAGHER with Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania.
Mr. CURLEY with Mr. KREIDER.
Mr. GITTINS with Mr. LAFFERTY.
Mr. GOLDFOGLE with Mr. LINDQUIST.
Mr. GOEKE with Mr. MCLAUGHLIN.
Mr. GUDGER with Mr. MANAHAN.
Mr. HAMILL with Mr. MARTIN.
Mr. HAMMOND with Mr. MILLER.
Mr. HELM with Mr. MORIN.
Mr. HENSLEY with Mr. NELSON.
Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi with Mr. PARKER.
Mr. JONES with Mr. J. I. NOLAN.
Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey with Mr. PORTER.
Mr. LEVY with Mr. POWERS.
Mr. PETERS with Mr. SUTHERLAND.
Mr. SHACKLEFORD with Mr. STEENERSON.
Mr. STEVENS of New Hampshire with Mr. STEPHENS of California.
Mr. UNDERHILL with Mr. TOWNER.
Mr. WHITE with Mr. VARE.
Mr. SPARKMAN with Mr. WILDER.
Mr. WHITACRE with Mr. WOODRUFF.
Mr. PATTEN of New York with Mr. MOTT.
Mr. LEE of Pennsylvania with Mr. MADDEN.
Mr. HARRISON of New York with Mr. LANGHAM.
Mr. KITCHIN with Mr. FORDNEY.
Mr. FERRIS with Mr. HAUGEN.
Mr. EDWARDS with Mr. HAMILTON of New York.
Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland with Mr. MERRITT.
Mr. DRISCOLL with Mr. GUERNSEY.
Mr. CONRY with Mr. DUNN.
Mr. CANTRILL with Mr. DANFORTH.
Mr. DALE with Mr. AVIS.
Mr. PALMER with Mr. MOORE.
Mr. GODWIN of North Carolina with Mr. MURDOCK.
Mr. RICHARDSON with Mr. ESCH.
Mr. O'SHAUNESSY with Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island.
Mr. RUBEY with Mr. HAWLEY.
Mr. DIXON with Mr. GRIEST.
Mr. FINLEY with Mr. HUGHES of West Virginia.
Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts with Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts.
Mr. BARNHART with Mr. ANTHONY.
Mr. BEALL of Texas with Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania.
Mr. BLACKMON with Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin.
Mr. CRISP with Mr. HINDS.
Mr. RAINEY with Mr. PATTON of Pennsylvania.
Mr. ADAIR with Mr. AINEY.
Mr. FAISON with Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania.
Mr. BURNETT with Mr. COPLEY.
Mr. DUPRÉ with Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan.
Mr. DENT with Mr. KAHN.
Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. WINSLOW.

Until August 6:

Mr. ALLEN with Mr. J. M. C. SMITH (except banking and currency).

Until July 26:

Mr. PADGETT with Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts.
Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee with Mr. EDMONDS.
Mr. CARLIN with Mr. BRITTEN.
Mr. SAUNDERS with Mr. SLEMP.
Mr. BATHRICK with Mr. CRAMTON.
Mr. FITZGERALD with Mr. VOLSTEAD.
Mr. GLASS with Mr. KEISTER.
Mr. GOEKE with Mr. FARR.
Mr. ROUSE with Mr. GREEN of Iowa.
Mr. SHERLEY with Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH.
Mr. RAUCH with Mr. HELGESEN.
Mr. SMALL with Mr. PLUMLEY.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 34 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, July 25, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior in regard to additional clerical assistance in the Indian Office for the work of determining the heirs of deceased Indian allottees (H. Doc. No. 163) was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. STOUT: A bill (H. R. 7095) for the purchase of a site and erection thereon of a public building at Lewistown, Mont.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7096) to provide for the surveying of the unsurveyed lands in the State of Montana; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. EDMONDS: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 110) proposing to amend the Constitution of the United States to authorize uniform laws on the subject of marriage and divorce, and to provide penalties for enforcement; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 7097) granting a pension to Mary E. Hays; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FESS: A bill (H. R. 7098) granting a pension to Nancy Smith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7099) granting a pension to Sarah E. Hibben; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GARDNER: A bill (H. R. 7100) granting a pension to Sophronia Murray; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7101) granting a pension to Frances M. Gooding; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KIRKPATRICK: A bill (H. R. 7102) granting an increase of pension to David N. Cochran; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McGILLICUDDY: A bill (H. R. 7103) granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Capen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska: A bill (H. R. 7104) granting a pension to James D. Taylor; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7105) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Barrow; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7106) granting an increase of pension to Wheaton Baker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7107) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Chamberlain; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7108) granting an increase of pension to Edgar V. Harris; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7109) granting an increase of pension to Thomas E. Langdon; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7110) granting an increase of pension to Hans H. Moeller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7111) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Pfunder; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7112) granting an increase of pension to George B. Priestly; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7113) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Reahm; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7114) granting an increase of pension to Joseph H. Barker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7115) granting an increase of pension to Nathan Addington; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7116) for the relief of Jennie S. Sherman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TUTTLE: A bill (H. R. 7117) granting a pension to Laura M. Clayton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, Chicago, Ill., protesting against the duty placed upon cottonseed oil by Austria-Hungary; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, Chicago, Ill., protesting against the continuance of the present tax on colored oleomargarine; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Elgin, Ill., favoring an amendment to the Constitution of the United States abolishing polygamy; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEVY: Petition of the Switchmen's Union of North America, protesting against the passage of the workmen's compensation bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Banana Buyers' Protective Association, New York, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the legislation placing an import tax on bananas; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LONERGAN: Petition of the Switchmen's Union of North America, favoring legislation to increase the force of safety-appliance inspectors on railroads; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, July 25, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented the memorial of Joseph H. Beall, of Boston, Mass., former president of the American Agricultural Association, relative to conditions existing in Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition from the National Civil Service Reform League, remonstrating against the adoption of paragraph O of section 2 of the pending tariff bill, relating to the collection of the income tax, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WEEKS presented a paper to accompany the bill (S. 1583) granting a pension to Sarah W. Loud, which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McLEAN presented a resolution adopted by the Business Men's Association of Meriden, Conn., favoring a more efficient and businesslike administration of the Consular Service, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CLAPP presented petitions of sundry citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women, which were referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I send to the desk a communication from the National Civil Service Reform League, addressed to Members of the Senate and House of Representatives, in opposition to paragraph O of section 2 of the tariff bill, which I will ask to have read, and I shall then move that it lie on the table, to be taken up in connection with that paragraph of the bill when it is reached. I ask unanimous consent that it be read. I think its importance is such at this time that it ought to be read to the Senate, as well as printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

(Charles W. Eliot, president. Vice presidents: Edwin A. Alderman, Charlottesville, Va.; Charles J. Bonaparte, Baltimore; Joseph H. Choate, New York City; Harry A. Garfield, Williamstown, Mass.; George Gray, Wilmington, Del.; Arthur T. Hadley, Yale University; Seth Low, New York City; Franklin MacVeagh, Washington, D. C.; George A. Pope, Baltimore; Henry A. Richmond, Buffalo, N. Y.; Moorfield Storey, Boston; Thomas N. Strong, Portland, Oreg.; and Herbert Welsh, Philadelphia. Robert W. Belcher, secretary; A. S. Frissell, treasurer; Robert D. Jenks, chairman of council; George T. Keyes and Harry W. Marsh, assistant secretaries.)

NATIONAL CIVIL SERVICE REFORM LEAGUE, OFFICES 79 WALL STREET,
New York, July 24, 1913.

Memorandum of the National Civil Service Reform League in opposition to paragraph O of section 2 of the tariff bill, H. R. 3321.

SPOILS RAID IN THE TARIFF BILL.

To the Members of the Senate and the House of Representatives:

The tariff bill, H. R. 3321, as introduced in the Senate provides for the employment for the period of two years of a large force of agents, inspectors, deputy collectors, etc., without complying with the provisions of the civil-service law. This provision is found in amendment O (pp. 207, 208, 209) appropriating $1,200,000 for salaries and supplies required to enforce the income-tax law. The provision referred to in full is as follows:

"Provided, That for a period of two years from and after the passage of this act the force of agents, deputy collectors, and inspectors authorized by this section of this act shall be appointed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and without compliance with the conditions prescribed by the act entitled 'An act to regulate and improve the civil service,' approved January 16, 1883, and amendments thereto, and with such compensation as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may fix, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, within the limitations herein prescribed: Provided further, That no person now in the classified service who shall be appointed an agent, deputy collector, or inspector shall lose his civil-service status because of such appointment."

We can find nowhere in the report of the Committee on Finance as printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD any reasons stated why this large force should be recruited outside the civil-service law. The only excuse for such a provision would be inability on the part of the Civil Service Commission to supply an adequate force within a reasonable time; but we are informed by the commission that it has upon its registers a full complement of eligibles from whom selection could be made for these positions. In view of the lack of any necessity for going outside the eligible lists to make these appointments, this provision in the bill is a gross injustice to those who have taken the examinations and qualified for positions in accordance with the law and custom.

The number of clerks whose appointments are thus thrown open to political influences will run into the hundreds. Congress could continue their appointment by further legislation at the end of the two-year period and Senators and Representatives would be importuned by the force so appointed to grant an extension of employment or transfer to the classified service. There is no precedent for such a widespread exception since the days of the Spanish War other than the unnecessary and ill-advised provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill of last year allowing temporary appointments in the Pension Office for a period of one year. At the time of the Spanish War emergency and in the face of full lists of eligibles a large force was appointed without regard to the civil-service rules. Before the lapse of any considerable time it was shown that this force was distinctly inferior in capacity to the regular civil-service employees, yet by subsequent legislation they were covered into the classified service.

This proposed legislation is an attempt to secure patronage at the expense of the merit system and is contrary to the civil-service planks in the platforms of the three great parties. The plank in the Democratic platform favored the enforcement of the civil-service law to the end that "merit and ability should be the standard of appointment and promotion rather than service rendered to a political party." The Progressive Party went on record as in favor of "the enforcement of the civil-service law in letter and spirit," while the Republican Party "stands committed to the maintenance, extension, and enforcement of the civil-service law."

We therefore ask your assistance in preventing any such spoils raid as is proposed in the tariff bill and in upholding by your vote the principles of your party that the subordinate civil service should be absolutely withdrawn from politics. We sincerely hope that you will refuse to record your vote in favor of this particular provision of the tariff bill.

Very respectfully, yours,

ROBERT D. JENKS,
Chairman of the Council.
GEORGE T. KEYES,
Assistant Secretary.

Mr. STERLING. I move that the communication just read lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered without any motion.

Mr. STERLING subsequently said: In presenting the communication this morning from the National Civil Service Reform League in regard to paragraph O of section 2 of the pending tariff bill, I omitted to make the request that the names at the head of the communication be printed in the RECORD. I ask unanimous consent to that effect.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to printing the names of the officials referred to by the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. SIMMONS. We can not hear on this side of the Chamber a word the Senator has said. I do not know what it is he desires to have printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The paper is a memorial from the National Civil Service Reform League with reference to certain features of the tariff bill, and the Senator from South Dakota has asked that the names of the officials may be printed with the document in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not know what the communication is, but I shall not object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection. The names will be printed in full as requested by the Senator from South Dakota.

STANDARD BARREL FOR FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

Mr. CLAPP, from the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures, to which was referred the bill (S. 2269) to fix the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report (No. 89) thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 2823) relating to the temporary filling of vacancies occurring in the offices of register and receiver of district land offices; to the Committee on Public Lands.

A bill (S. 2824) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations," approved March 3, 1891; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

A bill (S. 2825) granting an increase of pension to Harry Jones;

A bill (S. 2826) granting an increase of pension to Robert G. Sleater (with accompanying paper); and

A bill (S. 2827) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Ann Jones (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BRADLEY:

A bill (S. 2828) for the relief of the estate of Benjamin Gratz, deceased (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WEEKS:

A bill (S. 2829) granting an increase of pension to Cornelius Curran; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TILLMAN:

A bill (S. 2830) making appropriation for the correction of the acoustics, by the Harper system, of the United States Naval Academy chapel and auditorium; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

A bill (S. 2831) to establish a drainage fund and to provide for the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands in certain States (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Commerce.

AMENDMENT TO THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. JONES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3321.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from California [Mr. WORKS] is entitled to the floor.

SUGAR.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, there is another important and growing industry in my State that will be stricken down by this bill if it becomes a law. It is that of manufacturing beet sugar. It is an industry not alone of the manufacturers of beet sugar. Thousands of acres of land in California are devoted to the raising of beets, and hundreds of farmers and farm hands and their families are dependent upon this industry for their living. Besides this, thousands of acres of land in the State, commonly known as alkali lands, that are practically worthless because of the alkali deposits they contain, are being reclaimed by the growing of beets upon them, and thereby made first-class lands and adding millions of dollars to the land values of the State and Nation. It is a peculiar fact, thoroughly demonstrated, that beets are the only crops that can be raised on such land and that they absorb and extract the alkali, thus permanently reclaiming it in a very short time. In this way the growing of beets is of the greatest value in the reclamation of the land in addition to the means of living it affords to the growers and the addition it supplies to one of the necessaries of life, so regarded. The alleged experts who draw these tariff bills are most expert in concealing their real meaning. Schedule E, dealing with sugar, is a conspicuous example of the confusing circumlocution resorted to in providing for a tariff. It provides:

Sugars testing by the polariscope not above 75°, seventy-one one-hundredths of 1 per cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscope test twenty-six one-thousandths of 1 cent per pound additional, and fraction of a degree in proportion.

I suppose a polariscope is an instrument designed to determine the degree of real or pure sugar in a substance imported as such. If that be so, every separate package of sugar imported, in whatever form, must, in order to comply with the law, be tested and tried out and the tariff imposed accordingly. I am informed by persons who know more about this question than I do, or probably ever will, that the Cuban sugar, which our people must compete with, is of about 96° pure, and on sugar of that degree the tariff proposed by the bill will amount to something less than 1 cent a pound. In order that the Senate may understand how important this industry is to my State I desire to submit for consideration some data showing to what extent it has been established in California. The following figures have been compiled and I think can be relied upon:

There are 11 beet-sugar factories in the State of California, having an aggregate daily slicing capacity of 13,500 tons. This does not include the factories at Corcoran and Visalia, which were not in operation last year, but it is understood will be reopened for the next campaign.

The aggregate cost of construction of these 11 factories, based on $1,250 per ton of daily slicing capacity, is $16,875,000, the total investment in plants, lands, and equipment being approximately $20,000,000.

The aggregate length of all buildings is 23,345 feet. Figures for 10 factories show the following expenditures:

Acres of beets harvested	112,000
Tons of beets	1,037,000
Tons of sugar produced	168,000
Paid for beets	$6,700,000
Paid for labor	3,900,000
Paid for railroad freights	1,800,000
Paid for fuel oil	500,000
Paid for lime rock	200,000
Paid for bags	400,000
Paid for other supplies	540,000
Total expenditures 1912	14,040,000

The total expenditures of these 11 factories since their erection, exclusive of the amounts invested in plants, lands, and equipment, is approximately $104,379,000.

A fuller and more accurate understanding of the extent of the industry, the amount of money invested, and the benefits that have and should continue to accrue to the people of the State may be gained by an examination of the following tabulated statements relating separately to each of the 11 sugar manufactories in the State:

(Oxnard, Cal.; American Beet Sugar Co.; erected 1897-98; daily capacity, 3,000 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 120 by 401 feet; length of all buildings, 1,556 feet; area of beets grown by independent farmers in 1912, 15,561 acres; by the factory, 637 acres.

Partial disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$15,000,000
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	5,000,000
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	6,000,000
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	4,000,000

(Chino, Cal.; American Beet Sugar Co.; erected 1891; daily capacity, 900 tons of beets; equipped with American and foreign machinery.)

Size of main building, 67 by 310 feet; length of all buildings, 1,525 feet; area of beets grown by independent farmers in 1912, 14,809 acres; by the factory, 1,800 acres.

Partial disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$5,592,643.65
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	2,725,000.00
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	2,250,000.00
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	2,175,745.45

(Spreckels, Cal.; Spreckels Sugar Co.; erected 1899; daily capacity, 3,000 tons of beets; equipped with American and German machinery.)

Size of main building, 105 by 585 feet; length of all buildings, 7,741 feet; area of beets grown by independent farmers in 1912, 7,380 acres; by the factory, 7,429 acres.

(Los Alamitos Sugar Co., Los Alamitos, Cal.; erected 1897; daily capacity, 800 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 93 feet 9 inches by 261 feet; length of all buildings, 2,144 feet; area of beets grown by independent farmers in 1912, 10,432 acres; by the factory, 401 acres.

Approximate disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$4,321,443.87
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	1,208,100.93
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	1,314,930.61
Experiments, insurance, brokerage, repairs, and all other items	390,613.48
Total	7,235,088.95

(Santa Ana Cooperative Sugar Co., Dyer, Cal.; erected 1912; daily capacity, 1,200 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 66 by 266 feet; length of all buildings, 971 feet; area of beets grown by 226 independent farmers in 1912, 9,061 acres; by the factory, none.

(Alameda Sugar Co., Alvarado, Cal.; erected 1870; daily capacity, 800 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 65 by 230 feet; length of all buildings, 3,043 feet; area of beets largely grown by the factory, 5,708 acres.

Partial disbursements since 1897.

Beets	$3,284,580
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	1,736,992
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	347,805
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	845,315

(Southern California Sugar Co., Santa Ana, Cal.; erected 1909; daily capacity, 600 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 67 by 265 feet; length of all buildings, 1,184 feet; area of beets grown by independent farmers in 1912, 10,000 acres; by the factory, none.

Partial disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$1,224,996.35
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	307,000.00
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	309,900.00
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	337,369.51

(Holly Sugar Co., Huntington Beach, Cal.; erected 1911; daily capacity, 1,000 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 65 by 260 feet; length of all buildings, 1,160 feet; area of beets grown by 300 independent farmers in 1912, 11,000 acres; by the factory, none.

Partial disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$1,100,000
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	225,000
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	300,000
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	230,000

(Union Sugar Co., Betteravia, Cal.; erected 1898; daily capacity, 1,000 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 109 by 270 feet; length of all buildings, 3,043 feet; area of beets, largely grown by the factory, 5,708 acres.

Partial disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets, 1899–1912	$4,697,379
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	2,625,876
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	1,923,097
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	1,120,038

(Hamilton City, Cal.; Sacramento Valley Sugar Co.; erected 1906; daily capacity, 700 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 62 by 250 feet; length of all buildings, 1,301 feet; area of beets largely grown by the factory, 1,510 acres.

Approximate disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$1,350,000
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	650,000
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	450,000
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	425,000
Experiments, insurance, brokerage, repairs, and all other items	45,000
Total expenditures since date of erection	2,920,000

(Anaheim, Cal.; Anaheim Sugar Co.; erected 1910–11; daily capacity, 500 tons of beets; equipped with American machinery.)

Size of main building, 58 by 275 feet; length of all buildings, 1,155 feet; area of beets grown by independent farmers in 1912, 10,069 acres; by the factory, none.

Approximate disbursements since erection of factory.

Beets	$653,575.09
Wage earners, office help, superintendents, managers, and officers	201,579.70
Freight on beets, sugar, and supplies	173,600.00
Fuel, lime rock, bags, coke, and all other supplies	194,200.00
Experiments, insurance, brokerage, repairs, and all other items	86,130.00
Total	1,309,084.79

I have this further statement from A. C. Bird, president of the Southern California Beet Sugar Growers' Association, which is worthy of careful consideration as coming, not from the manufacturer, but from the farmer who grows and sells the beets:

This development within a few years has demonstrated the fact that, unless confronted with unexpected difficulties, the United States will soon be able, through the growth of sugar beets, to supply its own demands, with some surplus sugar for exportation, while at present the United States is importing six-sevenths of the amount consumed. So far as I am personally concerned I do not favor or advocate high duties or a prohibitory tariff for the purpose of building up trusts or monopolies, and I believe this is the universal feeling of the members of the association, but we all believe that the real facts in the case of the sugar industry are widely misunderstood and that the insistent, growing demand all over the country for the removal of the duties on "trust goods," coupled with the overwhelming outcry against the high cost of living, may lead to wrong conclusions, harmful to beet-sugar States and beneficial to none, unless this subject is thoroughly investigated from all points of view and fully understood.

We are demonstrating the value of this industry to the soil, not only by greatly enhancing the value of the average soil under cultivation, but by making highly valuable soil heretofore regarded as useless. To illustrate by my own experience last season: In planting 75 acres to beets I included 9 acres I had not been able to raise anything on equal to the value of the seed because the soil was so strongly impregnated with alkali.

The average tonnage of that 9 acres was greater than the average of all the others, and the average sugar value was greater than the general average of the 66 acres. This experience has been general throughout this district, and large acreage is now being cultivated with good results that have heretofore been regarded as valueless. You can see just what this means for southern California and adjoining States. Furthermore, that which has been regarded as valueless, unproductive soil is being improved in its productiveness beyond anything that has been seen in this country, and other crops are being greatly increased by their rotation with sugar beets. These statements will be verified by the Agriculture Department, as shown by the investigations carried on in both the United States and Germany.

Finally, as to where the consumer comes in. If the cane-sugar people succeed in the removal of duties on raw sugar, the market in this country will be substantially in the hands of the cane-sugar refineries. There may be an interval of lower prices while they are giving the finishing touches to the beet people, but as soon as the last-named industry is wiped out the Sugar Trust (refiners) will effectively control the prices for all the millions of consumers in our country, having disposed of all the existing competition by the destruction of the great and growing sugar-beet industry as well as having given general agriculture a disastrous blow. So we hope when this question comes up for final disposition the friend of agriculture everywhere, and especially the friend of California, will put every possible obstacle in the way of reduction of the sugar duties until they are thoroughly convinced that it is a wise measure from all points. Please bear in mind that in southern California the beet industry is the greatest one—save only citrus fruits—and that in a few years with the same protection the industry has had the last five years the beet interest will be the greatest of all.

T. B. Case, manager of Southern California Sugar Co., located at Santa Ana, Cal., furnishes, at my request, the following information as to the beet-sugar industry in the State:

We will utilize in our campaigns 100,000 acres planted to beets. Much of this soil, on account of its alkalinity, will not produce other profitable crops, and the first beet crops are not entirely satisfactory, but by continuous cropping the alkaline rankness is exhausted and the land becomes highly productive and valuable.

All the factories purchase their beets from actual growers. None, so far as I know, raises its own beets. The beets produced on the 100,000 acres will amount to 1,000,000 tons, or an average of 10 tons per acre, which is a conservative estimate for southern California. We pay the growers for these beets between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. The ranchers who raise these beets pay to the farm laborers who care for the crop between two and two and one-half million dollars. We pay the railroads for transporting these beets to the factories $500,000. We purchase and consume 500,000 barrels of oil, from which the railroads receive over $100,000 more; also 100,000 tons of limestone, quarried in California, for which we pay $175,000 to $200,000, and for which the railroads receive another like amount. We use 30,000,000 bags, which are manufactured in California at a cost to the factories of $360,000. For the purchase of the materials and supplies entering into the manufacture of our sugar we expend for the 150,000 tons about eleven and one-fourth million dollars, all of which goes to California labor, railroads, and material men, excepting coke, which we are compelled to purchase either in the East or from Europe landed in this country at the port of San Pedro.

For the transportation of our manufactured product to the market, the manufacturers pay to the railroads an additional one and one-half millions of dollars. All of the money received from the sale of our manufactured product, except for such as is consumed in our own State, is brought from the jobbing cities of the Missouri River and deposited in our home banks. The effect of the industry upon the community in which the factories are located is most beneficial. It begins at the foundation of society and pays to the common laborer remunerative wages, keeping him employed during the months which are ordinarily those of least activity. I have had experience in organizing and starting two beet-sugar factories, one in Michigan and one in California, and from my personal observation I have formed the opinion that there is no other industry which so beneficially affects the community where located. We pay to the farmers somewhere between 2 and 2½ cents a pound for the extracted sugar. We add to that, in labor and supplies, a little over a cent and a quarter, bringing the total cost up to approximately 3.65 cents a pound.

Sugar is produced in the Tropics from the cheap and filthy labor for a little less than what we pay the farmers for the extracted sugar. If that sugar is admitted free into the United States, as it can be introduced at a small profit for about what we pay the farmer, it will necessarily compel us either to purchase our beets at a lower price or drive us out of business. The latter is the more probable course, for the reason that our farmers must either be able to sell their beets at a reasonable profit or they will engage in other industries, and in this connection, they must make more money on their beets than they receive for other crops, for the reason that it is a crop that requires intense cultivation and care, entailing upon the farmer more cost and labor than he is compelled to expend on any other of his growing crops, not excepting the citrus fruit growers.

Here is another very brief statement showing the value of the industry to the State:

BEET-SUGAR INDUSTRY—THE DIRECT ECONOMIC VALUE OF THE BEET-SUGAR INDUSTRY TO THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Factories.—Alameda Sugar Co., Alameda County; Anaheim Sugar Co., Orange County; American Beet Sugar Co., "Chino," San Bernardino County; American Beet Sugar Co., "Oxnard," Ventura County; Holly Sugar Co., Orange County; Los Alamitos Sugar Co., Orange County; Spreckels Sugar Co., Monterey County; Santa Ana Cooperative Sugar Co., Orange County; Southern California Sugar Co., Orange County; Sacramento Valley Sugar Co., Glenn County; Union Sugar Co., Santa Barbara County.

Local expenditures in 1912.

For beets (showing the total value of the crop to the farmers of the State)	$6,701,582.82
For labor in factories and fields	3,939,165.01
For railroad freights	1,811,112.46
For fuel oil	503,780.90
For lime rock	211,169.09
For bags	391,504.93
For other supplies	542,598.11
Total	14,100,922.32
Acres harvested	112,003
Tons sugar beets grown (2,000 pounds)	1,037,490
Tons of sugar produced (2,000 pounds)	168,765
Total investment in factories, land, and equipment	$10,904,823.21

(N. B.—The above statistics have been accurately compiled by the Pacific Slope Beet Sugar Association.)

I have also this very clear statement of conditions from the Anaheim Sugar Co., showing particularly the advantages of the industry to the people of the State of California:

Believing, as we do, that you will oppose any change in the sugar tariff which you can be convinced is against the interests of your State, we take the liberty of giving you a few figures, the correctness of which can be easily verified by an examination of our books:

We paid the farmers last year per ton of beets testing 20 per cent sugar	$6.75
Our average freight rate per ton of beets to the factory was	.508
Expense of field men—making contracts and instructing farmers in growing beets—per ton of beets	.121
Expense of loading beets in cars at dumps per ton	.102
Making a total cost per ton f. o. b. factory of	7.481

It is generally figured that a 75 per cent extraction of the sugar is good work, which would mean 300 pounds of sugar out of the 400 pounds in the beets, from which it will be seen that we pay for the beets delivered an equivalent of $2.49 per hundred pounds of extractable sugar, and, in addition to this, must bear the cost of extraction, of which labor at American rates is one of the principal items.

In the way of comparison, raw sugar delivered in New York to-day from Cuba is selling at $3.45 per hundred pounds, and without the duty of $1.348 would be equal to $2.102 per hundred pounds. Therefore we start with raw material in the way of beets at $2.49 per hundred pounds of sugar, while the refiners in the East start with raw cane sugar at $2.102 per hundred pounds, and the factory cost of producing refined sugar from beets is at least double the cost of refining raw cane sugar. This should prove that a free-sugar bill at any time would destroy the beet-sugar industry and give the cane refiners absolute command of the production of this commodity and the regulation of prices.

In the interest of the farmer, laborer, and others in California engaged in this industry outside of the sugar factories, we wish to say that during the year 1912 this State produced 3,173,630 bags of beet sugar, and there was disbursed for beets, fuel oil, labor, etc., approximately $12,000,000, while the production of the same number of bags of refined sugar by refining raw cane sugar would mean in comparison a distribution of not much over one-sixth of this amount.

Our auditor's cost sheet for the year 1912, copy of which we will be glad to file with you, shows that after crediting the by-products, consisting of dried beet pulp and molasses, our sugar costs us at the factory $3.88 net per 100 pounds. This cost would be increased provided we are not able to dispose of the molasses at the inventory price of $10 per ton.

Mr. President, it is unnecessary to speculate about the result to the beet-sugar industry in my State if the proposed legislation goes into effect. It is possible that under a tariff of 1 cent a pound the industry might struggle along, but the growth of it would be effectually brought to an end, and the farmers, the people above all others who should be protected, will be made to suffer the whole loss under such a tariff in the reduced price at which they will be able to sell the beets, or the laborers will suffer from reduced and inadequate wages, or both. Neither the prices for the products nor the wages paid can compete with prices or wages in the Tropics. It may be taken as certain that it will not be the manufacturers that will suffer, but the farmer and the laborer. This would undoubtedly be the effect of a reduction such as is proposed.

But, sir, the bill goes further than this. It provides for sugar going on the free list at the end of three years. This simply means the extinction of the sugar industry in my State. Our people can not compete with Cuba, for example, and live. So the question is a very simple one. Does Congress believe it to be to the best interest of the country to completely destroy one of its chief and growing industries in California and other States for the slender hope that by such a course the price of sugar to the consumer may be reduced? I am afraid that this proposed legislation is not founded on any such belief. The people of this country have been made to believe that tariffs should be reduced. So they should. But on what? On the products that are over or unnecessarily protected from foreign competition. On some manufactured articles from which manufacturers are growing offensively rich. Not on the products of the soil, upon the production of which the farmers of the country depend for a living. The trouble is that this bill does not undertake an intelligent and fair regulation and readjustment of the tariff in such way as to remedy the evils resulting from former ill-adjusted and burdensome tariff legislation. I am afraid it is done with the view of securing public favor and votes from the people who are justly crying out for a reduction of the tariff without knowing where and on what articles reductions should be made in the public interest. Reductions are made on farm products on the specious and appealing ground that it will result in a lowering of prices for the ordinary and common necessaries of life. But unfortunately these are the very things, in the main, that come from the soil and benefit the millions of our people engaged in farming and farm labor. By opening the common necessaries of life to foreign competition we are taking these necessaries from the mouths and the backs of the very people in this country who most need the protection of their industry and their living. No party that reduces the tariff in any such way and upon such articles will long continue in power. It must find some more scientific and just method than this of regulating the tariff.

If that is what the pledge of the Democratic Party to reduce the tariff really means, the pledge had better never have been made. I do not believe it means any such thing. To misconstrue it as a license of the people to establish free trade or to take away from the farmers and laboring men of the country the protection they need and should have is a cruel misconstruction of the pledge that will bring swift and condign punishment from the people at the polls. I regret that the attempt to regulate the evils of excessive tariff rates should have taken this form. The attempt to regulate and reduce the tariff is worthy of commendation if only it is done with a sincere purpose to better the condition of the people, but woe to the party that seeks to make it a means of political gain or advantage.

But, sir, the claim is made that the sugar manufacturers are, under the existing tariff rates, making inordinately large profits. I have tried to ascertain the facts as to this claim as it applies to the various industries in my State and to be governed by those facts. Perhaps the sugar-beet growers and sugar manufacturers of California are in better condition to withstand a reduction in the tariff than any other State because of the fertility of its lands, their adaptability to the growth of sugar beets, and the higher quality of the beets grown in respect of the amount of sugar they contain. If the California industry will be seriously injured by the proposed reduction on sugar, it will be destroyed completely in other States where sugar-beet culture and the manufacture of sugar therefrom are becoming important factors in the progress of those States where the beets can be grown. At Oxnard, Cal., is one of the large manufactories of the State. The land in that section is peculiarly adapted to the growth of sugar beets of the highest quality. The percentage of sugar in the beets grown there is as high or higher than anywhere else in this country and the conditions for the manufacture of sugar are peculiarly favorable; and yet the profits resulting from the manufacture of sugar under such favorable conditions are not unreasonable under the existing tariff. I have here a statement of the different plants of the American Beet Sugar Co., showing their capacities, amount invested in the construction of the plants, cost of production of sugar and the profits realized, the effect on the industry of certain reductions in the tariff, the comparative investments necessary to carry on the business in this and other countries, wages paid, the comparative extractions of sugar from the beets in the several countries engaged in the business, and the total cost of production of sugar in each.

The statement is as follows:

AMERICAN BEET SUGAR CO.

The six plants of the American Beet Sugar Co. have a daily slicing capacity as follows:

	Tons.
Oxnard, Cal.	3,000
Chino, Cal.	900
Rocky Ford, Colo.	1,500
Lamar, Colo.	400
Las Animas, Colo.	700
Grand Island, Nebr.	350
Total	6,850

The actual investment in factories, working capital, etc., exclusive of lands, is approximately $11,500,000; but the usual basis of figuring the cost of erecting factories is $1,250 per ton of daily slicing capacity, which would make the actual construction cost of these six plants $8,562,500, allowing nothing for working capital, lands, etc.

Referring to the statement of the American Beet Sugar Co. on page 2306 of the hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, it will be seen that during the seven years 1906–7 to 1912–13 the company produced 10,012,343 bags of sugar, or an average of 1,430,334 bags per year, and that the average net receipts per bag after deducting expenses were 77 cents, which would make $7,709,504 profit for the seven years, or $1,101,357 per year, which is equal to 9.57 per cent return on the capital invested, exclusive of that invested in lands.

The following tabulation shows what the company would be able to earn under various reductions of the tariff, predicated upon the wholesale price of sugar being lowered in exact proportion as the tariff was lowered: Present duty on refined sugar $1.90, affording a profit of 77 cents per 100 pounds, or $1,101,357, which is equal to 9.57 per cent on the capital invested, exclusive of that invested in lands.

The Lodge-Bristow amendment lowered the duty on refined sugar 30 cents per 100 pounds, or to $1.60 per 100 pounds. Under this reduction the company's profits would have been 47 cents per 100 pounds, or $672,257 per annum, which is equal to 5.85 per cent on the capital invested, exclusive of that invested in lands.

A reduction of 25 per cent in the present rate of duty would bring the duty from $1.90 to $1.425 per 100 pounds, thus reducing the profit from 77 cents to 29.5 cents per 100 pounds, or $421,948 per year, which is equal to 3.67 per cent on the capital invested, exclusive of that invested in lands.

A reduction of 33⅓ per cent would reduce the duty from $1.90 to $1.267 per 100 pounds, thus reducing the profits from 77 cents to 13.7 cents per 100 pounds, or $195,955 per annum, which is equal to 1.70 per cent on the capital invested, exclusive of that invested in lands.

A reduction of 50 per cent would reduce the duty from $1.90 to 95 cents per 100 pounds, thus eliminating the 77 cents profit and creating a loss of 18 cents per bag, or $257,460 per year. Free sugar would create a loss of $1.90 less 77 cents, or $1.13 per bag, amounting to a total loss of $1,616,278 per annum on a product of 1,430,334 bags.

COST OF PRODUCING SUGAR IN THE UNITED STATES AND IN EUROPEAN SUGAR EXPORTING COUNTRIES.

The difference in the cost of producing sugar in the United States and in Europe can be grouped under three general heads:

(1) Cost of plants.
(2) Cost of labor.
(3) Cost of beets.

The cost of a given size factory in Europe is about 50 per cent of what it is in the United States, and investment account is correspondingly small.

The average factory wage is 69.9 cents per day as compared with an average factory wage of $2.99 in the United States. The following table shows the difference in cost of sugar in the beet in the United States and Europe. The extraction in European countries is from official figures, as is also the price of beets, except in Russia and Belgium, for which official figures are not available. The extraction in all countries is on the basis of raw sugar.

	Extraction per ton of beets (pounds).	Cost of beets per 2,000-pound ton.	Cost of sugar in beet per 100 pounds.	Difference.
1911-12.
United States	263.16	$6.13	$2.33
Germany	327.15	4.86	1.49	$0.84
Russia	307.14	3.75	1.22	1.11
Austria-Hungary	293.77	4.37	1.49	.84
France	248.19	4.86	1.96	.37
Belgium	296.52	4.24	1.43	.90
Netherlands	292.18	4.56	1.56	.77

On page 5 of the Underwood report, the cost of producing sugar in Germany is placed at $1.96 to $2.07 per 100 pounds, and on page 6 the cost of producing beet-sugar in the largest factories of the United States is given as "not to exceed 3.54 cents per pound," a difference of 1.47 to 1.58 cents per pound in favor of Germany.

In addition to this I have the statement of the American Beet Sugar Co., in tabulated form, showing every item of cost of production and marketing of sugar and the gross and net receipts of all of its plants combined. This statement is as follows:

Statement of the American Beet Sugar Co.—Cost of sugar from Apr. 1, 1906, to Mar. 31, 1913.

ALL FACTORIES.

[Paragraphs 216-219.—Beet sugar.]

	1906-7	1907-8	1908-9	1909-10
Tons of beets sliced	549,947	470,081	374,629	472,106
Average sugar test	15.54	15.83	16.64	16.62
Sugar extraction per ton of beets	263.74	276.37	290.09	292.04
Average price of beets	$5.50	$5.56	$5.66	$5.83
COST OF MANUFACTURE.
Cost of raw material	$3,026,977.83	$2,615,542.18	$2,118,905.76	$2,754,461.71
Factory cost, less value of by-products	1,935,572.05	1,687,862.54	1,356,252.62	1,743,734.80
Overhead or administrative charges	138,265.54	158,981.45	175,951.66	177,266.36
Taxes and insurance	54,324.28	58,514.38	65,154.27	59,843.98
Total	5,155,139.70	4,520,900.55	3,716,264.31	4,735,206.85
Bags of sugar produced	1,450,411	1,299,182	1,096,777	1,378,739
Cost per bag	$3.55	$3.48	$3.42	$3.43
OTHER EXPENSES.
Selling	$569,696.05	$524,053.15	$828,835.84	$739,502.47
Interest paid on borrowed money	314,441.16	301,430.88	189,617.60	100,203.56
Depreciation at 6 per cent per annum	326,642.71	330,588.14	235,405.64	347,509.79
Total cost to produce and sell sugar	6,365,919.62	5,976,972.72	5,070,213.39	5,922,522.67
Total cost per bag to produce and sell sugar	4.39	4.60	4.67	4.30
SALE OF SUGAR.
Gross receipts from sugar sold	4,553,214.25	7,402,270.46	6,915,533.59	6,776,775.97
Gross receipts per bag from sugar sold	4.78	4.78	5.14	5.09
Net receipts per bag from sugar sold	.39	.18	.47	.79

	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	Total.
Tons of beets sliced	498,955	498,078	509,212	3,373,006
Average sugar test	17.60	17.50	18.11	16.85
Sugar extraction per ton of beets	315.76	313.80	325.76	296.84
Average price of beets	$6.25	$6.46	$7.16	$6.08
COST OF MANUFACTURE.
Cost of raw material	$3,117,972.82	$3,219,223.46	$3,647,100.68	$20,500,244.44
Factory cost, less value of by-products	1,716,642.27	1,883,024.66	1,855,998.13	12,179,097.07
Overhead or administrative charges	187,269.72	192,743.42	261,780.80	1,292,258.95
Taxes and insurance	64,746.99	98,015.87	98,417.03	499,016.80
Total	5,086,631.80	5,393,007.41	5,863,356.64	34,470,607.26
Bags of sugar produced	1,575,490	1,562,949	1,658,805	10,012,343
Cost per bag	$3.23	$3.45	$3.53	$3.44

Statement of the American Beet Sugar Co.—Cost of sugar from Apr. 1, 1906, to Mar. 31, 1913—Continued.

ALL FACTORIES—continued.

	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	Total.
OTHER EXPENSES.
Selling	$934,159.68	$969,536.82	$1,080,046.84	$5,943,853.85
Interest paid on borrowed money	46,158.98	1,482.11	48,845.54	1,002,179.83
Depreciation at 6 per cent per annum	358,125.59	364,449.34	317,319.06	2,380,139.77
Total cost to produce and sell sugar	6,425,076.05	6,728,475.68	7,309,568.68	43,798,748.81
Total cost per bag to produce and sell sugar	4.08	4.30	4.41	4.37
SALE OF SUGAR.
Gross receipts from sugar sold	8,172,856.98	8,745,242.53	8,875,696.50	51,441,509.53
Gross receipts per bag from sugar sold	5.06	5.32	4.95	5.14
Net receipts per bag from sugar sold	.98	1.02	.54	.77

I also submit for the information of the Senate a separate statement of a like kind, covering only the business of the plant at Oxnard, Cal., as follows:

OXNARD FACTORY, OXNARD, CAL.

	1906-7	1907-8	1908-9	1909-10
Tons of beets sliced	201,333	134,722	174,444	235,668
Average sugar test	17.25	17.74	18.56	18.03
Sugar extraction per ton of beets	298.71	321.82	332.73	323.46
Average price of beets	$5.49	$5.78	$6.01	$6.11
COST OF MANUFACTURE.
Cost of raw material	$1,106,073.59	$779,090.78	$1,049,272.07	$1,440,745.04
Factory cost, less value of by-products	608,400.86	533,544.16	558,913.26	772,997.94
Overhead or administrative charges	62,219.49	60,412.95	66,861.63	67,361.22
Taxes and insurance	19,443.27	20,295.34	17,580.24	14,090.16
Total	1,886,137.21	1,393,343.23	1,602,627.20	2,295,194.36
Bags of sugar produced	601,410	433,570	580,420	762,295
Cost per bag	$3.14	$3.21	$2.92	$3.01
OTHER EXPENSES.
Selling	$275,825.42	$376,029.54	$483,231.39	$468,931.84
Interest paid on borrowed money	141,498.52	114,543.73	72,054.69	38,077.35
Depreciation at 6 per cent per annum	138,343.75	138,289.75	139,275.92	146,670.95
Total cost to produce and sell sugar	2,441,804.90	2,022,206.25	2,387,189.20	2,948,874.28
Total cost per bag to produce and sell sugar	4.06	4.66	4.11	3.87
SALE OF SUGAR.
Gross receipts from sugar sold	1,661,926.70	2,686,016.58	3,626,646.27	3,815,832.89
Gross receipts per bag from sugar sold	4.90	4.72	5.13	5.03
Net receipts per bag from sugar sold	.84	.06	1.02	1.16

	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	Total.
Tons of beets sliced	286,908	279,003	211,923	1,524,001
Average sugar test	18.90	19.30	19.74	18.60
Sugar extraction per ton of beets	341.34	347.81	371.56	335.62
Average price of beets	$6.51	$6.67	$7.62	$6.38
COST OF MANUFACTURE.
Cost of raw material	$1,868,338.29	$1,861,116.53	$1,614,966.27	$9,719,622.57
Factory cost, less value of by-products	800,845.02	878,974.65	714,044.27	4,957,720.16
Overhead or administrative charges	71,162.49	73,242.51	99,476.70	500,736.99
Taxes and insurance	16,331.46	28,396.14	29,675.83	144,812.44
Total	2,756,677.26	2,841,729.83	2,457,183.07	15,322,892.16
Bags of sugar produced	979,320	970,400	787,416	5,114,931
Cost per bag	$2.81	$2.93	$3.12	$3.00

Statement of the American Beet Sugar Co.—Cost of sugar from Apr. 1, 1906, to Mar. 31, 1913—Continued.

OXNARD FACTORY, OXNARD, CAL.—continued.

	1910-11	1911-12	1912-13	Total.
OTHER EXPENSES.
Selling	$631,620.81	$643,733.83	$907,388.97	$3,486,761.50
Interest paid on borrowed money	17,540.41	563.20	18,561.30	402,839.20
Depreciation at 6 per cent per annum	152,050.94	158,703.47	137,314.94	1,010,649.72
Total cost to produce and sell sugar	3,557,889.42	3,644,730.33	3,220,448.28	20,223,142.58
Total cost per bag to produce and sell sugar	3.63	3.76	4.09	3.95
SALE OF SUGAR.
Gross receipts from sugar sold	4,917,780.46	5,175,082.74	4,194,619.20	26,077,895.84
Gross receipts per bag from sugar sold	5.03	5.34	4.95	5.10
Net receipts per bag from sugar sold	1.40	1.58	.86	1.15

It will be seen that the actual net profit to the company, as shown by this statement, the accuracy of which I have no reason to doubt, taking all its plants into consideration, was 77 cents per bag of 100 pounds. As I have pointed out, the conditions in Oxnard are more favorable than, perhaps, in any other locality. There the net profit per bag was 86 cents.

Mr. President, I have included in my remarks a short extract from some remarks of mine made in the Senate at an earlier day, which I ask to be allowed to include without reading, as it is already in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the matter will be included. The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

"Since this came into the Senate there has come into my hands a printed pamphlet entitled "Cost of Producing Sugar in the United States, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Russia, and Cuba." The compilation is by Mr. Truman G. Palmer, who, as is well known, has given great attention to this subject. In a brief way I wish to call attention to some of the information contained in the pamphlet.

"On page 6 this statement appears:

"The average price paid to farmers for beets in the United States, as given in the April issue of the Crop Reporter, issued by the Department of Agriculture, was $5.50 per ton in 1911 and $5.82 per ton in 1912. Direct reports from 65 factories show an average freight charge on beets paid by the factories of 43 cents per ton in 1911, 45 cents in 1912, and 41 cents per ton for agricultural expenses in 1911, 38 cents for 1912.

"Thus the average cost of beets laid down at the factory gates in the United States was $6.34 per ton in 1911 and $6.65 in 1912.

"Then follows a tabulated statement of the farmers' receipts for raw material. It shows that the farm price per ton of 2,000 pounds is, in the United States, $5.82; Russia, $3.90; Austria-Hungary, $3.68; and Germany, $4.14; and the average extraction of the beets is in favor of the European countries. In the United States it is 274.57; it is 316.98 in Russia; in Austria-Hungary, 315.20; in Germany, 328.30; and the average farm cost of 100 pounds of sugar is, in the United States, $2.12; in Russia, $1.23; in Austria-Hungary, $1.16; and in Germany, $1.26.

"The table is as follows:

Farmers' receipts for raw material.

	Farm price of beets per 2,000-pound ton.	Average extraction of raw sugar per 2,000-pound ton of beets, 1907-1911.	Average farm cost of 100 pounds of sugar in the beet.	United States farm cost per 100 pounds of raw sugar in the beet in excess of cost in other countries.
		Pounds.
United States	$5.82	274.57	$2.12
Russia	3.90	316.98	1.23	$0.89
Austria-Hungary	3.68	315.20	1.16	.96
Germany	4.14	328.30	1.26	.86

"In another table following this is another statement that should be of interest in determining the question as to the rate of tariff to be imposed upon sugar or whether it shall be placed upon the free list. It gives the cost of beets per ton, the average extraction of raw sugar per ton of beets from 1907 to 1911, the average cost of 100 pounds of raw sugar in the beet, and the United States cost per hundred pounds of raw sugar in the beet in excess of cost of other countries.

"The matter referred to is as follows:

Factory cost of raw material.

	Cost of beets per 2,000-pound ton.	Average extraction of raw sugar per ton of beets, 1907-1911.	Average cost of 100 pounds of raw sugar in the beet.	United States cost per 100 pounds of raw sugar in the beet in excess of cost in other countries.
UNITED STATES.
Average price paid farmers in 1912	$5.82
Average freight paid by factories	.45
Average agricultural expense incurred by factories	.38
		Pounds.
Total per ton	$6.65	274.57	$2.42
RUSSIA.
Average price paid for beets in 1911	$3.90
Assuming for freight as in Austria	.20
Total per ton	4.10	316.98	1.29	$1.13
AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.
Bohemia, 1913 contract price at receiving stations	$3.68
Contract price delivered at factory	3.88	315.20	1.23	1.19
GERMANY.
Average cost, purchase beets, 1904 to 1910	$4.44
North Germany, average 1913 contract price purchase beets, delivered at factory gates	4.34	328.30	1.32	1.10

"Then follows another table, entitled 'Factory cost of raw material by States.' This table very clearly shows the difference in the amount paid by the State of California as compared with other States. The average cost of beets per ton laid down at the factory is stated as follows: California, $7.29; Utah and Idaho, $5.80; Colorado, $6.79; Michigan, $6.52; Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin, $6.43; and other States, $6.64.

"The amount of raw sugar extracted per ton of beets is in California, 324.93; Utah and Idaho, 282.03; Colorado, 280.80; Michigan, 263.37; Ohio and the other States named, 269.93; and other States, 260.74.

"The cost per hundred pounds of extractable raw sugar in the beet is in California, $2.24; Utah and Idaho, $2.05; Colorado, $2.42; Michigan, $2.48; Ohio and the other States named, $2.46; and other States grouped, $2.55, as shown by the following table:

Factory cost of raw material by States.

	Average cost of beets per ton, laid down at factory, 1912.	Pounds of raw sugar extracted per ton of beets, 1907-1911.[1]	Cost of 100 pounds of extractable raw sugar in the beet.
California	$7.29	324.93	$2.24
Utah and Idaho	5.80	282.03	2.05
Colorado	6.79	280.80	2.42
Michigan	6.52	263.37	2.48
Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin	6.43	260.93	2.46
Other States	6.64	260.74	2.55

[1] Based on 100 pounds of raw being equal to 90 pounds of refined sugar.

"There is another interesting table giving the gross return to farmers per acre. Without reading the whole of it, it shows returns in Russia per acre, at $3.90 per ton, $27.79; Austria-Hungary, $3.68 per ton, $42.21; Germany, at $4.14 per ton, $55.35; and the United States, at $5.82 per ton, $58.95, as follows:

Gross returns to farmers per acre.

Russia, 7.126 tons per acre, at $3.90 per ton	$27.79
Austria-Hungary, 11.47 tons per acre, at $3.68 per ton	42.21
Germany, 13.37 tons per acre, at $4.14 per ton	55.35
United States, 10.13 tons per acre, at $5.82 per ton	58.95

"There is still another table that should be taken into account. It shows the tons of beets per acre, the price paid, and the gross returns per acre. It shows that California grows 10.37 tons per acre; Utah and Idaho, 11.32; Colorado, 10.64; Michigan, 8.58; Wisconsin, 10.02; and other States, 9.07.

"The price paid to the farmers per ton for beets in 1912 was: California, $6.46; Utah and Idaho, $4.97; Colorado, $5.96; Michigan, $5.69; Wisconsin, $5.60; and other States, $5.81, as shown by the following table:

	Beets per acre, 1907–1911.	Price paid to farmers per ton for beets in 1912.	Gross returns per acre.
	Tons.
California	10.37	$6.46	$66.99
Utah and Idaho	11.32	4.97	62.57
Colorado	10.64	5.96	63.41
Michigan	8.58	5.69	48.82
Wisconsin	10.02	[1]5.60	56.11
Other States	9.07	5.81	52.69

[1] Under new classification by Department of Agriculture this is the average price paid in Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, and Illinois.

"It will be seen, Mr. President, that in all these comparisons, whether it relates to the subject of the amount of wages paid or any other expenditure on the part of the beet growers themselves, California is paying higher prices than any other State in the Union. It shows also, in comparison as between this country and other countries, that the United States is paying more for labor and other expense than any other nation. It appears that in the State of California the best wages and the highest price for beets are paid, as compared with any other locality in the world.

"Then, coming down to the question of the cost of farm labor in the beet fields of the United States, there is this statement:

"Cost of farm labor in the beet fields of the United States and in Europe.

"The United States Department of Agriculture recently issued a bulletin on the cost of farm labor in 1912, in which it was stated—

"Mr. President, it should be observed that this relates to farm wages generally—

"wages now, compared with the average of wages during the eighties, are about 53 per cent higher; compared with the low year of 1894 wages now are about 65 per cent higher. The current average rate of farm wages in the United States, when board is included, is—by the month, $20.81; by the day, other than harvest, $1.14; at harvest, $1.54. When board is not included the rate is—by the month, $29.58; by the day, other than harvest, $1.47; by the day, at harvest, $1.87.

"That is the end of the quotation.

"An analysis of the labor figures as given in the March Crop Reporter of the department shows that the average wage of day laborers on the farms in the 16 sugar-beet States in 1912 was $2.45 at harvest time and $1.95 at other seasons of the year.

"So is will be seen that the average wage paid is far in excess of the amount paid in Colorado, according to the statement of the Senator from that State. Reading further from the pamphlet, it says:

"From 76 direct reports received from the various beet-growing sections, I found that the average daily wage in the beet fields was $2.21; the average daily earnings of pieceworkers, $3.25.

"A comparison of these wages with the wages paid in the beet fields of Europe is illuminating.

"The wage rate for agricultural laborers in Poland is 26.2 cents per day for men and 20.6 cents for women, while the German wage rate is the highest to be found in the three great European beet-sugar producing countries. Due to the introduction of sugar beets and the other root crops which followed and were introduced in the rotation, the acreage yield of cereal crops in Germany has been more than doubled, and instead of assisting emigration, because of inability to feed a population of 30,000,000 people, Germany to-day, with a population of 65,000,000 people, annually imports 800,000 seasonal workers to help till her fields and work in her shops.

"Sixty-seven per cent of these workers come from certain provinces of Russia and Austria, the other two great sugar-producing countries, attracted by the higher wage which prevails in the German Empire.

"Due to a semiofficial immigration bureau and to strict passport regulations which prevent an emigrant from living in any portion of the German Empire save the particular place for which he or she is booked, the wage is fixed and regulated to a nicety. Of late, certain districts of other countries which need workers have been bidding against Germany.

"Then follows a statement showing the amount of wages paid in European countries. In Germany it is 41.4 cents per day; Denmark, 45.2 cents; Prague, 41.1 cents; Vienna, 41.1 cents; Crakow, 42.1 cents; as to women, Germany, 36 cents; Denmark, 35.4 cents; Prague, 36.1 cents; Vienna, 36.9 cents; and Crakow, 38 cents.

"The statement is as follows:

"The director of the German labor bureau gives the following as the standard wage when all allowances have been converted into money:

"For men.

"Germany, 1 mark 74 pfennigs per day (41.4 cents U. S.).
"Denmark, 1 mark 90 pfennigs per day (45.2 cents U. S.).
"Prague, 1 mark 73 pfennigs per day (41.1 cents U. S.).
"Vienna, 1 mark 73 pfennigs per day (41.1 cents U. S.).
"Crakow, 1 mark 77 pfennigs per day (42.1 cents U. S.).

"For women.

"Germany, 1 mark 51 pfennigs per day (36 cents U. S.).
"Denmark, 1 mark 49 pfennigs per day (35.4 cents U. S.).
"Prague, 1 mark 52 pfennigs per day (36.1 cents U. S.).
"Vienna, 1 mark 55 pfennigs per day (36.9 cents U. S.).
"Crakow, 1 mark 60 pfennigs per day (38 cents U. S.).

"Mr. President, bearing upon this question of the employment of foreign labor, I have here a letter from a resident of Oxnard, Cal., which I should like to read. The writer says:

"OXNARD, VENTURA COUNTY, CAL., April 24, 1913.

"Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
"Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

"DEAR SIR: In speaking of the sugar-beet business a correspondent of the Los Angeles Tribune recently said: 'If the grower, as a rule, would employ American labor in the place of cheap Asiatic labor, he would no doubt receive more sympathy from the consuming public.'

"Under ordinary circumstances a misleading statement like this would pass unnoticed; but as the beet business is still in its infancy and yet is destined to play such an important part in our political and business affairs, we should all try to understand it aright. The fact of the matter is that the sugar beets make so much field work that there is scarcely sufficient 'American labor' to bring the crop up to that stage where the 'cheap Asiatic labor' is able to take hold of it. At this stage of the crop the call for labor is generally so urgent that the farmer never thinks of asking any questions as to nationality or color. All he thinks about is getting his beets thinned and hoed or topped, and he generally pays a first-class price, and if he gets even second-class work he esteems himself more than lucky. If a person wants to see 'cheap labor' they should never look in a beet field, because it's not there. These "cheap laborers," who top beets by the ton, sometimes make from $5 to $7 in a day.

"The sugar beet is really one of the most wonderful plants we possess. It makes more work, puts more money into circulation, and brings more land under intensive cultivation than anything else we grow. Suddenly eliminate this one crop from our fields and the wages of farm labor would immediately fall, and upon the heels of labor would fall the price of several of our farm products. And with stagnation in the country from whence would the cities draw their prosperity?

"A beet farmer produces one crop but is a very large consumer of several, among his heaviest items of expense being hay, grain, horses or mules, farm implements, and labor.

"I feel that it is not only the duty of the Government to protect the cultivation of the sugar beet, but that it would be showing the greatest wisdom by fostering and encouraging this industry by every means in its power.

"Respectfully, yours, JOHN EASTWOOD.

"There is left, however, the question as to whether the beet growers in California are making exorbitant profits out of their business. There is really no foundation for this statement, except the testimony of Mr. Spreckels, as relating to one beet factory alone, and his statement in that respect was pure hearsay. He simply said that his father had told him so, and there has been ample evidence produced at various times showing the falsity of his statement as compared with that one factory.

"I want to call the attention of the Senate to a part of the testimony that was given at the hearing of the Committee on Finance of the Senate by Mr. Howard, who is president of the Alameda Sugar Co., which I think will explain how this mistake, if it was a mistake, came about. He says:

"It may be well at this point to explain the much-advertised and phenomenal dividend of 100 per cent declared by the Union Sugar Co. in 1911.

"At the end of 1910 the issued share capital was $1,265,000, and during the previous 12 years of the company's existence there had accumulated an undivided surplus of $1,440,101.57, not in cash but represented by property and equipment.

"Of this amount, $607,678.65 was due partly to assessments paid upon the stock and partly to profit on the sales of land which had been leased with the privilege of purchase.

"Senator SMOOT. Pardon me. You say that seven hundred and some odd thousand dollars came from assessments?

"Mr. HOWARD. $607,000 was partly due to assessments and partly due to profits on the sales of land.

"Senator SMOOT. What assessments were they?

"Mr. BALLOU. Two and a half dollars a share, three times; seven and a half dollars a share were paid on those assessments.

"Senator SMOOT. The assessments were made for what purpose? To increase the capital stock or to provide for losses you had made?

"Mr. HOWARD. It was not for the purpose of issuing stock. The assessments were made to pay for losses and new equipment.

"Senator SMOOT. That is what I wanted to find out.

"Mr. HOWARD. The soil was found to be too light and sandy for sugar beets, but admirably adapted for beans, which crop for several successive years had commanded such high prices as to create a strong demand for suitable land. Availing ourselves of existing conditions, the company exercised its option, subdivided and resold the land, reinvested the proceeds in other localities, and credited the profits.

"The balance of the surplus, $832,422.42, was contributed during the 12-year period by the sugar business.

"To compensate the share owners for assessments, land and sugar profits, which had gone into property investments, a stock dividend equal to the outstanding share capital as of December 31, 1910, was declared and paid.

"But cash dividends had previously been paid totaling $895,780, or an average of nearly $75,000 per year, equal to nearly 6 per cent per annum on the outstanding capital on December 31, 1910.

"If, then, we take the $832,422.42 contributed by the sugar business to the undivided profits, and which was capitalized by this stock dividend, it will be found to average, during its 12 years of accumulation, $69,368.53 per year, which is equal to 5.5 per cent on the share capital on December 31, 1910.

"So that instead of the carefully misrepresented dividend of 100 per cent, we find an average dividend of the Union Sugar Co. resulting from its sugar business during the first 12 years of its existence of 6 per cent per annum in cash and 5½ per cent in stock.

"But, Mr. President, it is fair to say that the stock of the company was practically worthless, as is suggested in the testimony of Mr. Howard. It was found that the land in that section was not suitable to beet growing. They realized some of their so-called profits by selling the land to be devoted to other purposes, and this beet-sugar factory that is alleged to have made profits to the extent of 100 per cent has gone out of business because it could make no profits at all and the plant itself has been dismantled.

"These comparative statements of cost of production, including all the elements of cost, show that it would be utterly impossible for our beet-sugar growers or manufacturers to compete with the foreign producers. Maybe they could by reducing wages to 40 cents a day and other items of expense in proportion, but that our people would not and should not endure."

Mr. WORKS. Now, Mr. President, if the reduction of the tariff is going to reduce the price of sugar, some one, either the beet growers, the wage earner, or the owner of the plant, is going to lose the difference between the present price and the reduced price brought about by such reduction. In the first statement above the loss is imposed upon the manufacturer, and it is very clearly shown that if this bill becomes a law and the resulting loss accrues to the manufacturer his business will be conducted at a loss and the industry totally destroyed. But it does not follow that the manufacturer will allow himself to bear all or any of the loss. He may escape it by imposing it upon some one else, either by reducing the wages of his employees or by paying less for the beets he buys from the grower, or both. But, sir, the net result will be the same in the end. Wage earners can not be kept at wages less than they can obtain elsewhere. They should not work for less than reasonable wages in any event. If the beet grower can only make less than he can realize from his land by devoting it to other crops or other purposes, he will no longer raise sugar beets. If he still holds on but is, by reason of the reduction in the tariff, being deprived of fair compensation for his products, he is unjustly treated by law. Any proposed reduction in the tariff that would bring about such a result, affecting either the wage earners or the farmer, is pernicious in its character and wholly inexcusable. To me it is perfectly evident that with sugar on the free list the sugar-beet industry in my State will be absolutely destroyed.

It would result in a heavy and irretrievable loss not only to the people engaged in and directly affected by the business, not only to my State, but to the whole country. With sugar now selling 20 pounds for a dollar this change in the tariff will result in no material benefit to the consumer, but it will destroy a great and growing industry without corresponding or adequate benefits to any class of the people. Mr. President, I am not going to base my conclusions on this important subject upon the showing of the one company alone. I have procured other statements covering the experience of other companies showing the character and extent of their business, the amount of business done and profits realized. I do not desire to burden the Senate or encumber the RECORD with these statements. They correspond very closely with the figures I have already submitted. To me they prove conclusively that if the tariff has any influence on the selling price of the manufactured articles the business of making sugar in my State will be annihilated if this bill becomes a law.

Mr. President, I am greatly concerned for the farmers and laborers in California who are engaged in growing sugar beets. As I have said before, they will undoubtedly be the first and chief sufferers from such legislation as this. In the beginning of the industry they received $4 a ton for their beets. The price to them gradually increased from year to year until they are now receiving six and sometimes and in some places, I am told, as much as seven dollars a ton. They have prepared for this kind of farming and thousands of acres of land are being cultivated in sugar beets and hundreds of our people find employment in the beet-sugar fields. If the beet-sugar plants are closed even temporarily, as they most certainly will be, it would mean a great loss and a great injustice.

The advocates of free sugar, in the attempt to justify the destruction of this great industry in my State, make the singular claim that by the growing of beets the farmers of the State have largely increased the value of their lands. They seem to think that when the farmer has increased the value of his land by his own industry, thrift, and business sagacity the Government may justly despoil him of the increase in the value of his property thus legitimately brought about and at the same time deprive him of his means of living by taking away the tariff that has enabled him to make better use of his land, increase the value of the landed property of the country, add to the producing power of the Nation, and provide for himself and his family.

It is a peculiarly constituted mind that can see in this any justification or excuse for establishing free trade in sugar.

Mr. President, this whole matter of land values in California as compared with Eastern States is misunderstood. Land in my State costs more, because of peculiar conditions that prevail there that do not exist in the Eastern States. The climate is semitropic. Generally sugar beets can not be grown successfully without irrigation.

The same is true of citrus and other fruits. Millions of dollars of money have been expended in the State in acquiring water necessary for irrigation and systems for storing and distributing water for use on the lands. So the California farmer must expend more money, invest more capital, than an eastern farmer in order to acquire title to his land and make it productive. The amount paid for water rights and a distributing system is not only added to his investment but to the value of his land. Without the water there is no great difference between the market value of land in California and the Eastern States. He can grow the ordinary crops such as grain and the like without irrigation, but on account of the lack of rainfall in the summer season even these crops are uncertain and often fail.

The importance of irrigation should be appreciated by Members of this body when they think of the millions of dollars being expended by the National Government for irrigation works and the supply of water to western farms. And yet some Senators seem to think that the western farmer should be penalized and discriminated against because his land costs him more than that of the eastern farmer. Such a doctrine is not only unjust but it is absurd. The farmers of my State are asking for no favors on account of the increased cost of their land as compared with eastern farmers, but they protest against the use of this fact as an excuse for denying them their rights.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WORKS. I do.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator leaves the subject of sugar, I should like to inquire whether in the tables he is to print in the RECORD he has any statistics except from California factories?

Mr. WORKS. No; I have not, Mr. President, because as I said in the beginning I expected to confine my remarks to the industries of my own State. So I have not gone out of the State for other information.

Mr. NORRIS. Has the Senator included any statistics in regard to the production of sugar outside of California?

Mr. WORKS. I have not, for the same reason.

OLIVES AND OLIVE OIL.

I come next, Mr. President, to consider the effect of the proposed reduction of the tariff on olives and olive oil. It is proposed to reduce the rate on olives in bottles or other packages containing less than five gallons from 25 to 15 cents a gallon. The existing tariff on olives in bottles, and so forth, containing less than five gallons is 25 cents, otherwise 15 cents. The proposed rate is a straight one of 15 cents. Under the present law olive oil in bottles or other packages of a capacity of less than five gallons is taxed 50 cents a gallon and other oils 40 cents. The present bill proposes to reduce the rate on smaller packages to 30 cents and shipments in larger quantities to 20 cents per gallon. Of course, under the present bill it is an easy matter to ship the oil in large quantities and bottle it in packages of less than five gallons and thus escape the higher rate. To what extent this was done, if at all, I do not know. To put it in that way seems to be offering an unnecessary temptation to fraud and deceit. But the proposed law does not remove this opportunity to take advantage of the domestic producer in the way indicated so far as it affects imports in the smaller quantities. When it comes to sales within this country 90 per cent of them are made in the smaller packages that would subject them to the higher tariff. Therefore, the effect of the proposed change is to reduce the tariff on olive oil 20 cents on the gallon. Very forceful reasons why this should not be done were presented by parties interested in the olive industry before the Committee on Ways and Means of the House. This is what was said on the subject on that occasion, including certain tables submitted showing the condition of the trade, the competition that must be met, and the probable effect of reducing the tariff:

STATEMENT OF DR. L. J. HUFF, OF LOS ANGELES, CAL., ON THE SUBJECT OF OLIVE OIL.

Dr. HUFF. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I have been delegated by the olive growers, nurserymen, and olive-oil manufacturers of California to appear before you representing their interests in the matter of a proposed reduction in the tariff on olive oil of 20 cents per gallon. We request that this duty be allowed to remain, as it is for the best interests of those concerned; and we believe that after you have thoroughly examined our statement and investigated our conditions you will agree that to preserve that industry the duty must be left intact.

The proposed reduction of 20 cents a gallon, as far as we can see, will in no way reduce the cost of olive oil to the consumer, for this reason: Ninety per cent of the olive oil sold to the consumer in the United States is sold in bottles and small cans called sixes (6 to the gallon) and contain 20 ounces of oil each. The average selling price in the United States is 80 cents per can or bottle. A reduction of 20 cents per gallon would be 3⅓ cents per bottle. It is very obvious that the retailer would not sell at 75 cents and lose 1⅓ cents per bottle of his profit, which profit is small enough at the present time. Neither would he make a 76⅔ cents price.

We claim that the proposed reduction on an average annual import of 4,000,000 gallons, or $800,000, would go to the importer alone, and the Government would lose this revenue and not help the consumer, and work a very serious hardship on the olive-oil industry of California. Twenty cents a gallon reduction on 4,000,000 gallons would be a fine plum for the importer and absolutely no benefit for the consumer. The importer's argument has been that a 20-cent reduction would increase the sale and thereby increase the revenue. If you will follow the European markets, you will find that all of the olive oil being manufactured is readily sold, and that each year the supply is far below the demand, and especially so on the better grades of oil, which come in competition with the California products.

There was imported in the United States during the year ending June 30, 1912, 3,050,322.96 gallons of olive oil, valued at $4,335,294.25, on which a duty of $1,525,161.58 was paid, a value of $1.42 per gallon. This was in packages containing less than 5 gallons. There was also imported 1,709,923.67 gallons, valued at $1,729,491, on which a duty of $683,969.44 was paid, a value of $1.01 per gallon. This was in packages larger than 5 gallons. There was also 702,565 gallons of denaturized oil, on which no duty was paid.

In 1908 we were represented here before the Ways and Means Committee, and at that time we asked that the duty be retained on olives and olive oil, and it was. Note the result in four years: With the very small protection we have had we added 6,000 acres more olives, and of the 12,000 acres then growing and 50 per cent bearing—3,000 acres of these have come into bearing—we have planted 6,000 acres more, making at the present time a total acreage in the State of 18,000 acres, from which we are securing at the present time 8,000 tons for oil and 4,000 tons for pickles, a total of 12,000 tons. Four years ago the average net income was only $17 an acre. This year the average net income is $36.88 an acre—not a very large income, but still it shows what we can do with protection to this industry, and all of this would be lost if the duty on olive oil were removed. In 1908 the olive industry of California represented $4,500,000. To-day it represents over $7,500,000. There are in California to-day 375,000 acres available for olive trees, and, with proper protection, the time will come when we can nearly supply our own country with oil and olives.

The total cost of harvesting and delivering olives in Europe to the factories rarely exceeds $7 per ton, while our cost is seldom under $20 per ton.

The average cost of California olive oil in the tanks is $1.85 per gallon, and the average selling price is $2 per gallon, giving the manufacturer a profit of 15 cents a gallon.

We use only the best sanitary mechanical methods for extracting oil, while in Europe a large percentage of the oil is extracted in the most crude and filthy manner imaginable, a large portion of it being done by the orchardist himself, and in many instances with only the use of the feet and hands.

Labor is a matter which enters largely into the California product. The entire labor cost pertaining to all the olive industry in Europe, including field laborers, manufacturing laborers, office help, etc., is $1.04 per day. In California, including the same help as mentioned above, it is $2.47 per day.

Heretofore the by-products have been more or less wasted. Now we have started to extract from the pomace the foots oil. This oil is what is termed mechanical oil, used to a large extent by soap factories and silk manufacturers, and its extraction heretofore has been done only in foreign countries.

Another serious handicap that we have is the matter of freight. Olive oil can be laid down in New York or Chicago from Europe for 7½ cents a gallon. It costs us 15 cents a gallon to deliver it to any point from Denver east, and 18 cents to 20 cents a gallon to deliver it from California to what is known as the Northwest; that is, through Montana and Idaho.

I have a detailed schedule here, which I will ask to have made a part of my statement.

The schedule referred to by Dr. Huff is as follows:

"Average land value per acre, 9,000 acres of bearing olive trees, all varieties, $250. Low value here caused by mountain and low land with orchards not cultivated or properly taken care of.

"Average land value per acre, 9,000 acres growing but not bearing, $325. Higher value of land caused by quality of soil, higher state of cultivation with water facilities.

"Average yield of olives per acre in California, 1½ tons. Low average yield is brought about by approximately 3,000 acres bearing, but not yet under full state of cultivation.

"Average price received by grower for three years, 1909–1912, 9,000 acres, oil olives on trees, $22 per ton.

"Average cost irrigation, cultivation, fertilization, and pruning, 18,000 acres bearing and not bearing, $8.50 per acre. Low average caused by large amount of early planted acreage not being cultivated or irrigated.

"Net average receipts to grower per ton for oil olives, $13.50.

"Average price received by grower, 1909 to 1912, for pickling olives on trees, $62 per ton. Forty per cent of all olives produced in State are pickling olives, balance oil olives.

"Net average receipts by grower for pickling olives, $53.50 per ton.

"Net average receipts by grower for both oil and pickles per acre, $36.88.

"Average cost of picking, 9,000 acres, $17.50 per ton.

"Average cost shipping expense per ton, $3.50.

"Net amount paid to grower for approximately 12,000 tons produced in 1911, $442,560. Of this tonnage, 4,000 tons were pickles representing 1,200,000 gallons and 8,000 tons of oil olives representing 280,000 gallons of oil.

"Average cost of manufacturing olive oil for past three seasons, including cost of fruit, manufacturing (not including selling expense or other expense pertaining thereto), $1.85 per gallon. Based on annual output of five largest factories, 90,000 gallons per year.

"Average cost of curing and canning ripe olives, including cost of fruit (not including selling expense or other expense pertaining thereto), $0.617 per gallon. Based on annual output of five largest factories, 409,998 gallons.

"Average paid for labor field work, including farm help and olive pickers, $2.17 per day.

"Average paid for manufacturing, including packing, shipping, selling, operating, and office help, $2.76 per day.

"Average paid for European labor, including field labor where any paid, manufacturing plants, and shipping stations, $1.04 per day. Covers Italy, France, and Spain, approximately 400 orchards and 20 mills. Average labor in Greece is 84 cents per day."

Average cost of manufacturing California olive oil for past 3 seasons (1909, 1910, and 1911).

[Five factories.]

	Cost of oil fruit delivered to factory, per ton.	Average yield of oil per ton, gallons.	Average cost of fruit per gallon of oil pressed.	Manufacturing, expense, labor, material, etc.	Taxes.	Repairs.
Season 1909	$46.16	34.4	$1.342	$0.3858	$0.0091	$0.02
Season 1910	45.57	37.0	1.231	.256	.014	.05
Season 1911	45.00	34.0	1.323	.269	.009	.048
Total	136.73	105.4	3.896	.9108	.0321	.118
Average for last 3 seasons	45.58	35.13	1.299	.3036	.0107	.0393

	Interest.	Insurances.	General expenses.	Other miscellaneous expenses.	Total cost, per gallon, bulk oil in tanks.	Gallons manufactured.
Season 1909	$0.0558	$0.0248	$0.0760	$0.011	$1.9245	75,000
Season 1910	.061	.039	.185	.012	1.848	85,000
Season 1911	.04	.015	.07	.005	1.779	110,000
Total	.1568	.0788	.3310	.028	5.5513	270,000
Average for last 3 seasons	.0523	.0263	.1103	.0093	1.8505	90,000

Average cost of pickling and canning California ripe olives for past 3 seasons (1909, 1910, and 1911).

[Per quart case of 2 dozen.]

	Cost of fruit delivered at factory.	Manufacturing expense, labor, material, etc.	Taxes.	Repairs.	Interest.	Insurance.
Season 1909	$1.570	$1.312	$0.0224	$0.0493	$0.137	$0.0012
Season 1910	1.586	1.494	.041	.084	.171	.109
Season 1911	2.059	1.242	.022	.044	.098	.037
Total	5.215	4.048	.0884	.1773	.406	.2072
Average per year for last 3 seasons (24 quart cans)	1.738	1.349	.0295	.0591	.135	.0691
Per gallon (4)	.280	.225	.0047	.0098	.0225	.0115

	General expenses.	Other miscellaneous expenses.	Total cost per case.	Cases packed.	Total pack, 5 factories (cases).
Season 1909	$0.187	$0.0271	$3.306	36,129	75,000
Season 1910	.311	.0159	3.955	21,578	59,000
Season 1911	.171	.115	3.788	41,701	80,000
Total	.669	.1580	11.109	99,408	215,000
Average per year for last three seasons (24 qt. cans)	.223	.053	3.703	33,136	68,333
Per gallon (4)	.067	.009	.617	[1]198,816	[1]409,998

[1] In gallons.

After those interested in the reduction of the tariff had been heard a further statement was made in behalf of the olive growers, as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE COMMITTEE AND COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS.

GENTLEMEN: Several statements were made by individuals representing eastern importers who appeared before the Ways and Means Committee in January, 1913, and who were in favor of reduction in tariff on olive oil. On page 218 of Tariff Schedule No. 2, published January 7, 1913, Mr. Zucca stated as follows:

"In my opinion there is but one way to restrict the selling of compound oil, which is actually an adulterated food product, and that is by reducing the tariff on pure olive oil to a rate that will not yield any profit by selling a compound oil."

In answer to this I wish to state that under the laws of the United States it is illegal to sell a compound or an adulterated oil as olive oil unless so marked, and it must be marked "salad" or what it really is, "cottonseed oil." Pure cottonseed oil is not adulterated, or a compound oil, and can not in any way be compared with olive oil. Cottonseed oil to-day is worth 52½ cents a gallon and sells to the consumer at 75 cents to $1 per gallon, while the average cost of olive oil to the consumer to-day is $2.50 per gallon. Wherein would a reduction of 20 cents a gallon, as asked for, bear out Mr. Zucca's statement that it would stop the selling of this compound or cottonseed oil?

On page 219, paragraph 2, Mr. Zucca says:

"The consumption of olive oil in the United States is 10,000,000 gallons. Four and a half million gallons come from Italy, France, Spain, and Greece—800,000 gallons from California. The other 5,000,000 gallons which are sold are only compound oil. It is not bad oil. It is cottonseed oil."

In answer to this I wish to state that statistics show that there were imported into the United States last year four and a half million gallons of olive oil on which duty was paid. There were sold in the United States 6,000,000 gallons of cottonseed oil. This cottonseed oil was not sold as olive oil, but was branded "cooking oil," "salad oil," or "shortening," and it in no way comes into the controversy in question. Cottonseed oil is used largely in the manufacture of oleomargarine, cooking compounds, and cheap salad oil, which goes to the poorer classes of people, who, if the duty on olive oil was reduced 20 cents a gallon, would not change from that cheap oil to olive oil, because they are buying this to-day, as stated above, at 75 cents to $1 a gallon, while the lowest grade of olive oil coming onto the market to-day is $1.65 a gallon plus the brokers' and the retailer's profit, which would bring the approximate price of this low grade of olive oil to $2 a gallon. If the entire duty of 40 cents a gallon was removed and the consumer were to get all the advantage of this reduction it would mean $1.60 a gallon for olive oil as against 75 cents to $1 which the poorer classes are now paying for what is termed salad oil or cottonseed oil. It does not stand to reason that a reduction of 20 cents a gallon, or even 40 cents, is in any way going to benefit the class of people who use this 6,000,000 gallons of cottonseed oil. It is not fair to the olive industry of California to take cottonseed oil into consideration.

Mr. Zucca states that if you reduce the duty one-half, from 40 cents to 20 cents, they will have to drop this business in compound oil or they will fail. If this is the case, then this is the strongest argument we have in favor of home industry. If a reduction of 20 cents a gallon on olive oil is going to drive the entire cottonseed-oil industry out of the United States or, as Mr. Zucca says, make them all fail, then we had better raise the duty on olive oil to protect cottonseed oil, regardless of the California olive-oil industry. I will ask you, gentlemen, would this compound oil be affected in any way by a 20-cent cut? Compound or cottonseed oil, which he refers to and which is sold for 75 cents to $1 per gallon as compared to the lowest price of olive oil at $2 a gallon, would the poorer class of people, whom they seem to want to benefit, be benefited by this cut? Would they pay 75 cents a gallon more for olive oil than they are paying for cottonseed oil because the price of olive oil had been reduced from $2 to $1.75 by a cut in the tariff? We think not. On page 219 Mr. HARRISON, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, says: "I want to ask you a question: Is it not true that among the people of Mediterranean birth, who live in the big cities of the East, olive oil is a common substitute for butter?" Mr Zucca replied, "Yes; and it is known as Italian butter among these people." Mr. HARRISON did not ask Mr. Zucca what class of oil the poorer class of people of Mediterranean birth used.

There are three grades of olive oil made in Europe—one, two, and three pressing. No. 3 pressing never leaves that country. It is the same to the poorer people of Europe as cottonseed oil is to the masses of the United States. And there is not enough of this low-grade oil in Italy, France, Greece, and Spain for their own home consumption. Spain alone consumes 6,000,000 gallons. This oil which they use there costs 40 cents to 50 cents a gallon, and then to supply their own wants they have been compelled to import cottonseed oil on account of the lack of supply of this low-grade olive oil. The first pressing and second pressing are those that are exported and which are worth in Europe from $1 to $2.65 a gallon f. o. b. Europe.

Mr. Needham asked this question:

"Do you think that if olive oil were put on the free list it would reduce the price to the consumer?"

Mr. F. S. Bright, on behalf of the Pompeian Co., of Washington, D. C., said in answer to this question: "I do not really know whether it would for a very long time."

"Mr. NEEDHAM. Do you think it would reduce it for the present for the moment?

"Mr. BRIGHT. I think probably it would.

"Mr. NEEDHAM. How much of the duty is added to the price which you add to the price?

"Mr. BRIGHT. I can not answer that question. The supply varies so that it is hard to tell. We keep our price fixed. We distribute it at wholesale. The increased demand is such that individuals to whom we distribute have been erasing the price that is printed on the package and charging a higher price for it.

"Mr. HILL. How do you do that—keep your price at a fixed price with a varying supply?

"Mr. BRIGHT. The company has done it up to this time.

"Mr. HILL. You must make the price high in the beginning, to cover all the short supply, and then keep it up when the supply is greater."

Kindly notice Mr. Bright's answer: "The time will come when the price will have to be changed, if conditions are not changed in the production of olive oil on the other side. If we had several years of bad season in the olive-growing countries, the price of olive oil—our price—would have to be put up. But we have been able to maintain it largely because of the great quantities that we handle. We made a great deal of money, to begin with. We did not make so much per gallon, because the price has risen not quite 8 per cent in the past five years."

The above statement shows that there is no increased production in olive oil, and statistics prove that there has been only a slight increased production in European countries in the last year. More olive oil has been imported into the United States during this time because the American people will pay a higher price, and have paid a higher price, than the European countries were able to get in other directions, where they heretofore shipped their oil. Statistics also show that a great deal of this low-grade olive oil that has never left the country has been fused with the first and second grade, and that a greater importation of cottonseed oil from America has gone into the European country to supply the wants of the poorer class, who demand either an olive oil or a substitute therefor.

In the face of this, how can these gentlemen argue that there will be an increased use of olive oil under a decreased tariff, when, according to their own statements and statements made by gentlemen who have been abroad, the production of olive oil is naturally decreasing? And how can they make a statement that a reduction of tariff will decrease the cost of this olive oil to the poorer classes of people, when, by their own statements, they show that the present price within a very short time must be advanced?

Mr. Bright says that out of 4,400,000 gallons of oil that they imported 500,000 gallons, and yet he further says that they are selling at a fixed price, regardless of conditions of the European market, whether it be a large supply or a small supply, and that they invariably keep their price at a fixed list, and, from his knowledge of conditions, they will have to raise the price. In the face of this gentleman's statement, should the duty be taken off of olive oil, or, as he asks, a reduction of half? Has he not virtually acknowledged that they expect to put in their pockets the reduction of 20 cents a gallon if such reduction is allowed on 500,000 gallons, or $100,000, when he says, from his knowledge of conditions, they will have to raise the price?

If you will read carefully the proceedings before the Ways and Means Committee, you will find that the actual reduction, if it went to the consumer, would be 3½ cents on every 90-cent bottle of pure olive oil. In other words, if this product sold to the retail trade at 90 cents a bottle, it would then sell for 86⅝ cents per bottle. With a reduction of 3½ cents on a 90-cent investment, are the conditions such that the poorer class, who are using cottonseed oil, at 25 cents for the same size bottle, will make the change from this cheap product to an article that is going to cost them 86⅝ cents, because the duty has been reduced by the tariff 3½ cents? Or, in other words, are they going to substitute olive oil for cottonseed oil, when cottonseed oil is costing them $1 a gallon, and under the proposed reduction on olive oil it will be reduced from $2 to $1.80, taking into consideration that they are going to take advantage of the cheaper oil?

The average market prices to-day on olive oil imported into this country on quotations from New York brokers by various purchasers on the Pacific coast range from $1.85 to $2.50 f. o. b. New York, duty paid. The lowest quotation that I was able to find in New York City or Chicago was a consignment of Greek oil consisting of 3,000 gallons, which oil was slightly off and was offered at $1.55 f. o. b. New York. Taking this as a basis, would the poorer class of people change from an article that was costing them $1 to one that they could buy for $1.55, provided their entire wants could be supplied? I think not.

The natural cheap oil food for the European countries is peanut oil, cottonseed oil, and the low-grade olive oil, with the consumption fast increasing in favor of cottonseed oil. The natural cheap oil food for America is cottonseed oil, which is absolutely pure and is an edible vegetable oil.

In all fair reasoning it looks as though this was simply a case of paying the importer 20 cents, or whatever reduction in this tariff that may be made, on every gallon of oil imported; and the same line of reasoning may be carried out on olives. It absolutely, according to their own statement, can not benefit in any way the consumer. They say themselves that the consumption is increasing in America of pure olive oil and that the European market is decreasing, in consequence of which a reduction would not, according to their statements, increase the quantity. Thereby the Government would be losing in revenue and a great harm would be done an industry in California which bids fair, with proper protection, to be one of the greatest in the country.

There are in California to-day 18,000 acres of olive trees. There are 250,000 acres suitable for olive culture—cheap land which is not suitable for oranges or lemons. There is at the present time invested in California over $7,000,000 in the olive business. These are facts and, I trust, worthy of your consideration.

Yours, very truly,

W. O. JOHNSON,
Chairman of the Olive Protective League of California.

MARCH 1, 1913.

Mr. President, these statements and the figures presented to the committee show in this case, just as they do in every case where our agricultural products come in conflict with foreign growers, that the domestic industry is bound to be driven to the wall unless it is protected to the extent of meeting the difference in cost of producing the given product and carrying it to market here and abroad. This puts the domestic on an equality with the foreign producer and brings about real and fair competition. Nothing less than this will preserve our own industries. Without it our domestic industries must inevitably be destroyed if the tariff is of any use at all other than to raise revenue. If the effect of the reduction of the tariff is to reduce the price of the commodity, and the price is so reduced that our own people can not produce and market it at a profit, then we not only destroy our own industries, but we place ourselves at the mercy of foreign importers over whom we have no control.

The showing made as to this particular commodity is in part that the cost of harvesting and delivering olives in Europe is $7 a ton and $20, or nearly three times as much, in this country. In Europe the wage is $1.04 a day and in this country $2.47, or considerably over twice as much. The freight from Europe to the New York market is 7½ cents a gallon and from California 15 cents to any point from Denver east, and to markets in the Northwest 18 to 20 cents a gallon, being twice as much as the foreign importer pays. It is further shown that the profit on olive oil per gallon is only 26 cents at prevailing prices. It must be evident that with a reduction of the tariff to 30 cents a gallon, with such disadvantages on the part of the domestic producer in cost of production and marketing, he would be placed at the mercy of the foreign importer and driven out of business. Again, I say it resolves itself into the question whether it is wise or just to destroy or limit the progress and advancement of our agricultural industries with the hope of serving the common good. If it is, then we should take the independent and manly course and declare for free trade.

ENGLISH WALNUTS.

Mr. President, this bill does not spare the walnut industry in my State. It reduces the tariff on walnuts not shelled from 3 to 2 cents a pound and on shelled walnuts from 5 to 4 cents. This is simply a part of the general scheme to reduce tariff rates all along the line without regard, as I think, to the justice of it in the specific case or the harm that is bound to be done the particular industry affected, as compared to the benefits to accrue as a result to the general public. Walnut growing in California is confined mainly to the four counties of Los Angeles, Orange, Santa Barbara, and Ventura, all in the southern part of the State.

Orange County reports 160,450 bearing trees and 92,725 nonbearing trees; acreage, 6,412 bearing and 3,709 nonbearing. Ventura County reports 168,416 bearing trees and 14,934 nonbearing trees; acreage, 6,736 bearing and 597 nonbearing. Santa Barbara reports 35,800 bearing and 22,600 nonbearing trees, and its acreage is 1,432 bearing and 904 nonbearing. The total acreage planted is 35,460. This is the table:

	Trees.		Acres.
	Bearing.	Nonbearing.	Bearing.	Nonbearing.
Los Angeles	310,500	81,112	12,420	3,244
Orange	160,450	92,725	6,418	3,709
Ventura	168,416	14,934	6,736	597
Santa Barbara	35,800	22,600	1,432	904

The raising of the English walnut has also, as I understand, been taken up in Oregon and has there assumed considerable proportions, and this nut may be grown successfully in the Southern States, as experiments in Texas have proven. It is believed that there are not less than 5,000 additional acres of land in California now under irrigation adapted to the growing of walnuts. As showing the growth of the industry in my State and the effect of tariff legislation upon it, I quote from a brief of the walnut growers filed with the Ways and Means Committee of the House in defense of the present tariff. Speaking of the experiments made with different varieties of the walnuts and the advancement and growth of the industry, it is said:

To better illustrate these changes we will take into consideration the crops of certain years within these decades. The crop of 1885 was 625 tons, all hard-shell or mission variety; the crop of 1892 was 1,250 tons, one half being hard shell, the other half being soft shell; the crop of 1903 was 6,340 tons, one-fifth hard shell and four-fifths soft shell; the crop of 1910, 10,000 tons, practically no hard shell, about 100 tons of budded nuts, the remainder soft shell.

The 8,500 acres of nonbearing orchards are largely of a budded variety.

These changes and advancements are costly in energy, time, and expense, and further commercial development of the industry and the maintenance of the present importance are to a large degree dependent upon the retention of the present tariff rate.

The tariff rate upon walnuts dates from August 5, 1861, when a rate of 2 cents per pound was placed upon this commodity. This rate continued for nearly three years, when it was increased to 3 cents per pound, at which figure it continued, with the exception of from August 27, 1894, to July 24, 1897, during which time it was at 2 cents per pound. On July 24, 1897, the rate was made at 3 cents per pound upon unshelled walnuts and 5 cents per pound upon shelled walnuts. Without question this protection has been one of the principal reasons for the development of the industry, and has also been one of considerable revenue to the Government. This is shown by the following table of the duties paid into the United States Treasury for the past five years:

	Duty.
	Unshelled.	Shelled.	Total.
1906	$691,099.37	$359,999.39	$1,051,098.76
1907	642,835.58	354,947.92	997,783.50
1908	522,945.88	439,095.43	962,041.31
1909	668,099.23	548,049.40	1,216,148.63
1910	634,383.50	502,202.73	1,136,586.23

Three countries of South America, namely, Argentine Republic, Brazil, and Uruguay, have a tariff upon walnuts running from 1½ cents per pound to 2½ cents per pound. Several countries of Europe have a tariff rate upon walnuts running from one-sixth of a cent in France to 2½ cents per pound in Belgium. England, with a free entry, takes fully one-half of the entire exports from France.

The total production of the season of 1910 in California was 19,659,939 pounds. The number of bearing trees, from the report to the State board by county assessors, was 675,166. Dividing the output in pounds by the number of trees gives an average production per tree of 29+ pounds. For convenience we will use 30 pounds. Allowing 27 trees to an acre, each acre on this average produced 810 pounds—30 pounds by 27 equal 810.

The average price for the last 10 years f. o. b. California for walnuts has been $12.55 per hundredweight, or 12.55 cents per pound. From this price must be taken 7½ per cent paid the brokers for selling and cash discount—$12.55 by 7½ per cent equal $0.94; $12.55 minus $0.94 equal $11.61. Thus 810 pounds, or 8.1 hundredweight, will bring to the grower $94.04—$11.61 by 8.1 hundredweight equal $94.04.

	Cents.
1902	10
1903	12.5
1904	11
1905	13
1906	11
1907	15
1908	12.5
1909	11.5
1910	15
1911	14
Total	125.5

Average price for 10 years, 12.55 cents.

The following estimate of cost of production is given:

Total returns			$94.04
Cultivation	per acre	$20.00
Water and irrigation	do	7.50
Pruning	do	1.00
Fertilizer	do	2.00
Harvesting and marketing at 1½ cents (810 pounds)		12.15
Taxes on lands, trees, and improvements, $500 at 2 per cent rate		10.00
Total expense			52.65
Average return per acre			41.39

Investment being $750 and returns $41.39, the rate upon investment equals $41.39 divided by $750 equals $0.055, or 5.5 per cent.

As to the number employed in the industry and the class of people benefited by it, the brief has this to say:

There has been shown to be in southern California an approximation of 35,500 acres of land devoted to this industry. A very safe average to the individual grower is 15 acres, from which average we find that 1,800 individual farmers are sustained by walnut growing, and that 550 additional are striving in expectation of returns from this industry, making a total of 2,300 individual growers. These orchards very largely are homes for the grower and his family. We can feel safe in stating that at least 2,000 families are dependent upon this industry for a livelihood. With five persons to a family as an average, it can be seen that fully 10,000 people are deeply related to the success of this industry. In addition to this there is taken from the gross returns large sums of money that are diverted into other branches of industry and trade. Due to the exigencies of harvest each farmer must employ numerous persons to gather the crop during the months of October and November; this cost for outside labor is estimated at not less than 1 cent per pound. Upon an output of 10,000 tons the sum of $200,000 was paid in 1911 to outside labor, thus giving employment to 2,500 people at $2 per day for the average harvest season of 40 days. Also the railroad charges upon this crop at the freight rate of $1.40 per hundredweight to Mississippi River points amount to $280,000. In addition to this, there is a selling commission of 7½ per cent paid for distribution, amounting upon this tonnage to more than $200,000. We find, therefore, that 10,000 individuals are afforded a living on the land alone and that $680,000 is paid out into other lines of industry as expense from a bearing acreage of 27,000 acres in one section of California. If all lines of farm produce could be made to provide per acre for as much employment and distribution of wages throughout the United States the per capita of returns from farm labor would be greatly increased.

The following tables, coming from the same source, show the foreign imports of walnuts:

Imports of walnuts into the United States.

Country of origin.	Years ending June 30—
	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907
	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.
Austria-Hungary	286,700	113,805		25,645	611,251
Belgium	15,965	191,191	33,248		42,720
Denmark			100
France	8,019,963	17,123,683	17,804,368	23,870,484	28,736,008
Germany	316,619	87,849	25,403	52,923	28,760
Greece	11,794	46,664	16,806	1,805	19,457
Italy	1,828,182	3,084,689	1,725,824	3,172,781	1,927,226
Netherlands		2,738		3,855
Portugal		33		1,188	26,660
Russia in Europe		1,445	1,100	539	9,280
Spain	158,361	335,222	201,715	109,657	59,874
Turkey in Europe		27,231	21,835	4,584	84,070
United Kingdom	114,554	245,891	40,024	218,281	257,351
Canada	15,684	835	5,850	4,115	130
Newfoundland
Mexico		477	60,256	4	100
West Indies—Cuba			3,500
Chile	1,514,665	1,938,322	1,557,052	192,166	387,667
Chinese Empire		8,473
Hongkong	13,390	20,000			13
Japan	7,300	6,320	16,764	2,877	1,566
Russia, Asiatic			1,797
Turkey in Asia	59,530	416,563	78,647	256,115	429,560
Oceania, British			112
Egypt		9,985
Tripoli			323	225
Total	12,362,567	23,670,761	21,684,104	24,917,028	32,597,592

Imports of walnuts into the United States—Continued.

	June to June, inclusive.
	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910
	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.
Austria-Hungary	.....	25,645	411,210	276,428	145,811	341,418
Belgium	33,248	.....	42,759	23,188	.....	.....
France	17,894,368	20,870,484	28,726,008	22,394,308	19,726,916	25,879,294
Germany	25,400	52,223	26,580	56,587	43,609	.....
Greece	16,000	1,805	19,857	.....	62,526	17,687
Italy	1,725,824	3,172,581	1,927,226	3,734,661	3,747,672	5,899,862
Russia in Europe	1,100	.....	9,261	96,498	54,639	29,535
Spain	201,715	109,057	59,674	119,851	157,124	33,955
Turkey in Europe	21,835	4,884	84,033	16,585	7,834	39,779
England	40,024	218,281	235,316	304,234	137,447	270,783
Canada	5,850	4,118	.....	3,471	.....	.....
Mexico	60,236	.....	.....	.....	8,266	.....
Chile	1,557,652	192,166	587,663	1,432,768	1,615,598	1,360
Japan	16,764	3,877	1,563	4,743	4,310	12,461
China	.....	.....	.....	2,100	6,672	166,010
Turkey in Asia	78,047	256,115	429,560	366,092	447,446	948,008
Total (other small places included)	21,684,100	24,917,028	32,597,592	28,887,110	26,157,703	33,641,466

	Pounds.
First nine months—
1909	11,561,670
1910	12,094,005
1911	14,829,925

From the above tables the following results of computations are made:

	Imported.	France.	Italy.	Chili.	Other countries.
Crop of—	Tons.	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
1903	6,181	65	15	12	8
1904	11,835	72	13	8	7
1905	10,842	79	8	7	6
1906	12,453	83	13	.....	0
1907	16,298	88	6	2	4
1908	14,443	77	13	5	5
1909	13,178	76	14	6	4
1910	16,820	76	17	.....	7
Average	.....	78	12.3	.....	.....

It can be readily seen that the countries importing walnuts into the United States to the largest extent are France and Italy.

The following table shows the amounts of nuts imported from all countries for the years 1906 and 1910, inclusive, showing tonnage of unshelled nuts and tonnage of shelled nuts, with the average invoice prices at foreign ports of shipment. It also includes the duty paid to the United States Treasury Department.

(Taken from the Yearly Reports of Commerce and Navigation of the United States, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, Tables 15 and 16, 1911.)

	Tons.	Value.	Average price, invoice.	Duty.	Corresponding ad valorem duty.
1906 (reported June 30, 1907):					Per cent.
Unshelled	11,518+	$1,409,422.91	$0.065	$691,099.37	46.37+
Shelled	3,599+	1,163,409.00	.162	359,999.39	30.94+
Total	.....	2,572,831.91	.....	1,051,098.76	.....
1907 (reported June 30, 1908):
Unshelled	10,719	1,530,649.66	.071	642,835.58	41.99
Shelled	3,539	1,180,765.30	.166	354,947.92	30.06
Total	.....	2,711,414.96	.....	997,783.50	.....
1908 (reported June 30, 1909):
Unshelled	8,716+	1,083,792.21	.062	522,945.88	48.25
Shelled	4,392+	1,322,560.00	.151	439,905.43	33.2
Total	.....	2,406,352.21	.....	962,041.31	.....
1909 (reported June 30, 1910):
Unshelled	11,639+	1,545,197.34	.066	665,099.23	43.24
Shelled	5,481+	1,851,408.75	.169	548,049.40	29.6
Total	.....	3,396,606.09	.....	1,21648.63	.....
1910 (reported June 30, 1911):
Unshelled	10,573+	1,680,301.35	.079	634,383.50	37.75
Shelled	5,622+	2,555,465.00	.227	562,202.73	22
Total	.....	4,235,766.85	.....	1,196,586.73	.....

These facts show, Mr. President, that foreign competition in walnuts is sharp and aggressive. The same elements of difference in wages, freight, and other items, making up the cost of production and carrying to market, exist here as in the case of lemons and other California products. So, in this case, as in the others, it is the very simple question of destroying a home industry and giving ourselves over to the foreign producers. If it is believed that such a course will most benefit this country in the end, and that belief is justified, then this legislation may be defended. It is the question of sacrificing the few for the benefit of the many. Undoubtedly that is justifiable if the many are certainly going to be benefited in a degree sufficient to warrant the sacrifice of this important and growing industry, make the large sums of money invested in walnut growing a useless waste, and turn thousands of people out of employment.

But does anybody believe that this reduction in the tariff on walnuts, that will take away the profits of the growers in my State, deprive them of their means of subsistence and all incentive to extend the industry, thus adding to the prosperity of the country, will be compensated by benefits to others that can justify this crying injustice to the domestic walnut growers?

Mr. President, I do not believe it. I do not believe anybody else will believe it when they consider conscientiously and dispassionately the cold and unalterable facts.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. WORKS. I do.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Before the Senator passes from his discussion of the duty on walnuts, can he tell us at what age the trees become bearing?

Mr. WORKS. No; I am not able to state exactly, but I think it is later than in the case of the lemon or the orange. They are trees of slow growth.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It is a matter of several years?

Mr. WORKS. Yes.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. And in the meantime the man who engages in the business must carry his initial investment without any return whatever upon it?

Mr. WORKS. Yes; certainly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator called attention to the number of acres that are in bearing trees, and the number of acres of nonbearing trees. I presume all of the nonbearing trees in the course of a few years will become bearing?

Mr. WORKS. They will not bear until several years have elapsed. Of course, meantime that is purely idle capital that is making nothing.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I have taken up only a few of the industries of my State that will be affected by the proposed changes in the tariff. I could not in justice to Senators consume their time or delay final action on the bill by taking up all of them in detail.

The framers of this bill have allowed none of the important industries of my State to escape. Almonds not shelled are reduced from 4 to 3 cents, olives under existing law are taxed 25 cents per gallon in bottles containing less than 5 gallons, and 15 cents in larger quantities. This bill imposes a tariff of 15 cents straight, thus allowing the higher qualities of this product shipped in bottles to come in for the same duty as the lower shipped in bulk. Olive oil, "not specially provided for," is reduced from 40 to 20 cents per gallon, and in bottles of capacity of less than 5 gallons from 50 to 30 cents per gallon; pineapples in bulk are reduced from $8 to $5 per 1,000; prunes from 2 cents to 1 cent a pound; raisins from 2½ to 2 cents a pound; walnuts, not shelled, from 3 cents to 2 cents, and shelled from 5 cents to 4 cents a pound; lemons from 1½ cents to 0.38 cent a pound; oranges, olives, and grapefruit from 1 to ½ cent a pound; tungsten-bearing ores, raw wool and wool wastes, and leather band, bend or belting, rough leather, and sole leather, and so forth, are placed on the free list.

Mr. President, every one of these are California products and enterprises. If this wholesale reduction of tariffs on these important products of the State are carried through, with the disaster that is bound to follow to some of the most important of them, the people of California must ever hold the Democratic Party in grateful remembrance. Doubtless some of them will turn the other cheek, but most of them who can distinguish between right and wrong and are not blinded by submissive and unquestioning partisanship will resent this unjust encroachment on their existing condition of prosperity and contentment in a way that can not be misunderstood.

EXECUTIVE CONTROL OF LEGISLATION.

Mr. President, there is another phase of the question that, to my mind, is more serious and threatening than the enactment of an ill-advised and injurious tariff law. It is the influence of the executive branch of the Government and the secret caucus on the framing and enactment of the laws of the country. I have had reason to express my views upon this question on another occasion and under another administration. I had hoped that there would be no occasion to refer to it again. My disposition to condemn such influence as affecting the conduct of public affairs is not founded upon any jealousy, as a Member of this body, of the encroachments of the executive upon the legislative branch of the Government. That is a matter of small moment, as it affects the individual Members of this body. It goes far deeper than that. It affects the integrity of any law Congress may enact and may be the stepping-stone to a conflict between these two important departments of the Government and some time imperil the free institutions of the Republic.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that if it were not for the influence of the executive branch of the Government, directed at the lawmaking power, and the coercive effect of the secret political caucus, the passage of this bill through either branch of Congress would have been possible. I take it for granted it will pass this body substantially as it was framed in advance. This, if newspaper accounts are to be credited, was done by a committee of Democrats and a Democratic President, or with the mutual agreement or concurrence of the two. It has been asserted and has been very generally believed that the President insisted that certain provisions should go into the bill and that other of its provisions are a compromise of views as between the President and Democratic members of the committee and the Democratic caucus. So, in any comments I may make on this phase of the question I will assume that the President of the United States aided in framing the bill and is using his powerful influence to have it passed in the form approved by him and known to have his approval. Added to this comes the political caucus that adopts the bill in the form desired by the President. The bill, as thus indorsed, is not satisfactory to many even of the dominant party. Its adoption and support by the majority party is the result of presidential and caucus influence combined. The President lets it be known that he desires the passage of the bill. The party leaders, in caucus, insist that this is an administration measure and that Democrats must stand by the administration and this secures its adoption in caucus. That is one step. Then, when the bill comes up for consideration it is insisted that it was agreed upon in caucus and is a party measure and Democrats must stand by the party. And they do. It is not a matter of individual conscience, reason, or judgment. A man under oath must forego his own conscientious convictions and judgment and vote with his party or come into disfavor and be branded as an apostate and betrayer of his party. The President commits himself beyond recall to a bill not yet introduced and without having heard the presentation of their views by the legislative representatives of the States where vital interests and important industries are to be affected by it.

Thus we have a bill agreed upon and marked for final passage upon consideration only by a few men of one party, concurred in by the President acting with representatives of this one party. This comes in part from the pernicious doctrine that the President is the leader of his party instead of, or as well as, the President of the whole people. The two are utterly inconsistent when it comes to the making of laws. Having committed himself to the measure in advance, we hear of the remarkable spectacle of distinguished Members of this body of his own party going to the White House and pleading with the President of the United States to consent that Congress may so modify the bill as to afford some protection to one of the great industries of their States.

Let us not delude ourselves by declaring that the President is an American citizen; that as such he has the same right to assert and maintain his views as has any other citizen. It is not the man or the citizen, Woodrow Wilson, that speaks, however potent or persuasive his personal influence as a mere citizen might be that is brought to bear here. It is the great office of President of the United States that asserts and maintains—even commands—that this bill shall pass. No one doubts that the President is actuated by the purest motives, the highest sense of duty, and the most lofty patriotism. But we can not conceal from ourselves that this great power to mold and fashion legislation and coerce its enactment may sometime fall into unworthy, unpatriotic, even treasonable hands, and, if it does, revolution may follow and this beneficent Government of ours be disrupted. We may say such an outcome is impossible; that our people are not subject to wild and ungovernable passion, and the foundations of government are too solid and enduring to be shaken, and the patriotism of the people of the Nation too sincere and earnest to be subject to the temptations of gain by treason and revolution.

But, sir, we had our Civil War. Some of us still hold in memory the horrors of that time, the lives that were lost, the homes made desolate, the tears and anguish of the mothers and wives whose husbands and sons were lost in that sanguinary conflict, the cruel destruction of property, the broken and maimed—some of whom are still with us—and the bitterness and hatred it engendered, some of which still remains. Let us hope it may be far distant; let us hope and believe it may never come; but the time may come when this great power in the executive department to rule and control Congress—a power not given by law and wholly illegitimate, but established by the silent and unauthorized acquiescence of the people and their lawful representatives—may bring the institutions of this Republic, the greatest and most beneficent government on earth, into deadly peril and to possible overthrow. Typical of the sentiment that upholds this change of the relations of the Executive and legislative departments of government is the following from a well-known newspaper correspondent, published lately in one of the leading journals of the country:

> It is typical, not only of the changed relations existing between the President and Congress, but also of the greater place the President now occupies as the direct representative of the people, that he insisted upon his right to take part in tariff making. Whether for good or evil, the Constitution has been amended by the people themselves, and not through the machinery of convention or the legislatures.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> The position in which the President has been placed by the silent revision of the Constitution is this: The President must be able to formulate a policy, and having formulated it he must make Congress execute it; if Congress is rebellious, the duty of the President is to put down rebellion; if force is necessary, he must obtain it as he would a volunteer army required to quell insurrection—that is, by an appeal to the people to come forward and do service. If Congress is mutinous the President has only to appeal to the people to be sustained, and the support will not be withheld if what the President advocates has popular approval. Congress does not dare contumaciously to oppose the President, unless it feels very sure that the people are with it rather than with the President.

So in the estimation of this well-informed writer the people have so amended the Constitution as to vest in the President the power to coerce Congress to do his bidding and to call upon the people to support him if Congress proves to be independent enough to do its duty as it sees it in spite of executive influence. The specious and insidious plea is made in justification of this usurpation of power that the people are supreme, that they made the Constitution and it is theirs, and that therefore they may change, modify, and construe it at will. Concurrent with this is the claim that the people may, in any form they choose to adopt, irrespective of and without regard to the provisions of the Constitution, override, modify, or reverse the decisions of the courts, and coupled with it is a growing suspicion of and want of confidence in the courts and disrespect for their decisions most alarming in its tendencies. Unfortunately we have weak and, on rare occasions, corrupt judges. But as a body they are as pure, high-minded, and patriotic as any class of citizens or any department of the Government. Their duties, obligations, and responsibilities are fixed and imposed by the Constitution. They can not be taken away by indirection or the destruction of the public confidence in that important arm of the Government.

The tendency of latter-day politics is to exalt the executive at the expense of the legislative and judicial power of the Government and make the President the master and ruler of them all and the master and not the servant of the whole people. It is an unwarranted and dangerous tendency. Every public official, however exalted, is only the servant of the people and should at all times be subject to their control and subservient to their will in conformity to the Constitution and laws of the country; and each department of the Government, if its institutions are to be preserved, must be kept within the limitations of its powers as fixed by the Constitution. When the people desire to change this just distribution and limitations of the powers of the several, or any of the departments, it must, if the Government is to stand, be done by amendment of the Constitution in the manner provided by law, and not by mere public sentiment, however expressed. The Constitution can not be amended, varied, or construed by public sentiment, except as that sentiment is crystallized and formulated in the manner provided by law and written into the Constitution itself.

Mr. President, if this bill is passed it will not be by the willing and voluntary consent of a majority of this body. It will be the result, in part, of outside influences that should never enter into the deliberations or acts of Congress. The Constitution provides:

> All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

That instrument further provides that "the executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America." The President is also made Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy. It is further provided:

He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.

This is the only power vested in the President in respect of the making of laws. There is no warrant in the Constitution for his participation in the formation or passage of laws or the exercise of any influence on legislation beyond that of recommending to the consideration of the lawmaking power such measures as he shall judge necessary or expedient. In addition to this he is given the power to restrain the enactment of laws that he believes should not be enacted, by the veto power. But his veto is not conclusive. The bill may be passed by a two-thirds vote notwithstanding his veto. This is the extent of his power to act upon or influence legislation. To go beyond it is to exceed his constitutional powers and to infringe upon the very spirit of that great instrument.

I am glad to be strongly supported in my views on this important subject by a plank in the platform of the Democratic Party. In 1904 that party made this very proper and commendable declaration of principles:

EXECUTIVE USURPATION.

We favor the nomination and election of a President imbued with the principles of the Constitution who will set his face sternly against Executive usurpation of legislative and judicial functions, whether that usurpation be veiled under the guise of Executive construction of existing laws or whether it take refuge in the tyrant's plea of necessity or superior wisdom.

The practicable application of this patriotic declaration was never more needed than right now.

Mr. President, I have approached this subject with reluctance and purely from a sense of duty. I expressed similar views during the last administration. I have the greatest respect and esteem for the present incumbent of the great office of President of the United States, as I had also for his predecessor in office. I believe in the integrity and sincerity of his purpose to serve the people and the country to their very best interests. But, sir, this can not deter me from expressing my views on a question so serious and far-reaching in its consequences. It makes the situation only the more alarming that one of such high ideals and patriotic purposes should do anything that can reasonably be construed to be a usurpation of power or an infringement of the Constitution that may sometime be appealed to as a precedent by one less conscientious and patriotic.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gronna	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Ariz.
Bacon	Hitchcock	Norris	Smith, Ga.
Bankhead	Hollis	Oliver	Smith, S. C.
Borah	Hughes	Page	Smoot
Bradley	James	Perkins	Sterling
Brady	Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Stone
Brandegee	Johnston, Ala.	Poindexter	Sutherland
Bristow	Jones	Pomerene	Thomas
Bryan	Kenyon	Ransdell	Thompson
Burton	Kern	Robinson	Thornton
Catron	La Follette	Saulsbury	Tillman
Clark, Wyo.	Lane	Shafroth	Townsend
Crawford	Lea	Sheppard	Vardaman
Dillingham	Lewis	Sherman	Warren
Fall	Lippitt	Shields	Weeks
Gallinger	McLean	Shively	Williams
Goff	Martin, Va.	Simmons	Works

Mr. TOWNSEND. The senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] is absent from the city on business. He is paired with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. I desire this announcement to stand on all votes to-day.

Mr. BRYAN. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. FLETCHER] is absent on public business.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will announce the absence of the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] on account of illness, and will not repeat the announcement during the present legislative day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-eight Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there is no Senator on this side of the Chamber prepared to continue the general discussion of the bill. I will ask the Senator from North Carolina if any Senator on that side of the Chamber is ready to proceed?

Mr. SIMMONS. There is no Senator on this side of the Chamber who is prepared to make a set speech to-day. We are, therefore, ready to take up the schedules of the bill, Mr. President.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then I think the reading of the bill had better be continued.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that the Secretary proceed with the reading of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There being no objection, the Secretary will resume the reading of the bill.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill, beginning on page 9, paragraph 37.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 9, paragraph 37, line 18, after the first word "gums," it is proposed by the Committee on Finance to insert the words "not specially provided for in this section." Mr. SMOOT has moved, as an amendment to paragraph 37, line 17, after the word "gums," to strike out the words "amber and amberoid, unmanufactured, or crude gum, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per pound."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. No; the question is on the amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the committee have the right of perfection before the amendment, which takes in the first clause of the paragraph. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as proposed by the committee. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the amendment is agreed to. Now the question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning in line 19, of the same paragraph, as follows:

Arabic, or senegal, ½ cent per pound; camphor, crude, natural, 1 cent per pound; camphor, refined and synthetic, 5 cents per pound.

Mr. BURTON. I move in lines 19 and 20, to strike out the words "camphor, crude, natural, 1 cent per pound."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 9, in paragraph 37, lines 19 and 20, it is proposed to strike out the words "camphor, crude, natural, 1 cent per pound."

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, this provision is an illustration of the policy adopted in this bill relating to numerous items. This is an article which in its crude form is not manufactured in this country. It has been the general policy in our tariff legislation for years to exempt that class of products from duty and to impose duties on the manufactured product; and I may say, Mr. President, that is in accordance with the policy of almost every advanced country.

Crude camphor is not found in the United States. Several years since the Agricultural Department reported that there was a prospect of providing it in the State of Florida, but I think the experiments have not proved successful. Under the existing tariff law crude camphor is free from duty, while the refined carries a duty of 6 cents a pound. It is proposed in the pending bill to reduce the duty on the refined camphor from 6 cents to 5 cents a pound and to impose a duty of 1 cent per pound on the crude article.

This is not a luxury, but it is an article in very common use, and one which is very largely consumed. It is especially desirable that it be made in this country, so that under regulations relating to purity and quality the manufactured article should be under inspection, so that we may know whether it is good or bad.

There is another feature of special application here. There is one country that has a practical monopoly of the supply of camphor. The value of camphor exported from Japan in the year 1911 was $1,570,000. The value of that exported from Formosa, a dependency of Japan, was $1,750,000. Crude camphor is a Government monopoly, and it is possible by official action to determine the price at which it will be sold.

Mr. President, a diminishing of the protective duty will tend to destroy—certainly very seriously to hamper—the refining of camphor in this country. No good purpose can be subserved by so diminishing the duty. It will not only injure the industry, but it will deprive us of the opportunity to ascertain whether the quality is good or not and to transfer the manufacture to the country in which the crude article is obtained.

I may say that according to the statistics it would seem that we are far and away the largest consumers of camphor; that we consume probably one-sixth, and possibly one-fifth, of the supply of the whole world, and I wish to enter my decided protest against this change in duties.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BURTON. Certainly.

Mr. BORAH. Do I understand that the effect of the change in this bill is to reduce the duty on the manufactured product and place a duty upon the raw material?

Mr. BURTON. That is right. The present duty on the manufactured product is 6 cents a pound. This bill proposes to reduce it to 5 cents a pound. There is now no duty on the crude camphor; but this bill imposes a duty of a cent a pound on that article.

Mr. BORAH. Well, what would be the effect of the change which the Senator from Ohio proposes?

Mr. BURTON. It would be to strike out the duty on crude camphor and leave the duty on the refined camphor, as it is here, it being the policy of the bill to make reductions. Whether or not I agree with that, I think the manufacturers ought to stand the reduction from 6 cents a pound to 5 cents a pound.

Mr. BORAH. In other words, the effect of the Senator's amendment would be to take the tax off the raw material?

Mr. BURTON. To remove the tax from the raw material; and I take it we will be compelled to acquiesce in the reduction of the duty on the refined.

Mr. BRISTOW. Let me inquire of the Senator, Mr. President, would it not be better to have a duty of 4 cents a pound on the refined article and make the crude camphor free than to have a cent a pound on the crude and 5 cents on the refined?

Mr. BURTON. As a trade proposition, I should think it would be; but I do not wish to take the responsibility of suggesting reductions on manufactured products where the protective quality is taken away.

Mr. BRISTOW. What is the ad valorem rate on the refined?

Mr. BURTON. On refined camphor the duty, according to the values last year, was 16.1 per cent.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; it is not an excessive duty at all.

Mr. BURTON. That is on a basis of 6 cents. The reduction to the rate proposed in this bill would make it 13.64 per cent.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is on a basis of 5 cents.

Mr. BURTON. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. Is this a raw material that is produced in this country?

Mr. BURTON. Not at all; as I stated a few moments ago.

Mr. BORAH. Then, I suppose a duty was put on as a revenue proposition.

Mr. BURTON. Strictly; and I want to repeat what I said a few moments ago, that I know of no country which has a well-adjusted tariff system that imposes duties on the raw material of this nature produced outside of the country. It is a class of duties which the whole tendency of tariff legislation has been against.

Mr. BORAH. In other words, however, it is a recognition on a small scale of the doctrine of free raw materials for which the Senator is contending.

Mr. BURTON. Yes; free raw materials where the raw material is not produced in this country. That is as far as it goes in this particular case.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, there is one other point to which I desire to call the Senator's attention in relation to crude camphor. As the Senator from Ohio has said, it is absolutely under the control of the Japanese Government. The Japanese Government puts the price just high enough so that synthetic camphor can not be manufactured to take the place of the natural camphor. In other words, Germany manufactures synthetic camphor. If the Japanese Government raises the price above what synthetic camphor can be made for, then, of course, this country could import the synthetic camphor, which is just as good as the crude camphor; but if we put 1 cent a pound duty upon the crude camphor, the Japanese Government will immediately add that 1 cent a pound to the price of all the crude camphor that comes into this country.

Mr. BORAH. And if we take that 1 cent off the raw material, it is just that much more protection to the manufacturer.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true.

Mr. BORAH. So it is about six one way and half a dozen the other.

Mr. SMOOT. That is if the 1 cent is not added to the price. I wish to say now that those who import camphor have always to enter into the contract to do so at least a year ahead, and the Japanese Government has already given notice that in the contracts that are to be made this coming year, if a duty is imposed upon crude camphor, an additional charge to cover that duty will be added to the price quoted to-day. So the Senator from Idaho can plainly see that the manufacturer in this country is not going to receive any advantage, but that if we put 1 cent a pound on crude camphor, the Japanese Government will get an increased price to that amount. Under the estimated importations, 1 cent a pound will amount to $23,000. In other words, if a duty of 1 cent a pound is put upon camphor, the Japanese Government will receive $23,000 additional.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, referring to the discussion last night in regard to the duty on potato dextrine, I desire to inquire of the Senator from Maine why the duty is maintained on potato starch and dextrine made from potato starch. Why are they not put on the free list?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, I am willing to answer the Senator's question, but we are discussing another matter, camphor, at present, and would it not be best to first dispose of the amendment which is now before us?

Mr. BRISTOW. The item to which I refer is contained in the same paragraph, is it not?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes; but the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] has offered an amendment striking out the duty on crude camphor.

Mr. BRISTOW. I beg the Senator's pardon; I will wait until that is disposed of, although dextrine is part of the same paragraph.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the duty upon crude camphor is proposed by the committee simply as a revenue duty. I call the attention of the Senator from Ohio to the fact that in the present bill, in many instances, duties are placed upon articles not produced here. In the very next paragraph a duty of 10 cents per pound is placed upon chicle, which is not produced in this country at all, but is imported from Mexico, Honduras, and Central America.

Mr. BURTON. If the Senator will allow me, chicle is used almost exclusively for the manufacture of chewing gum.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. But it is not produced in this country.

Mr. BURTON. It rests on a very different basis from camphor, which has a very great variety of uses.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. All through the bill there will be found other instances than chicle where there is a duty assessed upon articles not produced in this country.

Mr. BURTON. Yes, Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me again, I am perfectly aware of that fact. I do not know that this is the worst illustration of what I regard as an utterly erroneous policy, but it is an illustration of the plan of imposing a duty on a crude material not made in this country, but which is used here to a very large extent, and is also manufactured in this country. I do not think there is any economic policy relating to the tariff that is any worse.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The duty laid here is for the purpose of producing a revenue, and it will yield considerable revenue. The duty upon refined camphor has been fixed at 5 cents per pound, allowing a differential of about 3¾ cents per pound, making some allowance for shrinkage in conversion. So there is a manufacturing margin of at least 3¾ cents per pound in the manufacture of refined camphor. We do not believe there is any industry engaged in refining camphor that can not refine it with that margin of 3¾ cents per pound.

Mr. BURTON. I dislike to interrupt the Senator from Maine so many times, but it seems to me his figures are slightly in error in that regard. One pound of the crude camphor produces about eighty-five one-hundredths of a pound of the refined article; suppose we say eight hundred and seventy-five one-thousandths. So the difference in cost——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I said "about 3¾"; which would not be far out of the way, making some allowance for shrinkage, as I stated.

Mr. BURTON. One pound of the crude camphor will not produce more than about seven-eighths of a pound of the refined camphor. So if you take the price of the crude camphor here at, say, 28 cents, that would make the cost of the refined camphor 32 cents.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It seems to me the difference stated by the Senator from Ohio is not very material.

In answer to the suggestion that the Japanese Government has control of the natural camphor, that is true. But the Germans have brought down the price of natural camphor by making camphor synthetically; and, as said by the Senator from Utah, the natural camphor is maintained at a price at which the Germans can not manufacture it synthetically and export it to this country. Nevertheless, the ability on the part of the Germans to manufacture camphor synthetically stands as a protection, not only to this country but to all the world, against overcharges by the Japanese Government.

We are reliably informed that the manufacturers and refiners in Japan pay for camphor the same price that is charged to Americans who import it. For that reason we feel that the duty of 1 cent a pound upon crude camphor is justifiable as a revenue duty, and that the cut in the duty upon refined camphor from 6 cents to 5 cents a pound, in view of the fact that there has been a cut in the duty upon celluloid and manufactures of celluloid, is a relative reduction which should be made.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. Being not at all familiar with this subject, I wish to ask the Senator from Maine why synthetic camphor may not be made in this country as well as in Germany? Is there any reason that makes it impossible for us to manufacture it here? Is the cost excessive, or what is the reason?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire, from the investigation I have been able to give to the matter, that I deplore exceedingly the fact that the American chemists have not been able to keep pace with the German chemists. The Germans have learned to make indigo synthetically, and even salicylic acid. They have learned to make camphor synthetically, and also vanilla, I am informed. In this country, either because we are not so patient and willing to make the painstaking, laborious investigations which the German chemists make, or perhaps because we want to make money too fast and are not willing to await the results of science, we have not made the advance which the German chemists have made.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has been a matter of wonderment to me that our chemists should not keep pace with the chemists of Germany in these matters; and yet it has occurred to me that we are decidedly behind Germany in reference to the manufacture of several articles synthetically.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That is most certainly true. With the abundant natural resources at hand here we should utilize them, particularly the coal-tar products, which we do not utilize.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, inasmuch as there are a number of items in the bill that have been treated as the particular item of camphor has been treated, perhaps it would be as well for me to make a short statement with reference to the objects and purposes of the House committee and the Senate committee in that connection.

The Senate committee might have reduced the duty upon refined camphor 2 cents a pound; and if that had been done, I do not think there would have been any particular complaint. So far as my information is concerned, there would have been an ample manufacturing margin, and no man engaged in refining camphor in this country would have been injured by such a reduction.

The House committee and the Senate committee chose, rather than to do that, to reduce the duty upon finished and refined camphor 1 cent per pound and to impose a new duty of 1 cent per pound upon crude camphor, thus, in a way, putting 1 cent into the Treasury and 1 cent into the pockets of the people and putting upon the industry a burden of taxation to the extent of $23,000 per annum.

It will be found that there are a number of items in the bill which have been treated in that way; and that was the object and purpose of the House and Senate committees in so treating them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON].

Mr. LODGE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON] and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. GRONNA (when Mr. MCCUMBER's name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. MCCUMBER] is necessarily away from the city. He is paired with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I am paired for the day with the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]. I make this announcement for the day.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. He is absent. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. WARREN. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] so that he may stand paired with the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. JAMES. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS]. As he has not voted, I withhold my vote. If he were here to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. JONES. I wish to announce that the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] is detained on important business of the Senate.

Mr. JAMES. I transfer the general pair which I have with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] to the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and will vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 45, as follows:

YEAS—29.

Bradley	Crawford	La Follette	Poindexter
Brady	Cummins	Lippitt	Sherman
Brandegee	Dillingham	Lodge	Smoot
Bristow	Gallinger	McLean	Sutherland
Burton	Goff	Norris	Warren
Clapp	Gronna	Oliver
Clark, Wyo.	Jones	Page
Colt	Kenyon	Perkins

NAYS—45.

Ashurst	Kern	Ransdell	Smith, S. C.
Bacon	Lane	Reed	Stone
Bankhead	Lea	Robinson	Swanson
Borah	Lewis	Saulsbury	Thomas
Bryan	Martin, Va.	Shafroth	Thompson
Chamberlain	Martine, N. J.	Sheppard	Thornton
Clarke, Ark.	Myers	Shields	Tillman
Hollis	O'Gorman	Shively	Vardaman
Hughes	Overman	Simmons	Walsh
James	Owen	Smith, Ariz.
Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Smith, Ga.
Johnston, Ala.	Pomerene	Smith, Md.

NOT VOTING—22.

Burleigh	Fletcher	Newlands	Townsend
Catron	Gore	Penrose	Weeks
Chilton	Hitchcock	Root	Williams
Culberson	Jackson	Smith, Mich.	Works
du Pont	McCumber	Stephenson
Fall	Nelson	Sterling

So Mr. BURTON's amendment was rejected.

Mr. REED subsequently said: I wish to ask the Senator from Kansas his indulgence for a moment, as I am obliged to leave the Senate Chamber and go back to committee work.

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. REED. I came in while the roll was being called on the last vote, and when my name was called I voted, forgetting for the moment I have a pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH]. My attention was not called to it until this moment. All that I can do now is to make the explanation that I voted through inadvertence and express my regret for having done so.

Mr. BACON subsequently said: Mr. President, I hope I may be permitted to state that on the last vote, upon the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], I voted inadvertently, not knowing that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] was not present. I left the Chamber before his name was called, and I did not know of his absence. My vote would not have changed the result, but I think it proper that I should make this statement.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 37, page 9, line 21, after the words "per pound," to strike out "chicle, 20 cents per pound; dextrine, burnt starch, or British gum, dextrine substitutes, and soluble or chemically treated starch, three-fourths of 1 cent per pound" and to insert, "chicle, crude, 15 cents per pound; refined or advanced in value by drying, straining, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing, 20 cents per pound; dextrine made from potato starch or potato flour, 1½ cents per pound; dextrine, not otherwise provided for, burnt starch, or British gum, dextrine substitutes, and soluble or chemically treated starch, three-fourths of 1 cent per pound."

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I desire now to renew the question I asked the Senator in charge of the bill before the last amendment was disposed of. That is, Why was the duty fixed at a cent and a half per pound on dextrine made from potato starch or potato flour?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the evidence before us satisfied us that the cost of making potato starch is greater than that of making the other kinds of starch, and also that there is a good deal of competition in the manufacture of potato starch. It is not a starch that is used for food. It is a starch that is largely used by the textile manufacturers, particularly the cotton manufacturers, in starching their goods. It differs from cornstarch and the other kinds of starch. The importations under the present rate of 1½ cents per pound are quite large. I have forgotten just what they are.

Mr. BRISTOW. I understand, then, that in fixing the duty the Senator took into consideration the cost of producing this starch. Was that the attitude of the committee?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The duty was fixed in the first instance by the Ways and Means Committee. The bill came to us with a duty of 1 cent per pound upon potato starch and one-half cent per pound upon the other kinds of starch. Upon reading the discussion in the House and also before the Ways and Means Committee, the testimony seemed to be sufficient to warrant that distinction in the duty; and the committee felt that the Ways and Means Committee had acted wisely in making that distinction.

Mr. BRISTOW. The duty fixed by the Ways and Means Committee on this dextrine was three-fourths of 1 cent a pound.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I spoke of the duty upon the potato starch, which I understood the Senator to inquire about.

Mr. BRISTOW. I was inquiring of dextrine made from potato starch. The Committee on Ways and Means fixed a duty of three-quarters of a cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator the duty on dextrine followed the duty on different kinds of starch. If the dextrine is made from cornstarch or from any other kind besides potato starch it bears a duty of three-fourths of a cent a pound. If made from the potato starch, because potato starch is dutiable at a cent a pound, the duty upon the dextrine made from that starch is made to bear a higher rate of duty so as to make the duties relative.

Mr. BRISTOW. As I understand the Senator's explanation of this increase in the duty on dextrine made from potato starch over the House bill from three-quarters of a cent a pound to a cent and a half a pound, it is in order to restore the compensatory advantage which the dextrine made from potato starch ought to have since the potato starch carries a duty of a cent a pound. Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes. Whether you call it a compensatory duty or what you call it, it is a manufacturing margin between the product and the raw material from which it is made. Through the bill there has been this differential carried. There is a higher rate of duty, I think, in nearly every instance, as a general plan, on the finished product than upon the raw material from which it was made, with a differential.

Mr. BRISTOW. In the present law the duty on potato starch is a cent and a half a pound, and the duty on dextrine made from potato starch is a cent and a half a pound. That is, the duty on the starch and the dextrine in the present law is the same.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, no; I have said several times that the duty on potato starch is a cent a pound.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is in the House bill; but in the present law, I say.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In the present law?

Mr. BRISTOW. It is a cent and a half.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do not recall it. I think we have it here.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is what it is. It is a cent and a half a pound on starch and on dextrine made from the starch. Now, I wanted to inquire if complaints had come to the committee that the manufacturers of dextrine needed an additional protection over that given the starch.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, yes; there was complaint made, and it was discussed upon the floor of the House. It was said that there should be this differential. Our attention was called to the fact that the Ways and Means Committee had made a mistake, that they had put the duty upon the dextrine at a lower rate than the duty upon the raw material out of which it was made. Also, the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. HOLLIS] appeared for somebody, and we had some communications. I think a brief was printed from some of the manufacturers in Massachusetts who called attention to that fact.

Mr. BRISTOW. I can understand that the duty on the dextrine should not be less than the duty on the starch, but the present law—that is, the Payne-Aldrich Act—fixes the same duty on the starch and on the dextrine and makes no differential in favor of the dextrine. What I wanted to find out was why the Committee on Finance now thinks that dextrine should have half a cent a pound more protection than the starch.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator, Mr. President, that the duty upon the dextrine made from other kinds of starch is three-quarters of a cent a pound. The duty upon other kinds of starch is half a cent a pound. There is an increase in the duty of 50 per cent between the dextrine and the raw material from which it is made. We made the same differential here in the case of dextrine made from potato starch. The duty upon the potato starch being a cent a pound, we made the duty upon dextrine made from potato starch a cent and a half a pound, 50 per cent more, just as in the case of the other kind of dextrine.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why does the Senator think that the rates of the Payne-Aldrich law should be maintained on dextrine made from potato starch and that no duty whatever should be imposed on potatoes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I myself hardly see the materiality of the question. I last night gave the Senator my personal opinion. We are not dealing with that schedule here or the duty on potatoes. But I will say further, that the farmers who find a market for their potatoes at these starch factories, as I said yesterday, can sell their culls and small potatoes, the refuse potatoes, at those factories, and sometimes when the price of potatoes has been so low that it would not pay to ship even marketable potatoes from the State of Maine to the market it of course has been to the advantage of the farmers to find that they could have those potatoes converted into starch. I am very sure that many of the farmers in that section of my State where there are starch factories are interested in the maintenance of these factories. They furnish them a place to dispose of their small potatoes, as I said, which are not marketable. I have no very intimate knowledge of the situation, but in a general way I know that to be true.

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, the object of increasing this duty is to enable the manufacturers of dextrine to increase the price of their commodity?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It was to make as far as possible the rates of the tariff bill uniform. When our attention was called to the fact that dextrine made from one kind of starch received a differential it seemed to us that the argument of those who appeared before us was sound; that some differential should be given in the case of dextrine made from potato starch.

Mr. BRISTOW. The theory upon which the committee has proceeded, as I understand it, is that a duty increases the price of the commodity upon which the duty is imposed. Therefore, a duty of a cent and a half a pound on dextrine made from potato starch will increase the price of that product when it is sold here in our country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And also I may suggest there are quite large importations of potato starch, and the duty will provide a revenue.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes. I have not gone into the question as to whether or not a cent and a half protection on the dextrine made from potato starch is necessary. The point that has attracted my attention is the discrimination. In the present law there is no differential in favor of the dextrine starch and farmers have the benefit of a duty of 25 cents per bushel on the potatoes from which these products are made. Now, if the duty of a cent a pound on starch is an advantage to the manufacturer of potato starch and enables him to sell his product in the American market for more money than otherwise he could sell it for, if it protects him from destructive foreign competition, which the Senator indicates it is necessary to do, if such a duty is necessary and is not excessive, I am not going to object to it. I have not taken up that phase of it to see whether it is or not. But if the purpose of imposing the duty on starch that is made from the potatoes is to increase the price of the commodity so that the manufacturers may get a better price for what they manufacture, I want to know why it is not fair and just to impose a duty on the potatoes which the farmer produces and sells to the manufacturer who converts those potatoes into the starch and the dextrine. Is it not just to treat the farmer from the same point of view and apply to his labor and to his production the same law and the same principle?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, it seems to me we are entering upon another field of discussion in that matter. We will reach that when we reach the agricultural schedule, but here when we are dealing with dextrine made from different kinds of starch the question which the Senator raises is aside and does not at present concern the Senate in its consideration of this schedule.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will pardon me, I can not see that it is not pertinent to this question, because the Senator knows that when the price of potatoes is low the starch factory furnishes a market to the grower of potatoes which he otherwise would not have. I readily see that it is to his interest to have these starch factories there. But it is also to his interest to have a protective duty when times are dull with him and the price of his product is low, in order that his labor may be protected from the same character of competition which the manufactured product is protected from.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. As long as the Senator has raised that point, I want to ask him a question. In his great State of Kansas the farmers raise a great deal of corn. The present law carries a rate of 15 cents a bushel on corn. Do the farmers of the State of Kansas receive any benefit from that protective duty of 15 cents a bushel upon corn?

Mr. BRISTOW. Not so much upon corn as they would upon other things.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Let me tell the Senator they do not receive a benefit from the duty on potatoes, in my judgment.

Mr. REED. May I ask a question? The Senator says they need this protection when the price of potatoes is very low. Does not the Senator know that when the price of potatoes is very low that is the very time when no potatoes could possibly come in from abroad?

Mr. BRISTOW. Ah, if the price of potatoes is very low, I will answer the Senator, the foreign producer of potatoes would be just as anxious to seek the American market as he would at any other time, because the close times are pressing upon him at that period.

If it is right and just to give the manufacturer of the starch who takes the potato and makes it into starch a cent a pound as protection, and if he carries it one step further and makes it into dextrine a cent and a half a pound, why should not the farmer who grows the potatoes have the same consideration from Congress?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. If the Senator from Maine will pardon me, I want to ask the Senator from Kansas my question again and try and get an answer to the question. I ask him if he does not know that when the price of potatoes is very low in this country there is not a single potato shipped into the country, and if the figures will not show that to be true?

Mr. BRISTOW. The figures will not show that to be true. The Senator can not find a year when there has not been a very substantial importation of potatoes.

Mr. REED. I venture to say, without looking it up, that there has never been any considerable amount of potatoes imported into this country in any year when the price of potatoes has been exceedingly low in this country.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator will find that potatoes are imported into this country every year.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, did I understand the Senator from Maine to say that there is a duty on corn?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is 15 cents a bushel under the present law.

Mr. BORAH. Was that changed?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is. In the pending bill corn is placed on the free list.

Mr. BORAH. It is placed on the free list?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes.

Mr. BRISTOW. As I said last night, the thing I am complaining of in regard to this bill is its absolute injustice; its indefensible discrimination against certain industries in the United States. Here is a plain illustration of it.

I will say to the Senator from Maine if he will look it up I think he will find I am right in this. If not, the figures can be readily at hand. There have been greater importations of potatoes in the United States during recent years than of either dextrine or starch.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That was in the year 1911, when there was a shortage, and when the price of potatoes was very high.

Mr. BRISTOW. There was a larger importation in 1912 than in 1911, as I remember.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Shiploads of potatoes were brought into Portland, Me., from Scotland. We needed them and the country needed them. Although we were the third State in the Union, I think, in the raising of potatoes still we had to have potatoes brought from Scotland; and they were brought by shiploads to Portland, Me., and the duty paid, because of the scarcity in this country. The farmers got an enormous price, of course, for potatoes that year. There is no crop that varies so much as potatoes. I have seen them sell for much less than the duty. I have seen them rotting in the fields, when it would not pay the farmers to dig them and market them. Then again, because of the scarcity in some of the Central States, potatoes were in demand. The great State of New York is the largest potato-raising State in the Union, raising some 47,000,000 bushels yearly. The State of Michigan is next with 35,000,000 bushels, and our old State of Maine is third with about 30,000,000 bushels. Pennsylvania raises very nearly the same amount, and nearly all the States raise potatoes.

When there is a shortage in the Central States and in New York, our Maine potatoes bring a good price, not because of the 25 cents a bushel protective duty, but because of the shortage and the demand here. The farmer can not do as the manufacturing interests in my State or as the cotton-mill owners can do—meet once a month and determine what the product may be and what the different mills may run upon. When he puts his crop in the ground he has but little to do with what the outcome may be. He can not arrange with other farmers as to how many acres may be put out that year in potatoes; he can not combine to control the production. He awaits a kind Providence, and if he has a bountiful crop and there is a bountiful crop in the great Empire State of New York and in the State of Pennsylvania or Michigan his potatoes rot in the field, or he finds, perhaps, some market in the starch factory near by. It is not because of the tariff. Then when his crop is harvested he can not do like the manufacturing interests where there are great storehouses and plenty of capital to carry the product while awaiting a favorable market.

He must market because his crop is perishable, and then he needs the money. He can not carry it. He is not situated so that he can take advantage of the duty which you pretend to give him upon his potatoes. So I alluded to it yesterday afternoon as a spurious duty, placed there in order that he might be led to believe that he shares somehow as a beneficiary in this system, which was never designed for him.

I read here a declaration which I have at hand. The secretary of the American Tariff League, during the pendency of the reciprocity act, wrote:

> Once the American farmer finds that protection is not for him, the end of protection will quickly come. Ten million votes are cast by American farmers. Kindly write or wire your Senator or Representative in Congress in opposition to the treaty.

I fancy the spirit behind the author of that message is the spirit which has moved the placing of the duty upon many farmer products, like 15 cents a bushel upon corn grown in the State of Kansas, when it can be of no advantage to the farm grower, it seems to me, of that State. No more is the 25 cents a bushel of advantage to the potato grower of my State.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BRISTOW. In just a moment I will yield.

I appreciate all the disadvantages which the Senator from Maine has narrated that are imposed by nature and conditions upon the American farmer, but it seems to me, struggling as he does against such adverse conditions that are beyond his control, it comes with poor grace to take from him——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. Will the Senator pardon me? That advantage which is now given him. He is now placed on an equality with the manufacturers who take his product and transform it into a commodity which they sell to the American people. He certainly has a right to the same consideration from Congress as the factories which take and handle the product. When you put a duty of a cent and a cent and a half a pound upon the starch and the dextrine that is made from the potatoes he has a right to ask that you treat him according to the same rules and apply to him the same methods in legislation.

Now I yield to the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks that the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] is first entitled to the floor.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, last year there were imported into the United States 13,740,481 bushels of potatoes. The unit value of those potatoes was 52 cents a bushel. The duty collected amounted to $3,434,535. I want to ask the Senator from Maine if the 25-cent duty upon those potatoes did not help the farmer raising potatoes in the State of Maine?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am willing to answer it, Mr. President. I think not. The price was high and the farmer found a ready market for all his potatoes. You paid here in the city of Washington $2 a bushel for those potatoes, and they were in demand. The small amount that was shipped in was a mere bagatelle, a drop in the bucket, it counted for nothing. The great demand in the United States for potatoes affected the price.

Mr. SMOOT. That was the largest importation for many years.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. There was a shortage, as we all know. There was a scarcity of the crop.

Mr. SMOOT. Then why was the price in 1912 lower than it was in 1910 or 1905 or 1896? I notice here that the price per unit on potatoes a bushel was 52 cents in 1912, and the importations were 10 times as much as they were in 1910, when the unit price was 86.9 cents. The junior Senator from Missouri has just made the statement that when the price of potatoes was low they never imported into this country. In 1910, when they were 86 cents a bushel, there was not one-tenth the amount of importations there was in 1912, when they were 52 cents a bushel. I want to say to the Senator from Maine that if the farmers of Maine had not been protected by 25 cents a bushel last year on their potatoes they would not have received the price for them that they did get.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should like to believe that the farmer received a benefit from the duty, but I have never been able to make myself believe it. I want to call attention to the price, because it is entirely misleading. The Senator knows the fact that we had a shortage of potatoes for the year ending 1912, when the figure he gave as the unit price was small. We imported last year 13,740,000 bushels of potatoes, in round numbers. In 1910 we imported only 349,000 bushels, and the unit price given is larger in the year 1910. It does not at all bear upon the importations into this country. The Senator would have us believe because the unit price was higher in 1910 the importations were larger.

Mr. SMOOT. I was simply answering the statement made by the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. That is the statement he made. I have not made any such statement, and I quoted figures to show otherwise, because I believe that his statement is not borne out by the figures. Does the Senator mean to intimate that the 52 cents a bushel as the unit price of potatoes for 1912 is not correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. No; and I do not mean to intimate that it is a low price. That is a fair price. The farmers of my State call 40 cents a fair price in the field for raising potatoes. Fifty cents a bushel to the farmer is a fair price for his potatoes. This is given at 52, and it is not a low price.

Mr. SMOOT. There is not any question about the price. The amount of money that was collected by the Government on those potatoes was $3,434,535, and the value of the potatoes was $7,175,375. So the unit value must have been 52 cents a bushel. There could not have been any question about it at all.

Mr. STONE. I should like to ask the Senator, if I may, how does he account for this variation in the price of potatoes from year to year under the same duty?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, that is easily accounted for. Wherever there is a light crop of potatoes in this country the price is exceedingly high, just as the Senator from Maine said. Wherever there is a crop of potatoes anywhere in the world the same rule applies. That is the reason why there is a difference in price. The price varies, as quoted in these figures.

Mr. STONE. It varies according to the production, the supply and demand.

Mr. SMOOT. That is not what we were discussing. We were discussing the importations. The Senator from Kansas made the statement that the 25-cent duty was a benefit, in his opinion, to the farmers of this country.

Mr. STONE. It is pretty hard to tell what the Senators on the other side are discussing. They are just reaching out, groping for anything they can get hold of to discuss. Then I should like to ask the Senator——

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, if I have the floor, I will try and enable the Senator from Missouri to understand just exactly what I am discussing. My contention is that if a duty is necessary to protect a manufacturer who buys potatoes and manufactures them into starch and dextrine, and if the Committee on Finance think that that manufacturer of starch should have a cent a pound duty as a protective duty for him, and that the manufacturer of dextrine, which is another step in the process of manufacturing, should have a duty of a cent and a half a pound, half a cent more than the manufacturer of starch receives, and if that is necessary for the prosperity of the manufacturers in order to protect them from severe competition, as was stated by the Senator from Maine, then is it not fair that the farmers, who grow the potatoes and supply these manufacturers with their products, should have the same consideration from Congress? Should they not have a protective duty to the product of their labor the same as that applied to the product of the labor in the factory? That is what I am trying to discuss; but I want to ask the Senator from Missouri if he does not think the farmer is entitled to the same treatment and the application of the same rule to his products which is applied to the manufacturer?

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. I should like the Senator from Missouri, if he will, to tell me what he thinks about that proposition.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I will yield in a minute to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], who has addressed the Chair.

Of course, I think that tariff duties and all legislation should be absolutely impartial and just and fair to all interests. If that is what the Senator from Kansas asks me. I did not, and I do not now, seek to go into this discussion, although I am willing to do it. I rose a moment ago because the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] had referred to a remark made by my colleague [Mr. REED], who has been called out of the Chamber, which remark was to the effect that when the price of potatoes was very low there were little or no importations. I think that is correct, for when the price of potatoes is low it is due largely to the fact that there is an oversupply, and if we have at home an oversupply, there must be but little inducement for importations from abroad.

Mr. SMOOT. But the oversupply may be in foreign countries.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Utah will excuse me, for the benefit of the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] and for the benefit of the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], who, unfortunately, has been called out of the Chamber, I will read into the RECORD what the data furnished us by the Finance Committee show on that point.

Under the Wilson bill in 1906 the duty on potatoes was 15 cents a bushel. The importations that year, according to these data, were 175,474 bushels, and the duty $26,321. The average price or value of potatoes per bushel was 73 cents; that is, 175,474 bushels were imported with the price at 73 cents.

In 1905, according to the data under the Dingley law, there were imported 180,929 bushels, a duty being paid of $44,618, or 25 cents a bushel, and the unit of value that year was 95 cents per bushel; that is, an importation of 180,929 bushels at 95 cents a bushel.

In 1910, under the Payne-Aldrich bill, with a duty of 25 cents per bushel, there were imported 349,577 bushels, the unit of value that year being 86.9 cents per bushel and the duty collected aggregating $87,050.

In 1912, under the same law, the duty being 25 cents a bushel, there were imported 13,744,481 bushels, the unit of value being 52.2 cents per bushel, and the duty paid was $3,424,535, showing, according to the information which has been furnished us, that there was a far greater importation in 1912 than in any other year, and yet the price was lower.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator from Kansas does not intend to convey the impression that potatoes for the year ending 1912 were lower in this country?

Mr. BRISTOW. I am simply giving the figures which the Senator's committee has furnished the Senate for its information.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes; but that does not excuse the Senator, for he has other sources of information.

Mr. BRISTOW. It may not excuse me, but I am free to say——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I ask the Senator from Kansas if he does not know that potatoes were higher for the year ending in 1912?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not remember the price of potatoes; I am not a dealer in potatoes; and, of course, I only know the price from statistics that come under my observation.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I merely rose to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to the fact that the price or value cited in the tables from which he has just read is, of course, the foreign price, the value of the potatoes in the country from which shipped to this country. That does not give or purport to give the price of potatoes and the value of potatoes in this country at that time.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am obliged to the Senator from Wisconsin for the suggestion, because that clearly shows that the tariff of 25 cents per bushel was of substantial advantage to the farmer during that year. If it had not been for that, his potatoes would have been probably as cheap that year as they were abroad.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BRISTOW. These duties are arranged to protect the manufacturer of potato products; but the farmer who produces the potatoes is left to the forces of nature and competition.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Maine will excuse me a moment, the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] rose, and I neglected to yield to him. I will gladly do so now.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I merely wanted to address myself, first, to the inquiry of the Senator from Kansas with reference to why the farmer was not given a duty upon potatoes while the manufacturer of dextrine was given a duty upon his finished product. Of course, the Senator from Kansas must know that the chief consumer of potatoes is not the dextrine manufacturer, and that no committee of either the Senate or the House could afford to legislate with reference to the relations existing simply between the raisers of potatoes and the dextrine manufacturers. We could not afford to lay a duty upon a hundred million bushels of potatoes because we had given a dextrine manufacturer a duty. I want to call the Senator's attention——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will just pardon me a moment to ask a question, Why did the Senator propose to impose a duty on dextrine or starch?

Mr. HUGHES. The duty was imposed the same as all other duties have been imposed as nearly as we could for revenue purposes, having in view the situation in which we found ourselves, surrounded with a conglomeration of rates that nobody can understand or see the reason for.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON] says that it was to protect the manufacturer of dextrine and starch from destructive competition.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. Just a moment, and I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. HUGHES. Please do not misstate the Senator from Maine.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am not going to misstate the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. I asked the Senator not to misstate the Senator from Maine. I do not care what the Senator from Kansas does to me.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator from New Jersey objects to a duty on potates because it would be imposing a tax on the consumers of potatoes. Now, the Senator from Maine says that it is spurious; that it does not amount to anything; that it is no good to the farmer, and does not help him a bit. Then how does it hurt the consumer, let me ask the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. HUGHES. I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that in the year which he speaks of, 1912, when such a tremendous quantity of potatoes was imported into this country, he will find that that very year we exported nearly a million and a half dollars' worth of potatoes.

Mr. BRISTOW. Certainly.

Mr. HUGHES. The situation may have been that there was a shortage during one part of the season, and consequently we had to import potatoes. In order to import them we had to compel the people of this Nation to pay over $3,000,000 into the Treasury of the United States so that they might get enough potatoes to eat, and yet not have advanced the price of a single potato to the farmers in the United States, whose crop might come along later. Then there would be plenty of potatoes at that particular time—enough to supply our own needs and to then export them. I do not know that that is the true explanation, but it is a possible explanation for these apparently irreconcilable things.

There is a situation in which the people of the United States might very well be compelled to pay three or four million dollars into the Treasury of the United States in order that they might get enough potatoes to eat, and yet the farmer receive no benefit.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey contends that this tax of 25 cents a bushel is of no benefit to the farmer because it does not increase the price of potatoes.

Mr. HUGHES. I stated——

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, the Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON], I should have said, contends that this tax of 25 cents a bushel is of no benefit to the farmer because it does not increase the price; that it does no good to the farmer; and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] says that it is a wrong to impose a duty because it does increase the price the consumer has to pay. Now, I should like for those two Senators to adjust their differences as best they may; but it is a strange situation to me to have a bill supported on the other side of the Chamber by one Senator because the duty is of no account and is of no advantage to the farmer upon whose product it is placed and supported by another Senator because it does increase the price of the article, that it does benefit the farmer, and therefore it is wrong to impose it because it increases the cost of living to the man who buys the farmer's product.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. Now, if the Senator from Maine will pardon me, I will give him plenty of time after a while. I asked the Senator from New Jersey why he proposed to impose that duty of a cent a pound on starch and a cent and a half on dextrine, and I understood him to say it was for revenue purposes.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I said, as the Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON] said, that we found a duty upon the raw material and we allowed what we considered a proper differential for the next step in manufacture. I will say to the Senator from Kansas that I have not given this particular item any consideration at all; I am relying solely, as the Senator is, upon the statements made by the Senator from Maine. It may be that it is a greater differential than is necessary. I do not think it is; but it may be that it is. If it is, it will have the result, if there are any importations, of increasing the revenue.

Mr. BRISTOW. No. As between starch and dextrine, that may be true; but let me call the attention of the Senator from New Jersey to the fact that the manufacturer of starch pays no duty at all; his raw material under this bill is free; yet you impose a duty of a cent a pound upon the product which he has to sell and which he makes from the free article.

Mr. HUGHES. I have answered that; and if I have not answered it to the Senator's satisfaction, I can not do any better.

Mr. BRISTOW. I want to know why that duty of a cent a pound was imposed on starch.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator asks why starch was not placed on the free list?

Mr. BRISTOW. Potato starch; yes.

Mr. HUGHES. One purpose was that we expected to raise some revenue by the imposition of the duty.

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, now, for the purpose of revenue——

Mr. STONE. I think that is about the fifth or sixth time the Senator has asked that question.

Mr. BRISTOW. Just a moment, and I will yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. STONE. The Senator need not yield to me. I think this whole discussion is so silly that it ought to be ended.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am sorry to disturb the mind of the Senator from Missouri. Perhaps it is silly to some people, but it is not silly to the men whose interests are involved.

As I understand, the duty of a cent a pound on starch is proposed for the purpose of getting revenue. If I understand the Senator from New Jersey, his view is that a revenue that is collected by a customs duty is, in fact, collected from the people themselves; they pay it.

Mr. HUGHES. That, of course, is a generalization. I am not as old, I think, as the Senator from Kansas, but I have learned even in my young life not to generalize too freely. I can point to the Senator a hundred industries in this country—or a great many industries, in any event—as to which it can be truly said that the price at which their products are sold has absolutely no relation, one way or the other, to the tariff.

Mr. BRISTOW. I agree to that, in some instances.

Mr. HUGHES. There is no question about that. A tariff of a thousand per cent would not make them a penny higher, and they would not be any cheaper if they were on a free-trade basis.

Mr. BRISTOW. I agree with the Senator as to that. There are commodities on which the tariff does not increase the price. For instance, there have been times when calico sold in the United States for less per yard than the duty on the article. But that is not starch. We have been told here by the Senator in charge of this portion of the bill that this duty is necessary to protect the manufacturer of starch and dextrine from destructive competition, and I am undertaking to argue here——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am sure the Senator does not wish to misquote me. I do not recall that I ever made that statement. I said that we took into consideration the competition and the fact that there were importations, but I did not say that it was necessary to protect this industry against destructive competition, or anything like that. I said we took into consideration the fact that there were importations.

Mr. BRISTOW. I was mistaken. I ask the Senator's pardon for using the word "protect," because I know that is indeed offensive to some men; but whether you call it protection or something else the result is the same. The manufacturer of potato starch and potato dextrine has a duty of 1 cent and a cent and a half a pound, respectively, as against the foreign importer, while the producer of the potato from which the starch and dextrine is made heretofore had a protective duty, or, at any rate, a duty of 25 cents a bushel, as between him and the foreign producer. That has been taken off, but the manufacturer is left, so far as dextrine goes, with exactly the same duty protecting him that he had when potatoes were paying 25 cents a bushel duty. I leave it to any reasonable man——

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, I am no expert on dextrine and know but little about starch, but I am "long" on information on potatoes, and I will say to him that out in the section of country where I live we had a very large surplus crop last year, which we could not sell, and thousands upon thousands of bushels of potatoes are in bins and pits, yet uncovered, and will never be taken out. We will have to make new ones for the crop this fall. The duty has not done much good out there. I rather believe that the condition varies according to the crop and climatic conditions and is different in different parts of the United States. To protect the farmer on his potatoes it would be necessary to have one law applying to the Pacific coast, another to the middle section, and another to the eastern coast. The duty does not help us a bit; that is certain.

Mr. BRISTOW. That argument may be made, of course, as to any duty; but if the Senator had a starch factory out there the farmers in that section doubtless would benefit by it very materially, because it would make a market for their potatoes. That is one reason why I favor a protective tariff, because I want to develop all the various regions of this country by promoting manufacturing establishments, and I want a duty——

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will excuse me a moment. I want a duty which will develop in a legitimate way such industries; but I do not want to protect them at the expense of the man who produces the articles which they use. I want to treat him the same and not penalize him because he happens to be a tiller of the soil and has not the advantages that the great manufacturing concerns have in the marketing of their product.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BRISTOW. Very gladly.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am deeply touched with the anxiety of the Senator from Kansas for the tiller of the soil and particularly with reference to the potato. The duty of 25 cents per bushel on potatoes has been a mere sop, as the 25 cents a bushel on wheat has been; but we realize no benefit whatever from the tariff on potatoes—not a particle. Last year I saw piled up on Pennsylvania Avenue several hundred bags of potatoes. I stepped into the store and asked the proprietor where they came from. He said, "These bags contain Irish, and these bags Scotch potatoes." "Well," I said, "if you are a patriotic citizen, why do you not buy American potatoes?" Said he, "My dear sir, I could scurry within a radius of 50 miles, and I could not get 200 bushels of potatoes. I bought these potatoes in the New York market"; and he said that hundreds of other sections in our land are buying potatoes in a similar way.

These potatoes bore a duty of 25 cents a bushel. What earthly benefit, I ask, did the farmer who raised potatoes anywhere in Maryland or New Jersey or New York derive from that tariff? Not one whit; but, on the contrary, every consumer in the District of Columbia paid 25 cents a bushel more, and probably a profit on the 25 cents added, for the potatoes that were furnished. I recall that the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] last year, in answer to a question, when I cited to him the 25 cents a bushel on wheat, admitted that the farmer had derived little or no benefit from the tariff. I say that was a mere sop, and I say that 25 cents a bushel on potatoes has been the sheerest sop to the American farmer. It has gone on so long that the average farmer understands the situation, and my friend from Kansas need not shed any tears with reference to the farmer. We have applied the system of protection, and it has been like the apples of Sodom, fair without and foul within.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why does not the Senator propose to take the duty off of starch, then? Why does the Senator vote for a cent and a half duty on dextrine and a cent on starch if such protection is the merest deception?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am not a member of the Finance Committee and I will trust to their judgment as to that. I should make a very different schedule, perhaps, as the Senator knows, were it left to me; but I trust the judgment and wisdom and studiousness of the majority Senators on the Committee on Finance and the attention they have given to this question.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. How did the Senator from Kansas——

Mr. BRISTOW. I first yield to the Senator from Nebraska, and afterwards I will yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, in relation to what the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE] has said, I want to say that all those who are opposed to a tariff on the products of the farmer have always said that the tariff on wheat, for instance, did the farmer no good because we were exporting wheat. The Senator from New Jersey, of course, gives assent to that by a nod of his head. They turn right around, however, and say that the tariff on potatoes does no good to the farmer because we do import potatoes. It must follow, it seems to me, that there must be a benefit to the farmer in one case or the other.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I said we never import potatoes, except when we do not have them in this country. We buy American potatoes and use them until the supply is exhausted, and then, in the absence of American potatoes, for the well-being of humanity, we are obliged to import them; but I insist that the party that shall place a duty upon that highly essential article of diet is operating against the laws of good sense and of fairness to humanity.

Mr. NORRIS. It may be true that a protective tariff does operate against humanity and that free trade is an equalizer. If you had everything free all over the world, the only difference in the price of commodities between one place and another would be the cost of transportation; but it is the theory of protection that we place our people on a higher plane than the remainder of the world, and that it is the object of it.

My own belief is, I will say to the Senator, that, for instance, if we did not import any potatoes the tariff would not have as much of a beneficial effect as it does when we do import them, and I think in different years, depending upon the amount of the product that we produce, the tariff has a different effect—a greater effect in one year than it does in another.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. It has certainly been of no benefit to the farmer.

Mr. NORRIS. If we exported all our wheat, then the farmer, I will admit, would get no benefit from the tariff. If we had to import it, as we approach the point where we consume practically all that we raise, the tariff in an increasing rate commences to benefit the farmer. But I rose only to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to the inconsistency of the proposition that on one commodity a duty does not help the farmer, because we do not import any of it, and, on the other hand, on another commodity it does not help him, because we do import some of it.

Mr. HUGHES. We do export potatoes, I will say to the Senator. We exported in 1912 a million and a half dollars' worth of potatoes.

Mr. NORRIS. I think we always have exported some.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator from Kansas will yield to me for a moment——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not want the impression to go abroad that potatoes are not an export article of American culture. The trouble with this debate is that Senators have all concluded to take a very exceptional year. It is true that in the year 1912 we imported a little over $7,000,000 worth and exported, in round numbers, only about $1,500,000 worth; but in 1896 we imported only $127,000 worth and exported $371,000 worth; in 1905 we imported $168,000 worth, whereas we exported $750,000 worth, in round numbers; and in 1910 we imported $300,000 worth, in round numbers, and exported $755,000 worth, in round numbers. In other words, when the potato business is in its normal condition, the United States imports generally a little over twice as much as it exports. It happens that there was an absolute potato famine in the United States in 1912.

One more word in addition to what I have said and then I shall take my seat. It will not do to say that a duty of 25 cents added to an article at the time of its being imported in a time of famine does not add to the price of the article. It goes without saying that it must. In 1912 the imported potatoes came to this country at a valuation of 52 cents per bushel. That was the foreigner's price laid down in our ports of entry; but that undoubtedly must have been added in order to sell them. The addition of 25 cents would have made 77 cents, the total cost to the American importer if he had paid the duty; and then if you add to that the profit, whatever it might be, the price would have been brought up to, say, 89 or 90 cents. If the contention of the Senator from Kansas were correct, the domestic price of potatoes that year would also have been 89 or 90 cents, after adding the profit, plus the duty, plus the price paid the foreigner; but, as a matter of fact, the domestic price of potatoes in this country, running through the season, was from $1.50 to $2 per bushel.

But, as a matter of fact, the domestic price of potatoes in this country, running through the season, was from $1.50 to $2 per bushel. What does that prove? It proves that the American price of potatoes in 1912 was the result of the potato famine.

If there had not been so great a dearth of potatoes, a situation might have struck the country when, imports and exports being almost equal, the importations, if they had been large enough, could have borne down the domestic price to the price of the foreign article, plus the duty, plus the profit. But that was not the case in 1912, as the figures demonstrate beyond all cavil to anybody who wants to take what they teach instead of trying to prove something by them.

I do not want to have go abroad the impression probably made by the speech of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] that ordinarily this is a potato-importing country. It is not. It is a potato-exporting country. It exports twice as much as it imports.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Mississippi will pardon me, as I understand, he believes that the duty on potatoes does add to the price of the potatoes?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why, undoubtedly; when I import a bushel of potatoes I am going to try to get back the duty when I sell them, and not only that, but to get back the duty with a profit. To put a duty upon a foodstuff of absolute importance and necessity to life, as potatoes have come to be, and to have a man's own Government add 25 cents to the 52 cents which they cost and a 20 per cent profit upon the 25 cents before he can get them to feed his wife and his children, is an iniquity.

Mr. BRISTOW. Let me ask the Senator from Mississippi if he thinks it is any worse to impose a duty on food than on clothing. In this country of ours is not clothing practically as essential to life as food?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, of course the Senator from Kansas knows beforehand the answer I will make to that question. The answer is that we are facing a condition which you have created. You have put the industries of this country upon stilts. Instead of leaving them unhothoused to win their own way, so that there should be no artificial and false industries in the country, you have created and stimulated them.

We went into the last campaign promising free food to the people as far as possible and free basic necessities of life and of industry. Furthermore, we promised to try not to kill and totally destroy any legitimate industry. In other words, we have met a chaotic, confused fiscal system, and we are dealing with it as we are compelled to deal with it. Any Democrat who will tell you that there is any thread of logic running through this bill forgets that there was no thread of logic running through the thing we are trying gradually to cure, and we can not run any thread of logic through it. We are compelled to deal with the condition as we find it. We are trying to get down to a natural basis for an industry to live and thrive upon without needlessly destroying men who, by law, have been invited into a false position.

The Senator from Kansas knew that would be my answer to his question.

Mr. BRISTOW. As I understand the Senator's remarks, and as I understand his views, he believes the duty should be reduced materially, but not wholly, on manufactured products?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Absolutely, except in some cases where the finished product is a matter of such vital importance to industry or to life that it ought to be made cheap to the consumer regardless of industrial conditions. There are a few cases of that description, but not many.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why should the duty, in effect, be increased on dextrine, as it is in this bill, when the potatoes from which it is made are put on the free list? That is, the duty has been removed from potatoes, but the duty on dextrine remains just the same as in the present law, a cent and a half per pound.

The Senator declared, in substance, that it was very wrong. I do not remember the exact word he used, but I think he said "infamous"——

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator wants an answer to that question, I will give it to him.

Mr. BRISTOW. Very well; I will yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The answer is that potatoes are a foodstuff, and dextrine is not; that is all.

Mr. BRISTOW. Starch and dextrine are used in manufacturing processes, largely in the making of cotton cloth; so I inquire if the Senator is in favor of taking the duty off food products and leaving it on the cloth which people have to have in order to clothe themselves?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I think I have already answered that question as fully as my poor, weak intellect is capable of answering it. If the Senator wants me to confess that it is illogical to do that, I will confess it. If the Senator wants me to confess that it was illogical on the part of the Republican Party to put as high as 200 per cent duty upon the clothing of the people, I will confess it. I will confess that we can not at one fell blow, in one bill, reduce duties as much as we would like to, and as much as they ought to be reduced, without knocking the stilts out from under people that you have put on stilts, and ought never to have put on them.

Mr. BRISTOW. Ah, but in the case of the article now under discussion the protection is, in fact, increased, because the duty is taken off the raw material and not reduced at all upon the finished product.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, we have sought in this bill to place duties upon substances not basic necessities, either to life or to industry, for the purpose of bringing in part of the revenue of the Government. I can hardly imagine a consumption tax which would be less burdensome than one upon dextrine.

Mr. BRISTOW. Dextrine is used by cotton manufacturers in making cotton cloth.

Mr. WILLIAMS. We have used it for the purpose of raising revenue for the Government. As long as we are compelled to have any consumption taxes at all, while we may be mistaken, we may have been foolish, we thought dextrine was a very good thing on which to raise some of the revenue.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I intend to move to amend the paragraph by reducing the duty on dextrine. What I am objecting to is this——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I want to say to the Senator, in conclusion of my reply, that it is not true that we raised the duty upon dextrine. It is true that we raised the duty only upon potato dextrine.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is the very thing under discussion.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The reason we did that was because we had left the duty upon potato starch, and it was thought necessary, imitating a Republican example, to have a conversion differential.

Mr. BRISTOW. But if the Senator will examine the present law he will find that on potato starch there is exactly the same duty—a cent and a half per pound—that there is on dextrine made from potato starch. So the example the Senator cites does not apply to this discussion, because in the present law there is no such differential.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Still, it is a Republican example, and if the Republican Party departed from it in that particular instance it was an exception to what they generally did.

Mr. BRISTOW. But the Senator said that in this instance he was following a Republican example, and in that he was mistaken.

The Senator vehemently denounces the policy of imposing a duty on food products. I should like to inquire why he favors a duty on rice.

Mr. WILLIAMS. For the same reason that I indicated a moment ago about another matter. That is an industry that you undertook to create and that you put upon stilts. Rice is not a basic necessity of life, as are potatoes and wheat and flour and things of that sort. It is not the ordinary food of the American people, as the Senator very well knows.

Mr. BRISTOW. Do I understand the Senator to say that rice is not an article of food that is in general use?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is not the ordinary food of the American people, as the Senator very well knows. It is used, for the most part, as an addition to the meal. It is not one of the things which go upon the table of every American citizen every day, and must go there. Flour is one of those things; so is meat; so are potatoes; so are several other things. Let us be frank with one another. The main reason was, however, that you had begun to hothouse a rice industry in this country, and you had succeeded in hothousing it as you could have hothoused a pineapple industry, if you had wanted to, or a banana industry. After you had gotten it in that condition, we were not going to turn around and absolutely destroy it at one fell blow, just because, if we did not, you might say it was a southern production.

Mr. BRISTOW. As I understand the Senator, then, he is in favor of exempting from duties only food products that are absolutely essential to human life and that are on the table every day, while other food products of which a very large amount may be consumed throughout the country may be taxed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. My phrase, "The basic necessities of life," would cover that, I think. Rice is not a basic necessity of life, like bread and meat.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why does the Senator favor a duty on oats?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oats do not enter into human consumption to any great extent. Oatmeal is used on the breakfast table, but for the most part oats are used for the purpose of feeding stock.

We reduced the duty on oats. I might very well reply to the Senator by asking why he favored a duty on oats three times as large as the one we fixed?

Mr. BRISTOW. My answer to the Senator would be that I did not.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Your party did.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am speaking for myself.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Payne-Aldrich bill did, and I think the Senator voted for that, did he not? Or did he?

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator is entirely mistaken. I did not vote for the Payne-Aldrich bill. I voted against it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Ah. That is one white feather to the Senator's glory, but I had the impression that he had voted for it.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why does the Senator favor putting a duty on bananas?

Mr. WILLIAMS. We put a duty upon bananas for one reason, because they are not an article of every-day food. Another reason was that we put so small a duty upon them that it could not possibly raise the retail price of bananas. The third reason was, that the banana industry in this country is absolutely controlled by the United Fruit Co., which is a trust, and one which not only controls the banana trade, but owns the very ships in the trade, and not only that, but it has bought up most or a great quantity of the land in the Tropics upon which the bananas are raised.

In other words, we found an opportunity to collect a revenue and put it in the Treasury in such a way that the consumer should not pay it, but the United Fruit Co. would have it to pay. It may strike the Senator that that is a bit illogical also, but now and then an occasion of that sort occurs to anybody. We put a duty of one-tenth of a cent a pound upon bananas. That can not possibly be reflected in the retail price at the banana stand or in the family grocery.

I did not make this great discovery about putting a duty upon bananas. My friend the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] made it. I wish he were here to-day to answer the Senator from Kansas. He does it so completely and so nicely that I think his answer would remove from the Senator's mind the doubt of the propriety of that tax just as it removed it from my mind. At first I was opposed to the tax upon general principles. I did not want to put upon the dutiable list anything that was not already there if I could help it.

Mr. BRISTOW. I think the Senator from Oklahoma will have abundant opportunity to explain the duty before the bill passes. But if the policy is not to tax food products, I think the Senator from Mississippi will admit that for thousands of people in the United States bananas are a food product.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why, of course; all things that you eat are food products; but bananas are not an article of basic necessity in food.

Mr. BRISTOW. Heretofore bananas have been on the free list.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. BRISTOW. This bill puts them on the dutiable list.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; and putting the tax there is not going to make a banana in the United States cost a cent more, because the duty is small; it is infinitesimal. De minimis non curat lex, and trade non curat, too.

Mr. BRISTOW. I understand, or hope I do. [Laughter.] The trust which the Senator refers to as controlling bananas has it within its power, if it is so all-powerful as the Senator from Mississippi says, to charge up this additional duty to the consumer, as I think it will do.

The Senator endeavors to minimize the importance of rice as a food product. He is a much more learned man than I am, but I invite his attention to what I believe to be a fact, and that is that more people in this world of ours live upon rice than upon wheat.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, Mr. President, I hope the Senator does not wish to put me in the attitude of denying that self-evident proposition. What I said was that rice was not the basic ordinary food product of the American people. Rice is nowhere the food product of the white race. They eat wheat and they eat meat, and that is one reason why they are strong. Of course rice is consumed by more people than wheat is. Rice is consumed by more people than consume wheat and Indian corn put together. But it is consumed by people who are so poor, so destitute, that they can not pay for wheat and meal, and therefore can not eat it, and can not eat meat, either, except on holidays.

Mr. BRISTOW. In this tariff bill it is proposed to put upon the free list the food products that the well-to-do people of this country can have and keep a duty upon the food products that the poor people have to exist upon because they can not get anything else. That is the logic of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. It happens that rice, by your peculiar fiscal agency, is not a cheap food product in the United States. It has not been hitherto. By the way, I hope the Senator will not forget, while he is shooting shots at us, that we have reduced the rice duty. We have reduced the Republican rice duty 50 per cent. Give us a little credit for starting on the road that the Senator says is a good road. Give us a little credit for going halfway toward where you want us to go instead of altogether throwing anathemas at us because we do not want to do it all at once. If the duty we have left on rice, which is a 50 per cent reduction, be an iniquity, then the duty you put on it was a double iniquity.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will give the Senator from Mississippi credit for every good thing in the bill, according to my judgment; and there are in this bill duties that I think are improvements on the present law, and for which, if I could, I should be glad to vote. But I can not vote for them without doing the grossest injustice to the agricultural interests of this country by deliberately, and I think outrageously, discriminating against the products of the American farmer in favor of the products of the American manufacturer. Those who represent districts that contain these factories and are familiar with the conditions that prevail therein, can discuss the question as to whether or not the duties here afford sufficient protection. But representing an agricultural State I feel it my duty, in the name of justice to the farmers of the country, the bone and sinew of American citizenship, to denounce a bill that discriminates against them from one end to the other, and puts them in direct competition with the farmers of the world, regardless of conditions; while on the very article that is now under discussion the duty in the present law is maintained because it is alleged by those in charge of the bill that to remove it would injure the factories that produce the commodity.

Mr. President, I move to amend by——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator used the expression that this bill deliberately and outrageously discriminated against the farmer. I have a great deal of respect for the Senator's intellectual integrity. I believe in it. Does the Senator mean to say that he believes in his own heart of hearts that the Democrats in the House and in the Senate have, with deliberate purpose, gone about a scheme of trying to injure the American farmer? Does he believe that?

Mr. BRISTOW. I should not want to attribute to the Senator from Mississippi and his Democratic colleagues any such unworthy purpose.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But the Senator used that language. The Senator said "deliberately and outrageously."

Mr. BRISTOW. I should not want to attribute a vicious purpose to the Senators who constructed the bill. Personally, I have a very high regard for them; and I have respect for their opinions, though I think they are grossly wrong in judgment in many instances. So I will not say that the Senators deliberately undertook to injure the American farmer. I will say, however, that the bill that was prepared as a result of their deliberations will injure the American farmer. It may not have been the intention of the Senators who constructed the bill to injure the American farmer, but they have done so, nevertheless.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I think it would be well to allow the Senator from Kansas to offer his amendment.

Mr. BRISTOW. I move, Mr. President——

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator yield for just a moment before he makes his motion?

Mr. BRISTOW. I will.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Before the Senator sits down I want to ask him one question. Is he aware of the fact that we have put a greater sum in valuation of manufactured products upon the free list than we have of farmers' products in the pending bill?

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course I am not familiar with the general averages or percentages. Indeed, I do not attach much weight to a general percentage in a bill containing thousands of items.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But I asked whether the Senator was aware that we have put many more thousands of dollars' worth of manufactured products upon the free list than we have of agricultural products?

Mr. BRISTOW. I am not familiar with the total figures. In discussing this bill I expect to deal with the articles just as

I am endeavoring to deal with this item, which I think is grossly wrong.

Mr. STONE. Did I understand the Senator from Kansas to make a motion?

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator yielded to me for just a minute.

Mr. BRISTOW. I withheld the motion at the request of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I desire to ask one other question of the Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON] or the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], because I think both of them take the same position.

In the pending bill potatoes are free. Potato starch carries a duty of 1 cent per pound. Dextrine made from potato starch carries a duty of 1½ cents a pound. If I understood the Senators aright, they stated that that was done as a differential between the raw material and the finished product of starch, and then a differential between the starch and the dextrine. Am I correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. A differential between the starch and the dextrine; yes.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, of course, if it is a differential between the starch and the dextrine, it certainly is between the potatoes and the starch. I will let it stand, then, as a differential between potato starch and dextrine. The Senator recognizes the fact——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. While I am on my feet I wish to answer the question more fully, if the Senator will permit me.

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] labors under a false impression. I tried to make the statement to him that the potatoes that go into the starch factories are not the marketable potatoes. The starch factories existing there are really of great benefit to the farmers in that section, and they themselves are interested in those factories.

Mr. SMOOT. We have left out the differential between the potatoes and the starch, and we come now to the differential between the potato starch and the dextrine which is made from potato starch. As I understand, the Senator thinks that is proper. Then, if that principle be correct, can the Senator tell me why in the case of all of the balsams advanced in any condition you impose a duty of 15 per cent, and at the same identical time you impose a duty of only 15 per cent upon all chemical compounds made from balsams?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, that may involve a knowledge of medical compounds which I do not possess. I do not know but that the Senator from Utah has that knowledge. I imagine it is a very simple matter for druggists to use a balsam in compounding a medicine; and I have an idea that the process can not be, or ought not to be, compared with the process which takes place in converting starch into dextrine.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, Mr. President, that is true. The Senator is correct in saying they should not be compared, because of the fact that the process of taking the balsams and producing a medical compound from them is exceedingly more difficult than the production of dextrine from starch. I call attention to the fact simply to show the inconsistencies of the rates of the bill.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I do not intend to prolong very much the discussion in regard to potatoes, but I was very much impressed with an illustration used by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]. He said the Democrats found this country on stilts—stilts provided in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. I agree with the Senator from Mississippi that the Payne-Aldrich tariff law gives to the American body, or the American legs, stilts that are altogether too high, but I think the way in which to reduce those stilts is to saw off a fair length from both legs. The Senator from Mississippi seems to think that the way in which to proceed is to saw off one leg entirely and leave the other substantially as long as it has been.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, Mr. President——

Mr. CUMMINS. I think that will produce a very disjointed, a very perverted sort of industrial body. I think we ought to cut down evenly, and that the agricultural leg ought not to be made much shorter than the manufacturing leg.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator this question: Does the Senator assert now, or will he assert, that we have not reduced duties upon manufactures every bit as much as we have upon agricultural products in this bill?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not think you have.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And that the percentage of reduction, upon examination, will be found to be equal or greater?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not believe it will be found as great on manufactures as on agricultural products.

Mr. WILLIAMS. We found one leg longer than the other was when we came to it, and we have taken off an equal measure from both legs, and the poor, crippled thing will still go stumbling along the way you had it already stumbling along.

Mr. CUMMINS. If the Democratic Party is to fulfill its mission and it has found one leg longer than the other it ought to have evened them up——

Mr. WILLIAMS. But——

Mr. CUMMINS. And not to have left the American body a cripple, as it was left, according to the view of the Senator from Mississippi, by the Republicans.

Mr. WILLIAMS. We struck a poor fellow who had gotten so in the habit of walking with one leg longer than the other we were afraid we would kill him if we made him walk all at once on equal legs. He did not know how to walk on legs of the same length at all.

Mr. CUMMINS. I think the Senator from Mississippi is now disclosing the truth. He has deliberately taken off one of the legs of this great industrial body, at least the artificial part of it, and has left the other reduced somewhat, but more misshapen than it was before.

Now, why did not the Democrats join with the proposition made by those who really wanted to reduce the tariff and bring about some uniformity in the body of this great American people? If the Senator from Mississippi had wanted, as it seems to me, to have produced what might be called a fair and even condition among the people of the United States, he would have preserved upon agriculture the same measure of duty that he gave to manufactures.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, if there is a duty of 10 per cent upon a product and you put it on the free list, you have reduced the duty 10 per cent. If there is a duty of 60 per cent upon a product and you reduce it to 30 per cent, you have reduced the duty 50 per cent. The fact that when you get through with the reduction your reduction of only 10 per cent leaves one thing upon the free list and the other upon the dutiable list has nothing to do with the question.

I see the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] shaking his head at me, from which I imagine that he imagines that a reduction from 60 per cent down to 30 per cent would not be a half reduction, or a reduction of 50 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. No, Mr. President; suppose that 10 per cent had been reduced to 5 per cent; that would have been 50 per cent. If you reduce it 10 per cent or it goes on the free list, that is only a 10 per cent reduction.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, no.

Mr. SMOOT. That is what the Senator said.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That does not follow. When I take 10 per cent off a thing which bears 10 per cent and take 30 per cent off a thing which bears 60 per cent, I have reduced the duty in that case three times as much as I have in the first. If I reduce a duty from 10 to 5 per cent, I have taken off 5 per cent, and if I had reduced the entire duty from 60 to 30 per cent I would have taken off 30 per cent; and I would have reduced the duty in the latter case six times as much as I did in the other. I thought the Senator from Utah was smiling before he knew what he was smiling at.

Mr. SMOOT. No.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I did not see the Senator from Utah smile, and so I do not know what he meant by his smile. He has a great variety of expressions, as I suppose all of us have.

Now, I do not want to be jocular about it. The trouble with this bill is that the party that framed it did not pursue any principle whatsoever in reaching these duties. As I said the other day, it started out persuaded, I assume, that it ought to compose a tariff bill chiefly if not wholly for the purpose of raising a revenue. If that motive had absorbed the minds of the committee it would have given no attention whatever to the difference in the cost of production here and abroad. It would have paid no heed to that fact in fixing a particular duty. It would have gone on upon well-established lines and presented here a revenue tariff, and if it had presented a revenue tariff there would have been put upon the products of agriculture the same measure of duties, looking at the imports and probability of imports, that were put upon manufactured products.

But, as stated a moment ago by the Senator from Mississippi, it found some manufactures that could not be produced in this country if that plan had been pursued. Apparently it did not want to destroy entirely those domestic manufactures. Therefore, in many instances, as in the instance of dextrine, it has left a duty which I think is too high, higher than necessary to compensate between the cost of production here and abroad.

But passing over to an agricultural product, it then was confronted by the supposed necessity of reducing the price of things which people eat, and being confronted with that it gave no attention whatever to what was required by agriculture. It was willing to preserve the status quo, a portion of the status quo anyhow, with regard to manufactures, but it was willing to sacrifice the farmer, not because the Senator from Mississippi has any malice against the farmer, but because the thing that he produced passed into people's stomachs instead of being worn on their backs.

I assert here, as I shall assert everywhere, that a tariff composed upon that convoluted, distorted, warped, and mixed principle necessarily perpetrates a great injustice upon the American people.

I should like to see the manufacturing duties as they are in the Payne-Aldrich law generally reduced, but I am not willing to see the discrimination which is practiced in this bill.

A great many of the duties that are put upon manufactures here are insufficient. I know that a great many of them are inadequate, but a great many of them are abundantly high. Let me give an instance right here, as we are on this subject, and I should like to have an answer.

This bill puts a duty of 1 cent a pound upon potato starch, and it puts a duty of half a cent a pound on cornstarch. Why do you make that difference? I would like to know why you put a duty of a cent a pound upon potato starch and a duty of half a cent a pound on cornstarch.

Furthermore, I should like to know why you put a duty of a cent a pound on potato starch and a duty of half a cent a pound on cornstarch and allow tapioca flour and sago flour, which are starches and nothing else, to come in free. They are not produced in the United States at all, and yet they come into actual everyday competition with both potato starch and cornstarch. Of all the sago flour and tapioca flour brought into the United States last year, nine-tenths of it was used for starch and not for food.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Potato starch is not used as a diet. Tapioca flour and tapioca are foods.

Mr. CUMMINS. Oh, the Senator from New Jersey can not escape this inconsistency by that suggestion.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I speak not of the starch but of tapioca.

Mr. CUMMINS. A form of sago and tapioca is used for food, but the sago flour that comes in and the tapioca flour that comes in are not used for food. It comes in in a form called pearl flake, fit for food, and is then used for food.

But I say to the Senator from New Jersey, although I have not the figures immediately on my desk, as I remember it, more than nine-tenths of all these commodities that are brought in to compete with cornstarch and potato starch come in as sago flour and tapioca flour. If anyone on the other side of this Chamber can explain to me why the committee has put a duty of a cent a pound upon potato starch and half a cent a pound on cornstarch and no duty at all on sago starch and tapioca starch, he will have performed a task that looks to me impossible. There was more reason for putting a duty on sago and tapioca than upon potatoes or corn. Why? Neither of the former products is produced in the United States, and the revenue idea, as it seems to me, would have demanded that some duty be put upon those articles. But if it is said that we do allow them to come in free in order that the little, insignificant quantity that is used for food should not be taxed, tell me, then, why you tax rice, why you tax oatmeal, why you tax bananas, and why you tax things of that sort?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I will say that I am not here to defend the tax on rice or the tax on oatmeal or bananas.

Mr. CUMMINS. Of course not.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. There are some things that my conscience rebels against.

Mr. CUMMINS. We on this side—at least those who believe with me that we ought to pass through this measure and make reductions that would accommodate or fit the bill to meet the demands of this time—are simply amazed when we see that what is presented to us by our friends on the other side has inconsistency in every line and every paragraph, and collides with itself whenever we bring two parts of it together.

I will pause for an answer to the question I have just put.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator from Iowa inquired why the difference was made in the duty between potato starch and all other starches. I will say to the Senator that that same difference was made in the present law. The duty upon potato starch in the present law I read:

> Starch made from potatoes, 1½ cents per pound; all other starches, including all preparations from whatever substance used as starch, 1 cent per pound.

That is reduced to half a cent a pound in this bill, but in both measures there has been a difference between the two kinds of starches because of the difference in the cost of manufacture.

Mr. CUMMINS. But may I say to the Senator from Maine that he has disclaimed any intention of being governed or controlled by the difference in the cost of manufacture.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator from Iowa never heard me make the statement anywhere that we disregarded the cost of production or the cost of manufacturing. We have to take that into consideration with all other elements which are to be taken into consideration.

Mr. CUMMINS. The distinguished Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] made that statement when he presented the bill to the Senate. He adopted the views of the majority of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, in which the cost of production as being material to duties upon commodities was entirely repudiated and rejected.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I did not so understand the Senator from North Carolina to state; but that that was not the controlling factor and not to be the controlling factor in adjusting tariff duties, because of the fact which was evident here only at the last session, of the great difficulty in ascertaining the difference in the cost of production. In the cost of the manufacture of paper between the cost in this country and over in the other country, a contiguous country, we found a great difference between the cost there and in the mills of this country, and the cost there, too, varied.

So far as I have any opinion about it, and so far as I have been guided, I will say to the Senator that we have not disregarded, and I do not understand my colleagues who have served with me have disregarded, entirely the cost of the manufacture of an article, but have taken that not as the controlling factor, but as one of the factors to be considered in arriving at a just and fair rate of duty in dealing with conditions as we found them.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I can not understand——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. One other observation, if the Senator will pardon me. He also stated that we have placed sago and sago flour upon the free list. They were upon the free list, and we have made no change in them. The only change is that we have cut the duty upon potato starch and the duty upon other starch, and then as to dextrine we tried to make the duty correspond to the duty upon the raw material from which the different dextrines are made.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I do not accept the answer just made by the Senator from Maine as sufficient, although he undoubtedly believes it so. Because these duties were improperly adjusted in the Payne-Aldrich bill is no defense against an improper adjustment in this bill. It is difficult for me, of course, to consider the case from that standpoint, because there were so many things that were wrong in the Payne-Aldrich bill. Nothing illustrates that better than the reference just made by the Senator from Maine with regard to sago flour and tapioca flour. Of course, we all understand that these importations are required in the manufacture mainly of cotton goods, and the manufacturer of cotton goods wanted to get this starch just as cheaply as possible. It was observed when the Payne-Aldrich bill was under consideration that a great wrong was being done, and upon the floor of the Senate, after debate, a duty was attached to sago and tapioca not in edible form. That was the judgment of the Senate. The bill passed in that way to a conference committee, and when it emerged from the conference committee sago and tapioca were on the free list, put there, as I have always believed, under the influence of those who wanted their raw material free. I would have cared nothing about that save that this starch comes into direct competition with cornstarch and potato starch, and it seemed to me most unfair to impose a duty on one kind and allow the other to come in free.

I am sorry that the Senator from Maine has, probably without any investigation whatever, adopted the wrong that was done in 1909 and perpetuated it in this bill by putting these two commodities on the free list, whereas they ought to bear a reasonable duty. They ought to bear as high a duty at least as cornstarch. They really ought to bear as high a duty as potato starch. The truth is that, so far as I know, there is not a single reason for not attaching a common uniform duty to all these starches.

I hope that the majority members of the Finance Committee, having now seen that there is no justification for the classification which has been made and that an injustice is being done by continuing that classification, will recall this paragraph and the one in the free list, and will right the wrong that began long ago.

Mr. SIMMONS. I wish to inquire what amendment is now pending.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The committee amendment is before the Senate.

Mr. BRISTOW. I move to amend, on line 3, page 10, by striking out "and one-half."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 10, line 3, after "one," strike out "and one-half," and strike out "cents" and insert "cent," so that if amended it will read:

Dextrine, made from potato starch or potato flour, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I desire to say that this places the same duty on dextrine made from potato starch that is imposed on the potato starch. The present law imposes the same duty on potato starch and dextrine, a cent and a half on each. The House reduced those duties to 1 cent on the starch and to three-fourths of a cent on the dextrines. I can readily see that there should not be a less duty on the dextrine made from the starch than on the starch itself; but since the present law imposes the same duty on both and since the duty on starch is reduced from 1½ cents to 1 cent, since the manufacturer of starch under this bill receives his potatoes free, I can not see why this one-half cent additional should be added; that is, I can not understand why the dextrine should carry the same duty as the Payne-Aldrich law when the article from which it is made is put on the free list, and when it carried a duty of 25 cents a bushel before.

I believe that a cent a pound is enough for both these articles with a reasonable duty on potatoes also. So I probably will move to amend as to potatoes when we reach that part of the bill. I certainly do not see how our friends who are in favor of reducing duties can put the raw material on the free list when it now carries a duty, and then carry the same duties on the manufactured product that we have now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BRISTOW. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRYAN (when Mr. FLETCHER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. FLETCHER] is absent on public business. He is paired with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN].

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I desire to transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN] and vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. REED. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote "nay."

Mr. CHILTON. I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON] to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] and vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER. I wish to announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] is paired with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA].

Mr. MYERS. I inquire if the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with that Senator. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] and vote "nay."

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] are unavoidably detained from the Senate. I shall let this announcement stand for the day.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 46, as follows:

YEAS—29.

Borah	Colt	Kenyon	Smoot
Bradley	Crawford	La Follette	Sterling
Brady	Cummins	Nelson	Sutherland
Bristow	Dillingham	Norris	Townsend
Burton	Gallinger	Page	Works
Catron	Goff	Perkins
Clapp	Gronna	Poindexter
Clark, Wyo.	Jones	Sherman

NAYS—46.

Ashurst	Johnston, Ala.	Pomerene	Smith, Md.
Bacon	Kern	Ransdell	Smith, S. C.
Bankhead	Lane	Reed	Swanson
Brandegee	Lewis	Robinson	Thomas
Bryan	Lodge	Saulsbury	Thompson
Chamberlain	Martine, N. J.	Shafroth	Thornton
Chilton	Myers	Sheppard	Tillman
Clarke, Ark.	O'Gorman	Shields	Walsh
Hollis	Oliver	Shively	Weeks
Hughes	Overman	Simmons	Williams
James	Owen	Smith, Ariz.
Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Smith, Ga.

NOT VOTING—21.

Burleigh	Hitchcock	Martin, Va.	Stone
Culberson	Jackson	Newlands	Vardaman
du Pont	Lea	Penrose	Warren
Fall	Lippitt	Root
Fletcher	McCumber	Smith, Mich.
Gore	McLean	Stephenson

So Mr. BRISTOW's amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed on page 10, line 6, paragraph 38, as follows:

38. Ink and ink powders, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I regard that duty as altogether too low, but I do not care to enter into any discussion of it or to delay the Senate by asking for a useless vote. I will, however, request that a letter of one or two pages in reference to the matter may be printed in the RECORD, without reading.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

THE CARTER'S INK CO.,
Boston, Mass., March 20, 1913.

Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We thank you for your favor of the 14th instant and for the copy of the tariff bill referred to therein.

We fear we shall not be able to be represented at any of the hearings before the Finance Committee of the Senate, and we shall therefore appreciate it if you will present to the committee some of the following points:

It is impossible, of course, for us to know with absolute certainty what it costs our foreign competitors to produce packages of inks and adhesives similar to ours, but we can get a pretty accurate general idea from some of the prices which we find them making continually in competition with us.

The smallest and cheapest package which we are able to produce is a one-ounce bottle of ink, which costs us on our shipping floor $1.83 per gross. We might make this a little cheaper by sacrificing all the attractiveness and convenience of the label and stopper, but any such saving would be a matter of a few cents at the outside.

On the other hand, we have taken the nearest similar packages of five of our principal English and German competitors, some of which are actually larger than ours, and find that the regular selling prices of these packages in the markets of the world run from 84 cents a gross to $1.26, averaging $1.12. Assuming that all these competitors are selling their goods at cost, which is hardly to be supposed, it appears that their manufacturing cost is 39 per cent less than ours, and as a matter of fact the percentage must be even greater than this.

On mucilage the situation is similar. Our cheapest package costs us on the shipping floor $1.90, and those of the same competitors range from 96 cents to $1.62 in their regular selling prices, so that their average cost, assuming that they are selling at cost, is 34 per cent less than ours.

We meet some of these competing manufacturers only in foreign markets, but two of the English manufacturers have for years had an established trade in the United States and Canada, while the Germans, as well as the English, constitute our strongest competition in the South American field, which we and other American manufacturers are endeavoring to develop. The Germans are already solidly established in Mexico, and there is no apparent reason why they should not at any time attempt to enter the United States market. A reduction such as is contemplated by the proposed bill would, of course, be a direct encouragement to them to do so, and also to our English competitors to renew their efforts.

It seems clear to us that the former duty on ink of 33⅓ per cent was quite as low as it should be in order to take care of the actual difference in manufacturing costs for these products in the United States and abroad. While we have continued to hold our own, in spite of the last reduction, it seems as if there could be no good reason for a further reduction, unless the most moderate basis of protection is to be disregarded. Our industry is a small one as compared with most of those which occupy the attention of Congress and of the country, but we do not imagine nevertheless that any except outright free traders would therefore contend that it was not equally entitled to protection.

We trust you may be able to secure a restoration of the higher rate.

Yours, very truly,

THE CARTER'S INK CO.,
RICHARD B. CARTER, President.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 10, line 11, paragraph 40, after the words "licorice root," to strike out "unground"; so as to make the paragraph read:

40. Leaves and roots: Buchu leaves, 10 cents per pound; coca leaves, 10 cents per pound; gentian, ¼ cent per pound; licorice root, ¼ cent per pound; sarsaparilla root, 1 cent per pound.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, every one of the items contained in that paragraph, with one exception, is now free from duty. There is at present a duty of 5 cents a pound on coca leaves. The same principles are in a measure involved in this case as those in regard to camphor. There seems to have been an impression that coca leaves are used for purposes that are injurious; but they are also used for the preparation of cocaine, which is absolutely necessary in surgery and an essential article.

I move to strike out "Buchu leaves, 10 cents per pound," in that paragraph.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 10, line 9, paragraph 40, after the word "roots," it is proposed to strike out "Buchu leaves, 10 cents per pound"; and to begin the following word, "coca," with a capital "C."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BURTON. I now move to strike out the latter part of the paragraph, beginning with the word "gentian," in line 10.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 10, line 10, paragraph 40, after the word "pound," it is proposed to strike out:

Gentian, ½ cent per pound; licorice root, ½ cent per pound; sarsaparilla root, 1 cent per pound.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed, on page 10, line 13, as follows:

41. Licorice, extracts of, in pastes, rolls, or other forms, 1 cent per pound.

42. Lime, citrate of, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. BURTON. I move to strike out paragraph 42.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio moves to strike out paragraph 42, which has just been read.

Mr. BURTON. It is to strike out the duty of 1 cent per pound proposed to be imposed on citrate of lime. That is a raw material, which is now free. The importations of that article are more than 5,000,000 pounds. It is an article extensively used, and the raw material is not produced in this country.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I make the same announcement as to my pair and its transfer as I did on the preceding roll call and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I transfer the pair which I have with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I wish to transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to my colleague, the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN] and to vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. THOMAS. I transfer my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. SHIELDS. I desire to announce that my colleague, the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA], is necessarily absent on business, and that he is paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON].

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN (after having voted in the negative). I notice that the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] has not voted, and I therefore withdraw my vote. I have a general pair with that Senator.

The result was announced—yeas 30, nays 42, as follows:

YEAS—30.

Bradley	Colt	La Follette	Smoot
Brady	Crawford	Lodge	Sterling
Brandegee	Cummins	Nelson	Sutherland
Bristow	Dillingham	Norris	Townsend
Burton	Gallinger	Page	Weeks
Catron	Gronna	Perkins	Works
Clapp	Jones	Poindexter
Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Sherman

NAYS—42.

Ashurst	Johnston, Ala.	Ransdell	Smith, S. C.
Bacon	Kern	Reed	Stone
Bankhead	Lane	Robinson	Swanson
Borah	Lewis	Saulsbury	Thomas
Bryan	Martine, N. J.	Shafroth	Thompson
Chilton	Myers	Sheppard	Thornton
Clarke, Ark.	O'Gorman	Shields	Tillman
Hollis	Overman	Shively	Walsh
Hughes	Owen	Simmons	Williams
James	Pittman	Smith, Ga.
Johnson, Me.	Pomerene	Smith, Md.

NOT VOTING—24.

Burleigh	Goff	McCumber	Root
Chamberlain	Gore	McLean	Smith, Ariz.
Culberson	Hitchcock	Martin, Va.	Smith, Mich.
du Pont	Jackson	Newlands	Stephenson
Fall	Lea	Oliver	Vardaman
Fletcher	Lippitt	Penrose	Warren

So Mr. BURTON's amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed, on page 10, line 16, with paragraph 43, as follows:

43. Magnesia: Calcined, 3½ cents per pound; carbonate of, precipitated, 1½ cents per pound; sulphate of, or Epsom salts, one-tenth cent per pound.

44. Menthol, 50 cents per pound.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator in charge of this portion of the bill what is the object of the increased duty contained in the last paragraph read? I understand it is an increase over the present law. I refer to the clause in reference to menthol.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, it is merely a revenue duty. Menthol is imported.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, Mr. President, can the Senator give me any information as to the production of it?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. There is no production in this country, I will say to the Senator; it is imported. The figures show that in 1912 we imported $200,000 worth, on which there were collected duties amounting to $50,000. The rate has not been raised. The Senator is wrong about that. The rate under the present law is 25 per cent. We propose a specific duty of 50 cents a pound, which is equivalent to an ad valorem of 16.67—a considerable reduction.

Mr. NORRIS. Now, I should like to ask the Senator if it is not an article of common use in medicine?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is used in medicine.

Mr. NORRIS. Is there any other reason for putting any duty on it except to raise revenue?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. As I said, the duty has been imposed for the purposes of revenue only.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to ask the Senator if this paragraph were stricken out, would this article under this bill go into what is known as the basket clause?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It would go into the basket clause at 15 per cent.

Mr. NORRIS. I am much obliged to the Senator. Mr. President, it seems to me that this article ought to be on the free list.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is the proposed ad valorem rate?

Mr. NORRIS. It is estimated here to be 16.67 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. WILLIAMS. May I ask the Senator why he thinks it ought to be on the free list?

Mr. NORRIS. Because, in the first place, it is an article, as I understand, of common use in medicine, and not produced in this country.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, Mr. President, the first reason is a very good one——

Mr. NORRIS. So that it is putting a direct tax on those who must use it in the case of sickness. In my opinion, such articles ought to be placed on the free list.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, the Senator has given two reasons. The first one has some reason in it and perhaps some merit in it, but the second reason has none at all, to wit, that the article is not produced in this country. That is a recommendation. Where you want to raise revenue it is well, wherever you can, to raise it upon products that are not produced in this country, because, then, when subsequently you either lower the rate or raise the duty you do not disturb domestic business conditions.

There is another good reason why it is preeminently fitted to raise revenue, and that is, that every dollar which the consumer pays upon it goes into the people's Treasury. Therefore, what the American citizen pays in his individual capacity comes back to him in his collective capacity.

I hope the Senator will not forget the difference between the standpoint of the two parties upon this question. He may regard it as very reprehensible to put a duty upon an article that is not produced here, whereas we regard it as an ideal revenue article, first, because every dollar of it goes into the Treasury and none of it into private pockets, and, secondly, because you can change the laws of your country afterwards with regard to an article like that to meet revenue necessities and raise or lower the duty without disturbing any domestic business.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Certainly.

Mr. POINDEXTER. It is just as much of a tax upon the consumer, is it not, as when levied on the manufactured article?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Absolutely. It is just as much of a tax upon the consumer as if a part of it went into the pockets of the manufacturer; but the consumer has the consolation of knowing that what he has paid as a citizen in his individual capacity has been received by the American people, of whom he is one, in a collective capacity. That is the difference.

Nobody disputes the right of the Government to levy a tax. The Government has a right to levy a tax of 100 per cent upon me if it is necessary to carry on the Government; it has a right to levy a tax upon my very life if necessary to save the life of the Republic; but the Government, according to our standpoint, has no right, although we are here in this bill respecting a lot of vested wrongs, to levy a tax for the purpose of enriching or profiting somebody else. Therefore an ideal article for a revenue duty is an article which is not produced in the United States.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Mississippi has fairly stated the difference in principle. He believes in the principle of a tariff for revenue only, and it is true, as the Senator has said, that you will get the largest amount of revenue if you levy the tax upon something that is not produced in this country.

The Senator concedes that there is something in the other reason I gave. To me and to those who believe as I do, in a reasonable protection, the fact as to whether something is or can be produced in this country has a great deal to do with the levying of a tax upon any article of commerce that is imported into the country. This, in my judgment, however, even though I believed in a tariff for revenue, would be the last place where I should want to levy tribute.

The Senator says, and he says truly, that the Government has a right to levy a hundred per cent, if it wants to, upon any individual or upon any particular article. The right and reason of it are, however, two different things, in my judgment. This, as the Senator has said, is an instance where there is no doubt, no dispute between any of us that the consumer will have to pay the amount of the tax as levied and, as the Senator says, it is levied upon the people who use it and the contribution goes to all of the people in their collective capacity. It seems to me that is levying a tax upon those who are in distress and who are sick; and that is the last place to which we ought to ask the Government to reach out its hand and levy a tax for the support of the Government. It seems to me that it is one of the instances where there should be absolute free trade in the article.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me, he has used the phrase "levying a tax." I beg to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the tax is already levied at the rate of 25 per cent, and that this bill reduces it to 16.6 per cent; in other words, it reduces it about one-third.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I understand that; but I am surprised that Senators on the other side should so often defend the much condemned Payne bill. I think that the proposed rate of the bill, if the ad valorem is figured correctly—and I presume it is—is an improvement over the present law; but, because there is something wrong—and there are a great many things wrong in the present law—is no reason why, in my judgment, something that should not at all be burdened with taxation should be included in the list of those things that must pay a tariff. This rate is high; it is 50 cents a pound, which amounts to an ad valorem duty, as estimated by the committee, of practically 17 per cent. It seems to me, therefore, Mr. President, that the motion I have made ought to prevail, and if it does I desire to give notice that when we come to the free list I will make a motion to put this article on the free list.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. It seems to me—and although the Senator has been bringing it forward, I think it well deserves emphasis—that a broad distinction has always been made in taxation on consumption between articles of voluntary and articles of involuntary use.

Mr. NORRIS. I think so.

Mr. LODGE. Tobacco and wine, for instance, are taxed by all nations. They are articles of consumption, but of voluntary use, while medicines that must be used by the sick are articles of involuntary use.

Mr. NORRIS. If there is anything that is a necessity, it seems to me it is medicine that must be purchased in case of sickness. Moreover, the amount of medicine that must be purchased by the poor is just as great and the price is just as high as when purchased by those who can better afford it. Therefore, Mr. President, I move to strike out the paragraph; and, as I have already said, if the motion prevails, when we get to the free list I will make a motion to put the article on the free list, so that it will not fall in the basket clause. On my amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I repeat my announcement of my pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON]. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. DILLINGHAM (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I have a standing pair with the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] to the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. He is absent. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER]. In his absence, I desire to withdraw my vote.

Mr. ROBINSON. I desire to announce that my colleague, the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE], is necessarily absent from the Chamber on important public business. He is, however, paired with the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND].

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 40, as follows:

YEAS—28.

Bradley	Clark, Wyo.	Jones	Perkins
Brady	Colt	Kenyon	Poindexter
Brandegee	Crawford	La Follette	Sherman
Bristow	Cummins	Lodge	Smoot
Burton	Gallinger	Nelson	Townsend
Catron	Goff	Norris	Weeks
Clapp	Gronna	Page	Works

NAYS—40.

Ashurst	Kern	Ransdell	Smith, Md.
Bacon	Lane	Reed	Smith, S. C.
Bankhead	Lewis	Robinson	Stone
Borah	Martin, Va.	Saulsbury	Swanson
Bryan	Martine, N. J.	Sheppard	Thomas
Hollis	O'Gorman	Shields	Thompson
Hughes	Overman	Shively	Thornton
James	Owen	Simmons	Tillman
Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Smith, Ariz.	Vardaman
Johnston, Ala.	Pomerene	Smith, Ga.	Walsh

NOT VOTING—28.

Burleigh	Fall	McCumber	Shafroth
Chamberlain	Fletcher	McLean	Smith, Mich.
Chilton	Gore	Myers	Stephenson
Clarke, Ark.	Hitchcock	Newlands	Sterling
Culberson	Jackson	Oliver	Sutherland
Dillingham	Lea	Penrose	Warren
du Pont	Lippitt	Root	Williams

So Mr. NORRIS's amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 45, page 11, as follows:

45. Oils, rendered: Sod, seal, herring, and other fish oil, not specially provided for in this section, 3 cents per gallon; whale oil, 5 cents per gallon; sperm oil, 8 cents per gallon; wool grease, including that known commercially as degras or brown wool grease, crude and not refined or improved in value or condition, ½ cent per pound; refined or improved in value or condition, and not specially provided for in this section, ¾ cent per pound; lanolin, 1 cent per pound; all other animal oils, rendered oils and greases, and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill why it is that the committee has increased the rate upon lanolin.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Lanolin is an improved or refined wool grease. I think it came in as refined wool grease.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. When marked as lanolin and imported as lanolin, a rate is provided here different from the rate on wool grease.

Mr. SMOOT. It is a refined wool grease, and under the present law, by a decision of the courts, it enters this country at one-half cent per pound. The committee increased that rate from one-half cent to 1 cent a pound.

I move, in the case of lanolin, to strike out "1" and insert "½."

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, as I understand, lanolin, as has been said, is a refined wool grease. I should like to inquire why it is that as soon as the wool leaves the sheep's back the committee proposes to begin to tax the wool and its various by-products?

The same principle is involved here that was involved in the potato and dextrine discussion. Wool is put on the free list; that is, the product of those who produce the wool. It is the finished product of the farmer, the man who owns the sheep. When it leaves his hands it then takes a protective duty, not only in its principal products, but in its by-products as well.

I should like to know why it is any more desirable to put a duty on the grease that is extracted from the wool than on the wool before the grease is extracted.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, this particular article is a medicinal preparation, on which it is proposed greatly to increase the duty—in fact, to double it. It is used very largely in medicine.

Mr. BRISTOW. As the Senator from New Hampshire says, this particular product of wool grease is a medicine.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has been so decided by the courts in a test case.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator will yield, I do not suppose he directed his query to me; but if no one else will answer, I will suggest that it seems to me it can be easily answered. The duty under consideration is levied against some one who is sick and helpless and can not defend himself. It is a good place to put it on.

Mr. BRISTOW. But, as I said in the discussion this afternoon, the gravest objection I have to this bill is its unwarranted discrimination. I should like to have some one who is in favor of the bill, if he will, tell me why the man who takes the grease from the wool is entitled to a protective duty on the grease when he gets it out, while the farmer who grows the wool on the back of the sheep is not given any protection on the wool and the grease.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, I will say that in the case of all of these rendered oils there has been a large reduction from the present duty. The rate in the present law is an average of 25 per cent ad valorem. The specific rates we fix here approximate 15 per cent ad valorem, so as to correspond with the provision at the end of the paragraph for greases not specifically enumerated in the paragraph. Lanolin before this bore a duty of 25 per cent. We made the duty 1 cent per pound, because the product varies largely in value, and that, as given here in the handbook, is a little over 8 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator must know that after the court decision as to what lanolin really was, it came in at one-half cent per pound.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. If it is marked as lanolin and comes in as a medicine, this duty applies. Put up as such, it comes in as lanolin.

Mr. BRISTOW. Does the Senator from Maine concede as correct the statement the Senator from Utah has made, that under a court decision the present duty on this article, lanolin, is half a cent per pound?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is 25 per cent ad valorem, as given in the handbook here.

Mr. BRISTOW. In the handbook, yes; but the Senator from Utah states that under a court decision the duty that has been collected and is now being collected is but half a cent a pound.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. When it could not be distinguished, was not marked as lanolin, and did not come put up as lanolin, it might come in as refined wool grease, so I have been informed by the importers, and then it bore a duty of half a cent a pound.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator is wrong, because in the case of Koechl against United States the court decided that when it was a medicinal compound it came in at half a cent a pound. Since that decision it has always come in as a medicinal compound at half a cent a pound. Now the duty is increased 100 per cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It seems from the book here that whatever came in in 1912 came in at a duty of 25 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. I know the duty was 25 per cent before the court's decision, but since the decision, as the Senator will find if he will write to the New York appraisers, it has come into the United States at half a cent a pound under that decision.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, it will still come in at half a cent a pound unless it is described as lanolin. Is not that correct?

Mr. SMOOT. No; if it is described as lanolin, it will come in at 25 per cent. That is the trouble with the bill. If you will make that half a cent a pound, you will have the same rate that we have to-day.

Mr. BRISTOW. That, of course, the committee will doubtless correct. Evidently it is a mistake. I do not think they intended to double the duty that now prevails on this article. But my question, which I should like to have answered if any Senator will answer it for me, is as to why there should be a duty on the grease which is taken out of the wool when there is no duty on the wool.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The same thing might be said of fish oil and the other rendered oils in the same paragraph. Fish is upon the free list in the bill, while the oil extracted from the fish by rendering bears a duty. The paragraph as we found it, as I say, bore a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem. We have reduced the duty to an equivalent ad valorem of 15 per cent, making no distinction between wool grease and fish oil and whale oil and the other rendered oils, but making a large reduction.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will leave the discussion of lanolin to other parties; but the Senator has stated the fact. I understand the fact. I understand that wool is on the free list. The objection I am offering is that the man who produces the wool and puts it upon the market, that being the result of his labor and his effort, is not protected, while——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BRISTOW. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Is it the Senator's position that whatever is made from an article that is on the free list should itself be on the free list? Does the Senator contend that in every instance where a raw material is upon the free list the manufactured product should be upon the free list?

Mr. BRISTOW. No; the Senator from Kansas never has taken any such position as that. The Senator from Kansas is undertaking to find out why, when wool—not every other article, but wool—is put on the free list, the grease that is taken out of the wool should be dutiable.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The same question might be asked as to fish and all other animal oils. They are on the free list.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; but I am asking as to wool.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They are on the free list, but the oils produced from them are on the dutiable list.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am not asking as to fish. The inquiry I make is in regard to wool.

Mr. CUMMINS. I should like to ask the Senator from Kansas, if he has looked into the matter, how it happened that in 1912 this commodity was worth 61.3 cents per pound, according to this statement, and it is estimated that for the future it will be worth only 12 cents per pound?

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will look a little further he will see that in 1910 it was worth only 11 cents per pound.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The "6" has been put in the wrong place. It should be "13.6." It is evidently a misprint.

Mr. HUGHES. Yes; I noticed there was a misprint there.

Mr. CUMMINS. There are so many of these misprints that one does not know when to rely upon these figures.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. It shows very clearly that it is a misprint.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am waiting for a reply from somebody responsible for this bill as to why a duty is put on the grease that is taken out of the wool when there is no duty on the wool. What is the principle of it?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have replied to the Senator. I see no difference between wool and any of the other articles from which greases and oils are extracted. We have placed a duty upon them here for revenue purposes and have not taken into consideration in this connection wool itself, any more than we have fish or cattle or any of the other articles from which oils are rendered.

Mr. BRISTOW. If this duty is imposed for revenue, does not the Senator think a duty on wool would be very much more productive of revenue than this?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We are not discussing the question of wool. We are discussing oil and grease, and that is what I understood the Senator to discuss. We will come to wool later.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am very sorry, but I have been trying to find out why this article has a duty. The Senator states now that other oils have duties, and therefore this has; but I do not think the Senator put a duty on this simply because some other oil had a duty.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, I see no reason why the oil from wool and the oil from fish and cattle should not all be treated alike.

Mr. BRISTOW. Then I will ask why a duty is put on the oil of wool or of fish? Why should the man who takes the grease out of wool or the oil out of fish be protected and the man that raises the sheep and shears the wool or catches the fish not be taken into consideration? Why should this discrimination be made?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. As a Yankee, I will do what a Yankee always has a right to do—answer one question by asking another. I will ask the Senator from Kansas again if he believes that wherever raw materials are free the articles manufactured from those raw materials should be free?

Mr. BRISTOW. No; I very readily answer the Senator. I do not think that principle is a sound one. I am not asking for any general proposition, however.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Then why does the Senator insist that because wool is on the free list any oil or grease made from wool should be on the free list?

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to the fact that oils, generally speaking, are not on the dutiable list. If the Senator will turn to paragraph 566 of the free list, he will find that birch tar, cajeput, coconut, cod, cod-liver, cottonseed, croton, and several other kinds of oil that I shall not attempt to pronounce, many other kinds of oil, are on the free list. Why should not these oils also be on the free list?

Mr. SMOOT. And they cost more to extract than lanolin costs.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In reply to the question of the Senator from Iowa, I will say that the oils enumerated in paragraph 566, as the Senator from Utah knows, are largely used in the manufacture of paints and varnishes. Chinese nut oil, soya-bean oil, and so forth, have always been upon the free list. We made a very heavy cut in all paints and varnishes, cutting them from 30 per cent to 15 per cent ad valorem. They have always had these oils which are used in making paints and varnishes upon the free list, and at this time, when we made this very deep cut in the duties on paints and varnishes, it did not seem fair to the committee to put their raw materials upon the dutiable list.

Mr. SMOOT. Can the Senator, then, give any reason why——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let us go ahead in solos and not have duets.

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator from Utah if he desires to be recognized.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas yields to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. I was going to ask the Senator what excuse there is for putting expressed oils on the dutiable list, as has been done here, particularly those that have been mentioned, and then putting upon the dutiable list the distilled and essential oils that have been on the free list for years?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am very willing to answer the question. Those oils enter into the manufacture of perfumeries and articles which are luxuries, and which can well bear the duty. We have given a high rate upon perfumeries—a higher rate than in the Payne bill—but they go into articles which are luxuries.

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator say the committee has given a higher rate on perfumeries than was given in the Payne-Aldrich bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is about the same rate. We raised it from 50 per cent, I think, to about 60 per cent.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Referring particularly to the answer just made to the Senator from Utah by the Senator from Maine, when he says that the committee have placed the other oils mentioned on the dutiable list because they are used in the making of perfumery, which is a luxury——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That was my answer.

Mr. NORRIS. Why should the committee raise the duty on the particular oil about which the Senator from Kansas is inquiring, and which, as I understand, is a medicine?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We have not raised the duty; we have reduced the duty. When it comes in under the trademark "lanolin," and it does so come in, as a medicinal preparation, it has to bear the duty which is given here.

Mr. NORRIS. As I understand, the raw material out of which this product is made is placed on the free list.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Therefore that in itself would have a tendency to make it necessary, if you wanted to equalize it, to lower the duty on the product. It seems to me that this is an instance where the theory of the Senator ought to operate practically to put this particular article on the free list; because, as I understand the facts, it is not only a necessity, but a necessity in case of sickness and distress.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We have reduced the duty from 25 per cent to 8 per cent.

Mr. BRISTOW. But the court decision——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I mean upon the article when it comes in under its trade name, "lanolin"; not as wool grease, but when marked "lanolin," and coming in as lanolin.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will let the Senator from Utah take care of the lanolin part of it. That is his amendment. I wish to get back to wool. I am rather persistent in regard to this item, because it illustrates the principle upon which the bill seems to have been constructed, and I have a very pronounced objection to that principle.

I made the statement this afternoon, in discussing the duty on potatoes and potato starch, that the bill seemed to be drawn for the special purpose of discriminating against the American farmer, the agricultural interests of the country. The cry was raised that potatoes were a food product necessary on every American table, and therefore that they should be on the free list.

Wool, I suppose, is put on the free list because clothing is made from wool; I suppose that will be the argument; and therefore it will have a tendency to cheapen the clothing. I repeat, because I want to get this in the mind of every Senator so that it will not escape him, wool, the product of the labor and effort of the American farmer, is placed upon the free list. He is given no protective duty whatever. But the very minute that the wool leaves the farmer, then not only is it on the protective list, but its by-products are on the protective list. The man who takes the wool and washes it and takes the grease out of it gets a protective duty by this bill for the labor he puts in the extracting of the grease from that wool. If he buys that wool abroad and ships it in he gets the same protective duty as against the foreign producer of the wool grease.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. What duty would the Senator put on raw wool?

Mr. BRISTOW. I would put about 30 per cent if I were fixing it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. What duty would you put on clothing?

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, I should think if there was a duty on wool of 30 per cent, probably the duty in this bill would not be much out of the way. I voted for a wool bill last year prepared by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

Mr. SHEPPARD. What duty did it put on clothing?

Mr. BRISTOW. On clothing, from 30 to 50 per cent.

Mr. SHEPPARD. And a duty on wool of about 29 per cent?

Mr. BRISTOW. Twenty-nine per cent.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Then why do you discriminate against the owner of the raw material by putting so much more on the finished product than on the raw material?

Mr. BRISTOW. Because there is more labor in the cloth.

Mr. SHEPPARD. But why make the discrimination?

Mr. BRISTOW. I undertake to compensate for the additional labor.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Exactly. A duty on the raw material always leads to a higher tax on the finished product.

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course, a duty on the raw material; but if you are imposing a duty on the finished product, why do you favor the man who takes the wool when he buys it from the farmer and protect him on up until the cloth is made and leave the farmer out of the proposition?

Mr. SHEPPARD. You make the same discrimination and a greater one.

Mr. BRISTOW. No; we make no similar discrimination at all. We give a protective duty to the woolgrower and then we add to that whatever is necessary to maintain the American standard of wages in the production of the articles made from wool.

Mr. SHEPPARD. You put a higher duty on the finished product than on the raw material.

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course that is necessary, but will the Senator from Texas answer me this question, since the Senator in charge of the bill seems to hesitate to do it: Why is the man who takes the grease out of the wool entitled to a protective duty when the man who produces the wool and sells it to the man who takes the grease out of it is without the protection of a duty?

Mr. SHEPPARD. A duty on the raw material compels a higher duty on the finished product for the very reason that prompts the Senator when he puts a duty on raw wool to put a higher duty on cloth.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. SHEPPARD. A higher duty, because it involves compensatory duty.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator is mistaken. This bill puts exactly the same duty on grease that the law now provides.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. No; it is a large reduction. The Senator is wrong.

Mr. BRISTOW. Let me see. I am going by these figures here. It may be wrong, but I will read it. Grease of wool, including a lot of other things here——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It was a half a cent a pound and we made it a quarter of a cent a pound.

Mr. BRISTOW. It was one-fourth of a cent a pound in 1912 according to these figures.

Mr. SMOOT. A quarter of a cent is right.

Mr. BRISTOW. One-half of a cent and one-half a cent under grease of wool; that is, the crude grease refined. In one instance it is one-fourth in 1912.

Mr. SMOOT. In paragraph 290 of the present law the Senator will find the rate. It is a quarter of a cent, just as he states it. It says here—known commercially as degras, or brown wool grease, crude and not refined, or improved in value or condition, one-fourth of 1 cent per pound.

It is the same that it is here.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator is right. I have to confess I had the duty upon the refined.

Mr. BRISTOW. I would be glad if my friend from Texas should tell me why he is in favor of continuing protection on the fellow who takes the grease out of the wool the same in this bill as in the present law, while he does not continue the protection on the man who grows the wool.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I do not think we should approach tariff legislation from the standpoint of the man who gets a benefit from tariff duties, but from the standpoint of the American people as a whole. No man has a right to say that a tax shall be levied on any article he produces, but the American people have a right from the standpoint of their own good to say what article shall be taxed, even if that tax carries a benefit with it, and although some other article may be left without a tax. It is to the interest of the people at large to have taxes placed on the finished product rather than upon the raw material that enters into the finished product.

Mr. BRISTOW. Wherein do the people at large benefit by continuing the duty on wool grease?

Mr. SHEPPARD. As I understand it, the general principle underlying the bill is to put raw material where we can on the free list, because we are thereby enabled to reduce the duties more easily on the finished product.

Mr. BRISTOW. There is no reduction on wool grease, and that is the raw material for the manufacturer who buys it to use it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. That is an item of comparative unimportance so far as the entire bill is concerned. I am not familiar with the intricacies of the chemical schedule. My object in answering the Senator was to explain why we are endeavoring to put raw materials on the free list.

Mr. BRISTOW. All raw materials do not go on the free list.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I understand that. I am speaking of the general rule underlying the principle of free raw material.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am sorry that the Senator can not or does not undertake to answer the question as to why it is necessary to maintain the present duty on wool grease and not retain or place any duty on wool at all. Why is the duty put on wool grease?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Why do you put a higher duty on manufactured articles than you do on raw material?

Mr. BRISTOW. I have tried to explain that it is——

Mr. SHEPPARD. It is due to the nature of the manufactured articles, is it not, as compared with the nature of the raw materials? The Senator said something about more labor entering into the manufactured article, did he not?

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; but then the raw material of this man is put on the free list, while his duty is maintained to just the extent that it was before.

Mr. SHEPPARD. That is true; but we can not apply our principles entirely at one effort. We are making these reductions on a conservative plan. The same reason which calls for the difference of duty between raw material and the manufactured article, to which the Senator refers, is the reason which I cite as prompting a higher rate on clothing than on raw wool.

Mr. BRISTOW. Now, let me see. The Senator is in favor of free raw material and a duty on the finished product. The finished product of the farmer is the fleece of wool. That is the product of his labor. That is what he has to sell. Now, the Senator is not in favor of putting a duty on the finished product of the farmer because it happens to be the raw material of some manufacture, but whenever he gets to the finished product of the manufacturer then he is in favor of a duty.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Yes, Mr. President; in favor of a low duty on the finished product, because it is best for the American people to frame tariff laws in that way.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; it is in the interest of the American people, according to the Senator from Texas, to put the American farmer in competition with all mankind for what he produces as the result of his labor, but not to put him on the same basis when he buys the clothes that he wears.

Mr. SHEPPARD. He will get his clothing cheaper.

Mr. BRISTOW. He has to pay a duty on it because it passes through the hands of the American manufacturer.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I can not, of course, go entirely into the whole proposition the Senator is submitting now, but I understand the object of putting the raw material on the free list is to reduce the duty on the finished product as close to a revenue basis as we can, and thereby lighten the burden on the whole American people as far as we can.

Mr. BRISTOW. I see. Let us look at it again.

Mr. SHEPPARD. You give a compensatory duty for every tax you levy on the raw material.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is, the farmer is put on the free list with his wool. The Senator says that putting him on the free list makes it possible for him to get his clothing cheaper. He gives the manufacturer protection as soon as he gets the wool. It makes no difference what he does with it; everything from the time the wool leaves the farm until it is consumed in these various forms is made dutiable; there is a protective duty put on it.

The Senator says thereby the farmer gets his clothing cheaper. How much cheaper? Just as much cheaper as the duty on wool being taken off cheapens the product; that is, you deduct from the price of his clothes the amount you take from the price of his wool and leave him standing just where he was, taxed for the benefit of the manufacturer for every operation from the time the wool leaves the sheep's back until it is worn out by the farmer and his family.

Mr. SHEPPARD. But you always place an additional tax on the finished product when you put a duty on the raw material. I think that offsets any benefit the farmer may gain from the duty on the raw material.

Mr. BRISTOW. We give him the same advantage and apply to him the same rule that is applied to men engaged in other industries and we do not single him out alone and put him in competition with all mankind.

Mr. SHEPPARD. You single him out by deluding him with duties that are fictitious on most of his products. You not only oppress him with protective duties on what he buys, but insult his intelligence by trying to make him believe that the duties on most of his products are beneficial.

Mr. BRISTOW. Delude him with a fictitious duty? If the fictitious duty is of no good, if it does not increase the farmer's price, then why do you want to take it off?

Mr. SHEPPARD. In order to prevent you from insulting his intelligence any further.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is a very polite and intelligent answer from the distinguished statesman from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I am exceedingly obliged to the Senator from Kansas. I think that my answer will compare in intelligence with the luminous contribution he is making to this discussion.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is a very delightful way to get out of answering a question that can not be answered without admitting the grave injustice that is charged, that this bill apparently deliberately undertakes to deprive the American farmer of the advantage that he would receive from the protective tariff duties and still maintains upon the manufactured articles which he is compelled to buy these protective duties.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Senator will not be able to make the American farmer believe a fallacy of that kind.

Mr. BRISTOW. That may be.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. He is convincing us.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator from Georgia suggests that "he is convincing us." I understand the futility of this argument. When we were discussing the potato and dextrine duties, Senators rose on that side and said they did not believe this duty ought to be maintained as high as it was, but when the roll call came they voted to maintain it; that is, they voted against what they believe to be right. Senators may be willing to bind themselves in the secret chambers of a party caucus to vote against their conscience, but I do not believe that it is a policy that will meet the approval of the American people.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BRISTOW. I gladly yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. Of course, I can understand why a man without a party should object to any other man belonging to a party. I can also understand why a man unable to agree with his own party and unable to agree with himself should object to a number of men meeting and counseling together and agreeing upon a policy. But the thing that struck me with wonder and amazement as I have sat here this afternoon listening to the argument which the Senator from Kansas says in advance he knows will be futile, and therefore it would seem it ought not to be made, because a futile argument is a mere waste of time——

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. The thing that struck me with surprise was how the American farmer struggled along in this country for some two or three hundred years before the Senator from Kansas appeared upon the floor of the United States Senate as guardian ad litem for all rural folk.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I——

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I have the floor, I believe.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understood the Senator from Kansas to yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BRISTOW. I decline to yield any further.

Mr. REED. Well, Mr. President, in view of that statement I will quit the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In view of that statement the Senator from Missouri is out of order.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am perfectly willing that the Senator from Missouri shall indulge in his oratorical pyrotechnics in his own time whenever he sees fit to indulge in such personalities. I shall be very glad to yield to him to answer this question. Why does the Senator from Missouri favor a duty on the grease that is taken out of the wool, when he does not favor a duty on the wool as it comes from the sheep's back?

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BRISTOW. Very gladly I yield, if the Senator can answer that question.

Mr. REED. I think that question is so easily answered that I am surprised the Senator has spent so much time wrestling with it.

In the first place, I might answer that if the Senator can just transport himself intellectually from the platform of the protectionist, levying a tax for graft purposes, to the position of the man who wants to levy a tax for revenue purposes, he will have no difficulty in understanding why a great raw material, used by all the people of the country, should go untaxed. If he will only remember that we have to levy taxes upon some articles in order to get revenue, he will have no great difficulty in understanding why we might have the temerity to lay a tax upon oil that happens to be extracted from wool.

That is a complete answer, I think, to the whole question; but if I might have the attention of the Senator from Kansas I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. BRISTOW. Just a moment, and I will yield to the Senator for that purpose. I understand the Senator is in favor of putting a duty on wool grease for revenue purposes.

Mr. REED. Yes; anything that we want to tax for revenue purposes, whatever it is.

Mr. BRISTOW. The duty collected on——

Mr. REED. I do not care whether the revenue derived from wool grease is great or small. I am not interested in that. If it is small it hurts nobody. If it is great it benefits us in revenue.

Mr. BRISTOW. The duty collected on wool grease last year was $225,000, while, if I remember rightly, the duty on wool was about $16,000,000, or several millions at least.

Mr. REED. Very well. Now, I should like to ask the Senator from Kansas a question from his protectionist standpoint.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator, I think, read the wrong figures when he gave the amount of duty collected. I think the Senator did not mean to read the figures on wool grease as he gave them.

Mr. BRISTOW. Grease of wool, crude, $210,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. But that was the value of it; the duty did not amount to that.

Mr. BRISTOW. The duties amounted to $26,000. I beg the Senator's pardon. The duty on wool was about $14,000,000 last year. So that, for the purpose of collecting revenue, I should think a duty on wool would be very much better.

Mr. REED. Certainly we could get more revenue from wool, but we do not choose to levy a tax on wool because it is an article of such general consumption and is so much of a necessity that we saw fit to take the tax off, particularly in view of the fact that under the protective tariff upon wool, which has been a tremendous burden to the American people, we have found the flocks and herds of this country, considered with relation to the population, constantly decreasing. We have also found that about 80 or 90 per cent of the sheep are owned by a few men in western States, and we have found that when we levied a tax upon wool that tax was added to all the other taxes levied on the finished product and finally was paid by the consumer eight or ten fold. Now, I should like to ask the Senator this question——

Mr. BRISTOW. Just a moment. Why does the Senator propose to tax cloth made from wool?

Mr. REED. Because we must have revenue. The Senator from Kansas seems to be utterly unable to understand that some things may properly be on the free list whereas others may properly be taxed.

Let me ask the Senator, Does he believe that nothing should be on the free list? Will the Senator just answer that yes or no?

Mr. BRISTOW. No; I have not taken any such position as that; certainly not.

Mr. REED. If certain things ought to be——

Mr. BRISTOW. Wait a moment.

Mr. REED. Let me ask the Senator another question. If certain things ought to be upon the free list, then you concede by that that all things should not be taxed, do you not? That brings us down simply to the question of whether wool is a thing which ought or not to be taxed; and that is a matter which lies in the future. Now, I should like to ask this question——

Mr. BRISTOW. Just a moment.

Mr. REED. If wool were taxed, as the Senator believes it ought to be——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will pardon me just a moment——

Mr. REED. I should like to finish my question.

Mr. BRISTOW. I should first like an answer to the question which I asked the Senator, and then I should be very glad to listen to his question. I asked the Senator why he favored a tax on woolen cloth and not a tax on wool, and I understood him to say it was because he wanted to get a revenue from the woolen cloth.

Mr. REED. Oh, no. The Senator from Kansas did not ask the question in that form, nor did he get that kind of an answer. He asked me why I favored free wool.

Mr. BRISTOW. No; I asked the Senator why he favored a duty on woolen cloth.

Mr. REED. I say to the Senator that I do not favor a duty on woolen cloth except on one principle, and that is that we must levy taxes in order to get revenue; and that is the reason the tax is levied in this bill.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why should it be levied on woolen cloth any more than on the wool?

Mr. REED. Has my friend from Kansas abandoned his grease proposition now?

Mr. BRISTOW. No; I am perfectly willing to——

Mr. REED. I want to take up grease for a little while.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am perfectly willing to go back to grease by and by, but the Senator from Missouri said, in answer to my question—at least I understood him to say—that he was in favor of free wool, because it was universally used by the American people.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. BRISTOW. And then I asked him——

Mr. REED. And I will give the Senator another reason.

Mr. BRISTOW. I ask him why, if he is in favor of free wool, because it is universally used, he is in favor of a duty on woolen cloth which, of course, is also universally used?

Mr. REED. Because we must levy a tax upon some article in order to get revenue——

Mr. BRISTOW. So, the Senator——

Mr. REED. One moment—in order to get money to run the Government. We have levied it in this instance upon a finished product. By levying a duty upon a finished product you place the tax more lightly upon the people than when you levy it upon the raw material, for in that event the tax upon the raw material is carried on into the finished product, and it is multiplied by the profits that are added continually in the process of manufacture, until the people actually pay eight or ten times the amount of the tariff levied upon the raw material. That is one reason.

I want to say that, of course, the Senator understands that when you come to levy tariff rates, unless you provide an absolutely horizontal rate upon everything, there will necessarily be this incongruity of which the Senator speaks. It has been in every bill that has ever been passed by a Republican Congress; it has been in every bill which the Senator himself has ever proposed, and he well understands that fact. I wanted to ask him this simple, little question in regard to grease—for I want to get back to grease, if I can get him there——

Mr. BRISTOW. First, let us get through with this and then let us go back to grease. The Senator has presented very clearly his view in regard to levying a duty upon the finished product of the manufacturer and eliminating it from the finished product of the farmer.

Mr. REED. Oh, that is a mere verbal dodge, Mr. President. The Senator understands the principle that if there is any benefit to the manufacturer out of the tariff which is levied there is an incidental protection. If that does tend to build up manufactures, if that theory be true, then that makes that much of a market to the farmer. That is the kind of argument you have been making for 50 years, and you can not get away from it now.

Mr. BRISTOW. Not quite for 50 years.

Mr. REED. Well, the Senator has not been individually making it for 50 years, but his party has.

I want to come back to grease, if I can get the Senator there.

Mr. BRISTOW. Wait until we get through with this. The Senator from Missouri is, therefore, perfectly willing that the manufacturer shall have the advantage of incidental protection, but he is not willing that the farmer shall have it.

Mr. REED. I am not willing that the manufacturer shall have the benefit of incidental protection unless it is something which necessarily follows the levying of the tax. So far as I am concerned, I never have voted, and I do not think I ever shall vote, for any measure to protect anyone; but so long as we have to levy a tax in order to get revenue it of course follows that there will be some incidental protection which can not be escaped.

Mr. BRISTOW. And in imposing a duty for revenue on rice and peanuts and articles of that kind there is an incidental protection the same as on cloth; but the Senator is not willing that the farmers who grow potatoes or the farmers who grow wool shall enjoy the benefit of that incidental protection which under his system the manufacturer receives.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am not willing that the great raw materials which go into and constitute the very essentials of life shall be burdened any more than possible. Therefore I am not in favor of a tax on iron ore, and if I should say that I were in favor of a tax upon the iron produced from the ore it would not mean that I was in favor of it because I wanted to favor the iron manufacturer over the owner of the ore, but it would simply mean that I was in favor of furnishing the American people with that which they have to consume at the least possible price. Beginning with that thought, the first conclusion a man arrives at is that so far as possible raw materials ought to be free. Therefore we make iron ore free; we make copper free——

Mr. BRISTOW. What about zinc and lead?

Mr. REED. And we make a great many other articles free. We have not carried it to every kind and variety of raw material, and in so far as we have failed to do that, because of the revenue which must be raised, we have failed to arrive at an ideal condition; but does it lie in the mouth of a representative of the party which has levied a tax two or three times as high as we propose in this bill to complain because our cuts are not deeper than they are? It seems to me that it is a case not only of Satan reproving sin, but it is a case of Satan reproving righteousness.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is an opinion to which I do not care to reply so far as that is concerned.

Mr. REED. It is an astounding thing to see a high protectionist stand on the floor of the United States Senate and denounce the Democrats because they do not make a further cut, when he knows that he is going to vote against this bill because, according to his ideas, it cuts too deep, and when he knows that he is going back to the State of Kansas to tell the people there that he is in favor of that policy of protection which, he asserts, lifts American manhood to a higher plane than is occupied by the people of any other country. It is an astounding thing to find men who voted for the Payne-Aldrich bill standing upon the other side of the Senate denouncing us because our reform is not more complete and because our cuts have not been deeper.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, the Senator——

Mr. REED. I do not mean the Senator from Kansas voted for the Payne-Aldrich bill, but many Senators on the other side did vote for that measure.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, the Senator is wandering far afield in this discussion.

Mr. REED. And as I look every day at the Senator and recall that he was once in revolt against his party organization, and contrast his former revolutionary tendencies with his present amicable attitude, I am constrained to remark how beautiful and pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is another one of the Senator's very telling arguments upon the merits of the duties in this bill.

Mr. REED. Of course I do not expect to please the Senator in logic, manner, or matter, but I want to bring him back to grease, if I can induce him to return to that delightful subject.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am perfectly willing to do so. The Senator says he is in favor of free iron ore. Is he in favor of free zinc and free lead?

Mr. REED. I voted for them in caucus.

Mr. BRISTOW. Will he vote for them in the Senate?

Mr. REED. No, sir; I propose to abide by the decision of the caucus.

Mr. BRISTOW. Right or wrong?

Mr. REED. No, sir; but with a bill of 4,000 items no man could be pleased with every item unless he wrote the bill himself, and I think probably there would be 4,000 different bills if there were 4,000 men to write them. Sensible men who are not entirely wedded to their own opinions are willing, for the sake of making some progress in the right direction, to concede something to the intelligence and patriotism of their associates, and I belong to the class that is willing to make that concession.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; I understand the Senator is in favor of caucus legislation, instead of legislation in the Senate.

Mr. REED. I am not in favor of caucus legislation, but I am in favor of men who believe in a certain policy agreeing upon that policy and in a practical way trying to carry it out, particularly when I find the men who are opposed to it acting in more perfect harmony and unison than they ever were able to get after they had a caucus of their own. There is a caucus that is more binding than a political caucus, and that is the caucus of the interests which have controlled the Republican Party and financed its campaigns for the last 25 years. There is a tie that binds more closely even than the honor of gentlemen expressed in a caucus, and that is the tie of the great capitalistic forces, which have made a cat's-paw and tool of the Republican Party for many years.

Mr. BRISTOW. And the bill which the Senator is supporting is more in the interest of those great financial interests than it is of the men who are in the grasp of those great financial interests.

Mr. REED. The Senator will have difficulty in demonstrating that.

Mr. BRISTOW. I propose to answer the Senator for a moment. I believe the bill which the Senator is now supporting puts on the free list articles not controlled by the great combinations of this country and retains a duty on articles which are controlled by the great combinations of the country, and the Senator knows it. The very item we are now discussing puts on the free list wool grown on the American farm and preserves a protective duty on the products made from the wool after it leaves the American farm.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Is there a wool-grease trust?

Mr. REED. If the Senator's vociferous voice and tragic attitude could only be preserved by the graphophone and the camera and exposed to the citizens of Kansas, they would understand at once what a gallant fight he has made in the Senate in their interests; but, Mr. President, they neither intimidate nor convince. As I heard the Senator lift his voice I thought of the old Biblical quotation which I think Elijah uttered, although I do not think I can quote it with exactness.

Mr. BRISTOW. I am surprised the Senator can not quote it correctly.

Mr. REED. I am sure if I were submitting it only to the Senator he would hardly know whether or not the quotation was correct.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator from Kansas assumes——

Mr. REED. But there may be some biblical scholars upon the other side, hence I desire to be reasonably exact. It runs something like this——

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator from Kansas does not claim to be the expert student of Biblical affairs as is the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. No, Mr. President; he has spent too much time on grease and wool to know much about theology.

Mr. BRISTOW. I think it would be more fitting in this debate if the Senator from Missouri would devote a little time to grease and wool, rather than to the style of argument in which he has been indulging in my time for the last 20 minutes.

Mr. REED. I am trying to sharpen my intellectual faculties by rubbing up against the Senator from Kansas. But, as I was about to say, when he lifted his voice to so high a pitch and poured it forth in such a resistless volume, I thought of what the old prophet said to some of the priests of Baal. In substance, he said to them—I do not claim to be exact—"Lift up your voices and cry aloud; your gods are afar off." I thought how well that applied in this particular instance—the false gods of the protectionist have been banished. But I want to bring the Senator back to grease, for that is the point from which we started.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator's style of oratory, in which he so much delights, is very agreeable to him and his associates. I do not myself like to indulge in that kind of rhetoric; I myself should prefer to argue the merits of this bill rather than indulge in personal observations.

Mr. REED. Why, Mr. President, if I have made a personal observation——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Missouri has any argument to make or any reasons to assign in regard to the duties contained in this bill, I shall gladly yield him all the time he desires, but I do not care to yield time to have him indulge in the kind of oratory to which I have just been listening.

Mr. REED. Now, Mr. President, I would not have the Senator from Kansas on any account think that I have been personal. I hold him in too high esteem for that. I simply did not want the Senator from Kansas to advance upon me in a manner so belligerent, because it shocked my sensibility. I merely thought to give the controversy a pleasant turn.

Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Kansas a little, simple question. I have been trying to do it for half an hour. He complains that there is a duty placed upon the grease that comes from the wool, and not a duty upon the wool. Under the present law you taxed the wool, and you taxed the grease in the wool, did you not?

Mr. BRISTOW. There is a duty on wool, and the same duty on the grease that this bill carries.

Mr. REED. One further question: You claim, of course, that that duty upon the wool and upon the grease benefited the farmer?

Mr. BRISTOW. The duty upon the wool does, I think; yes.

Mr. REED. And upon the grease, because it was with the wool?

Mr. BRISTOW. The duty upon the wool.

Mr. REED. Does the Senator say that the farmer did not get the benefit of the duty upon the grease that was in the wool he took off the sheep?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not think so. He has a duty on the wool.

Mr. REED. Did he not also get a duty upon the grease?

Mr. BRISTOW. He got the duty on the raw wool.

Mr. REED. Did not the wool have the grease in it?

Mr. BRISTOW. Why, certainly.

Mr. REED. The Senator's complaint seems to boil down to this: That we took the duty off the wool, which was one of the farmer's products, but we did not take it off the grease that is in the wool, which is also a farmer's product, and therefore we have been very wicked, because we did not entirely deprive him of all duty, not only on the wool, but on the grease.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will give me his attention for just a moment, he will find out that his argument would be a little more forcible if he would inform himself as to the facts.

Mr. REED. I shall be willing to sit at the feet of the Senator and get the facts.

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not ask the Senator to sit at the feet of anybody, but simply to read the document the committee has furnished him.

If the Senator please, there is in the present law a duty on wool. The bill which it is proposed to substitute for the present law puts wool on the free list. When the farmer sells the wool he has sold his product. The man that buys the wool begins to manufacture it into its various products. One of the by-products of the manufacturing process is grease. For the extraction of the grease from the wool the manufacturer is given a protection of a quarter of a cent a pound in the Payne-Aldrich bill and the same protection in the present bill.

My inquiry is, Why should the man who extracts the grease from the wool receive a protection of a quarter of a cent a pound for the work he performs in this operation, when the man who produces the wool itself receives no protection at all?

Mr. REED. Can not the Senator see this? I see it, or at least, I think I see it. It may be, as the Senator politely suggests, that if I knew more about the subject I would talk less. I may be entirely in the dark about the matter. But it seems to me that if there is a tax, not only upon the wool, but upon the grease that is in the wool, and that is a benefit to the farmer, if you take the tax off the wool itself, and the farmer comes to the market to sell his wool, he has that wool to sell with the grease in it, and if there is a tax left upon the grease in the wool which adds to its value, the manufacturer will naturally pay him a little more for the wool, because there is that tax upon the grease, provided there is anything in the Senator's theory that the tax increases the price. Now, the fact that the grease itself is not accessible until it has been extracted does not at all detract from the fact that if a man is buying an article a part of which is taxed, if the tax does increase the price, that benefit will go to the farmer.

Mr. BRISTOW. Will the Senator give me his attention for a moment?

Mr. REED. I do not care to argue the matter, but I will listen to the Senator.

Mr. BRISTOW. I shall be very glad if the Senator will give me his attention for a moment. I think I can show where he is wrong, and I think he will admit that he is wrong.

The farmer sells the wool to the manufacturer. The manufacturer buys the wool the world over. He gets it from Australia, from South America, and, we will say, from Ohio. There is no duty whatever on the wool. The farmer in Ohio competes with the farmers in the other countries of the world.

We will say that the wool reaches the city of Boston, and there it commands the same price for the same quality. The farmer receives no protection. The manufacturer takes the wool and begins to extract from it the grease contained therein. He gets a protection of a quarter of a cent a pound on the grease extracted from the wool that is produced in foreign countries just the same as he gets a protection of a quarter of a cent a pound on the grease extracted from the wool that is grown in this country.

So the woolgrower has no protection whatever and gets no benefit whatever from the protective duty that is imposed on grease; but the manufacturer who extracts the grease has a quarter of a cent a pound protection against the manufacturer in England who is extracting grease in the same way. So when the grease would be shipped from England to the United States it would pay that duty, while the wool shipped from England to the United States would pay no duty at all.

Does the Senator understand now that the farmer gets no advantage?

Mr. REED. No; I do not understand that. I understand just the converse of that; and if the Senator will listen to me I think I can show him that the converse is true.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator can not understand that, I regret that I am unable to make it plain to him.

Mr. REED. It may be very plain to the Senator from Kansas and yet not so clear to others. It seems to me it is simply a question of degree.

If there is a tax levied upon the grease that is in the wool, the fact that there is shipped here from England wool containing grease, which is to be extracted by the manufacturer, and that that comes in free, may be admitted. But if all the grease in this country comes either from American wool or from wool that is shipped in here, then it follows that the protective tariff would have no effect whatever. But the minute the Senator says there is any grease to be shipped into this country in addition to that which comes in the wool itself the protective principle operates, and it operates to help increase the price of the American farmer's wool, because one of the things in that wool, to wit, the grease, is protected. So the Senator's argument only goes to the point that the protection is not all received by the farmer.

Mr. BRISTOW. Will the Senator yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. REED. I think that answers the Senator's question. I think the Senator sees the point.

Mr. BRISTOW. I want to show the Senator that it does not answer my question, and I think he will admit it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Neither of the Senators is going to admit anything the other says.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the grease comes into the United States in the wool, it receives the benefit of no duty at all. Therefore the American farmer is in direct competition with the foreign farmer in the production of the wool. If the grease is extracted in a foreign country, the foreign manufacturer who extracts the grease, if he shipped it to the United States in the form of grease extracted, would have to pay a duty of a quarter of a cent a pound. If he ships it in the shape of wool in the grease, he pays nothing.

The farmer is competing with the wool in the grease. The manufacturer who extracts the grease from the wool in the sale of the grease in this market is competing with the foreign manufacturer who has grease for sale, and not wool for sale. So the foreigner pays a quarter of a cent a pound duty to get his product into this market; but if it comes in here in the form in which it leaves the farm, there is no tax whatever upon it.

Mr. REED. I do not agree with the Senator. Now, will the Senator answer a question for me?

Mr. BRISTOW. I shall be very glad to do so if I can; yes.

Mr. REED. I should like to ask the Senator what is the population of the State of Kansas, approximately?

Mr. BRISTOW. It is about 1,700,000, as I remember, or 1,800,000.

Mr. REED. How many men who raise wool are there in the State of Kansas?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not know.

Mr. REED. How many are there in that State who raise sheep?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not know.

Mr. REED. Are there a thousand?

Mr. BRISTOW. I have not any idea. There are a reasonable number of farmers in Kansas that raise wool. It is not a great wool-producing country, however.

Mr. REED. All of the 1,700,000 people in the Senator's State consume wool, do they not, in some form? They wear it or use it in some form, do they not?

Mr. BRISTOW. I think they do; yes.

Mr. REED. The Senator thinks it is entirely proper, of course, for the sake of the 1,000 men who raise sheep in Kansas, to tax all the rest of the people in the State? For the sake of helping out the 1,000 farmers in Kansas who have a few sheep, the Senator thinks it is entirely proper to tax on their clothing the 1,700,000 people of the State who have not any sheep? The Senator thinks that is proper?

Mr. BRISTOW. Let me ask the Senator a question.

Mr. REED. Oh, I hope the Senator will answer my question.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will answer it by asking the Senator a question. How many woolen mills are there in the State of Missouri?

Mr. REED. There may be a few; I do not know. There may be a very few; but that does not answer this question.

Mr. BRISTOW. Hold on; wait until I get through. I think it does.

Mr. REED. Let us see if it does.

Mr. BRISTOW. Is the Senator willing to tax all of the people in Missouri who wear woolen clothing in order that the woolen mills may receive for their product a better price than they otherwise would receive?

Mr. REED. Why, undoubtedly I am not; and I stand on a logical ground. When I vote for a tariff bill, I vote for it because we must have revenue; and I am prepared to vote as rapidly as possible and as rapidly as the opportunity is afforded to stop collecting tariff taxes upon the necessities of life. I do not vote for a tariff bill in order to protect the woolen mills of Missouri. I apprehend that the extra price we pay for clothing and woolen goods in Missouri in one year would buy every woolen mill there is in both Missouri and Kansas. I vote for the tax because it is necessary to have revenue.

The Senator has not answered my question. Is he willing, for the purpose of slightly increasing the profits of a thousand woolgrowers in the State of Kansas, to put a burden upon the 1,700,000 people of the State who do not produce wool?

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator wants to put it that way—I do not look at it the same as he does—as long as the people are taxed on the cloth that they wear in order that we may raise revenue, I think the farmer should have the same incidental advantage that comes from the system of taxation which the manufacturer now has. From that point of view I certainly should not favor putting a duty on the manufactured product and not putting a duty on the raw wool, the finished product of the farmer.

To answer the question in a different way, I will say to the Senator that I believe the protective tariff policy has been and is an advantage to this country; that because of that policy we have better conditions here in our industrial life than other countries have. I am in favor of continuing that policy, upon the principle that American labor should have better wages than labor in other countries, and the difference in the cost of producing the article here and abroad should be made up by a duty imposed at the customhouse.

I believe such a policy will contribute to the welfare of our country. That policy in parts of this bill has been, in my judgment, carried too far, and too excessive duties have been imposed. If the Senator believes in the policy of free trade, however, then my contention is that we should treat all the industries from the same standpoint and upon the same basis.

Mr. REED. I think the Senator is rather shifting his ground. I say that with great respect. The Senator's position is, as I understand, that he would levy a tax upon wool because there is some incidental protection given to the manufacturer. But that is not the principle upon which he acts. He acts upon the principle of protection; of levying a tax, not for incidental protection, but for protection itself.

Mr. BRISTOW. Yes; that is true.

Mr. REED. So the Senator has not squarely answered my question. I asked him if he was willing to tax all of the people of Kansas for the benefit of the 1,000 woolgrowers of that State. He now seeks to avoid that question by the claim that the protective system generally is a good thing. But the fact remains, nevertheless, that when the Senator votes for a tax upon wool, he does vote a tax upon 1,700,000 people in the State of Kansas, and he can benefit only a few farmers of the State. More than that, he votes it for the benefit of an industry that is so poor and so unproductive in the State of Kansas that not one farmer out of ten will go to the trouble of raising a single sheep upon his farm.

Moreover, the Senator knows that we can not raise in this country enough wool for the American people; that we have had a protective tariff on wool for half a century, and that protective tariff has been promoted by the worst and most corrupt lobby that has ever infested Washington—the wool manufacturers and the woolgrowers combining for that purpose. Notwithstanding all of this enormous tax levied upon the American people, the Senator knows that the sheep in this country have been disappearing, at least they have not increased as the population has multiplied. Besides, this tax is not for the benefit of an infant industry which may grow and may some time occupy the field and be self-supporting. On the contrary, the tax is for the benefit of an industry that is diminishing if not dying.

The Senator knows another thing. He knows that the Tariff Board reported that it cost something like $1, or $1.20, a pound, I believe, to produce wool on the farms of Ohio—I do not pretend to give exact figures—an enormous amount. He knows that the wool of this country is principally produced by a few wealthy men or wealthy corporations away out on the western plains of the country, and that their sheep are fed principally upon Government lands, or lands rented from the Indians for a mere pittance. He knows that when he talks about taxing the 90,000,000 people of this country upon raw wool, he is doing it for a very limited number of men indeed.

Now I want to ask the Senator a question, since he is on his feet. Is he not at this moment contending that we have reduced too low the tax upon manufactured woolen goods?

Mr. BRISTOW. No; I do not know about that. I have not given that part of the bill particular attention.

Mr. REED. Is not the tax proposed in this bill upon manufactured goods lower than the tax was in the bill that you voted against at the last Congress? Is it not lower than you are willing to go to-day? Yet the Senator stands here and criticizes us for levying a tax which I affirm it to be my belief is already so low he will not vote for it.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator has not been in the Chamber, of course, and knows little about what has been going on this afternoon except recently.

Mr. REED. I have been here for some little time.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator had been here, he would know that I have not been complaining of that this afternoon. I may find there have been reductions greater than I think ought to have been made when we get to that schedule and debate it. I shall vote for the duties that I think we ought to have when we get to their consideration.

But what I have been complaining about this afternoon and all the afternoon is that the protective duties contained in the Payne-Aldrich bill on the items that have been under discussion are continued now in this bill; that the identical duties in the law which the Senator has so violently denounced are contained in the particular items under discussion in this bill, while other important products are put on the free list. I have complained of the unwarranted discrimination against the industries in this country that are not organized, that can not appear here in Washington with lobbies, concerning which the Senator so bitterly complains. The industries that can appear here, the lobbies that can organize and that are organized, are those that receive tariff favors in this bill, while the industries that can not organize are those that are sacrificed by being placed on the free list. That is the complaint I have been making this afternoon.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. BRISTOW. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator from Kansas has received a satisfactory answer to the question he propounded about three hours ago, I am going to ask the Senator from North Carolina if we ought not to adjourn or go into executive session at this hour.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I am perfectly willing that that shall be done as soon as we have a vote on this paragraph. Yesterday evening, after discussing the question for a long time, until I thought we were ready to vote, we let it go over until this morning, and the whole discussion has been gone over again. So I insist that before we adjourn we shall take a vote on this particular matter.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has been understood that we would adjourn at 6 o'clock.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am perfectly willing to adjourn right now if we can take a vote on this question, and I suppose we can do it.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator means on the item now under consideration?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; paragraph 45.

Mr. SMOOT. I will withdraw my motion to strike out "one" and insert "one-half," so that there will be no question about that.

Mr. BRISTOW. Do I understand that we are to vote on the amendment which the Senator from Utah offered?

Mr. SMOOT. I have just withdrawn the amendment.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from Utah has withdrawn his amendment, I understand. I ask for a vote on the paragraph.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest to the Senator from North Carolina——

Mr. SIMMONS. If there is no amendment——

Mr. GALLINGER. That unless the tacit agreement which was entered into that we should meet at 12 o'clock and put in six hours of hard work is adhered to no unusual progress will be made with the bill.

Mr. STONE. We are not making unusual progress with the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Will not the Senator from New Hampshire admit that the day has been wasted?

Mr. GALLINGER. I think we have not possibly done as much work as we ought to have done, but it has not been my fault.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The tacit agreement to put in six hours' work meant that something was to be done, and that the entire day should not be devoted to wool grease.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say that if no Senator wishes to discuss the amendment further, I do not object to a vote on it.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senator from New Hampshire will permit me, I understand there is no amendment pending to the paragraph.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. May the Chair make a statement? The amendment has been withdrawn, paragraph 45 has been read, and no amendment is offered to it.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to offer an amendment to it, and I want to preface it by saying that I do not want to cause any delay. I was willing to vote two hours ago. I move to strike out "1" and to insert "1½." I am willing to vote on it without further debate.

Mr. SIMMONS. Then, I ask for a vote on the amendment.

Mr. GALLINGER. If there is to be no debate I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS].

The amendment was rejected.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. BACON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, July 26, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 25, 1913.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

John O. Davis, of California, to be collector of customs for the district of San Francisco, in place of Frederick S. Stratton, whose term of office expired February 28, 1913.

NAVAL OFFICER OF CUSTOMS.

James H. Barry, of California, to be naval officer of customs in the district of San Francisco, in the State of California, in place of George Stone, resigned.

SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS.

Justus S. Wardell, of California, to be surveyor of customs in the district of San Francisco, in the State of California, in place of Duncan E. McKinlay, resigned.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Charles S. Hamlin, of Massachusetts, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in place of James F. Curtis, resigned.

REGISTER OF THE TREASURY.

Adam E. Patterson, of Oklahoma, to be Register of the Treasury, in place of James C. Napier, resigned.

ASSISTANT TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES.

William J. McGee, of California, to be Assistant Treasurer of the United States at San Francisco, Cal., in place of William C. Ralston, whose term of office expired by limitation May 24, 1912.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE MINT.

Thaddeus W. H. Shanahan, of California, to be superintendent of the mint of the United States at San Francisco, Cal., in place of Frank A. Leach, superseded.

APPRAISER OF MERCHANDISE.

Ed E. Leake, of California, to be appraiser of merchandise in the district of San Francisco, in the State of California, in place of John G. Mattos, jr., resigned.

COLLECTORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Joseph J. Scott, of California, to be collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, in place of August E. Muenter, superseded.

John P. Carter, of California, to be collector of internal revenue for the sixth district of California, in place of Claude I. Parker, superseded.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL.

George Carroll Todd, of New York, to be assistant to the Attorney General, vice James A. Fowler, resigned.

PROMOTIONS IN THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

Asst. Surg. Herman E. Hasseltine to be passed assistant surgeon in the Public Health Service, to rank as such from August 7, 1913. This officer has served the required time in his present grade and has passed the necessary examination for promotion.

Asst. Surg. Lawrence Kolb to be passed assistant surgeon in the Public Health Service, to rank as such from August 5, 1913. This officer has served the required time in his present grade and has passed the necessary examination for promotion.

Asst. Surg. James P. Leake to be passed assistant surgeon in the Public Health Service, to rank as such from July 30, 1913. This officer has served the required time in his present grade and has passed the necessary examination for promotion.

Asst. Surg. Charles M. Fauntleroy to be passed assistant surgeon in the Public Health Service, to rank as such from June 13, 1913. This officer has served the required time in his present grade and has passed the necessary examination for promotion.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

MEDICAL RESERVE CORPS.

To be first lieutenants with rank from July 24, 1913.

James Crowe Burdett, of Louisiana.
James Bayard Clark, of New York.
William Elnathan Clark, of North Dakota.
Melvin Starkey Henderson, of Minnesota.
Harold Lyons Hunt, of New York.
William McCully James, of Virginia.
William Fletcher Knowles, of Massachusetts.
Daniel Francis Mahoney, of Massachusetts.
Scott Dudley Breckinridge, of the District of Columbia.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 25, 1913.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

FIELD ARTILLERY ARM.

To be second lieutenants.

Joe Eikel.
Charles Gardiner Helmick.
Herbert Slayden Clarkson.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Commander Josiah S. McKean to be a captain.
Commander Benton C. Decker to be a captain.
Commander Newton A. McCully to be a captain.
Lieut. Commander Andre M. Procter to be a commander.
The following-named lieutenant commanders to be commanders:
John T. Tompkins.
Ernest L. Bennett.
Roscoe C. Moody.
Lieut. Ernest J. King to be a lieutenant commander.
Lieut. Byron A. Long to be a lieutenant commander.
Lieut. (Junior Grade) Edwin A. Wolleson to be a lieutenant.
The following-named ensigns to be lieutenants (junior grade):
William W. Turner.
Joseph J. Broshek.
Clyde G. West.
David C. Patterson, jr.
Howard H. Crosby.
James McC. Irish.
John C. Cunningham.
Ernest W. McKee.
Dallas C. Laizure.
Rufus King.
Timothy J. Kelcher.
Eddie J. Estess.
William H. Stiles, jr.
John L. Schaffer.
Edward G. Blakeslee.
Leland Jordan, jr.
Worrall R. Carter.
The following-named assistant surgeons to be passed assistant surgeons:
William L. Irvine.
Earle W. Phillips.
Gardner E. Robertson.
George R. W. French.
Asst. Paymaster Irwin D. Coyle to be a passed assistant paymaster.
Asst. Paymaster Paul A. Clarke to be a passed assistant paymaster.
Carpenter Ernest P. Schilling to be a chief carpenter.

POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA.

Francis F. Wrenn, Newcastle.

COLORADO.

H. Reynolds, Greeley.

FLORIDA.

J. L. Geiger, Zephyrhills.
Gilbert M. Shepard, Blountstown.

GEORGIA.

Annie K. Bunn, Cedartown.
George Dansby, Rockmart.
William J. Webb, Canton.

ILLINOIS.

Thomas F. Enright, Hubbard Woods.
Edward C. Schweitzer, Leland.

INDIANA.

William C. Foltz, Bremen.
Patrick Sharkey, Shirley.

KENTUCKY.

C. E. Barnett, Earlington.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Patrick H. Haley, Chelmsford.

MICHIGAN.

Ray Maker, Bear Lake.
George H. Mitchell, Birmingham.

MISSISSIPPI.

Johnathan R. Moreland, Philipp.

MISSOURI.

James R. Bennett, Branson.
C. H. Brown, Auxvasse.
Nelson H. Cook, Forest City.
J. H. Guitar, Columbia.
S. A. Norrid, Puxico.
Abram Stephens, Troy.

NEBRASKA.

J. D. Bishop, Peru.

NEW JERSEY.

Joseph F. Farley, Cliffside.
John B. Hankins, Pemberton.
Waters B. Hurff, Bridgeton.
Wilmer J. Smith, Belvidere.
Charles T. White, Millville.
John W. Winter, Allendale.

NORTH CAROLINA.

D. Earl Best, Warsaw.
A. C. Link, Hickory.
John F. Saunders, Troy.
L. T. Sumner, Ahoskie.
Daniel L. Windley, Belhaven.

OHIO.

I. L. McCollough, Butler.
Charles H. Marshall, New Paris.

OREGON.

J. W. Boone, Prineville.
Iva E. Dodd, St. Helens (late St. Helen).
Marshall W. Malone, Linnton.

TENNESSEE.

Ira La F. Lemonds, Tiptonville.
Joel F. Ruffin, Cedar Hill.
R. B. Schoolfield, Pikeville.
William Thomas, Brownsville.

TEXAS.

W. D. Armstrong, Alto.
C. W. Bradbury, Kirbyville.
W. P. Boyd, Thurber.
E. R. Fleming, Victoria.
August R. Gold, Fredericksburg.
Charles Johnston, Goree.
C. E. Long, Jourdanton.
J. P. Sharp, Tioga.
W. F. Sponseller, Fowlerton.
John C. Wood, Big Sandy.

VIRGINIA.

David W. Berger, Drakes Branch.
James S. Haile, Chatham.
D. F. Hankins, Houston.

WASHINGTON.

Jefferson P. Buford, Kelso.

WYOMING.

Nels Simpson, Cambria.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, July 25, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father, who art in heaven, by the light of the traditions and sacred story which have come down to us out of the past; by the revelations, incomparable life, and the sublime death of the Son of God; by the blood of the martyrs of liberty, truth, and justice; by the hopes and aspirations which come welling up in our hearts; by the persistent appeals of the still, small voice, make us true to our convictions as Thou dost give us to see truth, that we may add something to Thy glory and the good of mankind. For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Journal as read will stand approved.

Mr. MANN. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House approve the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the Journal be approved.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] demands a division.

Mr. MANN. And pending that I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, as the House is dividing and there is not a quorum present, does not that bring an automatic call of the House?

The SPEAKER. Yes; it does. The Doorkeeper——

Mr. MANN. The Speaker has not yet declared that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. That is true. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twenty-two Members are present, not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, and the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll. The question is on the approval of the Journal. Those in favor will vote "yea" and those opposed will vote "nay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 226, nays 1, answered "present" 10, not voting 192, as follows:

YEAS—226.

Abercrombie	Dickinson	Keating	Rothermel
Aiken	Dies	Kelley, Mich.	Russell
Alexander	Dillon	Kelly, Pa.	Scott
Anderson	Donovan	Kennedy, Iowa	Seldomridge
Ashbrook	Doolittle	Kettner	Sells
Aswell	Doremus	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Sherley
Austin	Doughton	Kirkpatrick	Shreve
Bailey	Dyer	Konop	Sims
Baker	Eagle	Korbly	Sinnott
Baltz	Elder	Lafferty	Sisson
Barchfeld	Estopinal	La Follette	Sloan
Barkley	Evans	Lazaro	Small
Bartlett	Falconer	Lee, Ga.	Smith, Idaho
Barton	Fergusson	Lee, Pa.	Smith, Md.
Beakes	Fess	Lesher	Smith, Minn.
Bell, Cal.	Fitzgerald	Lever	Smith, Tex.
Bell, Ga.	FitzHenry	Lewis, Pa.	Stedman
Blackmon	Floyd, Ark.	Lieb	Stephens, Cal.
Booher	Foster	Lindbergh	Stephens, Nebr.
Borchers	Fowler	Lloyd	Stephens, Tex.
Borland	French	Lobeck	Stone
Britten	Gardner	Logue	Stout
Brockson	Garrett, Tenn.	McAndrews	Stringer
Broussard	Garrett, Tex.	McClellan	Sumners
Brown, W. Va.	George	McCoy	Switzer
Brumbaugh	Gillett	McDermott	Taggart
Bryan	Gilmore	McGillicuddy	Talcott, N. Y.
Buchanan, Ill.	Glass	McGuire, Okla.	Tavenner
Buchanan, Tex.	Goodwin, Ark.	McKellar	Taylor, Ala.
Bulkley	Gorman	McKenzie	Taylor, Ark.
Burgess	Graham, Ill.	Maguire, Nebr.	Taylor, Colo.
Burke, S. Dak.	Gray	Maher	Taylor, N. Y.
Burke, Wis.	Gregg	Mann	Temple
Byrnes, S. C.	Gudger	Mapes	Thomas
Byrns, Tenn.	Hamlin	Mitchell	Thomson, Ill.
Callaway	Hardwick	Mondell	Towner
Campbell	Hardy	Moon	Treadway
Candler, Miss.	Harrison, Miss.	Morgan, Okla.	Tribble
Caraway	Hay	Moss, W. Va.	Underwood
Carr	Hayden	Murray, Okla.	Vaughan
Carter	Heflin	Neeley	Walker
Casey	Helgesen	Norton	Walters
Church	Helvering	Oglesby	Watkins
Clark, Fla.	Hensley	O'Hair	Watson
Claypool	Hill	Oldfield	Weaver
Clayton	Holland	Page	Webb
Cline	Houston	Patten, N. Y.	Whaley
Collier	Howard	Payne	Williams
Connelly, Kans.	Howell	Phelan	Willis
Cooper	Hughes, Ga.	Platt	Wilson, Fla.
Cox	Hull	Pou	Wingo
Curry	Igoe	Quin	Witherspoon
Davenport	Jacoway	Ragsdale	Woods
Davis, Minn.	Johnson, Ky.	Raker	Young, N. Dak.
Davis, W. Va.	Johnson, Utah	Reed	Young, Tex.
Decker	Johnson, Wash.	Roberts, Nev.
Deitrick	Jones	Roddenbery

NAYS—1.

Gordon

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—10.

Adamson	Henry	Padgett	Wallin
Browning	Kahn	Rubey
Crisp	Morrison	Smith, J. M. C.

NOT VOTING—192.

Adair	Bruckner	Cramton	Eagan
Ainey	Burke, Pa.	Crosser	Edmonds
Allen	Burnett	Cullop	Edwards
Ansberry	Butler	Curley	Esch
Anthony	Calder	Dale	Fairchild
Avis	Cantrill	Danforth	Faison
Barnhart	Carew	Dent	Farr
Bartholdt	Carlin	Dershem	Ferris
Bathrick	Cary	Difenderfer	Fields
Beall, Tex.	Chandler, N. Y.	Dixon	Finley
Bowdle	Clancy	Donohoe	Flood, Va.
Bremner	Connolly, Iowa	Dooling	Fordney
Brodbeck	Conry	Driscoll	Francis
Brown, N. Y.	Copley	Dunn	Frear
Browne, Wis.	Covington	Dupré	Gallagher
Gard	Johnson, S. C.	Moss, Ind.	Saunders
Garner	Keister	Mott	Scully
Gerry	Kennedy, Conn.	Murdock	Shackleford
Gittins	Kennedy, R. I.	Murray, Mass.	Sharp
Godwin, N. C.	Kent	Nelson	Sherwood
Goeke	Key, Ohio	Nolan, J. I.	Slayden
Goldfogle	Kiess, Pa.	O'Brien	Slemp
Good	Kindel	O'Leary	Smith, N. Y.
Goulden	Kinkead, N. J.	O'Shaunessy	Smith, Saml. W.
Graham, Pa.	Kitchin	Palmer	Sparkman
Green, Iowa	Knowland, J. R.	Parker	Stafford
Greene, Mass.	Kreider	Patton, Pa.	Stanley
Greene, Vt.	Langham	Pepper	Steenerson
Griest	Langley	Peters	Stephens, Miss.
Griffin	L'Engle	Peterson	Stevens, Minn.
Guernsey	Lenroot	Plumley	Stevens, N. H.
Hamill	Levy	Porter	Sutherland
Hamilton, Mich.	Lewis, Md.	Post	Talbott, Md.
Hamilton, N. Y.	Lindquist	Powers	Ten Eyck
Hammond	Linthicum	Prouty	Thacher
Harrison, N. Y.	Lonergan	Rainey	Thompson, Okla.
Haugen	McLaughlin	Rauch	Townsend
Hawley	Madden	Rayburn	Tuttle
Hayes	Mahan	Reilly, Conn.	Underhill
Helm	Manahan	Reilly, Wis.	Vare
Hinds	Martin	Richardson	Volstead
Hinebaugh	Merritt	Riordan	Walsh
Hobson	Metz	Roberts, Mass.	Whitacre
Hoxworth	Miller	Rogers	White
Hughes, W. Va.	Montague	Rouse	Wilder
Hulings	Moore	Rucker	Wilson, N. Y.
Humphrey, Wash.	Morgan, La.	Rupley	Winslow
Humphreys, Miss.	Morin	Sabath	Woodruff

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

For the session:

Mr. METZ with Mr. WALLIN.

Mr. HOBSON with Mr. FAIRCHILD.

Mr. SCULLY with Mr. BROWNING.

Mr. SLAYDEN with Mr. BARTHOLDT.

Mr. ADAMSON with Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota.

Mr. FIELDS with Mr. LANGLEY.

Mr. BARTLETT with Mr. BUTLER.

Until further notice:

Mr. COVINGTON with Mr. FREAR.

Mr. CULLOP with Mr. CHANDLER of New York.

Mr. DIFENDERFER with Mr. HAYES.

Mr. DONOHOE with Mr. HINEBAUGH.

Mr. GALLAGHER with Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania.

Mr. CURLEY with Mr. KREIDER.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE with Mr. LINDQUIST.

Mr. GOEKE with Mr. MCLAUGHLIN.

Mr. HAMILL with Mr. MARTIN.

Mr. HAMMOND with Mr. MILLER.

Mr. HELM with Mr. MORIN.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi with Mr. PARKER.

Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey with Mr. PORTER.

Mr. LEVY with Mr. POWERS.

Mr. PETERS with Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD with Mr. STEENERSON.

Mr. UNDERHILL with Mr. TOWNER.

Mr. WHITE with Mr. VARE.

Mr. SPARKMAN with Mr. WILDER.

Mr. WHITACRE with Mr. WOODRUFF.

Mr. HARRISON of New York with Mr. LANGHAM.

Mr. KITCHIN with Mr. FORDNEY.

Mr. FERRIS with Mr. HAUGEN.

Mr. EDWARDS with Mr. HAMILTON of New York.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland with Mr. MERRITT.

Mr. DRISCOLL with Mr. GUERNSEY.

Mr. CONRY with Mr. DUNN.

Mr. CANTRILL with Mr. DANFORTH.

Mr. DALE with Mr. AVIS.

Mr. PALMER with Mr. MOORE.

Mr. GODWIN of North Carolina with Mr. MURDOCK.

Mr. RICHARDSON with Mr. ESCH.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY with Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island.

Mr. RUBEY with Mr. HAWLEY.

Mr. DIXON with Mr. GRIEST.

Mr. FINLEY with Mr. HUGHES of West Virginia.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts with Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts.

Mr. BARNHART with Mr. ANTHONY.

Mr. BEALL of Texas with Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania.

Mr. CRISP with Mr. HINDS.

Mr. RAINEY with Mr. PATTON of Pensylvania.

Mr. ADAIR with Mr. AINEY.

Mr. FAISON with Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BURNETT with Mr. COPLEY.

Mr. DUPRÉ with Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan.

Mr. DENT with Mr. KAHN.

Until August 6:

Mr. ALLEN with Mr. J. M. C. SMITH (except banking and currency).

Until July 26:

Mr. PADGETT with Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts.
Mr. SAUNDERS with Mr. SLEMP.
Mr. BATHRICK with Mr. CRAMTON.
Mr. O'LEARY with Mr. CARY.
Mr. DOOLING with Mr. CAREW.
Mr. MORRISON with Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington.
Mr. FRANCIS with Mr. MADDEN.
Mr. THACHER with Mr. WINSLOW.
Mr. CARLIN with Mr. BROWN of Wisconsin.
Mr. TEN EYCK with Mr. EDMONDS.
Mr. STEVENS of New Hampshire with Mr. MOTT.
Mr. MONTAGUE with Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH.
Mr. SABATH with Mr. PLUMLEY.
Mr. FLOOD of Virginia with Mr. GOOD.
Mr. GITTINS with Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND.
Mr. GARNER with Mr. CALDER.
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina with Mr. FARR.
Mr. KEY of Ohio with Mr. GREENE of Vermont.
Mr. PEPPER with Mr. HULINGS.
Mr. POST with Mr. KEISTER.
Mr. REILLY of Connecticut with Mr. J. I. NOLAN.
Mr. REILLY of Wisconsin with Mr. MANAHAN.
Mr. RUCKER with Mr. PROUTY.
Mr. SHARP with Mr. NELSON.
Mr. RIORDAN with Mr. VOLSTEAD.
Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi with Mr. RUPLEY.

The SPEAKER. On this vote the yeas are 226, nays 1, answered "present" 10. The yeas have it, and the Journal is approved. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

The question is now on the approval of the Journal of July 22.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. Is that motion pending?

The SPEAKER. Yes; the motion was pending. The question is on the approval of the Journal of July 22.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Forty gentlemen have arisen—not a sufficient number.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the other side.

The SPEAKER. Those opposed will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] One hundred and fifty-one gentleman have arisen in the negative. Forty is a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are ordered. The Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of approving the Journal of July 22 will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 213, nays 0, answered "present" 8, not voting 208, as follows:

YEAS—213.

Abercrombie	Church	Gorman	Lesher
Aiken	Clark, Fla.	Graham, Ill.	Lever
Alexander	Claypool	Gray	Lewis, Pa.
Anderson	Clayton	Gudger	Lieb
Ashbrook	Cline	Hamlin	Lindbergh
Aswell	Collier	Hardwick	Lloyd
Austin	Connelly, Kans.	Hardy	Lobeck
Bailey	Cooper	Harrison, Miss.	Logue
Baltz	Cox	Hay	McAndrews
Barchfeld	Curry	Hayden	McClellan
Barkley	Davenport	Heflin	McCoy
Bartlett	Davis, Minn.	Helgesen	McDermott
Barton	Davis, W. Va.	Helvering	McGillicuddy
Beakes	Decker	Henry	McGuire, Okla.
Bell, Cal.	Dickinson	Hensley	McKellar
Bell, Ga.	Dies	Hill	McKenzie
Blackmon	Dillon	Holland	Maguire, Nebr.
Booher	Donovan	Houston	Mann
Borchers	Doolittle	Howard	Mapes
Borland	Doremus	Howell	Mitchell
Britten	Doughton	Hull	Mondell
Brockson	Dyer	Igoe	Moon
Broussard	Elder	Jacoway	Morgan, Okla.
Brown, W. Va.	Estopinal	Johnson, Ky.	Moss, W. Va.
Brumbaugh	Evans	Johnson, Utah	Murray, Okla.
Bryan	Falconer	Johnson, Wash.	Neeley
Buchanan, Ill.	Fergusson	Jones	Norton
Bulkley	Fess	Kelley, Mich.	Oglesby
Burgess	FitzHenry	Kelly, Pa.	O'Hair
Burke, S. Dak.	Floyd, Ark.	Kennedy, Iowa	Oldfield
Burke, Wis.	Foster	Kettner	Patten, N. Y.
Byrnes, S. C.	Fowler	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Payne
Byrns, Tenn.	French	Kirkpatrick	Phelan
Callaway	Gardner	Konop	Post
Campbell	Garrett, Tenn.	Korbly	Pou
Candler, Miss.	Garrett, Tex.	Lafferty	Quin
Caraway	George	La Follette	Ragsdale
Carr	Gilmore	Lazaro	Raker
Carter	Goodwin, Ark.	Lee, Ga.	Rauch
Casey	Gordon	Lee, Pa.	Reed
Roddenbery	Smith, Minn.	Taylor, Ark.	Watson
Rothermel	Smith, Tex.	Taylor, Colo.	Weaver
Russell	Stedman	Taylor, N. Y.	Webb
Scott	Stephens, Cal.	Temple	Whaley
Seldomridge	Stephens, Nebr.	Thomas	Willis
Sells	Stephens, Tex.	Thomson, Ill.	Wilson, Fla.
Sherley	Stone	Towner	Wingo
Shreve	Stout	Treadway	Witherspoon
Sims	Sumners	Tribble	Woods
Sinnott	Switzer	Underwood	Young, N. Dak.
Sloan	Taggart	Vaughan	Young, Tex.
Small	Talcott, N. Y.	Walker
Smith, Idaho	Tavenner	Walters
Smith, Md.	Taylor, Ala.	Watkins

NAYS—0.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—8.

Adamson	Crisp	Padgett	Smith, J. M. C.
Browning	Kahn	Rubey	Wallin

NOT VOTING—208.

Adair	Esch	Keister	Porter
Ainey	Fairchild	Kennedy, Conn.	Powers
Allen	Faison	Kennedy, R. I.	Prouty
Ansberry	Farr	Kent	Rainey
Anthony	Ferris	Key, Ohio	Rayburn
Avis	Fields	Kiess, Pa.	Reilly, Conn.
Baker	Finley	Kindel	Reilly, Wis.
Barnhart	Fitzgerald	Kinkead, N. J.	Richardson
Bartholdt	Flood, Va.	Kitchin	Riordan
Bathrick	Fordney	Knowland, J. R.	Roberts, Mass.
Beall, Tex.	Francis	Kreider	Roberts, Nev.
Bowdle	Frear	Langham	Rogers
Bremner	Gallagher	Langley	Rouse
Brodbeck	Gard	L'Engle	Rucker
Brown, N. Y.	Garner	Lenroot	Rupley
Browne, Wis.	Gerry	Levy	Sabath
Bruckner	Gillett	Lewis, Md.	Saunders
Buchanan, Tex.	Gittins	Lindquist	Scully
Burke, Pa.	Glass	Linthicum	Shackleford
Burnett	Godwin, N. C.	Lonergan	Sharp
Butler	Goeke	McLaughlin	Sherwood
Calder	Goldfogle	Madden	Sisson
Cantrill	Good	Mahan	Slayden
Carew	Goulden	Maher	Slemp
Carlin	Graham, Pa.	Manahan	Smith, N. Y.
Cary	Green, Iowa	Martin	Smith, Saml. W.
Chandler, N. Y.	Greene, Mass.	Merritt	Sparkman
Clancy	Greene, Vt.	Metz	Stafford
Connolly, Iowa	Gregg	Miller	Stanley
Conry	Griest	Montague	Steenerson
Copley	Griffin	Moore	Stephens, Miss.
Covington	Guernsey	Morgan, La.	Stevens, Minn.
Cramton	Hamill	Morin	Stevens, N. H.
Crosser	Hamilton, Mich.	Morrison	Stringer
Cullop	Hamilton, N. Y.	Moss, Ind.	Sutherland
Curley	Hammond	Mott	Talbott, Md.
Dale	Harrison, N. Y.	Murdock	Ten Eyck
Danforth	Haugen	Murray, Mass.	Thacher
Deitrick	Hawley	Nelson	Thompson, Okla.
Dent	Hayes	Nolan, J. I.	Townsend
Dershem	Helm	O'Brien	Tuttle
Difenderfer	Hinds	O'Leary	Underhill
Dixon	Hinebaugh	O'Shaunessy	Vare
Donohoe	Hobson	Page	Volstead
Dooling	Hoxworth	Palmer	Walsh
Driscoll	Hughes, Ga.	Parker	Whitacre
Dunn	Hughes, W. Va.	Patton, Pa.	White
Dupré	Hulings	Pepper	Wilder
Eagan	Humphrey, Wash.	Peters	Williams
Eagle	Humphreys, Miss.	Peterson	Wilson, N. Y.
Edmonds	Johnson, S. C.	Platt	Winslow
Edwards	Keating	Plumley	Woodruff

So the Journal of July 22 was approved.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Mr. FITZGERALD with Mr. GILLETT.
Mr. STANLEY with Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada.
Mr. GREGG with Mr. PLATT.
Mr. HUGHES of Georgia with Mr. MANAHAN.
Mr. KEATING with Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND.
Mr. SISSON with Mr. VOLSTEAD.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote yea.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall, listening?

Mr. BUCHANAN of Texas. I was in the room yonder, smoking.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman did not qualify. Was he in the cloakroom?

Mr. BUCHANAN of Texas. Yes; in the cloakroom.

The SPEAKER. That does not bring the gentleman within the rule.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The motion now is on the approval of the Journal of July 23. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Forty-two gentlemen have arisen in the affirmative—not a sufficient number.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the other side.

The SPEAKER. Those opposed to taking the vote by yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] One hundred and forty-three gentlemen have arisen in the negative. Forty-two is a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are ordered. The Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of approving the Journal of July 23 will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 214, nays 0, answered "present" 8, not voting 207, as follows:

YEAS—214.

Abercrombie	Davis, W. Va.	Johnson, Utah	Roddenbery
Aiken	Decker	Jonnson, Wash.	Rucker
Alexander	Dickinson	Jones	Russell
Anderson	Dies	Kelley, Mich.	Seldomridge
Ashbrook	Dillon	Kelly, Pa.	Sells
Aswell	Donovan	Kennedy, Iowa	Sherley
Austin	Doolittle	Kettner	Shreve
Bailey	Doremus	Kirkpatrick	Sims
Baltz	Doughton	Konop	Sinnott
Barchfeld	Dyer	Korbly	Sisson
Barkley	Eagle	Lafferty	Sloan
Barton	Elder	Lazaro	Small
Bathrick	Estopinal	Lee, Ga.	Smith, Idaho
Beakes	Evans	Lee, Pa.	Smith, Md.
Bell, Cal.	Falconer	Lesher	Smith, Minn.
Bell, Ga.	Fergusson	Lever	Smith, Tex.
Blackmon	Fess	Lewis, Pa.	Stedman
Boober	FitzHenry	Lieb	Stephens, Cal.
Borchers	Flood, Va.	Lindbergh	Stephens, Nebr.
Borland	Foster	Lloyd	Stephens, Tex.
Bowdle	Fowler	Lobeck	Stone
Britten	French	Logue	Stout
Brockson	Gardner	McAndrews	Switzer
Broussard	Garrett, Tenn.	McClellan	Taggart
Brown, W. Va.	Garrett, Tex.	McCoy	Talcott, N. Y.
Bryan	George	McDermott	Tavenner
Buchanan, Ill.	Gillett	McGillicuddy	Taylor, Ala.
Buchanan, Tex.	Gilmore	McKellar	Taylor, Ark.
Bulkley	Glass	McKenzie	Taylor, Colo.
Burgess	Goodwin, Ark.	Maguire, Nebr.	Taylor, N. Y.
Burke, S. Dak.	Gordon	Mann	Temple
Burke, Wis.	Gorman	Mapes	Thomas
Byrnes, S. C.	Graham, Ill.	Mitchell	Thomson, Ill.
Byrns, Tenn.	Gray	Mondell	Towner
Callaway	Gudger	Moon	Treadway
Campbell	Hamlin	Morgan, La.	Tribble
Candler, Miss.	Hardwick	Morgan, Okla.	Underwood
Caraway	Hardy	Murray, Okla.	Vaughan
Carr	Harrison, Miss.	Neeley	Walker
Carter	Hay	Norton	Walters
Casey	Hayden	Oglesby	Watkins
Church	Heflin	O'Hair	Watson
Clark, Fla.	Helvering	Oldfield	Weaver
Claypool	Hensley	Patten, N. Y.	Webb
Clayton	Hill	Payne	Whaley
Cline	Holland	Phelan	Williams
Collier	Howard	Platt	Willis
Connelly, Kans.	Howell	Post	Wilson, Fla.
Cooper	Hughes, Ga.	Pou	Wingo
Cox	Hulings	Quin	Witherspoon
Curry	Hull	Ragsdale	Woods
Danforth	Igoe	Raker	Young, Tex.
Davenport	Jacoway	Rauch
Davis, Minn.	Johnson, Ky.	Reed

NAYS—0.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—8.

Adamson	Crisp	Padgett	Smith, J. M. C.
Browning	Kahn	Rubey	Wallin

NOT VOTING—207.

Adair	Deitrick	Green, Iowa	Kinkead, N. J.
Ainey	Dent	Greene, Mass.	Kitchin
Allen	Dershem	Greene, Vt.	Knowland, J. R.
Ansberry	Difenderfer	Gregg	Kreider
Anthony	Dixon	Griest	La Follette
Avis	Donohoe	Griffin	Langham
Baker	Dooling	Guernsey	Langley
Barnhart	Driscoll	Hamill	L'Engle
Bartholdt	Dunn	Hamilton, Mich.	Lenroot
Bartlett	Dupré	Hamilton, N. Y.	Levy
Beall, Tex.	Eagan	Hammond	Lewis, Md.
Bremner	Edmonds	Harrison, N. Y.	Lindquist
Brodbeck	Edwards	Haugen	Linthicum
Brown, N. Y.	Esch	Hawley	Lonergan
Browne, Wis.	Fairchild	Hayes	McGuire, Okla.
Bruckner	Faison	Helgesen	McLaughlin
Brumbaugh	Farr	Helm	Madden
Burke, Pa.	Ferris	Henry	Mahan
Burnett	Fields	Hinds	Maher
Butler	Finley	Hinebaugh	Manahan
Calder	Fitzgerald	Hobson	Martin
Cantrill	Floyd, Ark.	Houston	Merritt
Carew	Fordney	Hoxworth	Metz
Carlin	Francis	Hughes, W. Va.	Miller
Cary	Frear	Humphrey, Wash.	Montague
Chandler, N. Y.	Gallagher	Humphreys, Miss.	Moore
Clancy	Gard	Johnson, S. C.	Morin
Connolly, Iowa	Garner	Keating	Morrison
Conry	Gerry	Keister	Moss, Ind.
Copley	Gittins	Kennedy, Conn.	Moss, W. Va.
Covington	Godwin, N. C.	Kennedy, R. I.	Mott
Cramton	Goeke	Kent	Murdock
Crosser	Goldfogle	Key, Ohio	Murray, Mass.
Cullop	Good	Kiess, Pa.	Nelson
Curley	Goulden	Kindel	Nolan, J. I.
Dale	Graham, Pa.	Kinkaid, Nebr.	O'Brien
O'Leary	Reilly, Wis.	Slayden	Thacher
O'Shaunessy	Richardson	Slemp	Thompson, Okla.
Page	Riordan	Smith, N. Y	Townsend
Palmer	Roberts, Mass.	Smith, Saml. W.	Tuttle
Parker	Roberts, Nev.	Sparkman	Underhill
Patton, Pa.	Rogers	Stafford	Vare
Pepper	Rothermel	Stanley	Volstead
Peters	Rouse	Steenerson	Walsh
Peterson	Rupley	Stephens, Miss.	Whitacre
Plumley	Sabath	Stevens, Minn.	White
Porter	Saunders	Stevens, N. H.	Wilder
Powers	Scott	Stringer	Wilson, N. Y.
Prouty	Scully	Sumners	Winslow
Rainey	Shackleford	Sutherland	Woodruff
Rayburn	Sharp	Talbott, Md.	Young, N. Dak.
Reilly, Conn.	Sherwood	Ten Eyck

So the Journal of July 23 was approved.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. GOULDEN with Mr. ROGERS.

Mr. HOUSTON with Mr. LA FOLLETTE.

Mr. PAGE with Mr. MCGUIRE of Oklahoma.

Mr. FITZGERALD with Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska.

Mr. TUTTLE with Mr. PROUTY.

Mr. WILSON of New York with Mr. SCOTT.

Mr. GITTINS with Mr. Moss of West Virginia.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted—

To Mr. HELGESEN, for 2 weeks, on account of sickness.

To Mr. BELL of Georgia, for 10 days, on account of illness in his family.

AFFAIRS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, I present the following privileged report from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia offers a report from the Committee on Rules, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HARDWICK, from the Committee on Rules, reports back the following resolution (H. Res. 203) to the House with the recommendation that the same do pass:

House resolution 203 (H. Rept. 33).

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia, or any subcommittee thereof which the chairman of the committee may appoint, be, and the same hereby is, empowered to investigate and inquire into the condition of the financial relations between the District of Columbia and the United States, as well as to the correctness of the books and accounts relative thereto, whether those books or accounts be kept by the United States or by the District of Columbia.

Said committee hereby is empowered, further, to examine and investigate the books and accounts of any officer or employee (past or present) of the District of Columbia, or of any other person having business dealings or transactions with the District of Columbia.

And said committee hereby is empowered, further, to inquire into and investigate the official conduct, acts, omissions, and doings of any officer or employee (past or present) of the District of Columbia.

And said committee hereby is empowered, further, to inquire into and investigate the books, accounts, and affairs of any public utility or common carrier doing business or operating in the District of Columbia, including any ice manufacturer, any market-house company or corporation, any market company, any taxicab or motor vehicle company, the Washington Terminal Co., any cold-storage or warehouse company, and any person, company, or corporation dealing in meats or other provisions in the District of Columbia.

For the purposes above set out the said committee is hereby empowered, in its discretion, to send for and compel the attendance of persons and the production of books and papers before it; and the chairman, or acting chairman, may administer oaths or affirmations.

The sum of $20,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, hereby is appropriated out of the contingent fund of the House in order that this resolution may be put into effect. Said committee or subcommittee, as the case may be, is empowered to sit during the sessions of Congress or during the recesses between sessions of Congress, and may employ stenographers and accountants, who shall be paid out of said $20,000 upon vouchers signed by the chairman or acting chairman of said committee and approved by the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, this resolution explains itself. Gentlemen who have listened to its reading know what it is. I will say, however, in a word that the purpose of the resolution is to confer upon the Committee on the District of Columbia the power to conduct certain investigations and examinations into the affairs of the District of Columbia.

First, into those affairs so far as they relate to the United States Government, and, second, in regard to the officers of the District of Columbia.

I do not think we need any extended debate on the resolution; but I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON], the author of the resolution, for such further explanation as the House may require.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, the Sixty-second Congress appropriated from the contingent fund of the House the sum of $15,000 with which to conduct an investigation similar to the one asked for in this resolution. No sooner had that resolution been adopted and the Committee on the District of Columbia had announced that it would begin its investigation into the affairs of the lunatic asylum than the superintendant of that asylum rushed down to the Capitol and went before the Committee on Appropriations and admitted that the District of Columbia was indebted to the National Government in the sum of $769,000, which had been accumulating for years, but which had not been collected from the District of Columbia. If nothing else had been done, the money would have been well expended.

But the accounts relative to the interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia are of more importance. The accountants have found beyond all peradventure, beyond the question of any man who is familiar with the subject, that the District of Columbia is indebted to the Federal Government on that account in the sum of $1,003,257.24. That we believe is sufficient warrant for asking for the continuance of this appropriation. In going through the accounts relative to the interest on those bonds the accountant informs the committee that he located several hundred thousand dollars more due to the Federal Government from the District of Columbia. They were questions which were collateral to the interest on the bonds, and he did not take them up as he went along, but he made memoranda as to where he can go and locate those sums, and we believe that he will locate them to the satisfaction even of the officers of the corporations who must pay them. The figures of the accountant have been verified by Mr. Hodgson, an expert accountant in the Treasury Department, who was designated by Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. MacVeagh, to go through these accounts with the committee accountant. I have in my hand a report of the committee, containing the testimony of Mr. Hodgson, the Treasury expert accountant, in which he says that he has gone over the items of the committee accountant, item by item, that he finds them absolutely correct, and that while he handled the figures in another way, the result has been just the same, to the cent. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file as a part of my remarks a copy of that report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner stated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The report referred to is as follows:

INTEREST ON THE 3.65 BONDS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

REPORT OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, APPOINTED UNDER HOUSE RESOLUTIONS NOS. 154 AND 200, ADOPTED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DURING THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

Acting under House resolutions Nos. 154 and 200, adopted during the first session of the Sixty-second Congress, the chairman of the House Committee on the District of Columbia appointed Representatives OLDFIELD, GEORGE, Redfield, LOBECK, Sulloway, DYER, Berger, and JOHNSON of Kentucky as a subcommittee to conduct the investigations and inquiries provided for in said resolutions.

When the subcommittee met and organized, Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky was chosen as chairman of the subcommittee. By proper resolutions the chairman was authorized to select accountants and stenographers for the purposes set out in the said resolutions. He thereupon selected Mr. T. Scott Mayes as accountant and Mr. J. R. Mayes as assistant accountant.

After Mr. Mayes had otherwise equipped himself for the work, written request was made by the chairman of the subcommittee upon the Secretary of the Treasury to detail an accountant in the Treasury Department to work with him, so that the ultimate finding of Mr. Mayes might be known by a Treasury accountant to be absolutely correct. In answer to this request, the Secretary of the Treasury detailed Mr. T. A. Hodgson, who had had charge of the accounts between the United States and the District of Columbia for more than 30 years.

The two committee accountants above referred to made report to the subcommittee under date of February 15, 1913, to the effect that they had found from the books that the District of Columbia is indebted to the United States in the sum of $1,003,257.24 on account of advancements made by the United States to the District of Columbia for the purpose of paying interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia.

This indebtedness is reported by the said accountants to have accrued between August 1, 1876, and January 24, 1878, both dates inclusive. As above stated, the said report was filed by the accountants with the subcommittee February 15, 1913. On the same day Mr. T. A. Hodgson, hereinbefore referred to as the accountant in the Treasury Department, was called before the committee; and, after being duly sworn, stated that the figures and the net result thereof, as set out in the report made by Mr. T. Scott Mayes and Mr. J. R. Mayes, was correct.

While the 3.65 bonds were authorized under an act of June 20, 1874 (vol. 18, p. 116, U. S. Stat. L.), none of them was issued before October of that year, and their issual was continued in different amounts and at different times until 1911. Since that time none of these bonds has been issued.

Attention is invited by the committee to the fact that Mr. Hodgson has had charge of that account during the time that the greater number of these bonds were issued. He, above all other men, has been in position to know what indebtedness was paid by these bonds. In his testimony, which is hereto attached, he states that the bonds were issued for the purpose of taking up the board of audit certificates, and that these certificates were issued by the District of Columbia for work done for the District of Columbia.

In the testimony of Mr. Hodgson will be found a summary statement of his own which handles the figures in a somewhat different way than the figures are handled by Mr. Mayes in his report; but special attention is invited to the fact that the result is just the same.

The accountants, in reaching a final conclusion, were controlled by the following acts of Congress:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury shall reserve of any of the revenues of the District of Columbia not required for the actual current expenses of schools, the police, and the fire department, a sum sufficient to meet the interest accruing on the 3.65 bonds of the District, during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1876, and apply the same to that purpose; and in case there shall not be a sufficient sum of said revenues in the Treasury of the United States at such time as said interest may be due, then the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to advance, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum sufficient to pay said interest, and the same shall be reimbursed to the Treasury of the United States from time to time as said revenues may be paid into said Treasury until the full amount shall have been refunded. (Approved July 31, 1876, vol. 19, p. 106, U. S. Stat. L.)

* * * * * * *

"That the Secretary of the Treasury shall reserve of any of the revenues of the District of Columbia not required for the actual current expenses of schools, the police, and fire department, a sum sufficient to meet the interest accruing on the 3.65 bonds of the District during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1877, and apply the same to that purpose; and in case there shall not be a sufficient sum of said revenues in the Treasury of the United States at such time as said interest may be due, then the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to advance, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum sufficient to pay said interest; and the same shall be reimbursed to the Treasury of the United States from time to time as said revenues may be paid into said Treasury, until the full amount shall have been refunded." (Approved Mar. 3, 1877, vol. 19, p. 346, U. S. Stat. L.)

The only permanent act of Congress relative to the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds is as follows:

"Hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay the interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia issued in pursuance of the act of Congress approved June 20, 1874, when the same shall become due and payable; and all amounts so paid shall be credited as a part of the appropriation for the year by the United States toward the expenses of the District of Columbia, as hereinbefore provided." (Approved June 11, 1878, U. S. Stat. L., vol. 20, p. 105.)

And the only permanent act of Congress creating a sinking fund for the redemption of the 3.65 bonds is as follows:

"And there is hereby appropriated, out of the proportional sum which the United States may contribute toward the expenses of the District of Columbia, in pursuance of the act of Congress approved June 11, 1878, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and annually thereafter, such sums as will, with the interest thereon at the rate of 3.65 per cent per annum, be sufficient to pay the principal of the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia issued under the act of Congress approved June 20, 1874, at maturity, which said sums the Secretary of the Treasury shall annually invest in said bonds at not exceeding the par value thereof, and all bonds so redeemed shall cease to bear interest and shall be canceled and destroyed in the same manner that United States bonds are canceled and destroyed." (Approved Mar. 3, 1879, vol. 20, p. 410, U. S. Stat. L.)

The two acts from which the above extracts are quoted were both enacted after the advancement of the $1,003,257.24 now due the United States from the District of Columbia and in no way alter the provisions of the acts of Congress of July 31, 1876, and March 3, 1877, under which the said advancement was made, but are quoted herein to show how the law with respect to interest and sinking fund on the 3.65 bonds has been ignored, in making appropriations for that purpose, since June 11, 1878, the date of the so-called organic act.

From the above the proposition is incontrovertible that the District of Columbia is indebted to the United States in the full sum of $1,003,257.24.

Under the law it is the plain duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer this $1,003,257.24 upon his books from the District of Columbia to the credit of the United States; but, since this has not been done, your committee recommends that Congress take such appropriate action as will cause the District of Columbia to reimburse the United States to that extent.

The sundry civil appropriation bill which passed Congress in August, 1912, contained a provision which directed the District of Columbia to refund about $769,000 to the United States on account of District patients in the Government Hospital for the Insane. As the sundry civil appropriation bill has not yet been presented to the present Congress for the next fiscal year, we recommend that the Appropriation Committee embrace in said bill such legislation as will cause the United States to be fully reimbursed by the District of Columbia (out of revenues derived from taxation and privileges) on account of said indebtedness of $1,003,257.24.

The committee wishes to further report that neither its work nor that of the accountants is yet completed, the accountants advising the committee that they have located other large sums of money due from the District of Columbia to the United States.

The report of the committee accountants and the testimony of Mr. T. A. Hodgson are filed herewith as a part hereof, marked, respectively, "Exhibit A" and "Exhibit B."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

BEN JOHNSON, Chairman.
W. A. OLDFIELD.
C. O. LOBECK.
VICTOR L. BERGER.
L. C. DYER.
C. A. SULLOWAY.
HENRY GEORGE, Jr.
WILLIAM C. REDFIELD.

EXHIBIT A.

REPORT ON INTEREST ON 3.65 BONDS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

(By T. Scott Mayes, accountant; J. R. Mayes, assistant.)

To the Hon. Ben Johnson, chairman, and members of the Special Committee Investigating the Affairs of the District of Columbia under House resolutions Nos. 154 and 200.

GENTLEMEN: We beg to submit the following report of our investigation of the accounts of the District of Columbia and the United States as they relate to the interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, issued under an act of Congress entitled "An act for the government of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1874.

Bonds authorized under this act were issued at different times between their authorization in 1874 and June 30, 1911, to the amount of $14,997,300, all bearing interest at the rate of 3.65 per cent per annum, payable semiannually on the 1st day of February and August of each year. Of these bonds, $8,888,200 were outstanding June 30, 1911.

The first interest became due February 1, 1875, and from that date, to and including June 30, 1911, the Treasurer of the United States received, for the purpose of paying the interest upon these bonds, the sum of $18,069,106.46, and paid out of said receipts on account of interest during the same period the sum of $18,063,327.10, leaving in his hands on June 30, 1911, the sum of $5,779.36, to meet the payment of the interest then due. Of the said sum of $18,069,106.46 deposited with the Treasurer of the United States for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds, the sum of $186,322.15 was deposited by the commissioners of the sinking fund of the District of Columbia during the fiscal year 1876, as shown by this report, Statement A; and there was deposited to the credit of said Treasurer's account on October 31, 1877, the sum of 6 cents.

The sum of $186,322.15, deposited by the said commissioners of said sinking fund was collected by them from the holders of board of audit certificates at the time the certificates were exchanged for 3.65 bonds. This deposit was for interest accrued on the bonds from August 1, 1874, to the date of the board of audit certificates for which the bonds were exchanged. In other words, the parties receiving the bonds paid for the accrued interest which they were not entitled to collect, and the money thus received was deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States in order to pay this accrued interest when demanded.

The 6 cents deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States October 31, 1877, was required to be deposited by order of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, by letter of October 30, 1877, to Hon. A. U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States. The accounts of the late Treasurer had been stated and it was ascertained that the amount to his credit was 6 cents short of the amount necessary to pay past-due interest on the 3.65 bonds, for which reason the deposit was required. This shortage of 6 cents grew out of an error in exchange of board of audit certificates for 3.65 bonds, and the deposit had to be made by the Treasurer or the sinking fund commissioners; but there is no record to show who made the deposit. As it was not made by the United States, and as we can find no evidence that it was made by the District of Columbia, it is treated as a payment not made by either.

On January 19, 1877, the First National Bank of New York sent to the Treasurer of the United States 100 fifty-dollar 3.65 coupon bonds to be exchanged for registered bonds of the same issue. The coupons for interest due February 1, 1877, on 23 of these bonds had been detached; and, as the registered bonds bore interest covering the same period which was covered by the detached coupons, the bank was required to deposit $20.99, the amount of the detached coupons, in order to meet the coupons when presented for payment. This sum of $20.99 was deposited by the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of the appropriation for payment of 3.65 interest for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1877. The amount necessary to pay these coupons having been paid into the Treasury by the bank, it is treated as interest not paid by either the United States or by the District of Columbia.

By deducting the 6 cents deposited by order of the Comptroller of the Treasury, the $20.99 deposited by the First National Bank of New York, and the $186,322.15 deposited by the commissioners of the sinking fund from the total amount received by the Treasurer of the United States for payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia to and including June 30, 1911, viz, $18,069,106.46, we find the total amount paid to the Treasurer of the United States by the District of Columbia and the United States to be $17,882,763.26 to pay interest on 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia from date of issue to and including June 30, 1911.

Since the passage of the act entitled "An act providing a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia," approved June 11, 1878, to and including June 30, 1911, there has been advanced to the Treasurer of the United States out of the Treasury of the United States for the purpose of paying the interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia the sum of $16,313,383.23, all of which, except $180,485.18, has been credited as a part of the annual and deficiency appropriations made by the United States toward the expenses of the District of Columbia for the fiscal years from 1879 to 1911, both inclusive.

All of the $16,313,383.23, except the sum of $180,485.18, was appropriated by various acts of Congress as shown by Statements F, G, H, and I of this report. This last-named sum of $180,485.18 was advanced to the Treasurer of the United States, as shown by his published reports on the sinking fund and funded debt of the District of Columbia, as amounts "received from permanent appropriation for interest on the 3.65 per cent bonds (sec. 4, act of June 11, 1878)"; and, thus, the aggregate amount made available for the payment of 3.65 interest was increased $180,485.18 beyond the regular annual and deficiency appropriations made by Congress for that purpose. The aggregate amount made available by congressional and raised appropriations from June 11, 1878, to and including June 30, 1911, $16,313,383.23, was charged one-half against the revenues of the United States and one-half against the revenues of the District of Columbia.

In the published report of the Treasurer of the United States on the sinking fund and funded debt of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1881, he discusses the questions of providing for settlement of Court of Claims judgments against the District of Columbia, as provided in act approved June 16, 1880, and of raising an appropriation for the purpose of paying the accumulated interest on the said Court of Claims judgments or upon the bonds issued therefor, and says that on May 7, 1881, he communicated with the Secretary of the Treasury, and desired to know whether or not a permanent appropriation was raised by section 4 of act approved June 11, 1878, for the purpose of paying interest on the 3.65 bonds, and that his communication was referred, for opinion, to the First Comptroller, who expressed the following views:

"Under the act of July 16, 1880, both principal and interest of these judgments may be paid in 3.65 bonds, or, under amended act of March 3, 1881, from the proceeds of sales of 3.65 bonds; but as section 4 of the act of June 11, 1878 (20 Stat., 105), provides that 'hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay the interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, issued in pursuance of the act of Congress, approved June 20, 1874, when the same shall become due and payable, and all amounts so paid shall be credited as a part of the appropriation for the year toward the expenses of the District of Columbia'; I would therefore recommend an indefinite appropriation under this act as an appropriation for the expenses of the District of Columbia; all amounts so paid to be credited as a part of the appropriation of $3,425,257.35 by the act of June 4, 1880, and deficiencies made for the expenses of the District of Columbia for the present fiscal year.

"Payments made for interest on judgments rendered after July 1, 1881, should be charged to the appropriation for the District for the then fiscal year 1882."

The Treasurer says:

"The letter was then returned to this office with the following indorsement:

"'Respectfully returned to the honorable Treasurer United States, inviting attention to inclosed opinion of the acting first comptroller. An appropriation will be raised upon the books of the department to pay the interest on the judgment cases referred to herein, under the title of "Interest on 3.65 bonds, District of Columbia, act June 11, 1878 (judgments, acts June 16, 1880, and March 3, 1881), from which the Treasurer will be reimbursed for expenditures on this account."'"

The acting first comptroller held that these raised appropriations for the payment of interest on 3.65 bonds exchanged for or sold to satisfy Court of Claims judgments against the District of Columbia should be charged to the appropriations for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year in which the appropriations were raised. This was not done; but, in so much as there was an unexpended balance of appropriations for the fiscal years in which the appropriations were raised, which was covered into the Treasury, the effect was the same as though the said raised appropriations had been treated as directed by the acting first comptroller.

A tabulated statement of the advances from the raised appropriations above referred to is shown by Exhibit No. 1 of this report, and each advancement for that purpose to the Treasurer of the United States is included in statement I as "Appropriations raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878."

Before the passage of said act of June 11, 1878, there was advanced to the Treasurer of the United States, for the purpose of paying interest on the 3.65 bonds, the sum of $1,755,723.23.

Of this sum, 6 cents was deposited by order of the comptroller, $186,322.15 by the commissioners of the sinking fund, and $20.99 by the First National Bank of New York, as before stated; and $198,622.79 was deposited by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in pursuance of joint resolution of Congress approved March 14, 1876, and $367,500 was appropriated by Congress out of the Treasury of the United States, and $1,003,257.24 was advanced to the Treasurer by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States out of the revenues of the United States.

The first appropriation made by Congress for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds was $182,500 by act approved February 1, 1875, and the second was $185,000 by act approved March 3, 1875. On March 14, 1876, Congress, by joint resolution, ordered the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to pay to the Treasurer of the United States an amount sufficient to pay the interest due February 1, 1876, and the commissioners gave the Treasurer of the United States a check for $200,000, and on November 22, 1876, the Treasurer of the United States paid back to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia the sum of $1,377.21, the difference between $200,000 and $198,622.79, the last-named sum being the amount required to pay the February 1, 1876, interest. The $198,622.79 was the only payment of interest on account of the 3.65 bonds made by the District of Columbia from the date of issue until after the passage of act of June 11, 1878.

In the act entitled "An act for the support of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes," approved July 12, 1876 (U. S. Stat. L., vol. 19, p. 83), Congress provided for the support of the District of Columbia government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1877, by a tax of $1.50 on each $100 of the assessed value of the real and personal property of the District of Columbia, excepting the real and personal property of the United States and other property exempted from taxation by said act.

Section 2 of said act is as follows:

"That the amount collected under the provisions of this act shall be distributed for the purposes required under the various acts in force in the District of Columbia, upon a just and fair apportionment to be made by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or their successors in office: Provided, That before any of said fund shall be expended, said apportionment shall be established and published by said commissioners at least six times consecutively in a daily newspaper of the District of Columbia, and said published apportionment shall stand as the law for the distribution of the funds herein mentioned: Provided further, That deficiencies in any of said funds enumerated in said apportionment may be supplied from any surplus in either of said funds so apportioned; but unless a surplus exists, the revenues belonging to one fund shall not be applied to the purposes of any other fund."

Section 3 of said act provides that one half of the taxes levied by said act was due December 1, 1876, and the other half June 1, 1877, and provides further that—

"In every case where the tax levied by this act shall be paid in installments as herein authorized, each of said payments shall be deemed to have been made on the several funds and for the different purposes indicated in the second section of this act; and an equal pro rata proportion of the payment so made shall be carried to the credit of the respective funds."

Section 13 of said act is as follows:

"That the treasurer of the District, upon receiving any moneys, shall forthwith deposit the same in the Treasury of the United States, and said moneys thus deposited shall be drawn from the Treasury of the United States only in such sums and at such times as the same shall be actually required, and only for the expenditures authorized by law, and only upon warrants of the accounting officers of the District, and issued under the direction of the Commissioners of the District or their successors in office.

The apportionment required to be made by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia of taxes levied by this act was made by them and published in the Evening Star, a daily newspaper published in the District of Columbia; said publications of said apportionment were made in the month of November, 1876, for six consecutive issues of the said paper; and, when so published said apportionment became the law for the distribution of the moneys collected on account of said levy, and the surplus only of any apportionment could be used for a purpose other than that for which it was apportioned.

A copy of the apportionment, together with the affidavit of Henry G. Hanford, assistant auditor of the Evening Star, is made part of this report and is designated as Exhibit No. 2.

The commissioners apportioned out of each $1.50 to be collected on account of said levy the sum of 52 cents and 7 mills "for interest on the District of Columbia 3.65 bonds, guaranteed by the United States, act of Congress approved July 31, 1876."

This apportionment was adhered to in every tax collection reported during the fiscal year 1877, except the one reported December 30, 1876. In this collection of December 30, 1876, the entire apportionment was slightly changed from the published apportionment, each fund, except the general fund of the District, receiving a little less than it was entitled to receive, the fund for interest on the 3.65 bonds receiving $0.52432 instead of $0.527 out of each $1.50 collected. This irregular apportionment of the one collection was unquestionably due to an error in calculation.

There was collected for interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia on account of the levy for the fiscal year 1877 and during the fiscal year 1877 the sum of $432,286.69, and from July 1, 1877, to October 31, 1877, the further sum of $34,968.69, and from October 31, 1877, to June 30, 1878, the further sum of $23,349.32, and in all the sum of $490,504.70 to June 30, 1878.

Up to October 31, 1877, the apportionment was made of each collection reported, but after October 31, 1877, the apportionment was ignored and the collections thereafter were treated as general revenues of the District of Columbia.

The act of Congress approved July 31, 1876 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 106), provides:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury shall reserve of any of the revenues of the District of Columbia not required for the actual current expenses of schools, the police, and the fire department a sum sufficient to meet the interest accruing on the 3.65 bonds of the District during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1876, and apply the same to that purpose; and in case there shall not be a sufficient sum of said revenues in the Treasury of the United States at such time as said interest may be due, then the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to advance from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated a sum sufficient to pay said interest, and the same shall be reimbursed to the Treasury of the United States from time to time, as said revenues may be paid into said Treasury, until the full amount shall have been refunded."

The Secretary of the Treasury, under this act, advanced to the Treasurer of the United States for the purpose of paying interest on the 3.65 bonds for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1877, the sum of $501,628.62 from the revenues of the United States.

By the act of Congress approved March 3, 1877 (U. S. Stat., 19; p. 346), the Secretary of the Treasury was again directed to reserve from any revenues of the District of Columbia not required for actual current expenses of schools, police, and fire department, a sum sufficient to meet the interest accruing on the 3.65 bonds during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1877, and apply the same to that purpose; and, in case a sufficient sum of said revenues was not in the Treasury of the United States at such time as the interest became due, then the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized and directed to advance a sum sufficient to pay the interest, the same to be reimbursed to the Treasury of the United States from time to time until the full amount should have been refunded. Under this act the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States advanced to the Treasurer of the United States for the purpose of paying the interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1878, the sum of $501,628.62 from the revenues of the United States.

The two acts of Congress just referred to, in which provision was made for the payment of the interest on the 3.65 bonds for the fiscal years 1877 and 1878, directed the Secretary of the Treasury to reserve from the revenues of the District of Columbia not required for the actual current expenses of schools, police, and fire department a sum sufficient to meet the interest accruing on the 3.65 bonds.

The revenues of the District of Columbia since July 11, 1874, had been deposited in the Treasury of the United States, but none had been covered into the Treasury by covering warrant until September 28, 1878. As shown by the accounts kept in the Treasury Department, on August 1, 1876, the day the Secretary of the Treasury advanced $250,814.31 to pay the August 1, 1876, interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia had to the credit of their revenue and tax account with the Treasurer of the United States the sum of $377,212.49, none of which was reserved to pay the interest then due, but the full amount was advanced by the Secretary out of the revenues of the United States. At the time the Secretary of the Treasury advanced the $250,814.31 to pay the February 1, 1877, interest on the 3.65 bonds the Commissioners of the District of Columbia had to their credit on the books in the Treasury Department the sum of $145,132.15, none of which was reserved to pay the interest then due. At the time the Secretary of the Treasury advanced $250,814.31 to pay the August 1, 1877, interest on the 3.65 bonds the Commissioners of the District of Columbia had to their credit on the books in the Treasury Department the sum of $142,914.61, none of which was reserved to pay the interest then due.

At the time the Secretary of the Treasury advanced $250,814.31 to pay the interest on the 3.65 bonds due February 1, 1878, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia had to their credit on the books in the Treasury Department the sum of $296,099.81, none of which was reserved to pay the interest then due.

It is true that if the entire amount on hand to the credit of the Commissioners of the District at the time these advances were made by the Secretary of the Treasury was needed for actual current expenses of the schools, the police, and fire department, then it could not have been reserved by the Secretary of the Treasury; but during the fiscal years 1877 and 1878 the Commissioners of the District of Columbia deposited in the Treasury Department revenues amounting to over $1,800,000 in excess of the actual current expenses of schools, police, and fire department, out of which Congress had directed that the Treasury of the United States should be reimbursed, but no reimbursement was made.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia had to their credit on the books in the Treasury Department at the close of the fiscal year 1878, after the payment of all outstanding checks, $29,395.40, which could have been applied as a reimbursement on account of the $1,003,257.24 advanced by the Secretary of the Treasury for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds for the fiscal years 1877 and 1878; but, instead, it went into the general fund and helped to swell the revenues of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1879, by reason of which the United States was compelled to contribute a like sum from its revenues.

On June 30, 1889, according to the Treasury statement of the accounts between the District of Columbia and the United States the District of Columbia had in the Treasury of the United States $512,958.11 of unappropriated revenues; and on June 30, 1896, $825,706.71; this amount, together with the unadvanced balances of appropriations at this time, amounted to $1,106,160.47, according to Treasury statement of the District of Columbia account, and was more than sufficient to have reimbursed the United States Treasury for these advances, had no reimbursement was made.

We know of no reason why the plain provisions of the acts of July 31, 1876, and March 3, 1877, as to reimbursement to the United States for $1,003,257.24, advanced by the Secretary of the Treasury for payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds, were not complied with. The sections that gave the Secretary of the Treasury the authority to advance the money directed and made ample provision for its repayment.

The provisions of the two acts are so simple that there should be no difficulty in construing them. The records made at the time on the books of the Treasury of the United States and the action of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are both proof positive that all parties concerned knew that the sums so advanced by the Secretary of the Treasury were to be reimbursed, and also the source from which the reimbursement was to be made.

Both the "appropriation" and "personal" ledgers in the Treasury of the United States by the entries made thereon show that the amounts advanced were to be repaid to the United States. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia, knowing that these amounts were to be repaid to the United States, collected from taxation on account of the levy of 1877 the sum of $490,504.70 for that purpose, which, under the apportionment made by them, could not be used for other purposes, but was never used for the purpose for which it was collected and set aside.

Guided by the various acts of Congress making provision for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, all of which are referred to in this report and statement of account, we find that the District of Columbia is indebted to the United States in the sum of $1,003,257.24 on account of interest paid on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia from date of issue to and including June 30, 1911, the date to which we have gone in this investigation.

From June 20, 1874, the date of the act authorizing the issue of the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, to June 11, 1878, the District of Columbia contributed $198,622.79 and the United States $1,370,757.24 to the payment of the interest on the 3.65 District of Columbia bonds.

If the mandatory provisions of the acts of July 1, 1876, and March 3, 1877, which require the reimbursement of $1,003,257.24 to the United States, are to be ignored, and in lieu thereof is to be substituted the contention of some that the United States is to pay one-half of the interest on those bonds, then the District of Columbia would owe the United States $586,067.22½. If the contention of others, that all debts owing by the District of Columbia on June 11, 1878, are to be paid one-half by the District of Columbia and one-half by the United States, is to be substituted for the mandatory provisions of said acts of Congress, then, in that event, the District of Columbia would owe the United States on account of interest payments on the 3.65 bonds one-half of $1,003,257.24, or the sum of $501,628.62.

We fail to see any reason why either of these mere contentions should be substituted for the plain provisions of acts of Congress requiring the repayment of the entire amount of $1,003,257.24, advanced by the Secretary of the Treasury out of the revenues of the United States.

In order to ascertain what amount had been paid by the District of Columbia on account of interest on the 3.65 bonds from the date of the issue of these bonds up to June 30, 1878, it was necessary that we make a thorough investigation both of the accounts of the District of Columbia and of the United States with the District of Columbia from June 20, 1874, to June 30, 1878.

Owing to the manner in which the accounts of the District of Columbia were kept at that time, and owing to the further fact that the index to but one ledger could be found, it became necessary for us to read every journal entry covering that period. By this examination the fact was ascertained that only $198,622.79 was paid by the District of Columbia on account of interest on the 3.65 bonds up to June 30, 1878; and by this examination we also ascertained that the United States had advanced for the same period for that purpose the sum of $1,370,757.24.

The revenues of the District of Columbia from July 1, 1878, to and including June 11, 1911, were deposited daily with the Treasurer of the United States and thereafter covered into the Treasury of the United States and amounted to over $100,000,000. In order to know whether or not any of these revenues had been reserved by the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse the United States Treasury for the $1,003,257.24 paid by the United States during the fiscal years 1877 and 1878, and in order to ascertain who had paid the interest on the 3.65 bonds from June 30, 1878, to and including June 30, 1911, it became necessary for us to make a thorough analysis of the general account between the District of Columbia and the United States from June 30, 1878, to and including June 30, 1911.

The work of collecting all the data necessary to a full and complete statement of the general account involves a great amount of labor because of the vast number of details entering into the account. Progress is retarded because hundreds of the books and most of the papers necessary to be examined are in the file rooms far removed from ledgers and journals and papers to which reference must frequently be made during our daily examinations.

In this general account all of the revenues of the District of Columbia deposited into the Treasury of the United States since June 30, 1878, to and including June 30, 1911, and all acts and appropriations by Congress affecting the revenues of the District of Columbia approved prior to June 30, 1911, for the fiscal years 1879 to 1911, inclusive, and all advances made from appropriations, and all repayments made thereto, and all amounts covered into the Treasury by surplus-fund warrants, have to be considered.

In making the examination and analysis of the general account essential to a full and complete statement of the 3.65 interest account we have completed much of the work necessary for our report on the general account, which we will make as soon as completed.

The payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds is but one of the many items considered in this general account; but, owing to the fact that the statement of this interest account covers certain fiscal years prior to July 1, 1878, which fiscal years are not covered by the general account, we deemed it necessary to make a separate statement thereof.

All the payments of the 3.65 interest were made by the Treasurer of the United States, and his disbursing account is kept on the General Treasury agency ledgers, Nos. 10 to 43, inclusive, and on the unnumbered ledgers for the fiscal years 1910 and 1911.

We have stated this account by ledgers in order that those desiring to do so may compare the statement with the ledger accounts. Statements A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and I and the consolidated statements thereof are appended hereto and made part of this report. In these statements all ledger debits and credits are eliminated except those debits showing actual payments of interest and those credits showing the actual advance warrants and deposits of money. The entries eliminated are found on debit journals Nos. 12 to 48, inclusive, and on credit journals Nos. 35 to 175, inclusive.

We report that there is due the United States from the District of Columbia on said interest account the sum of $1,003,257.24.

Respectfully submitted.

T. SCOTT MAYES, Accountant.
J. R. MAYES, Assistant.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 15, 1913.

Consolidation of statements A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and I, showing the aggregate amount received by the Treasurer of the United States for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, and the aggregate interest paid on said bonds, from the date of issue to the close of the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1911, and the balance cash on hand June 30, 1911.

Statements.	Payments of interest.	Receipts from all sources.
A	$752,041.23	$752,445.00
B	250,516.79	250,814.31
C	250,848.99	250,835.30
D	250,628.12	250,814.31
E	250,170.06	250,814.31
F	249,982.14	250,814.31
G	249,459.27	250,814.31
H	238,652.53	246,464.42
I	15,571,027.97	15,565,290.19
Total	18,063,327.10	18,069,106.46
1911, June 30: Balance on hand, to pay interest due	5,779.36
	18,069,106.46	18,069,106.46

Analysis of receipts for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia to June 30, 1911.

Receipts of Treasurer of the United States		$18,069,106.46
Receipts from United States and District of Columbia, each contributing one-half for fiscal years 1879 to 1911, inclusive, from congressional and raised appropriations		16,313,383.23
Receipts for fiscal years prior to July 1, 1878		1,755,723.23
Receipts contributed by neither the United States nor the District of Columbia		186,343.20
Receipts from the United States and the District of Columbia prior to July 1, 1878		1,569,380.03
Receipts from United States Treasury on account of appropriations Feb. 11, 1875, and Mar. 3, 1875	$367,500.00
Receipts from Commissioners of District of Columbia on account of joint resolution, Mar. 14, 1876	198,622.79
Receipts from United States Treasury on account of advances made in pursuance of the acts of Congress, July 31, 1876, and Mar. 3, 1877, which amount was to be, but has not been, reimbursed by the District of Columbia to the United States Treasury, and is now due the United States from the District of Columbia	1,003,257.24
		1,569,380.03

Statement of moneys received and payments made by the Treasurer of the United States on account of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, as shown by Treasury ledgers.

STATEMENT A.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 10, page 212. February, 1873, interest.
1873.
Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 209		$75,000.00
28	By Treasury warrant No. 430		15,000.00
Mar. 11	By Treasury warrant No. 503		25,000.00
Apr. 6	By Treasury warrant No. 731		67,500.00
	These four warrants were advanced on account of appropriation act of Feb. 1, 1875 (U. S. Stat., vol. 18, p. 308).
June 20	To interest paid from Feb. 12, 1875, to June 20, 1875, inclusive	$154,554.64
	To unpaid appropriation deposited in Treasury	27,945.36
		182,500.00	182,500.00
Aug. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 1644		27,945.36
	This warrant was drawn on account of the unexpended balance of the appropriation act of Feb. 1, 1875, which balance was covered into the Treasury June 20, 1875.
Sept. 28	By balance overpayment forwarded to ledger No. 10, page 212		4,003.98
	To interest paid from July 31 to Sept. 28, 1875, inclusive	31,949.34
		31,949.34	31,949.34

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT A—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 10, page 213. February and August, 1875, interest.
1875.
July 31	By deposit by commissioners, sinking fund		$23,439.63
Oct. 8	do		10,000.00
22	do		20,000.00
Nov. 8	do		20,000.00
Dec. 1	do		37,836.08
20	To interest paid from Nov. 18 to Dec. 20, 1875, inclusive	$79,441.55
	To amount of overpayment from page 212	4,003.98
	To balance forwarded to ledger No. 11, page 280	27,830.18
		111,275.71	111,275.71
	Ledger No. 11, page 280. February and August, 1875, and February, 1876, interest.
1876.
Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 10, page 213		$27,830.18
5	By deposit by commissioners, sinking fund		20,000.00
12	do		22,243.35
15	do		1.83
27	do		20,000.00
Feb. 4	do		12,801.24
Mar. 16	By amount paid Treasurer of the United States by Commissioners of the District of Columbia, as required by joint resolution of Congress approved Mar. 14, 1876 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 211), by check No. 11 for $200,000.00
	Less amount repaid to Commissioners of District of Columbia Nov. 22, 1876 (ledger No. 11, p. 520) 1,377.21
			198,622.79
Nov. 22	To interest paid from Jan. 14 to Nov. 22, 1876, inclusive	$296,927.44
	To balance to ledger No. 12, page 390	4,571.97
		301,499.41	301,499.41
	Ledger No. 12, page 390. February and August, 1875, and February, 1876, interest.
1877.
Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 11, page 280		$4,571.97
Oct. 31	By cash deposit (by order of comptroller)		.06
Dec. 22	To interest paid from Jan. 19 to Dec. 22, 1877, inclusive	$2,310.42
	To balance to ledger No. 13, page 215	2,261.61
		4,572.03	4,572.03
	Ledger No. 13, page 215. February and August, 1875, and February, 1876, interest.
1878.
Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 12, page 390		$2,261.61
June 26	To interest paid from Feb. 6 to June 26, 1878, inclusive	$118.62
	To balance to ledger No. 13, page 352	2,142.99
		2,261.61	2,261.61
	Ledger No. 14, page 352. February and August, 1875, and February, 1876, interest.
1878.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 13, page 215		$2,142.99
1879.
May 2	To interest paid from Aug. 22, 1878, to May 2, 1879, inclusive	$1,334.08
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 391	808.91
		2,142.99	2,142.99
	Ledger No. 15, page 391. February and August, 1875, and February, 1876, interest.
1879.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 352		$808.91
Oct. 14	To interest paid from Aug. 20 to Oct. 14, 1879, inclusive	$405.14
	To balance transferred to ledger No. 15, page 400, merged interest account	403.77
		808.91	808.91
	Ledger No. 10, page 212. August, 1875, interest.
1875.
Aug. 6	By Treasury warrant 1679		$185,000.00
	This warrant drawn on account of appropriation, act Mar. 3, 1875 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 376).
Nov. 18	To interest paid from Aug. 16 to Nov. 18, 1875, inclusive	$185,000.00
		185,000.00	185,000.00

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT A.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 10, page 212:
Receipts from congressional appropriations		$367,500.00
Payments of interest	$371,503.98

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT A—continued.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 10, page 213:
Deposit by commissioners, sinking fund		$111,275.71
Payments of interest	$79,441.55
Ledger No. 11, page 280:
Deposit by commissioners, sinking fund		75,046.44
Deposit by Commissioners District of Columbia		198,622.79
Payments of interest	286,927.44
Ledger No. 12, page 390:
Cash deposited by order of comptroller		.06
Payments of interest	2,310.42
Ledger No. 13, page 215: Payments of interest	118.62
Ledger No. 14, page 352: Payments of interest	1,334.08
Ledger No. 15, page 391: Payments of interest	405.14
Total	752,041.23	752,445.00
Balance to merged interest account	403.77
	752,445.00	752,445.00

STATEMENT B.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 11, page 281. August, 1876, interest.
1876. Aug. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 1449		$250,814.31
	This warrant was drawn on account appropriation, act July 31, 1876 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 106).
Nov. 24	To interest paid from Aug. 10 to Nov. 24, 1876, inclusive	$245,813.81
	To balance to ledger No. 12, page 391	5,000.50
		250,814.31	250,814.31
	Ledger No. 12, page 391. August, 1876, interest.
1877. Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 11, page 281		$5,000.50
Dec. 22	To interest paid from Jan. 19 to Dec. 22, 1877, inclusive	$3,923.73
	To balance to ledger No. 13, page 215	1,076.77
		5,000.50	5,000.50
	Ledger No. 13, page 215. August, 1876, interest.
1878. Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 12, page 391		$1,076.77
June 24	To interest paid from Jan. 16 to June 24, inclusive	$123.16
	To balance to ledger No. 14, page 352	953.61
		1,076.77	1,076.77
	Ledger No. 14, page 352. August, 1876, interest.
1878. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 13, page 215		$953.61
1879. May 2	To interest paid from July 30, 1878, to May 2, 1879, inclusive	$499.13
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 391	454.48
		953.61	953.61
	Ledger No. 15, page 391. August, 1876, interest.
1879. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 352		$454.48
Oct. 10	To interest paid from Aug. 20 to Oct. 10, inclusive (1879)	$156.96
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 400, merged interest account	297.52
		454.48	454.48

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT B.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 11, page 281:
Receipts from congressional appropriations		$250,814.31
Payments of interest	$245,813.81
Ledger No. 12, page 391: Payments of interest	3,923.73
Ledger No. 13, page 215: Payments of interest	123.16
Ledger No. 14, page 352: Payments of interest	499.13
Ledger No. 15, page 391: Payments of interest	156.96
Total	250,516.79	250,814.31
Balance to merged interest account	297.52
	250,814.31	250,814.31

STATEMENT C.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 12, page 392. February, 1877, interest.
1877. Feb. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 258		$250,835.30
	This sum was advanced on account of act July 31, 1876 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 106).

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT C—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 12, page 392. February, 1877, interest—Continued.
1877 Dec. 22	To interest paid from Aug. 8 to Dec. 22, 1877, inclusive	$249,386.25
	To balance to ledger No. 13, page 216	1,449.05
		250,835.30	$250,835.30
	Ledger No. 13, page 216. February, 1877, interest.
1878. Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 12, page 392		$1,449.05
June 26	To interest paid from Jan. 9 to June 26, 1878, inclusive	$464.48
	To balance to ledger No. 14, page 353	984.57
		1,449.05	1,449.05
	Ledger No. 14, page 353. February, 1877, interest.
1878. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 13, page 216		$984.57
1879. May 2	To interest paid from July 24, 1878, to May 2, 1879, inclusive	$745.50
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 392	239.07
		984.57	984.57
	Ledger No. 15, page 392. February, 1877, interest.
1879. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 353		$239.07
Oct. 22	To interest paid from Aug. 20 to Oct. 22, 1879, inclusive	$252.76
	By balance overpayment carried to merged interest account, ledger No. 15, page 400		13.69
		252.76	252.76

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT C.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 12, page 392:
Receipts from congressional appropriation		$250,835.30
Payments of interest	$249,386.25
Ledger No. 13, page 216: Payments of interest	464.48
Ledger No. 14, page 353: Payments of interest	745.50
Ledger No. 15, page 392: Payments of interest	252.76
Total	250,848.99	250,835.30
Balance to merged interest account		13.69
	250,848.99	250,848.99

STATEMENT D.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 12, page 393. August, 1877, interest.
1877. July 31	By Treasury warrant No. 1592		$250,814.31
	This warrant was advanced on account of act Mar. 3, 1877 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 346).
Dec. 22	To interest paid from Aug. 7 to Dec. 22, 1877, inclusive	$246,714.45
	To balance ledger No. 13, page 216	4,099.86
		250,814.31	250,814.31
	Ledger No. 13, page 216. August, 1877, interest.
1878. Jan. 1	By balance from ledger No. 12, page 393		$4,099.86
June 24	To interest paid from Jan. 9 to June 24, 1878, inclusive	$2,403.52
	To balance ledger No. 14, page 355	1,696.34
		4,099.86	4,099.86
	Ledger No. 14, page 355. August, 1877, interest.
1878. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 13, page 216		$1,696.34
1879. May 2	To interest paid from July 24, 1878, to May 2, 1879, inclusive	$997.33
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 392	699.01
		1,696.34	1,696.34
	Ledger No. 15, page 392. August, 1877, interest.
1879. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 353		$699.01
Nov. 20	To interest paid from Aug. 20 to Nov. 20, 1879, inclusive	$512.82
	To balance to merged interest account, ledger No. 15, page 400	186.19
		699.01	699.01

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT D.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 12, page 393:
Receipts from congressional appropriations		$250,814.31
Payments of interest	$246,714.45
Ledger No. 13, page 216: Payments of interest	2,403.52
Ledger No. 14, page 333: Payments of interest	997.33
Ledger No. 15, page 392: Payments of interest	512.82
Total	250,628.12	250,814.31
Balance to merged interest account	186.19
	250,628.31	250,814.31

STATEMENT E.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 13, page 217. February, 1878, interest.
1878. Jan. 24	By Treasury warrant No. 188		$250,814.31
	This sum was advanced on account, act Mar. 3, 1877 (U. S. Stat., vol. 19, p. 346).
June 27	To interest paid from Feb. 5 to June 27, 1878, inclusive	$247,580.41
	To balance to ledger No. 14, page 355	3,233.90
		250,814.31	250,814.31
	Ledger No. 14, page 355. February, 1878, interest.
1878. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 13, page 217		$3,233.90
1879. May 2	To interest paid from July 9, 1878, to May 2, 1879, inclusive	$2,208.24
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 393	1,025.66
		3,233.90	3,233.90
	Ledger No. 15, page 393. February, 1878, interest.
1879. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 355		$1,025.66
Nov. 20	To interest paid from Aug. 20 to Nov. 20, 1879, inclusive	$381.41
	To balance ledger No. 15, page 400, merged interest account	644.25
		1,025.66	1,025.66

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT E.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 13, page 217:
Receipts from congressional appropriation		$250,814.31
Payments of interest	$247,580.41
Ledger No. 14, page 355: Payments of interest	2,208.24
Ledger No. 15, page 393: Payments of interest	381.41
Total	250,170.06	250,814.31
Balance to merged interest account	644.25
	250,814.31	250,814.31

STATEMENT F.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 14, page 356. August, 1878, interest.
1878. Aug. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 1648		$250,814.31
	Appropriation acts June 20, 1878, Mar. 3, 1879 (U. S. Stat., vol. 20, pp. 208 and 416).
1879. June 27	To interest paid from Aug. 6, 1878, to June 27, 1879, inclusive	$249,343.39
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 394	1,470.92
		250,814.31	250,814.31
	Ledger No. 15, page 394. August, 1878, interest.
1879. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 356		$1,470.92
Nov. 20	To interest paid from Aug. 20 to Nov. 20, 1879, inclusive	$638.75
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 400, merged interest account	832.17
		1,470.92	1,470.92

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT F.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 14, page 356:
Receipts from congressional appropriation		$250,814.31
Payments of interest	$249,343.39
Ledger No. 15, page 394: Payments of interest	638.75
Total	249,982.14	250,814.31
Balance to merged interest account	832.17
	250,814.31	250,814.31

STATEMENT G.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 14, pages 358-360. February, 1879, interest.
1879. Feb. 6	By Treasury warrant No. 338		$250,814.31
	Appropriation acts June 20, 1878, Mar. 3, 1879 (U. S. Stat., vol. 20, pp. 208 and 416).
June 27	To interest paid from Feb. 4 to June 27, 1879, inclusive	$245,940.66
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 396	4,873.65
		250,814.31	250,814.31
	Ledger No. 15, page 396. February, 1879, interest.
1879. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 14, page 360		$4,873.65
Nov. 20	To interest paid from July 9 to Nov. 20, 1879, inclusive	$3,518.61
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 400, merged-interest account	1,355.04
		4,873.65	4,873.65

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT G.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 14, pages 358-360:
Receipts from congressional appropriations		$250,814.31
Payments of interest	$245,940.66
Ledger No. 15, page 396: Payments of interest	3,518.61
Total	249,459.27	250,814.31
Balance to merged-interest account	1,355.04
	250,814.31	250,814.31

STATEMENT H.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 15, page 398. August, 1879, interest.
1879 July 25	By Treasury warrant No. 1894		$246,464.42
	Appropriation act Mar. 3, 1879 (U. S. Stat., vol. 20, p. 410).
Nov. 28	To interest paid from Aug. 6 to Nov. 28, 1879, inclusive	$238,652.53
	To balance to ledger No. 15, page 400, merged-interest account	7,811.89
		246,464.42	246,464.42

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT H.

	Payments.	Receipts.
Ledger No. 15, page 398:
Receipts from congressional appropriations		$246,464.42
Payments of interest	$238,652.53
Total	238,652.53	246,464.42
Balance to merged-interest account	7,811.89
	246,464.42	246,464.42

STATEMENT I.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 15, page 400. February, 1880, interest and unpaid balances for prior periods.
1879. Dec. 1	By unexpended balances from prior interest periods, Feb. 1, 1875, to Aug. 1, 1879, inclusive (merged balances)		$11,517.14

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT I—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 15, page 400. February, 1880, interest and unpaid balances for prior periods—Continued.
1880.
Jan. 28	By Treasury warrant No. 177		$246,464.42
	Act Mar. 3, 1879 (U. S. Stat., vol. 20, p. 410).
June 16	To interest paid from Dec. 5, 1879, to June 16, 1880, inclusive	$247,831.44
	To balance to ledger No. 16, page 473	10,150.12
		257,981.56	257,981.56
	Ledger No. 16, pages 433–434. Fiscal year 1881.
1880.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 15, page 433		$10,150.12
	By Treasury warrant No. 1664		244,183.17
Sept. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 2076		150,000.00
1881.
Feb. 9	By Treasury warrant No. 318		162,169.93
18	By Treasury warrant No. 392		94,183.17
	Acts June 4 and 16, 1880, and Jan. 31, 1881 (U. S. Stat., vol. 21, pp. 162, 253, 322, respectively).
June 28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1881	$629,955.45
	To balance to ledger No. 17, page 431	30,730.94
		660,686.39	660,686.39
	Ledger No. 17, pages 431–433. Fiscal year 1882.
1881.
July 1	By balance from Ledger No. 16, page 434		$30,730.94
29	By Treasury warrant No. 2013		256,544.81
1882.
Feb. 3	By Treasury warrant No. 346		255,894.19
Apr. 24	By Treasury warrant No. 987		912.50
	Act Mar. 3, 1881 (U. S. Stat., vol. 21, p. 466).
1881.
July 29	By Treasury warrant No. 2015		1,838.68
1882.
Feb. 27	By Treasury warrant No. 529		7,650.79
	Raised appropriation under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($9,489.47).
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1882	$530,613.30
	To balance to ledger No. 18, page 436	22,958.61
		553,571.91	553,571.91
	Ledger No. 18, pages 436–437. Fiscal year 1883.
1882.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 17, page 433		$22,958.61
Aug. 5	By Treasury warrant No. 1915		255,302.90
1883.
Feb. 3	By Treasury warrant No. 341		255,748.19
June 23	By Treasury warrant No. 1807		1,157.05
	Act July 1, 1882 (U. S. Stat., vol. 22, p. 143).
1882.
July 25	By Treasury warrant No. 1816		27.52
Nov. 3	By Treasury warrant No. 2974		4,225.88
1883.
June 16	By Treasury warrant No. 1692		2,290.40
	Raised appropriation under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($6,543.80).
28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1883	$522,318.15
	To balance to ledger No. 19, page 331	19,392.40
		541,710.55	541,710.55
	Ledger No. 19, pages 331–332. Fiscal year 1884.
1883.
July 2	By balance from ledger No. 18, page 437		$19,392.40
Aug. 3	By Treasury warrant No. 2293		255,623.18
1884.
Jan. 28	By Treasury warrant No. 267		255,895.11
	Appropriation act Mar. 3, 1883 (U. S. Stat., vol. 22, p. 469).
Mar. 21	By Treasury warrant No. 798		2,586.00
28	By Treasury No. 835		3,113.34
May 12	By Treasury warrant No. 1248		336.52
June 28	By Treasury warrant No. 1725		863.31
	Raised appropriation, section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($6,899.17).
28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1884	$19,685.58
	To balance to ledger No. 20, page 36	18,124.28
		537,809.86	537,809.86
	Ledger No. 20, page 36. Fiscal year 1885.
1884.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 19, page 332		$18,124.28
9	By Treasury warrant No. 1829		1,355.97
28	By Treasury warrant No. 2149		256,094.95
1885.
Feb. 6	By Treasury warrant No. 353		256,547.55
	Appropriation act July 5, 1884 (U. S. Stat., vol. 22, p. 469).
1884.
Aug. 28	By Treasury warrant No. 2240		545.00
Oct. 30	By Treasury warrant No. 3309		579.60
Nov. 25	By Treasury warrant No. 3535		241.52
Dec. 31	By Treasury warrant No. 3945		118.08

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT I—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 20, page 36. Fiscal year 1885—Continued.
1885.
Jan. 13	By Treasury warrant No. 118		$7,925.00
June 11	By Treasury warrant No. 1876		43.87
	Raised appropriation under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($9,468.07).
29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1885	$519,604.23
	To balance to ledger No. 21, page 35	21,986.59
		541,590.82	541,590.82
	Ledger No. 21, pages 35 to 42. Fiscal year 1886.
1885.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 20, page 36		$21,986.59
Aug. 4	By Treasury warrant No. 2630		256,111.47
1886.
Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 4896		256,400.55
	Appropriation act Feb. 25, 1885 (U. S. Stat., vol. 23, p. 130).
1885.
July 3	By Treasury warrant No. 2245		59.80
Aug. 31	By Treasury warrant No. 3086		223.95
Sept. 16	By Treasury warrant No. 3242		1,140.75
Oct. 14	By Treasury warrant No. 3539		5,124.21
	Raised appropriation, section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($6,593.71).
1886.
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1886	$521,890.09
	To balance ledger No. 22, page 37	19,203.13
		541,093.22	541,093.22
	Ledger No. 22, pages 37 to 49. Fiscal year 1887.
1886.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 21, page 42		$19,203.13
July 28	By Treasury warrant No. 257		256,113.20
1887.
Jan. 26	By Treasury warrant No. 2852		256,125.06
	Appropriation act July 9, 1886 (U. S. Stat., vol. 24, p. 137).
	Ledger No. 22, pages 37 to 49. Fiscal year 1887.
1886.
July 8	By Treasury warrant No. 33		$1,051.23
Sept. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 743		38.74
1887.
Mar. 5	By Treasury warrant No. 3454		239.25
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($1,327.19).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1887	$510,370.86
	To balance to ledger No. 23, page 36	22,397.72
		532,768.58	532,768.58
	Ledger No. 23, pages 36 to 39. Fiscal year 1888.
1887.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 22, page 49		$22,397.72
27	By Treasury warrant No. 332		256,113.20
1888.
Jan. 28	By Treasury warrant No. 2681		256,113.20
	Appropriation act Mar. 3, 1887 (U. S. Stat., vol. 24, p. 578).
Apr. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 3564		17,109.10
June 27	By Treasury warrant No. 4699		5,620.63
	Appropriation raised, section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($20,723.73).
29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1888	$536,382.08
	To balance to ledger No. 24, page 31	18,965.77
		555,347.85	555,347.85
	Ledger No. 24, pages 31 to 34. Fiscal year 1889.
1888.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 23, page 39		$18,965.77
Aug. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 400		256,113.20
1889.
Jan. 30	By Treasury warrant No. 1018		256,113.20
	Appropriation act, July 18, 1888 (U. S. Stat., vol. 25, p. 324).
1888.
Nov. 1	By part of Treasury warrant No. 742		7,779.05
Sept. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 568		749.83
1889.
June 21	By Treasury warrant No. 1615		573.40
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($9,102.31).
28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1889	$519,546.59
	To balance to ledger No. 25, page 31	20,747.89
		540,294.48	540,294.48
	Ledger No. 25, pages 31 to 36. Fiscal year 1890.
1889.
July 2	By balance from ledger No. 24, page 34		$20,747.89
31	By Treasury warrant No. 661		256,113.20
1890.
Feb. 7	By Treasury warrant No. 4269		256,113.20
	Appropriation act, Mar. 2, 1889 (U. S. Stat., vol. 25, p. 805).

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT I—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 25, pages 31 to 36. Fiscal year 1890—Continued.
1889. Oct. 5	By Treasury warrant No. 1945		$13,499.52
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($13,99.52).
1890. June 28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1890	$527,609.30
	To balance, to ledger No. 26, page 30	18,864.51
		546,473.81	546,473.81
	Ledger No. 26, pages 30 to 33. Fiscal year 1891.
1890. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 25, page 33		$18,864.51
Aug. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 724		49,000.00
12	By Treasury warrant No. 781		207,113.20
1891. Jan. 31	By Treasury warrant No. 4643		256,113.20
	Appropriation act, Aug. 6, 1890 (U. S. Stat., vol. 26, p. 306).
1890. Dec. 6	By Treasury warrant No. 3412		25,286.12
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($25,286.12).
1891. June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1891	$542,022.10
	To balance to ledger No. 27, page 30	14,354.93
		556,377.03	556,377.03
	Ledger No. 27, pages 30 to 33. Fiscal year 1892.
1891. July 1	By balance from ledger No 26, page 33		$14,354.93
Aug. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 688		256,113.20
1892. Apr. 4	By Treasury warrant No. 5808		256,113.20
	Appropriation act, Mar. 3, 1891 (U. S. Stat., vol. 26, p. 1074).
1891. Aug. 21	By Treasury warrant No. 887		2,667.28
Oct. 23	By Treasury warrant No. 2282		14,591.99
	Appropriation raised under section 4 act June 11, 1878 ($17,259.27).
1892. June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1892	$524,113.71
	To balance, to ledger No. 28, page 31	19,726.89
		543,840.60	543,840.60
	Ledger No. 28, pages 31 to 34. Fiscal year 1893.
1892. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 27, page 33		$19,726.89
Aug. 4	By Treasury warrant No. 737		256,113.20
1893. Feb. 8	By Treasury warrant No. 5259		256,113.20
	Appropriation act, July 14, 1892 (U. S. Stat., vol. 27, p. 163).
Mar. 8	By Treasury warrant No. 5814		1,181.68
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($1,181.68).
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1893	$516,556.17
	To balance to ledger No. 29, page 31	16,578.80
		533,134.97	533,134.97
	Ledger No. 29, pages 31 to 34. Fiscal year 1894.
1893. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 28, page 34		$16,578.80
Aug. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 733		256,113.20
1894. Feb. 3	By Treasury warrant No. 4454		256,113.20
	Appropriation, act Mar. 3, 1893 (U. S. Stat., vol. 27, p. 549).
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1894	$511,685.27
	To balance to ledger No. 30, page 31	17,119.93
		528,805.20	528,805.20
	Ledger No. 30, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1895.
1894. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 29, page 34		$17,119.93
Aug. 30	By Treasury warrant No. 797		256,113.20
1895. Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 4239		258,960.20
	Appropriation, act Aug. 7, 1894 (U. S. Stat., vol. 28, p. 258).
June 28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1895	$517,098.21
	To balance to ledger No. 31, page 31	15,095.12
		532,193.33	532,193.33
	Ledger No. 31, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1896.
1895. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 30, page 33		$15,095.12
Aug. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 381		258,960.20
1896. Jan. 29	By Treasury warrant No. 2333		259,462.07
	Appropriation act, Mar. 2, 1895 (U. S. Stat., vol. 28, p. 760).
1895. Dec. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 1640		19,955.62

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT I—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 31, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1896—Continued.
1895. June 22	By Treasury warrant No. 5409		$4,876.30
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($24,831.82).
29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1896	$543,588.07
	To balance to ledger No. 32, page 31	14,761.14
		558,349.21	558,349.21
	Ledger No. 32, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1897.
1896. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 31, page 33		$14,761.14
Aug. 5	By Treasury warrant No. 2035		259,589.82
1897. Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 4919		259,589.82
	Appropriation act June 11, 1896 (U. S. Stat., vol. 29, p. 407.)
June 24	To interest paid during fiscal year 1897	$519,605.78
	To balance to ledger No. 33, page 31	14,335.00
		533,940.78	533,940.78
	Ledger No. 33, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1898.
1897. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 32, page 33		$14,335.00
28	By Treasury warrant No. 913		259,589.82
1898. Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 6743		259,589.82
	Appropriation act Mar. 3, 1897 (U. S. Stat., vol. 29, p. 680).
June 28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1898	$516,653.85
	To balance to ledger No. 34, page 31	16,860.79
		533,514.64	533,514.64
	Ledger No. 34, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1899.
1898. 1	By balance from ledger No. 33, page 33		$16,860.79
27	By Treasury warrant No. 2705		259,589.82
1899. Jan. 26	By Treasury warrant No. 5916		259,589.82
	Appropriation act June 30, 1898 (U. S. Stat., vol. 30, p. 539).
June 27	To interest paid during fiscal year 1899	$519,949.80
	To balance to ledger No. 35, page 31	16,090.63
		536,040.43	536,040.43
	Ledger No. 35, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1900.
1899. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 34, page 33		$16,090.63
Aug. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 527		259,589.82
1900. Jan. 25	By Treasury warrant No. 2681		259,589.82
	Appropriation act Mar. 3, 1899 (U. S. Stat., vol. 30, p. 1059).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1900	$519,027.26
	To balance to ledger No. 36, page 31	16,243.01
		535,270.27	535,270.27
	Ledger No. 36, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1901.
1900. July 2	By balance from ledger No. 35, page 33		$16,243.01
31	By Treasury warrant No. 505		259,589.82
1901. Jan. 25	By Treasury warrant No. 2794		259,589.82
	Appropriation act June 6, 1900 (U. S. Stat., vol. 31, p. 573).
June 28	To interest paid during fiscal year 1901	$517,785.35
	To balance to ledger No. 37, page 31	17,637.30
		535,422.65	535,422.65
	Ledger No. 37, pages 31 to 33. Fiscal year 1902.
1901. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 36, page 33		$17,637.30
26	By Treasury warrant No. 324		259,253.11
1902. Jan. 25	By Treasury warrant No. 2883		259,105.29
	Appropriation act Mar. 1, 1901 (U. S. Stat., vol. 31, p. 839).
June 26	To interest paid during fiscal year 1902	$516,987.81
	To balance to ledger No. 38, page 31	19,007.89
		535,995.70	535,995.70
	Ledger No. 38, pages 31 to 32. Fiscal year 1903.
1902. July 1	By balance from ledger No. 37, page 33		$19,007.89
24	By Treasury warrant No. 594		246,317.51
1903. Jan. 29	By Treasury warrant No. 3687		235,569.17
	Appropriation act July 1, 1902 (U. S. Stat., vol. 32, p. 610).
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1903	$485,039.52
	To balance to ledger No. 39, page 31	15,855.05
		500,894.57	500,894.57

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT I—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger No. 39, pages 31 to 32. Fiscal year 1904.
1903.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 38, page 32		$15,855.05
25	By Treasury warrant No. 376		235,502.56
1904.
Feb. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 2973		234,416.68
	Appropriation act Mar. 3, 1903 (U. S. Stat., vol. 32, p. 975).
1903.
July 14	By Treasury warrant No. 195		3,305.22
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($3,305.22).
1904.
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1904	$467,652.60
	To balance to ledger No. 40, page 31	21,426.91
		489,079.51	489,079.51
	Ledger No. 40, pages 31 to 32. Fiscal year 1905.
1904.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 39, page 32		$21,426.91
Aug. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 528		219,937.13
1905.
Feb. 1	By Treasury warrant No. 3713		219,937.14
	Appropriation act Apr. 27, 1904 (U. S. Stat., vol. 33, p. 384).
Mar. 31	By Treasury warrant No. 4834		22,419.10
May 22	By Treasury warrant No. 6093		2,555.00
	Appropriation raised under section 4, act June 11, 1878 ($24,974.10).
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1905	$466,478.10
	To balance to ledger No. 41, page 31	19,797.18
		486,275.28	486,275.28
	Ledger No. 41 (Vol. I), pages 31 to 32. Fiscal year 1906.
1905.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 40, page 32		$19,797.18
27	By Treasury warrant No. 431		218,112.13
1906.
Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant No. 430		212,090.55
	Appropriation act, Mar. 3, 1905 (U. S. Stat., vol. 33, p. 905).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1906	$430,597.80
	To balance to ledger No. 42, page 30	19,402.06
		449,999.86	449,999.86
	Ledger No. 42 (Vol. I), pages 30 to 31. Fiscal year 1907.
1906.
July 2	By balance from ledger No. 41, page 32		$19,402.06
28	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 35		204,949.32
1907.
Feb. 4	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 207		$202,672.64
	Appropriation act, June 27, 1906 (U. S. Stat., vol. 34, p. 508).
June 29	To interest paid during fiscal year 1907	$407,585.46
	To balance to ledger No. 43 (Vol. I), page 69	19,438.56
		427,024.02	427,024.02
	Ledger No. 43 (Vol. I), pages 69–70. Fiscal year 1908.
1907.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 42, page 31		$19,438.56
26	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 21		202,643.43
1908.
Feb. 3	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 185		193,591.44
	Appropriation act, Mar. 2, 1907 (U. S. Stat., vol. 34, p. 1147).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1908	$394,945.51
	To balance to ledger No. 44, Volume I, page 70	20,727.92
		415,673.43	415,673.43
	Ledger No. 43 (Vol. I), pages 70–71. Fiscal year 1909.
1908.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 43, page 70		$20,727.92
27	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 25		184,750.22
1909.
Feb. 2	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 294		184,610.61
	Appropriation act, May 26, 1908 (U. S. Stat., vol. 35, p. 301).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1909	$369,498.59
	To balance to ledger for fiscal year 1910	20,590.16
		390,088.75	390,088.75

Statement of moneys received and payments made, etc.—Continued.

STATEMENT I—continued.

Date.		Payments.	Receipts.
	Ledger for fiscal year 1910.
1909.
July 1	By balance from ledger No. 43, Volume I, page 71		$20,590.16
31	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 62		184,390.01
1910.
Jan. 30	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 305		173,280.19
	Appropriation act, Mar. 3, 1909 (U. S. Stat., vol. 35, p. 716).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1910	$372,343.81
	To balance to ledger for fiscal year 1911	5,925.36
		378,269.17	378,269.17
	Ledger for fiscal year 1911.
1910.
July 1	By balance from ledger for fiscal year for 1910		$5,925.36
29	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 45		193,633.32
1911.
Jan. 31	By Treasury warrant, District of Columbia, No. 275		192,228.81
	Appropriation act, May 18, 1910 (U. S. Stat., vol. 36, p. 404).
June 30	To interest paid during fiscal year 1911	$326,006.13
	To balance to ledger for fiscal year 1912	5,779.36
		331,785.49	331,785.49

RECAPITULATION OF STATEMENT I.

Ledgers, by numbers.	Payments of interest.	Receipts from congressional appropriations.
No. 15	$247,831.44	$246,464.42
No. 16	629,955.45	630,336.27
No. 17	530,613.39	522,840.97
No. 18	522,318.15	518,751.94
No. 19	519,685.58	518,417.16
No. 20	519,604.23	523,466.54
No. 21	521,880.09	519,196.62
No. 22	510,370.86	513,565.45
No. 23	536,382.08	532,950.13
No. 24	519,546.59	521,328.71
No. 25	527,609.30	527,725.92
No. 26	542,022.10	537,512.52
No. 27	524,113.71	529,485.67
No. 28	516,556.17	513,498.66
No. 29	511,695.27	512,226.40
No. 30	517,098.21	515,073.43
No. 31	543,588.07	543,254.09
No. 22	519,605.78	519,179.64
No. 33	516,653.85	519,179.64
No. 34	519,949.80	519,179.64
No. 35	519,027.26	519,179.64
No. 36	517,785.35	519,179.64
No. 37	516,987.81	518,358.40
No. 38	485,039.52	481,886.68
No. 39	467,652.60	473,224.46
No. 40	466,478.10	464,848.37
No. 41	430,597.80	430,202.68
No. 42	407,585.46	407,621.96
No. 43	394,945.51	396,294.87
No. 44	369,498.59	369,360.83
1910, fiscal year	372,343.81	257,679.01
1911, fiscal year	326,006.13	325,860.13
Total	15,571,027.97	15,565,290.19
Unexpended balances, merged interest accounts, Dec. 1, 1879		11,517.14
Cash to credit of Treasurer United States at close of fiscal year 1911	5,779.36
	15,576,807.33	[1] 15,576,807.33

[1] Included in the sum of $15,565,290.19, receipts from congressional appropriations, is the sum of $180,485.18 raised appropriations.

EXHIBIT No. 1.

Statement of appropriations raised for the purpose of paying interest on the 3.65 bonds.

[Authority quoted, sec. 4, act June 11, 1878.]

Date of warrant.	Number of warrant.	Amount.
1881—July 29	2015	$1,838.68
1882—Feb. 27	529	7,650.79	$9,489.47
July 25	1816	27.52
Nov. 3	2974	4,225.88
1883—June 16	1692	2,290.40	6,543.80

Statement of appropriations raised for the purpose of paying interest on the 3.65 bonds—Continued.

Date of warrant.	Number of warrant.	Amount.
1884—Mar. 21	798	$2,586.00
Mar. 28	835	3,113.34
May 12	1248	336.52
June 28	1725	863.31
			$6,899.17
Aug. 28	2249	545.00
Oct. 30	3309	579.60
Nov. 25	3535	241.52
Dec. 31	3945	118.08
1885—Jan. 13	118	7,935.00
June 11	1876	48.87
			9,468.07
July 3	2245	59.80
Aug. 31	3086	229.95
Sept. 16	3242	1,149.75
Oct. 14	3539	5,154.21
			6,593.71
1886—July 8	33	1,051.20
Sept. 2	743	36.74
1887—Mar. 5	3454	239.25
			1,327.19
1888—Apr. 2	3564	17,103.10
June 27	4099	3,620.63
			20,723.73
Nov. 1	742	7,779.06
Sept. 1	568	749.85
1889—June 21	1615	573.40
			9,102.31
Oct. 5	1945	13,499.52
			13,499.52
1890—Dec. 6	3412	25,286.12
			25,286.12
1891—Aug. 21	887	2,667.28
Oct. 23	2282	14,591.99
			17,259.27
1893—Mar. 8	5814	1,181.68
			1,181.68
1895—Dec. 2	1640	19,955.62
1896—June 22	5409	4,876.20
			24,831.82
1903—July 14	195	3,305.22
			3,305.22
1905—Mar. 31	4834	22,419.10
May 22	6093	2,555.00
			24,974.10
Total			180,485.18

EXHIBIT No. 2.

Apportionment by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia of the revenue collectible under the tax levied for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877.

In exercise of the authority and duty devolved upon us by the act of Congress approved July 12, 1876, entitled "An act for the support of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, and for other purposes," the undersigned Commissioners of the District of Columbia make the following apportionment for the distribution of the revenue which shall be collected under the provisions of the act of Congress aforesaid, to wit: Every $1.50 collected pursuant to the tax levy by said act of Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, shall be distributed as follows:

	Cents.
For salaries and other necessary expenses of the Metropolitan police for the District of Columbia, act of Congress approved July 31, 1876	15 8–10
For Pennsylvania Avenue pavement, District of Columbia, proportion estimated, including expenses paving commissioners, act of Congress approved July 19, 1876	10 8–10
For salaries and other expenses of the board of health, and for salaries of the inspector and of the assistant inspector of gas, act of Congress approved July 31, 1876	1 9–10
For support of the boys sent to the reform school (act of Congress approved May 3, 1876) and of the indigent insane of the District of Columbia in the Government Hospital for the Insane (act of Congress approved July 31, 1876)	2 6–10
For the interest on the bonded debt of the District of Columbia, including the bonds of the corporations of Washington and Georgetown	58 9–10
For interest on the District of Columbia 3.65 bonds guaranteed by the United States (act of Congress approved July 31, 1876)	52 7–10
For sinking fund on the bonded debt of the District of Columbia, including bonds of the corporations of Washington and Georgetown (see various acts and ordinances in force)	2
For general fund of the District of Columbia	5 3–10
Total	$1.50

W. DENNISON,
S. L. PHELPS,
Commissioners, District of Columbia.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss:

I, Henry G. Hanford, assistant auditor of the Evening Star, certify that the foregoing apportionment by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia of the revenue collectible under the tax levied for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, was published six times consecutively in the Evening Star, a daily newspaper published in the District of Columbia; said publications were made in said newspaper on the following dates: November 8, 1876; November 9, 1876, second extra; November 10, 1876, second extra; November 11, 1876; second extra; November 13, 1876; and November 14, 1876.

HENRY G. HANFORD,
Assistant Auditor.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of January, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] CORNELIUS ECKHARDT,
Notary Public.

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Saturday, February 15, 1913.

The committee met at 10 o'clock a. m., Hon. BEN JOHNSON (chairman) presiding.

TESTIMONY OF MR. THOMAS A. HODGSON.

The witness was duly sworn by the chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Please give to the stenographer your full name and state your residence and occupation.

Mr. HODGSON. My name is Thomas A. Hodgson.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is your residence?

Mr. HODGSON. I reside at Falls Church, Va.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your occupation?

Mr. HODGSON. I am a clerk in the office of the Auditor for the State and Other Departments.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you held that position?

Mr. HODGSON. I have held that position since 1894.

The CHAIRMAN. How much longer than that have you been in the employment of the Government?

Mr. HODGSON. From 1881 up to that time I was a clerk in the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury.

The CHAIRMAN. How many years' service does that make for you in this employment?

Mr. HODGSON. A service of 32 years.

The CHAIRMAN. Has one of your duties been to state the account between the Federal Government and the District of Columbia?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. For how long have you been doing that?

Mr. HODGSON. Since 1881; I have been on the District of Columbia work all the time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the first time this account was stated after the passage of the act of June 11, 1878?

Mr. HODGSON. The first time the account was stated was in the year 1886.

The CHAIRMAN. Was that the first time it was stated by anybody?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. By the expression "stated" you are using a bookkeeper's term which the layman may not fully understand. Will you, therefore, please explain what you mean by "stating" the account?

Mr. HODGSON. That is assembling all the data in connection with the financial account between the United States and the District of Columbia. I might say that the cause of stating that account was that Congress passed an act requiring the District of Columbia to reimburse the United States $250,000 on account of advances made for the sewerage system of the District of Columbia. That was really the cause of the account being stated.

The CHAIRMAN. Under resolutions Nos. 154 and 200, passed by the House of Representatives during the first session of the Sixty-second Congress, accountants were authorized and put at the use of the Committee on the District of Columbia for the purpose of going through the accounts between the United States and the District of Columbia. Under that resolution Mr. T. Scott Mayes was appointed as accountant, and Mr. J. R. Mayes was appointed as assistant accountant; and the Secretary of the Treasury was asked to detail a bookkeeper or accountant for the purpose of going through the said accounts with the two accountants just named. Were you not designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for this work?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall about what time you first commenced the work of looking through these accounts with Mr. Mayes?

Mr. HODGSON. I think it was about 20 months ago. I am not sure as to the time, but I think it was about 20 months ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you not been almost constantly engaged with Mr. Mayes upon that work since that time?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When was that account completed and a statement of it made?

Mr. HODGSON. That was completed just yesterday, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Day after day, through these months, have you not been with Mr. Mayes through the ledgers and journals which relate to this account since June 20, 1874?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir; and night, too.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean by that that you have been with him day and night?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not mean by that all night, of course, but you mean that you have worked far more than the Government hours, and that you have gone into very much night work in order to complete the account?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. As Mr. Mayes, in examining the books, came across item after item relating to the account between the United States and the District of Columbia, were you then and there consulted and advised with relative to just what each and every item meant?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Was each and every one of these items thoroughly analyzed by you?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir; most thoroughly.

The CHAIRMAN. Was not, also, each and every one of these items, in being analyzed, traced to its origin, either by check, warrant, or original entry?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any item stated upon this account by Mr. Mayes with which you, as the bookkeeper for the Government, failed to agree with him?

Mr. HODGSON. As an accountant?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, as an accountant, failed to agree with him?

Mr. HODGSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Not one item?

Mr. HODGSON. Not one. I do not think there was. I do not recall any.

The CHAIRMAN. And you now have before you his statement of this 20 months' work?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir; a summary of the statement.

The CHAIRMAN. You now have before you a summary statement of this 20 months' work. Will you please take the consolidated summary or statement which is now before you and say whether or not there is any money due from the United States to the District of Columbia or from the District of Columbia to the United States?

Mr. HODGSON. There is money due from the District of Columbia to the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. How much?

Mr. HODGSON. Well, it would depend somewhat upon the interpretation that would be put upon it by Congress; that is, whether Congress will require the whole or one-half of the $1,003,257.24.

The CHAIRMAN. By Congress or the courts?

Mr. HODGSON. I should say by Congress. You have had considerable discussion relative to whether the District of Columbia should pay one-half or should pay all.

The CHAIRMAN. Please state how much money is due from the District of Columbia to the United States under the contention most favorable to the District of Columbia.

Mr. HODGSON. This statement here shows that there was $1,755,723.23 paid from June 24, 1874, to July 1, 1878, and of that sum the receipts from the United States Treasury on account of appropriations were $367,500, and the receipts from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on account of a certain resolution were $198,622.79, and the receipts from the sinking fund commissioners and the First National Bank of New York, $186,343.20, leaving the amount paid by the United States out of that $1,755,723.23 the sum of $1,370,757.24. These are the actual amounts that were paid between those dates.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean to say that that is the amount paid or the amount due the United States from the District of Columbia?

Mr. HODGSON. That is the amount paid by the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Hodgson, read the whole of that summary statement you have before you and then say whether or not it is correct or incorrect.

Mr. HODGSON. The statement reads as follows:

Consolidation of Statements A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and I, showing the aggregate amount received by the Treasurer of the United States for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia, and the aggregate interest paid on said bonds from the date of issue to the close of the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1911, and the balance cash on hand June 30, 1911.

Statements.	Payments of interest.	Receipts from all sources.
A	$752,041.23	$752,445.00
B	250,516.79	250,814.31
C	250,848.99	250,835.30
D	250,628.12	250,814.31
E	250,170.06	250,814.31
F	249,982.14	250,814.31
G	249,459.27	250,814.31
H	238,652.53	246,464.42
I	15,571,027.97	15,565,200.19
Total	18,063,327.10	18,069,106.46
1911, June 30: Balance on hand to pay interest due	5,779.36
	18,069,106.46	18,069,106.46

Analysis of receipts for the payment of interest on the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia to June 30, 1911.

Receipts of Treasurer of the United States		$18,069,106.46
Receipts from United States and District of Columbia, each contributing one-half for fiscal years 1879 to 1911, inclusive, from congressional and raised appropriations		16,313,383.23
Receipts for fiscal years prior to July 1, 1878		1,755,723.23
Receipts contributed by neither the United States nor the District of Columbia		186,343.20
Receipts from the United States and the District of Columbia prior to July 1, 1878		1,569,380.03
Receipts from United States Treasury on account of appropriations, Feb. 11, 1875, and Mar. 3, 1875	$367,500.00
Receipts from Commissioners of District of Columbia on account of joint resolution, Mar. 14, 1876	198,622.79
Receipts from United States Treasury on account of advances made in pursuance of the acts of Congress, July 31, 1876, and Mar. 3, 1877, which amount was to be, but has not been, reimbursed by the District of Columbia to the United States Treasury, and is now due the United States from the District of Columbia	1,003,257.24
		1,569,380.03

The CHAIRMAN. Is that statement correct?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And you know it is correct because you have gone through these various books and vouchers from the beginning of this investigation until the close of it, and because every item was verified as you went along through the account with Mr. Mayes?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

I now have before me a summary statement made out by myself, in connection with which I would like to call the committee's attention to a memorandum statement that I made several years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. How many years ago?

Mr. HODGSON. This memorandum statement was made in 1886. As I told you a while ago, the cause of first stating the revenue account between the United States and the District of Columbia was due to the fact that the United States Government had furnished the District of Columbia $500,000 with which to build some sewers, or a sewerage system. Then, there was passed another act requiring it to reimburse——

The CHAIRMAN (interposing). Requiring the District of Columbia to reimburse?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir; requiring the District of Columbia to reimburse the United States $250,000 out of the unappropriated surplus of the District of Columbia and the unexpended balance of appropriations, and in doing so it became necessary for me to search over the records of the department in order to find out what moneys the District had paid and what moneys it had not paid; and in going over the record from 1874 to 1878 I ran across some legislation that required the District of Columbia to reimburse the United States. Among such items I found that the District of Columbia had not reimbursed the United States in accordance with the act of June 20, 1874, in connection with the issue of the 3.65 bonds of the District of Columbia; and I presented it to the comptroller, being in his office at that time, but he declined to take any steps in the matter and refused to consider any reimbursements that were required by law prior to 1878. I am glad to say that this statement in connection with the 3.65 bonds was for certain interest periods—not as many as were covered by the report of Mr. Mayes—yet in the examination made by the expert, Mr. Mayes, the amounts that I reported to the comptroller as due on these interest periods were verified. That is about all there is to say in connection with the memorandum statement.

The statement made by me, which I now hold in my hand, shows the receipts from August, 1875, to August, 1878—that is, the interest periods, not including the interest due August 1, 1878.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the net result of that statement of your own?

Mr. HODGSON. It is that the amount received in exchange for board of audit certificates was $186,320.32. The act authorizing the issue of the 3.65 bonds made them exchangeable for board of audit certificates——

The CHAIRMAN. Exchangeable for board of audit certificates?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir. The First and Second Comptrollers were the board of audit, and there was an error in the Treasurer's office of $1.89; and the amount due from the District of Columbia—that is, the amount received on account of the District of Columbia—was $198,622.79. The amount received from the United States was $1,370,757.24, making a total of $1,755,723.23, which agrees with Mr. Mayes's statement. My own summary statement, from which I take these figures I have just given you, is as follows:

Statement of account for interest on 3.65 bonds, District of Columbia (August, 1875, to August, 1878).

	Receipts.	Payments.
	$182,500.00	$752,041.23
	569,944.94	250,516.79
	501,649.67	250,848.97
	501,628.62	250,628.12
		250,170.06
Balance		1,518.04
Total	1,755,723.23	1,755,723.23

Analysis of receipts.

Amount received in exchange for board of audit certificates	$186,320.32
Amount received account error for board of audit certificates	1.89
Amount received from First National Bank of New York (repay)	20.99
Amount received from the District of Columbia	198,622.79
Amount received from the United States	1,370,757.24
Total receipts	1,755,723.23

The appropriations made to pay the interest on these bonds subsequent to the above periods have been borne by the United States and the District of Columbia in equal parts.

THOS. A. HODGSON.

The CHAIRMAN. That leaves the balance due from the District of Columbia to the United States $1,003,257.24, does it not?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

In referring to the interest period, from August, 1875, to August, 1878, I repeat that that does not include any August, 1878, interest.

The CHAIRMAN. You have just spoken of the board of audit certificates. The certificates were issued in payment of what?

Mr. HODGSON. Of debts contracted by the District of Columbia in connection with streets and work done under contract, etc., by the District of Columbia.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you read the written report of the accountants employed by the committee?

Mr. HODGSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you agree or disagree with their findings?

Mr. HODGSON. Well, as to the figures, I concur.

Thereupon, at 11.30 a. m., the committee adjourned.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I believe that is all, unless some gentleman desires to ask me some questions.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman if the entire $15,000 that we appropriated for this investigation has been exhausted?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. We have left something like $600, but I wanted to get this appropriation so as not to stop the work.

Mr. AUSTIN. What was the fourteen thousand and odd dollars expended for?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Accountants' services.

Mr. AUSTIN. How many accountants were employed?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Two.

Mr. AUSTIN. What salaries were they getting?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. The accountant started out getting $15 a day. After he had discovered this large sum of money and was willing to go ahead with the work at an increased salary or compensation, he was finally allowed $25 a day.

Mr. AUSTIN. And it requires now $20,000 in addition to the $15,000 to complete this investigation?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. So much thereof as may be necessary is the way the resolution reads.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HARDWICK rose.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Georgia desire to use any more of his time?

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to take issue with the general proposition of the chairman of the District Committee as to the value of the work that has already been done; but I want to say this about the investigation that has been already made, and about the further investigation that is contemplated under this resolution: There is no necessity whatever for the Congress of the United States to appropriate $15,000 at one Congress and $20,000 at another Congress to do a work that ought to be done by the auditors in the Treasury Department without the appropriation of a single dollar. The work that is being done by this committee is a work that ought to be performed by the executive departments of this Government rather than by the legislative department.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I yield for a question.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman that that ought to be done, but it is nevertheless true that it has not been done, and that part of this money that is due to the Federal Government has been due for 30 years.

Mr. CAMPBELL. That is the conclusion that has been arrived at by the chairman and by other members of that committee. I have seen arguments in the press to the effect that the contention is not tenable and that there is no such amount due.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield for an interruption there?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Just one moment. If the officials of the Treasury Department through the auditor's office can not ascertain the truth of these matters, the Department of Justice may proceed to ascertain in a judicial way what the facts are and who of the contenders is correct.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman now yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. The gentleman from Kansas has just stated that he has seen articles in the newspapers which show that this contention that this money is due to the Government is not tenable. I do not think the gentleman or anyone else need be surprised at anything he sees in a Washington newspaper, but I will say for his information that very recently down at the White House the auditor for the District of Columbia told me that he regarded this $1,003,257.24 as just and due from the District of Columbia to the Federal Government.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Which justifies the observation I made a moment ago, that this investigation should have been conducted by the auditor's office rather than by a committee of Congress. You have proceeded with one investigation after another, pursuing one subject after another, until you have made yourselves absolutely ridiculous before the country investigating this, that, and the other thing. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL. If a man says something about another man, why there is an investigation by Congress. If a few dollars are owing to somebody by somebody else, you can get a congressional investigation on that subject. You are investigating now at both ends of the Capitol and this administration has been proceeding with investigations one after another, and it is almost impossible to have anything done but investigations; and all without results, reaching no conclusion, arriving at no destination, but keeping the country stirred up, furnishing headlines to the newspapers, dishing out sensational rot for the country constantly. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Kansas yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. CAMPBELL. For a question.

Mr. CARTER. If we have spent $35,000 and discovered that some corporation already in existence——

Mr. CAMPBELL. I can not yield for that.

Mr. CARTER. That is a question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I say that the auditor's office should have discovered that.

Mr. CARTER. Does the gentleman consider it a good investment to spend $35,000 and discover that the corporation owes us over $1,000,000?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I do not consider it an investigation that should have been made by Congress. It should have been made by the executive department of the Government.

I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on the whole I think that the money which has been expended by the District Committee has been well expended. While I do not agree with the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] as to the million and odd dollars being due from the District to the General Government, he may be right, as he believes he is right. But whether he be right or wrong, I think it has been a good thing to have that investigation. I believe it is a good thing to have a real investigation at any time, where men will do the work. Most of our investigations, I regret to say, are usually run along upon the basis of politics and not business. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] has conducted the investigation by the District Committee purely as a business proposition. I am quite willing, so far as I am concerned, to give him additional money for the purpose of proceeding with that investigation.

I regret that the gentleman found it necessary to include in his resolution a provision authorizing his committee to investigate the books, accounts, and affairs of any person dealing in provisions in the District of Columbia. I question very much whether Congress has the power under the Constitution to authorize the District of Columbia to call every dealer and grocer in the District before it and examine his books, accounts, and affairs. I know of no warrant for that. The Constitution expressly prohibits it. Amendment 4 of the Constitution reads:

> The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated.

No legislative reason is given in this resolution for the examination of these private books and accounts.

Mr. HARDWICK. I just want to suggest this idea to the gentleman, in the form of a question, Why would we not have a perfect right to require the inspection of these books so far as they relate to the transactions of this Government? Would there be anything wrong about that?

Mr. MANN. Perhaps you might have a right to examine them for various legislative reasons, but the reasons must be set forth in a resolution. I simply call attention to this not for the purpose of opposing the resolution but for the purpose of expressing my dissent against the idea that the Congress has the power by a bare resolution to authorize any committee to investigate the private books and accounts of private individuals or private business men.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. GARDNER. Leaving out the question of unconstitutionality, does it strike the gentleman as proper that one litigant should be authorized to examine the other litigant's books?

Mr. MANN. It does not under ordinary circumstances, of course. I supposed the purpose of this provision in the resolution was for the purpose of enabling the committee to verify possible facts in regard to the market company. The resolution authorizes the committee to investigate the market house company down here, which, I think, it is perfectly proper to do, and I suppose that the gentleman drawing the resolution probably desired in connection with that authority the authority to verify figures or ascertain figures from those who rent from the market company.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that we are doing a good deal of investigation in various directions. I am quite willing that the gentleman shall investigate the branches of the Government in the District or elsewhere. What surprises me is that when we want to make an investigation of the Attorney General's office the other side of the House applies a gag. [Applause on the Republican side.] We are willing to let you have the money to make an investigation of the different branches of the Government, which have been under Republican rule, but you, who have been in power only a few months, are already afraid to have your servants investigated. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kentucky rise?

Mr. THOMAS. I rise to ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] have one hour in which to discuss the McReynolds resolution, and that I have one hour in which to reply to him.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] asks unanimous consent——

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, I am forced to object for the present. I want to get this resolution out of the way.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] may occupy an hour and that he have an hour in which to reply to him.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, I am forced to object for the present. I wish to get this resolution out of the way.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] objects. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I left?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has 50 minutes remaining.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLY].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLY] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for only sufficient time to call attention to one point, and that is that if the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON], in his very lucid explanation this morning, and which he made before the Committee on Rules, is correct in his reasoning, then it follows that the same process of reasoning is applicable to other matters on which the gag has been applied.

It is stated that $769,000 is admittedly due to the Federal Government from the District of Columbia through the misuse of official funds. But, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me there is another crime that is fully as important and which calls equally for investigation, and that is the misuse of official power. We have witnessed for the past week a filibuster which has prevented the conduct of any public business. We have had sessions of the House called and adjourned without business being transacted. We have seen an agreement entered into in regard to the discussion of a vital proposition before this House, and have seen that agreement flagrantly violated. The result of that violation of agreement is the filibuster which has been carried on in session after session in this Congress.

I agree that if the investigation proposed in this resolution were carried on the money would be well spent. It is an entirely proper investigation; but there are other matters on which the gag has been applied, and the parties favoring the adoption of this resolution have been unanimously opposed to them. It is not logical and it is not fair.

But the truth shall prevail here as elsewhere. If 30 years have passed by since this $769,000 and this $1,003,000 mentioned were misappropriated, we may rest confident that the time will come when these other matters will be exposed and brought to light, no matter how long the delay.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to an interruption?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield to the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. What I said was that that amount was an accumulation of 30 years.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Yes; an accumulation of 30 years. Yet we have had a proposition throttled when it applied to the investigation of alleged evils before us, here and now. It seems to me that the gentleman proves that sooner or later matters of that kind always come to light, and on certain events that have taken place out in the West the light of day will also be thrown. But there is danger in delay. We are told of monopolies in this District using their power to crush out competition, and that an investigation is necessary. Out in California there is another monopoly, whose power is being used to defraud the Government in three different ways and to crush out opposition, yet investigation is denied.

Mr. Speaker, if you will read the minutes and records of this House, you will find that in the year 1838 a gag resolution was brought into this House by a Representative from the State of New Hampshire, that provided that the subject of slavery should not be discussed. That resolution became Rule XXI of the House of Representatives, which provided that no memorial, petition, or resolution regarding slavery should be received or entertained in this House. John Quincy Adams made a fight for six years to rescind that rule, and finally accomplished it in 1844.

It was as impossible as an attempt to stop the rise of the tides to attempt by brutal gag rules to prevent the discussion and final solution of the great problem which throbbed then in the hearts of men and women of America.

To-day, the question is not slavery, but it is one of even greater importance, and demands attention just as insistently. It is the alliance of special privilege and crooked politics in this Nation. That is the foe to honest government which this resolution seeks to uncover in its investigation into the affairs of the District of Columbia. That is the foe to national integrity, which is being protected by the throttling of resolutions which deserved full consideration in this House.

In such a matter as this, wherever there is secrecy, there is either guilt or danger. If there be no guilt on the part of Government officials, there is great danger that the attempts to conceal actual conditions, through blind partisanship, will arouse public suspicion and public distrust to a dangerous degree.

Mr. Speaker, the people of this Nation will stand for neither the gag nor the filibuster. They have the same contempt for both, for each in its way prevents this lawmaking body from doing the work it has been commissioned to do. Great problems are confronting the Nation and they demand attention, yet, this House, spends its time worse than uselessly, the days and weeks are passing, and the people's demands are unheeded.

It is time to get down to business and heed the call of duty. If that is not done soon and the gag and the filibuster continue to occupy the attention of this body, I venture the assertion that the people will have the truth borne overwhelmingly to their minds that if they need some men in Congress they need more men out of Congress. And when they start on that task there will be no gag nor filibuster to prevent the accomplishment of the work in thorough fashion.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to commend the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] for his zeal and his earnestness in doing something as the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

I want to take that as a text, Mr. Speaker, and to suggest to those who are in control here and responsible for legislation that every committee of this House should be put to work now, and not next December. [Applause on the Republican side.]

We have been here three months, and the House has practically passed only two or three bills in that length of time. We shall be here three months longer if there is any attempt to pass through both Houses of Congress currency legislation. Are we going to mark time and kill time day in and day out, week in and week out, month in and month out, when there is needed and important legislation the American people want acted upon? Are we really keeping our promises and pledges made to the people in the platforms of our respective parties when we sit here idly day in and day out and make no effort to carry out in good faith the pledges made to the voters of the country?

The Democratic platform promulgated in Baltimore declared for the immediate independence of the Philippine Islands. "Immediate" does not mean next year. It means this year. It means whenever the chance and the opportunity to do it arrive, and you have had it. The American people expect their Representatives not to kill time, but to work. That is what we are here for. That is what we are paid for. That is what we are commissioned to do. I appeal to the gentlemen on the other side to get down to business and let us show the American people that we are here to legislate in their interest, and to do it not next year, but this year.

Now, what will happen? Why, we shall kill three months more of time on two propositions. The regular session will meet in December, and we shall be here next summer, and this Congress will close, like every Congress, with pages after pages of the calendars crowded with favorable and unanimous reports upon public measures and private bills that will never be reached. At the close of the Sixty-second Congress there were 135 bills on the Private Calendar, favorably reported, but never acted upon; there were 97 on the House Calendar; on the Calendar of the Whole House there were 144. There actually passed both Houses of Congress 7 measures that died in conference. One of them was the Indian appropriation bill. Another was a bill of far-reaching importance to the people of this country, the vocational education bill, the Page-Lever bill, making a total of 383 bills that died on the calendar for lack of time, for we adjourned and left unacted upon those bills that we had introduced, upon which favorable reports had been secured, and they perished on the calendars of the House.

History will repeat itself, and we will close this Congress with three or four hundred public and private bills unacted upon.

Here is the omnibus war-claims bill. We have not passed through Congress a measure of that kind in six or seven years. In that bill was the work of the Court of Claims covering six years, and many claimants have actually died and passed away with Congress doing nothing to carry out the decisions of the Court of Claims.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I yield to the gentleman two minutes more.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Democratic platform at Baltimore pledged itself to one presidential term. We hear nothing of it now. Why not get the Judiciary Committee busy and vote in here a resolution to submit a constitutional amendment, if you meant it?

Here is the immigration bill, keeping out of America the undesirables from the four corners of the earth. We passed it in the Senate and House, then over the President's veto in the Senate, and lacking only six or eight votes of doing the same in the House. Yet our shores are crowded every week with countless thousands of the undesirable people, running into a million in 12 months, and here we are wasting a year and postponing the correction of that great and far-reaching evil for no good reason that commends itself to the wisdom and patriotism of the American people. [Applause.]

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK], who has charge of this resolution, was called from the room a moment ago, and before going he asked me to take charge of the matter.

By his direction I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I do not know that I will consume the five minutes yielded to me. I wish, however, to submit a few observations, particularly in response to statements made by my friend from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

In the first place, I desire to say that I am heartily in favor of the pending resolution. I think the money appropriated heretofore has been well spent, and I believe it is conceded by everybody on both sides of this Chamber that the investigation of last year and the present proposed investigation have been too long postponed.

The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] argued rather forcibly that there was no need for this appropriation, because these facts, as he stated, could be ascertained by the Auditor for the Treasury Department. It strikes me that a complete answer to that is, If that be true, why has not the Auditor for the Treasury Department heretofore discovered the fact that the District owed the Federal Government anywhere from $1,000,000 to $1,750,000?

And if the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] took $15,000 last year, as he did, and wisely expended it by giving it to an expert, and as a result of that has established the fact that the District of Columbia owes the Government of the United States in round numbers $1,750,000, it is money well spent.

It is true, Mr. Speaker, that we have conducted a great many investigations in the last two years.

Mr. BORLAND. And we may have some more.

Mr. COX. And, as suggested by my friend from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND], we may have some more. We have had investigations by standing committees and special committees. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] says we have got nowhere. I think we have got a considerable distance along the road with some of these investigations; but the reason we did not land was because there was some man at the other end of the Capitol who checkmated us.

The Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, over which I had the honor to preside two years ago, investigated what is known as the oleomargarine frauds, involving, in round numbers, $2,100,000.

Our committee investigated the matter, and when we made our report we came to the conclusion that we did not have all of it, but we found, as we believed, from the evidence in the case and from the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States backing up our findings, that there was no question in the world but that the oleomargarine manufacturers owed this Government not less than $1,100,000.

Our committee reported against the offered compromise of $100,000 which the manufacturers of oleomargarine had proposed as a settlement for the $1,100,000. We reported against the acceptance of it, and further recommended that the Treasury Department lay its strong arm upon the manufacturers of oleomargarine, by issuing a distraint and compelling the manufacturers to pay that $1,100,000 into the Treasury of the United States, and if wrong, to give the manufacturers the right to go into the courts to sue the Government and litigate and recover it back.

But why did we not get somewhere with it? Because at 11.55 o'clock on the morning of the 4th of last March one of the last acts performed by Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh was to accept a compromise, in which he accepted the sum of $100,000, in lieu of the $1,100,000 which our committee had found to be the amount due the Government.

That was not all. While our committee was engaged in investigating the subject, Judge Landis, in Chicago, for whom I have the highest regard, backed and supported by his able district attorney, Mr. Wilkerson, for whom I also have the highest regard, was investigating the same subject. And what was the result of their investigation?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman three minutes more.

Mr. COX. The Federal grand jury in the city of Chicago made a report a few weeks ago, and reported that the oleomargarine manufacturers had defrauded this Government out of $2,100,000. There is no question that $1,100,000 of it is gone, because that has been compromised; but I look to our Attorney General to advise the Treasury Department to lay its hand upon the other $900,000 and collect it.

I am detailing facts and I know what I am talking about; facts that were developed before my committee; facts that have been developed before the grand jury in the city of Chicago. I have in my office the report made by the grand jury, a report made under instructions given to the grand jury by Judge Landis.

How were we checkmated? A copy of the report of our committee was served upon Mr. MacVeagh three or four days before he signed the compromise. I am not quarreling with Mr. MacVeagh. Under the law he had the complete and consummate power to compromise that case. But I say solemnly, after a thorough, complete, and exhaustive investigation of the facts, as well as the law, that he rendered that decision, exempting them from paying $1,000,000 in the face of the law and in the face of the solemn facts in the case.

I say more than that, that the Solicitor General of the Internal Revenue Department, Mr. Maddox, who to-day holds a position in the Treasury Department, wrote a decision in that case in which he advised the Secretary of the Treasury to accept the $100,000, when he was in possession of all the facts in the case that our committee was in possession of; or, if not in possession of all the facts, as we were, he was in a position to get all the facts in the case. And notwithstanding that fact, as the law officer of the Treasury Department, he wrote his opinion and turned it over to the Secretary of the Treasury, in which he advised Secretary MacVeagh to accept the $100,000.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution to its final passage.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 95, noes 29.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and thirty-nine Members present—not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors and the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees. The question is on ordering the previous question. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 155, nays 51, answered "present" 10, not voting 213, as follows:

YEAS—155.

Abercrombie	Blackmon	Bryan	Callaway
Alexander	Boober	Buchanan, Ill.	Caraway
Ashbrook	Borchers	Buchanan, Tex.	Carr
Aswell	Borland	Bulkley	Carter
Bailey	Brockson	Burgess	Casey
Baltz	Broussard	Burke, Wis.	Church
Barkley	Brown, W. Va.	Byrnes, S. C.	Claypool
Beakes	Brumbaugh	Byrns, Tenn.	Clayton

Cline	Hamlin	Lloyd	Sisson
Collier	Hardwick	Lobeck	Smith, Tex.
Connelly, Kans.	Hardy	Logue	Stedman
Cox	Harrison, Miss.	McAndrews	Stephens, Nebr.
Davenport	Hay	McClellan	Stephens, Tex.
Davis, W. Va.	Hayden	McCoy	Stone
Decker	Heflin	McGillicuddy	Stout
Dickinson	Helvering	McKellar	Taggart
Dies	Heary	Maguire, Nebr.	Talcott, N. Y.
Donovan	Hensley	Maher	Tavenner
Doolittle	Hill	Mitchell	Taylor, Ala.
Doremus	Holland	Moon	Taylor, Ark.
Doughton	Houston	Morgan, La.	Taylor, Colo.
Elder	Howard	Murray, Okla.	Taylor, N. Y.
Evans	Hulings	Neeley	Thomas
Fergusson	Hull	Oglesby	Tribble
Fitzgerald	Igoe	O'Hair	Underwood
FitzHenry	Jacoway	Oldfield	Vaughan
Flood, Va.	Johnson, S. C.	Page	Walker
Foster	Jones	Patten, N. Y.	Watkins
Fowler	Kettner	Phelan	Watson
Garrett, Tenn.	Kirkpatrick	Pou	Weaver
Garrett, Tex.	Konop	Quin	Webb
George	Korbly	Ragsdale	Whaley
Gilmore	Lazaro	Raker	Williams
Glass	Lee, Ga.	Reed	Wilson, Fla.
Goodwin, Ark.	Lee, Pa.	Roddenbery	Wingo
Gordon	Lesher	Rucker	Witherspoon
Graham, Ill.	Lever	Russell	Young, N. Dak.
Gray	Lieb	Seldomridge	Young, Tex.
Gudger	Linthicum	Sims

NAYS—51.

Anderson	Falconer	La Follette	Scott
Austin	Fess	Lewis, Pa.	Shreve
Barchfeld	French	Lindbergh	Sloan
Barton	Gardner	McGuire, Okla.	Smith, Idaho
Bell, Cal.	Gillett	McKenzie	Stephens, Cal.
Britten	Helgesen	Mann	Switzer
Burke, S. Dak.	Howell	Mapes	Temple
Campbell	Johnson, Utah	Mondell	Thomson, Ill.
Cooper	Johnson, Wash.	Morgan, Okla.	Towner
Curry	Kelley, Mich.	Moss, W. Va.	Treadway
Davis, Minn.	Kelly, Pa.	Payne	Willis
Dillon	Kennedy, Iowa	Platt	Woods
Dyer	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Prouty

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—10.

Adamson	Crisp	Padgett	Wallin
Aiken	Johnson, Ky.	Rubey
Browning	Kahn	Smith, J. M. C.

NOT VOTING—213.

Adair	Edwards	Key, Ohio	Richardson
Ainey	Esch	Kiess, Pa.	Riordan
Allen	Estopinal	Kindel	Roberts, Mass.
Ansberry	Fairchild	Kinkead, N. J.	Roberts, Nev.
Anthony	Faison	Kitchin	Rogers
Avis	Farr	Knowland, J. R.	Rothermel
Baker	Ferris	Kreider	Rouse
Barnhart	Fields	Lafferty	Rupley
Bartholdt	Finley	Langham	Sabath
Bartlett	Floyd, Ark.	Langley	Saunders
Bathrick	Fordney	L'Engle	Scully
Beall, Tex.	Francis	Lenroot	Sells
Bell, Ga.	Frear	Levy	Shackleford
Bowdle	Gallagher	Lewis, Md.	Sharp
Bremner	Gard	Lindquist	Sherley
Brodbeck	Garner	Lonergan	Sherwood
Brown, N. Y.	Gerry	McDermott	Sinnott
Browne, Wis.	Gittins	McLaughlin	Slayden
Bruckner	Godwin, N. C.	Madden	Slemp
Burke, Pa.	Goeke	Mahan	Small
Burnett	Goldfogle	Manahan	Smith, Md.
Butler	Good	Martin	Smith, N. Y.
Calder	Gorman	Merritt	Smith, Minn.
Candler, Miss.	Goulden	Metz	Smith, Saml. W.
Cantrill	Graham, Pa.	Miller	Sparkman
Carew	Green, Iowa	Montague	Stafford
Carlin	Greene, Mass.	Moore	Stanley
Cary	Greene, Vt.	Morin	Steenerson
Chandler, N. Y.	Gregg	Morrison	Stephens, Miss.
Clancy	Griest	Moss, Ind.	Stevens, Minn.
Clark, Fla.	Griffin	Mott	Stevens, N. H.
Connolly, Iowa	Guernsey	Murdock	Stringer
Conry	Hamill	Murray, Mass.	Sumners
Copley	Hamilton, Mich.	Nelson	Sutherland
Covington	Hamilton, N. Y.	Nolan, J. I.	Talbott, Md.
Cramton	Hammond	Norton	Ten Eyck
Crosser	Harrison, N. Y.	O'Brien	Thacher
Cullop	Haugen	O'Leary	Thompson, Okla.
Curley	Hawley	O'Shaunessy	Townsend
Dale	Hayes	Palmer	Tuttle
Danforth	Helm	Parker	Underhill
Deitrick	Hinds	Patton, Pa.	Vare
Dent	Hinebaugh	Pepper	Volstead
Dershem	Hobson	Peters	Walsh
Difenderfer	Hoxworth	Peterson	Walters
Dixon	Hughes, Ga.	Plumley	Whitacre
Donohoe	Hughes, W. Va.	Porter	White
Dooling	Humphrey, Wash.	Post	Wilder
Driscoll	Humphreys, Miss.	Powers	Wilson, N. Y.
Dunn	Keating	Rainey	Winslow
Dupré	Keister	Rauch	Woodruff
Eagan	Kennedy, Conn.	Rayburn
Eagle	Kennedy, R. I.	Reilly, Conn.
Edmonds	Kent	Reilly, Wis.

So the previous question was ordered.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. SHERLEY with Mr. WALTERS.

Mr. BELL of Georgia with Mr. CALDER.

Mr. CANDLER of Mississippi with Mr. MANAHAN.

Mr. CLARK of Florida with Mr. SELLS.

Mr. DEITRICK with Mr. SINNOTT.

Mr. FLOYD of Arkansas with Mr. VOLSTEAD.

Mr. KENNEDY of Connecticut with Mr. SMITH of Minnesota.

Mr. GREGG with Mr. STEENERSON.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A quorum being present, the doors were opened.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent. The last paragraph of the resolution as reported by the Committee on Rules was subject to the point of order and would have rendered the entire resolution subject to the point of order; but no one desired to make that point of order. It is now desired, in order that it may be in the usual form, to change the language slightly at the close of the last paragraph. Notwithstanding the fact that the previous question has been ordered, I ask unanimous consent to amend the resolution in the manner which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the proposed amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 1, page 3 after the word "vouchers," insert the words "authorized by said committee and."

Line 2, page 3, strike out the words "of said committee" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thereof."

Line 3, after the word "accounts," strike out the period and insert "signed by the chairman thereof."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, would the gentleman have any objection to including in his request an amendment as follows, to come in at the end of the resolution:

Provided, The total expense incurred under the authority of this resolution shall not exceed said sum of $20,000.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would have no objection whatever to that. It was the amount put in because they thought it would cover it.

Mr. MANN. They give the committee authority, and appropriate $20,000, and then do not limit the authority to $20,000 at all.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I think there would be no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I will make that a part of the request to insert at the end of the paragraph.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, at the end of line 3, page 3, the following:

"Provided, The total expense incurred under the authority of this resolution shall not exceed said sum of $20,000."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the adoption of these amendments, including the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] makes his own, notwithstanding the fact that the previous question has been ordered? [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection, and the amendments are agreed to.

The question is on the House resolution as amended.

The resolution was agreed to.

DIGGS-CAMINETTI CASE.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kentucky rise?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, after the reading of the Journal four hours be allotted to the discussion of the resolution investigating the action of Attorney General McReynolds in the Diggs-Caminetti case, and that two hours of that time be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and two hours by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] asks unanimous consent that on next Tuesday, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of the routine business, four hours shall be devoted to the disposition of the Kahn resolution as to the Attorney General, the Diggs-Caminetti case, and so forth, and that two hours of that time be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and two hours by the gentleman from Kentucky. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wish to ask the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] if he has disposed of the time?

Mr. THOMAS. I have not. And I will say further, Mr. Speaker, that the Attorney General has no objection, and never has had, to this matter being discussed.

Mr. MANN. We have heard that a good many times, but actions speak louder than words.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] has the floor.

Mr. MANN. Nobody has the floor.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. So far as I know, undoubtedly the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] is correct.

Mr. MANN. Well, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular order on this particular request. I do not propose to have the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] discuss the matter.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has appeared very anxious to have an hour in which to discuss this matter. I want to say to the gentleman from Illinois——

Mr. MANN. I object; but not to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS]——

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. If I am not permitted to make a statement, I shall object.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has not permitted me to make a statement for a week.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] makes a statement every day, and frequently, Mr. Speaker, out of order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is to put the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am not going to be driven in the matter, and if I can not make a statement I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] objects.

AFFAIRS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

On motion of Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider the vote by which House resolution No. 203 as amended was agreed to was laid on the table.

CALL OF COMMITTEES.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will proceed with the call of the committees.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, before that is done I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Tuesday next.

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The Clerk will call the roll of the committees.

The Clerk proceeded with the call of the committees.

Mr. LLOYD (when the Committee on Accounts was called). Mr. Speaker, there was a privileged resolution pending before the House at the time of adjournment last Tuesday. A motion to adjourn was made pending the consideration of the matter, and that motion carried. I would like to have the resolution considered now.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves a call of the House. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 158, nays 5, answered "present" 13, not voting 253, as follows:

YEAS—158.

Abercrombie	Caraway	Floyd, Ark.	Kettner
Aiken	Carr	Foster	Kinkaid, Nebr.
Alexander	Casey	Fowler	Kirkpatrick
Anderson	Church	French	Korbly
Ashbrook	Clark, Fla.	Garrett, Tenn.	La Follette
Aswell	Clayton	George	Lee, Pa.
Austin	Cline	Goodwin, Ark.	Lesher
Bailey	Collier	Gordon	Lewis, Pa.
Baltz	Connelly, Kans.	Graham, Ill.	Lieb
Barton	Cooper	Gray	Lindbergh
Beakes	Cox	Hamlin	Linthicum
Bell, Cal.	Curry	Hardy	Lloyd
Blackmon	Davenport	Hayden	Lobeck
Borchers	Davis, Minn.	Heflin	McAndrews
Borland	Decker	Helgesen	McClellan
Britten	Dickinson	Helvering	McCoy
Brockson	Dies	Hensley	McKellar
Brown, W. Va.	Dillon	Holland	McKenzie
Brumbaugh	Doolittle	Houston	Maguire, Nebr.
Bryan	Doremus	Howard	Mapes
Buchanan, Ill.	Doughton	Hulings	Mitchell
Buchanan, Tex.	Dyer	Hull	Moon
Bulkley	Eagle	Igoe	Morgan, La.
Burgess	Evans	Jacoway	Murray, Okla.
Burke, Wis.	Falconer	Johnson, Ky.	Neeley
Byrnes, S. C.	Fergusson	Johnson, S. C.	Norton
Byrns, Tenn.	Fess	Johnson, Utah	Page
Callaway	FitzHenry	Jones	Patten, N. Y.
Candler, Miss.	Flood, Va.	Kennedy, Iowa	Pepper
Phelan	Sherley	Switzer	Vaughan
Post	Sims	Taggart	Walker
Quin	Sisson	Talcott, N. Y.	Watkins
Ragsdale	Sloan	Tavenner	Weaver
Raker	Smith, Idaho	Taylor, Ark.	Willis
Reed	Smith, Tex.	Taylor, N. Y.	Wilson, Fla.
Roddenbery	Stedman	Thomas	Wingo
Rucker	Stephens, Cal.	Thomson, Ill.	Witherspoon
Russell	Stephens, Tex.	Towner	Young, Tex.
Scott	Stone	Tribble
Seldomridge	Sumners	Underwood

NAYS—5.

Gardner	Lafferty	Morgan, Okla.	Smith, Md.
Johnson, Wash.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—13.

Browning	Mann	Rubey	Young, N. Dak.
Crisp	Moss, W. Va.	Shreve
Kahn	O'Hair	Smith, J. M. C.
Kelly, Pa.	Padgett	Temple

NOT VOTING—253.

Adair	Elder	Kennedy, Conn.	Rainey
Adamson	Esch	Kennedy, R. I.	Rauch
Ainey	Estopinal	Kent	Rayburn
Allen	Fairchild	Key, Ohio	Reilly, Conn.
Ansberry	Faison	Kiess, Pa.	Reilly, Wis.
Anthony	Farr	Kindel	Richardson
Avis	Ferris	Kinkead, N. J.	Riordan
Baker	Fields	Kitchin	Roberts, Mass.
Barchfeld	Finley	Knowland, J. R.	Roberts, Nev.
Barkley	Fitzgerald	Konop	Rogers
Barnhart	Fordney	Kreider	Rothermel
Bartholdt	Francis	Langham	Rouse
Bartlett	Frear	Langley	Rupley
Bathrick	Gallagher	Lazaro	Sabath
Beall, Tex.	Gard	Lee, Ga.	Saunders
Bell, Ga.	Garner	L'Engle	Scully
Booher	Garrett, Tex.	Lenroot	Sells
Bowdle	Gerry	Lever	Shackleford
Bremner	Gillett	Levy	Sharp
Brodbeck	Gilmore	Lewis, Md.	Sherwood
Broussard	Gittins	Lindquist	Sinnott
Brown, N. Y.	Glass	Logue	Slayden
Browne, Wis.	Godwin, N. C.	Lonergan	Slemp
Bruckner	Goeke	McDermott	Small
Burke, Pa.	Goldfogle	McGillicuddy	Smith, Minn.
Burke, S. Dak.	Good	McGuire, Okla.	Smith, N. Y.
Burnett	Gorman	McLaughlin	Smith, Saml. W.
Butler	Goulden	Madden	Sparkman
Calder	Graham, Pa.	Mahan	Stafford
Campbell	Green, Iowa	Maher	Stanley
Cantrill	Greene, Mass.	Manahan	Steenerson
Carew	Greene, Vt.	Martin	Stephens, Miss.
Carlin	Gregg	Merritt	Stephens, Nebr.
Carter	Griest	Metz	Stevens, Minn.
Cary	Griffin	Miller	Stevens, N. H.
Chandler, N. Y.	Gudger	Mondell	Stout
Clancy	Guernsey	Montague	Stringer
Claypool	Hamill	Moore	Sutherland
Connolly, Iowa	Hamilton, Mich.	Morin	Talbott, Md.
Conry	Hamilton, N. Y.	Morrison	Taylor, Ala.
Copley	Hammond	Moss, Ind.	Taylor, Colo.
Covington	Hardwick	Mott	Ten Eyck
Cramton	Harrison, Miss.	Murdock	Thacher
Crosser	Harrison, N. Y.	Murray, Mass.	Thompson, Okla.
Cullop	Haugen	Nelson	Townsend
Curley	Hawley	Nolan, J. I.	Treadway
Dale	Hay	O'Brien	Tuttle
Danforth	Hayes	Oglesby	Underhill
Davis, W. Va.	Helm	Oldfield	Vare
Deitrick	Henry	O'Leary	Volstead
Dent	Hill	O'Shaunessy	Wallin
Dershem	Hinds	Palmer	Walsh
Difenderfer	Hinebaugh	Parker	Walters
Dixon	Hobson	Patton, Pa.	Watson
Donohoe	Howell	Payne	Webb
Donovan	Hoxworth	Peters	Whitacre
Dooling	Hughes, Ga.	Peterson	White
Driscoll	Hughes, W. Va.	Platt	Wilder
Dunn	Humphrey, Wash.	Plumley	Williams
Dupré	Humphreys, Miss.	Porter	Wilson, N. Y.
Eagan	Keating	Pou	Winslow
Edmonds	Keister	Powers	Woodruff
Edwards	Kelley, Mich.	Prouty	Woods

So a call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. GILMORE with Mr. TREADWAY.

Mr. BELL of Georgia with Mr. BURKE of South Dakota.

Mr. CARTER with Mr. BARCHFELD.

Mr. ESTOPINAL with Mr. CAMPBELL.

Mr. GUDGER with Mr. CRAMTON.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi with Mr. HOWELL.

Mr. HAY with Mr. FARR.

Mr. HENRY with Mr. KELLEY of Michigan.

Mr. LEE of Georgia with Mr. PROUTY.

Mr. HUGHES of Georgia with Mr. MONDELL.

Mr. LEVER with Mr. PAYNE.

Mr. OLDFIELD with Mr. PLATT.

Mr. POU with Mr. WALTERS.

Mr. ROTHERMEL with Mr. VOLSTEAD.

Mr. SMALL with Mr. MANAHAN.

Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama with Mr. SELLS.

Mr. WEBB with Mr. WOODS.

After fourth roll call ending for the day:

Mr. BOOHER with Mr. MCGUIRE of Oklahoma.

The result of the vote was announced as recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Doorkeeper will lock the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll. This is a call of the House, and the Members will answer "present," or something equivalent thereto, when their names are called.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll, when the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Adair	Evans	Kennedy, R. I.	Pou
Adamson	Fairchild	Kent	Powers
Aiken	Faison	Key, Ohio	Prouty
Ainey	Farr	Kiess, Pa.	Rainey
Allen	Ferris	Kindel	Rauch
Ansberry	Fields	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Rayburn
Anthony	Finley	Kinkead, N. J.	Reilly, Conn.
Avis	Fitzgerald	Kitchin	Reilly, Wis.
Baker	Flood, Va.	Knowland, J. R.	Richardson
Barchfeld	Fordney	Konop	Riordan
Barnhart	Francis	Kreider	Roberts, Mass.
Bartholdt	Frear	Langham	Roberts, Nev.
Bartlett	Gallagher	Langley	Roddenbery
Bathrick	Gard	Lazaro	Rogers
Beall, Tex.	Garner	Lee, Ga.	Rothermel
Bell, Ga.	Garrett, Tex.	L'Engle	Rouse
Booher	Gerry	Lenroot	Rupley
Bowdle	Gillett	Lever	Sabath
Bremner	Gilmore	Levy	Saunders
Brodbeck	Gittins	Lewis, Md.	Scully
Broussard	Glass	Lindquist	Sells
Brown, N. Y.	Godwin, N. C.	Lobeck	Shackleford
Browne, Wis.	Goeke	Logue	Sharp
Bruckner	Goldfogle	Lonergan	Sherwood
Burke, Pa.	Good	McCoy	Sinnott
Burke, S. Dak.	Goodwin, Ark.	McDermott	Slayden
Burnett	Gordon	McGillicuddy	Slemp
Butler	Gorman	McGuire, Okla.	Smith, Md.
Calder	Goulden	McLaughlin	Smith, Minn.
Callaway	Graham, Pa.	Madden	Smith, N. Y.
Campbell	Green, Iowa	Mahan	Smith, Sami. W.
Cantrill	Greene, Mass.	Maher	Smith, Tex.
Carew	Greene, Vt.	Manahan	Sparkman
Carlin	Gregg	Mann	Stafford
Carter	Griest	Martin	Stanley
Cary	Griffin	Merritt	Steenerson
Chandler, N. Y.	Gudger	Metz	Stephens, Miss.
Clancy	Guernsey	Miller	Stephens, Nebr.
Claypool	Hamill	Montague	Stevens, Minn.
Connolly, Iowa	Hamilton, Mich.	Moore	Stevens, N. H.
Conry	Hamilton, N. Y.	Morin	Stout
Copley	Hammond	Morrison	Stringer
Covington	Hardwick	Moss, Ind.	Sutherland
Cramton	Harrison, Miss.	Moss, W. Va.	Talbott, Md.
Crosser	Harrison, N. Y.	Mott	Taylor, Colo.
Cullop	Haugen	Murdock	Ten Eyck
Curley	Hawley	Murray, Mass.	Thacher
Dale	Hay	Neeley	Thomas
Danforth	Hayes	Nelson	Thompson, Okla.
Davenport	Helm	Nolan, J. I.	Townsend
Deitrick	Hill	Norton	Treadway
Dent	Hinds	O'Brien	Tuttle
Dershem	Hinebaugh	Oglesby	Underhill
Dickinson	Hobson	O'Hair	Vare
Difenderfer	Howard	Oldfield	Volstead
Dixon	Howell	O'Leary	Wallin
Donohoe	Hoxworth	O'Shaunessy	Walsh
Dooling	Hughes, W. Va.	Padgett	Walters
Driscoll	Humphreys, Miss.	Palmer	Weaver
Dunn	Humphrey, Wash.	Parker	Whaley
Dupré	Johnson, S. C.	Patton, Pa.	Whitacre
Eagan	Johnson, Wash.	Payne	White
Edmonds	Jones	Peters	Wilder
Edwards	Keating	Peterson	Wilson, N. Y.
Elder	Keister	Platt	Winslow
Esch	Kelley, Mich.	Plumley	Woodruff
Estopinal	Kennedy, Conn.	Porter	Woods

The SPEAKER. One hundred and sixty-one Members, not a quorum, have answered to their names. It takes 216 to make a quorum.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, it is evident that we are so far from having a quorum that I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, July 26, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Acting Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for completing the public road from the Highway Bridge to the Arlington National Cemetery (H. Doc. No. 164), was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BAILEY: A bill (H. R. 7118) to establish a fish-cultural station in the State of Pennsylvania; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. RAKER: A bill (H. R. 7119) making an appropriation for the investigation, study, and testing of sagebrush (Chrysothamnus) and greasewood, which may be used for producing rubber, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STOUT: A bill (H. R. 7120) to extend to certain publications the privileges of second-class mail matter as to the admission to the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. KAHN: Resolution (H. Res. 212) directing the Attorney General to transmit to the House of Representatives copy of his telegram dated May 16, 1913, to United States Attorney McNab; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CLARK of Florida: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 14) affirming Monroe doctrine; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BAILEY: A bill (H. R. 7121) for the relief of Martin Cupples; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BOOHER: A bill (H. R. 7122) granting a pension to George W. Nove; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BROUSSARD: A bill (H. R. 7123) for the relief of the estate of Elie H. Flory; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CANTRILL: A bill (H. R. 7124) for the relief of the estate of Benjamin Gratz, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DICKINSON: A bill (H. R. 7125) for the relief of the estate of Jacob Kenney, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 7126) granting an increase of pension to Orlando F. Cantwell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAMILL: A bill (H. R. 7127) granting a pension to Annie E. Crouter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7128) granting an increase of pension to Amelia Schoefer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAGGART: A bill (H. R. 7129) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Vance; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7130) to place the name of Capt. Clarence Walworth Backus on the retired list of the Regular Army of the United States with rank and pay as a retired officer of the regular establishment; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TALCOTT of New York: A bill (H. R. 7131) granting a pension to Hannah M. Brodock; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7132) granting a pension to Lucy E. Schermerhorn; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 7133) granting an increase of pension to John W. Fuller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. DALE: Petitions of the Scranton Life Insurance Co., of Scranton, and the Girard Life Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, protesting against the prohibitory duty by the Government of Austria-Hungary upon cottonseed oil, and against a tax on colored oleomargarine; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DYER: Petition of the National Civil Service Reform League, of New York, N. Y., protesting against paragraph O, section 2, of the tariff bill (H. R. 3321); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Scranton Life Insurance Co., of Scranton, Pa., protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee: Papers to accompany bill granting an increase of pension to Orlando F. Cantwell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Petition of the New York Zoological Society, favoring clause in the tariff bill prohibiting importation of egret, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEVY: Petitions of the United States Life Insurance Co., in the city of New York, and the Scranton Life Insurance Co., of Scranton, the Girard Life Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., the National Life Insurance Co. of the United States of America, at Chicago, Ill., protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Peoria, Ill., favoring restriction of immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Peoria, Ill., favoring law to compel the equipment of all road engines with safe and suitable boilers, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, protesting against the prohibitive duty by the Government of Austria-Hungary on cottonseed oil and the duty on colored oleomargarine; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Peoria, Ill., favoring improvement in the living conditions of our seamen; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Charles I. Berg, of New York City, protesting against an amendment by the Senate committee imposing a tax on paintings and statuary less than 50 years old; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LONERGAN: Petition of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, of Chicago, Ill., protesting against the present tax on colored oleomargarine; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. J. M. C. SMITH: Petition of the Scranton Life & Fire Insurance Co., protesting against life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TOWNSEND: Petition of the Holy Name Societies of the Diocese of Newark, N. J., protesting against the publication of the Menace; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, July 26, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Vice President being absent, the President pro tempore took the chair and directed the Secretary to read the Journal of the proceedings of the preceding session.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that the further reading of the Journal may be dispensed with.

Mr. SMOOT. There are only a few Senators here, and I know a number are coming over. It would be better to have the Journal read.

Mr. SIMMONS. I withdraw the request.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will call for a quorum at the close of the morning business, the reading can be dispensed with.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; I do not desire to do that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the Secretary will resume the reading of the Journal.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not insist on my objection. I think, perhaps, we can get a quorum here by the time the morning business is closed, and, if not, I can call for a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Utah to object?

Mr. SMOOT. No; I do not object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the further reading of the Journal be dispensed with. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the further reading was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. NORRIS presented memorials signed by several hundred citizens of Nebraska, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation compelling the observance of Sunday as a day of rest in the District of Columbia, which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. FLETCHER. I present certain resolutions from the North Carolina Bankers' Association, and also resolutions from the South Carolina Banking Association, certified by the secretaries, which may be treated in the nature of petitions, and I ask that they be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the petitions were referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NORTH CAROLINA BANKERS' ASSOCIATION,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY AND TREASURER,
Henderson, N. C.

"Resolved by the North Carolina Bankers' Association, at Asheville, N. C., July 10, 1913, in convention assembled, That we favor incorporating in bill S. 2639, now pending in Congress, provision for such institutions and facilities as will meet the requirements and demands of our agricultural interests.

"Resolved further, That we commend the efforts of the Southern Commercial Congress in behalf of a system of agricultural credits and cooperation as patriotic and for the public good and deserving our cordial support."

The above resolution was proposed by J. Elwood Cox, Esq., president of Commercial National Bank, High Point, N. C., to the North Carolina Bankers' Association, in meeting assembled, at Asheville, N. C., July 10, 1913, which was read by Mr. Cox and duly passed by a unanimous vote of the convention.

W. A. HUNT,
Secretary North Carolina Bankers' Association.

"Resolved by the South Carolina Bankers' Association in convention assembled at Lake Toxaway, N. C., this July 12, 1913, That we favor such legislation as will provide for such institutions and facilities as will more completely meet the requirements and demands of our agricultural interests.

"Resolved further, That we commend the efforts of the Southern Commercial Congress to establish a system of agricultural credits and cooperation as important and beneficial to the whole country and all the people."

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of resolution passed by the South Carolina Bankers' Association at Lake Toxaway, N. C., on July 12, 1913.

LEE G. HALLEMON.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. CRAWFORD:

A bill (S. 2832) granting an increase of pension to Melancton Doren (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHERMAN:

A bill (S. 2833) providing for the appropriation of $2,500 as a part contribution for a monument to mark the site of Fort Edward, at Warsaw, Hancock County, Ill.; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. LEA:

A bill (S. 2835) to provide for the appointment of a district judge in the middle and eastern judicial districts in the State of Tennessee, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

THE CURRENCY.

Mr. CLAPP. I rise to introduce a bill, and before introducing it I wish to make a very brief statement.

There is a general feeling, in which I share, that there should be some currency legislation at the present session. There is a feeling also that with the debate on the tariff and the time that will be required it is unwise to undertake any general currency legislation at this session.

I am advised that there are $500,000,000 of notes printed already under the law of 1909, and if that law were amended so that instead of requiring 5 per cent interest the first month, with the increase beginning with the second month, the period were extended to three months, during which the 5 per cent tax would run, that law would probably meet any emergency or requirement likely to arise at this time.

For that purpose I introduce the following bill, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

The bill (S. 2834) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend the national banking laws" was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

AMENDMENT TO DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. O'GORMAN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $300 to pay Henry Coster, being the amount found due him as per certificate No. 103913 of the differences of the comptroller, dated June 16, 1913, Navy Department, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. STERLING submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

ADMINISTRATIVE SECTION OF TARIFF BILL.

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, there was published in the New York Commercial on the 17th of July an interview with Mr. Downing, who is chairman of the tariff committee of the Merchants' Association of New York, an association consisting largely of the importing interests. Mr. Downing in his interview represents himself as having taken a very active part in the formation of the administrative section of the proposed tariff law we are now considering. The interview is not long, and I should like to have it read and become a part of the RECORD and to call the attention of the lobby investigating committee to the statement of this gentleman.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island presents a certain newspaper article which he asks may be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. LIPPITT. I should like to have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read, without objection. The Chair hears none.

The Secretary read as follows:

The importing merchants of New York ought to appreciate what has been done by the merchants' association in their behalf in securing the elimination or modification of the drastic provisions of the administration section. The committee of which I am a chairman did a large amount of work in bringing about these changes. The members of the committee spent 15 days in Washington. They interviewed the President, several members of the Cabinet, and many Members of Congress to explain the necessity for revisions and eliminations in the law which the merchants' association favored.

I was in communication with Chairman UNDERWOOD even before the Ways and Means Committee of the House undertook the preparation of the tariff bill last year, and I was in touch with him during all the time that the Ways and Means Committee were considering the bill. To the great surprise of the business public the Ways and Means Committee, just before presenting the revised bill, saw fit to accept the suggestions made by James F. Curtis, who had been Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Secretary MacVeagh. Mr. Curtis's recommendations were so drastic that their enforcement would have tended to a large extent to nullify the effects of the downward revision of the schedules and would have created complications and hardship, both to the Government and the importing public.

The merchants' association has never taken any action upon the tariff schedules or rates, but it has always made the customs administrative features of the tariff a subject of careful study and attention, regulating as they do the application of the tariff schedules and rates to the three conflicting factors affected. These factors are: First, the Government, for the revenue which the tariff provides; second, the domestic manufacturer, for such protection as the tariff may afford; and, third, the honest importer, for the right to import under such limitations, fairly administered, as the tariff law may prescribe.

We made a thorough analysis of each subsection of the administrative section of the bill, which, as passed by the House, would have made it practically impossible for any importing merchant to carry on his business with any degree of certainty, since he was placed at the mercy of requirements, over compliance with which he could have no control. Practically all of our suggestions have been adopted and we are immensely pleased with the result. In the list of our suggestions was one proposing the appointment of a commission to consider a revision of the administrative portion of the law. I am glad to say that the bill, as reported by the Finance Committee of the Senate, provides for such a commission, and upon its appointment we shall continue our work. When it is remembered that two-thirds of all the imports into the United States are brought in through this port, hardly anything can be mentioned of more importance to the business interests of New York than a reasonable, fair, and practicable tariff administrative law.

Mr. SIMMONS. With reference to the interview——

Mr. LIPPITT. I was only going to ask in presenting the communication that the attention of the lobby investigating committee be called to it. I request that it be referred to the lobby investigating committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is not a standing committee of the Senate and hardly a special committee. However, the Chair will submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Committee on the Judiciary is conducting what we call the lobby investigation.

Mr. LIPPITT. I should like to have it referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, it will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have no objection whatever to the reference of the communication to the lobby investigating committee; but, so far as the gentleman who is the author of the interview is concerned, I wish to say that this is the first time I have heard of him. I do not say that I have never seen him, because during the time when we had tariff matters up there were hundreds who came to my office, but I do not think I ever heard of this man before. I am sure of that.

Mr. LIPPITT. I am not asking this matter to be referred to the lobby investigating committee because I think there is anything in it that reflects upon any Member of this body or the other branch of Congress. So far as I am personally concerned, I believe that all the gentlemen on the opposite side of the Chamber who have had anything to do with the making of the tariff bill have tried conscientiously to bring in a bill that should conform to their ideas of what a new tariff should be. I am making no personal attack upon anybody in this Chamber or elsewhere.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not understand the Senator as doing that, but I merely desired to say that I do not know the author of this interview.

EFFECTIVE VOTING (S. DOC. NO. 142).

Mr. OWEN. I should like to ask to have printed as a Senate document a short article on effective voting by C. G. Hoag.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. SMOOT. Let it be stated. I did not hear what the article is.

Mr. OWEN. It is an article on effective voting by C. G. Hoag. It consists of only 10 pages.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

THE TARIFF HANDBOOK.

Mr. SMOOT. Before the morning business is closed I wish to say that I notice this morning there is a copy of the Tariff Handbook, and on it is printed "the second print."

Mr. SIMMONS. I beg the Senator's pardon, I did not hear his remark.

Mr. SMOOT. I say I notice this morning that there is published a Tariff Handbook, and on it is noted "the second print." I observe that there are quite a number of changes in it from the original print. What I wish to ask the Senator from North Carolina is, which one of the prints he wishes us to refer to in our discussion, if we refer to it at all.

Mr. SIMMONS. The reprint was just handed to me as the Senator took the floor. Of course, Senators can use whichever one they please.

I wish to state that the only change I know of in the book, the only change I authorized to be made, was with reference to the columns carrying the present bill as passed by the House and the bill as reported by the Senate committee. I thought it would be very helpful to Senators, instead of printing the House bill in one column and the Senate bill in another column, without showing in any way the changes made by the Senate committee, to have simply the Senate amended bill printed with a line drawn through the matter stricken out in the House bill and with the matter inserted in the Senate bill in italics.

I discovered that with the two bills in parallel columns and with nothing indicating the changes made in the House bill by the Senate bill it was necessary to read the whole thing over to ascertain what change had been made by the Senate committee. As we found it necessary during the days we have been considering it to have the original bill before us, I thought it would be better to have a reprint and to have the bill as proposed to be amended by the Senate committee in one column and the present law in another column. I thought that would add greatly to the convenience of Senators, and that is the only change I authorized to be made. There may have been some correction of errors discovered by the clerk having the matter in charge. I do not know about that.

Mr. SMOOT. I fully agree with the Senator that the way the bill is printed in the second print is a great improvement over the original or first print.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will state that that is the way I originally intended to have it printed, but through some mistake the clerk did it otherwise, and I merely suggested a reprint for the purpose of making that change.

Mr. SMOOT. My object in calling it to the attention of the Senate was that Senators may know there is a second print, and that in quoting from it we all may quote from the second print.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, we can not hear what is being said. I call for the regular order.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not know but that this is the regular order. If there had not been so much disturbance in the Chamber I am quite sure the Senator could have heard what I said. I believe, Mr. President, that we all ought to use the second print of the document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is further morning business that order of business will be closed. The morning business is closed, and the calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3321.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The SECRETARY. Continuing the reading on page 11, line 6, paragraph 46——

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I feel quite sure that the item which was under consideration when we adjourned last evening was not agreed to. I think the RECORD will show that. It ought to be agreed to. I presume it will be agreed to without objection.

Mr. SMOOT. Paragraph 45.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes. The amendment was disagreed to, but the paragraph was not agreed to, as I recall it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order that has been observed has not involved a formal adoption of a paragraph as read. If it is adopted at all it is impliedly adopted by not being objected to.

Mr. GALLINGER. If that is the procedure I am quite satisfied.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 11, line 11, paragraph 46, before the words "per centum," to strike out "15" and insert "25," so as to read:

46. Oils, expressed: Alizarin assistant, sulphoricinoleic acid, and ricinoleic acid, and soaps containing castor oil, any of the foregoing in whatever form, and all other alizarin assistants and all soluble greases used in the processes of softening, dyeing, or finishing, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 13, paragraph 46, before the word "cents," to strike out "12" and to insert "10," so as to read:

Flaxseed and linseed oil, raw, boiled, or oxidized, 10 cents per gallon of 7½ pounds.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed in paragraph 46, line 14, as follows:

Poppy-seed oil, raw, boiled, or oxidized, rapeseed oil, and peanut oil, 6 cents per gallon.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I want to call attention to that new duty on peanut oil. Peanut oil has hitherto always been on the free list. It is imported in large quantities, though the amount has diminished as the price of the oil has risen. I suppose the explanation to be given as to this is that it will be a revenue duty, but it is perfectly obvious from the testimony that the imposition of a duty will stop the importation. It appears by the testimony before the Ways and Means Committee of the other House that peanut oil is used in the manufacture of butterine, and, if the price is raised, the testimony there was that the manufacturers will abandon the use of this article in favor of an inferior oil.

Curiously enough in that testimony they speak of it as used only for butterine, which is a mistake, as it is very largely used commercially. I have a letter here from large importers in Boston, the Alden Speare's Sons Co., in which they say:

Peanut oil has been imported by us and others for use commercially in competition with olive oil when the prices of olive oil have been prohibitive, and is used by the woolen manufacturers and other manufacturing interests which we serve in New England and elsewhere.

The imposition of this duty of 6 cents per gallon will more than cover the difference in price and will simply mean that its importation will cease. We have ourselves imported on an average of 5,000 barrels a year for the last three or four years, and shall be obliged to discontinue the sale of this product if this duty is fixed at this figure. And there can be no possible gain in the revenue to be derived therefrom, as you will readily see. The market on both olive oil and peanut oil is, of course, subject to change from time to time; but to give you the exact list as it is to-day specifically, we are selling imported olive oil at 81 cents per gallon and imported peanut oil at 79 cents per gallon. It will be obvious to you from this that a duty of 6 cents per gallon on imported peanut oil will absolutely prohibit all importations of that product.

It is perfectly obvious that it will; and in the House hearings the first witness, Mr. Levett, said that peanut oil is not made in this country. There seems to be some doubt whether the American peanut can be used for that purpose. It certainly can not be used for making that oil when the oil is to be used as an article of food in the making of butterine, because it is too highly flavored, but it might, of course, be used for the production of oil for commercial purposes. So far as I can learn, it is not made in this country at present, although this witness, Mr. Levett, thought it could be made. It is shown here by the figures which he gives that when the price was 47.6 cents for peanut oil per gallon 3,284,064 gallons were imported. In 1911 the average price was 60.2 cents, and the importations were 1,121,097 gallons, a little over a third; in 1912 the price increased to 65.8 cents, and the importations were 878,659.57 gallons. Last year they fell, according to the reports here, to 6000,000 gallons, though this witness gives it at 878,659.57 gallons.

The price of peanut oil has gone still higher, and it is so near olive oil that its importation would undoubtedly cease in case it is used for the preparation of butterine. It would cease simply because it had become too expensive.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. Is the explanation of the tremendous falling off in the importation from 3,284,000 gallons in 1910 to 878,000 gallons in 1912 due to the fact that there are other oils that are as cheap which are used as substitutes?

Mr. LODGE. It is due to the fact that as the oil has advanced in price it has ceased to be profitable to be used in the manufacture of butterine.

Mr. GALLINGER. So that if the duty is imposed the price will presumably be still higher and its use will be entirely abandoned.

Mr. LODGE. Yes; it will be abandoned. The testimony of those who speak of that from the point of view of using it as a food oil is as follows:

A duty on peanut oil would not only operate to depreciate the quality of butterine and cheap bread, but would result in a very slight increase in the revenue.

The exaction of a duty on peanut oil would force the manufacturers of butterine to use cheaper and less wholesome articles in place of this oil. Its increased cost would in all probability prevent its use as an ingredient of butterine; and as this is the chief purpose for which it is employed, its importation would greatly decrease.

The testimony of the commercial use—and I have read from an importer who imported during the last three years 5,000 barrels a year—is to precisely the same effect; that if it rises a little higher in price the people will prefer to take olive oil, which is a somewhat better oil. They now buy peanut oil because it is slightly cheaper; but in the case of food they will take an inferior oil, because they can not afford to buy the peanut oil.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator from Massachusetts one further question. I have noticed that Mr. Heinz among his 57 or more varieties of food products, is making what he calls "peanut butter." I should like to ask the Senator if the oil of peanuts, or peanuts in some ground or macerated form, is used for the production of that article, and how many people are using it?

Mr. LODGE. I had supposed, Mr. President, that that was a form of what is spoken of in the testimony as butterine, made of peanut oil. It is perfectly obvious from the testimony of those who import this oil for manufacturing purposes, for commercial use, and those who import it for use in food that the importation will cease if this duty is imposed and that other substances will be used. It is not an article without which the foods can not be made or without which the textile industries and other manufactures can not proceed. The advantage that it has enjoyed has been because of its lower price and the fact that it was capable of being used both for commercial purposes and for food.

It is perfectly obvious from the testimony that it makes no difference to the importer from whose letter I have read whether he sells olive oil or whether he sells peanut oil; he gets his commission either way; but he is simply stating the fact that it enables the industry to get a somewhat cheaper oil and also tends to keep down the price of olive oil. We stop that by levying this duty. It is perfectly obvious that it will bring no revenue, and we keep out a useful product which is not made in this country.

Mr. President, if, on the other hand, this duty is imposed on peanut oil with the view of building up a peanut-oil industry, the question takes at once a different complexion. If it is intended as a protective duty and there is good reason to believe that such an industry can be built up, to those of us who believe in building up new industries, it would make, of course, a strong appeal. It appears in the tariff hearings, on page 5914, that Mr. Needham made this statement:

Four years ago the peanut growers in Virginia, through their Representatives in Congress, appealed to this committee very strongly and convinced me that they needed more duty.

Mr. LEVETT. On peanuts, but not on peanut oil.

Mr. NEEDHAM. You can't have the peanut oil if you don't raise the peanuts.

If the duty is imposed for the purpose of building up the peanut and the peanut-oil industry, that is an argument of a different character. However, if this duty is put on this article of food and of general use with the view of raising revenue, it will not raise revenue, but will impose a needless burden on the people who use the cheaper foods, like butterine, and upon the industries that also use the oil.

For these reasons, Mr. President, I move to strike out the words "and peanut oil" from the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves to strike out the words "and peanut oil" from the bill where they appear in line 13, page 11. Does not the Senator also desire to strike out the words "6 cents per gallon"?

Mr. LODGE. No; that applies to the other oils. It is only necessary to strike out the words "and peanut oil" and insert "and" before "rapeseed oil."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I wish to add a word to what the Senator from Massachusetts has already said. I speak from information which I think is accurate. The manufacturers of oleomargarine and butterine from the Atlantic States to the city of Chicago have experimented at great length on the production of a palatable article to be used as a cheap substitute for butter. Butterine, or oleomargarine, as originally manufactured, was artificially colored. Some years ago there was legislation enacted by Congress imposing on the colored product an internal-revenue tax of 10 cents a pound, whereas when not colored, in the original tallow or lard color as it appears when not treated, there is a tax of but a fraction of a cent—I think one-fourth of a cent a pound.

The producers of oleomargarine are unanimous in their testimony on this subject. I am not quoting from the packers of Chicago and other western cities, whose testimony might not be very gladly received by the public; but I am quoting from testimony of the smaller producers. The larger packing houses have, as a sort of side line, butterine or oleomargarine departments; but that is not their principal business. It is only to provide for the utilization of one of the smaller by-products of the plant. For them I say nothing; from them I have had no correspondence and no communication of any kind. It is only the independent producer of oleomargarine from whom I have had some explanation of this feature of the paragraph.

They have tried for many, many years—and from my personal knowledge of their business in the western country I will say that their efforts have extended at least through 16 years—to improve the quality of their product. They are not allowed, as I have said, without paying a tax of 10 cents a pound, imposed as an excise duty, to color it. If, in the manufacture of oleomargarine, they can put in a substance that increases its palatable or nutritious qualities and preserves all the animal fat found in natural butter, it becomes one of the best substitutes for the natural product. Here is where I think, Mr. President, the injustice of the imposition of a 6-cent per gallon duty on peanut oil is apparent.

Oleomargarine or butterine is not used as an article of luxury; it is not used by those to whom the income-tax section of this bill will apply; it is not used by those who are able to buy in my country Elgin dairy butter; it is not used by anybody in any city where pay rolls exist and where factories are giving the means of subsistence to wage earners and their families; it is not used in any place by any family which can afford to buy genuine butter. Genuine butter ranges in price, varying with the season, from 28 cents a pound, in the northern Mississippi Valley country, to 70 cents a pound, according to the production and the time of the year. The average price of good butter, either farm produced or dairy butter, all up and down the Mississippi Valley country, in the city of Chicago, and elsewhere outside of that city, is about from 42 to 55 cents a pound laid on your table from your local grocery. To the mine worker in my country, to the factory worker, to the men in the railroad shops the average price of good palatable butterine, made with peanut oil, as one of the necessary elements of its composition, ranges from 16 to 20 cents.

A good, eatable article of butterine can be had, ordinarily, at 18 cents. In fact, there is not so much variation in this product by far as there is in the case of the natural butter, for which it is used as a substitute by the persons I mention.

The butterine manufacturer has found by experience what is best adapted to the manufacture of that article. If this duty is to be levied for the purpose of protecting any of the peanut-producing area, I am for it.

Peanut butter is simply a manufactured product put in small jars and used, not as a substitute for butter, but as a sort of confectionery, or in small quantities as a food. It is a nutritious article, and the peanut itself is one of the necessary ingredients of its manufacture. It is made by a number of gentlemen who are engaged in that line of business, and who put it out under well-known brands. There are half a dozen brands of peanut butter that can be had at any confectionery or candy store in the average city.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me, then I replied wrongly to the Senator from New Hampshire about the article to which the Senator has just referred. It is made from the American peanut, and not from the peanut oil?

Mr. SHERMAN. Entirely. Any peanut that you can buy at an average circus is fit to make peanut butter from. The oil expressed from the average peanut, though, is not fit to make butterine from. That is where the distinction comes in.

The manufacturers of whom I am now speaking are independent. They have not sought to enter into combinations. They are in no beef-packing trust, such as the popular mind has been somewhat concerned with in years past. They are entirely independent. Their products go out on the market, each on its merits. They sell their products through separate salesmen or branch houses, without any combination or understanding with each other as to price.

These men for years have endeavored to use domestic peanut oil. I remember very well when they first made the experiment. Some of them are located in Chicago; some of them are farther east. All of them found, however, that domestic peanut oil, expressed from the nut raised in Georgia, Virginia, Alabama, and elsewhere, is not a palatable ingredient for the manufacture of butterine or oleomargarine. There is something lacking. They can not, by the use of any chemical process known at present, take from the domestic peanut a strong peanut flavor. If I may be allowed to use the expression, it is a sort of ancient nutty flavor that destroys the eatable quality of the butterine; so when they put the product on the market it was a dead loss and fit only for axle grease.

The manufacturers have been continually experimenting with cocoa butter, with palm oil, with all of the various oils that all their chemists or others have been able to discover in the vegetable kingdom. They have found one kind of oil fit for this purpose. It is the oil used by the independent butterine manufacturers all the way from Rhode Island—I believe one factory in that State, or in one of the New England States, wrote to me—clear to the Mississippi Valley country.

The peanut oil they use is expressed from a peanut grown in Africa. The manufacturers in the city of Chicago import to some convenient point peanuts grown in Senegambia, and express out of them oil for their product.

This peanut is a tropical nut. It is more heavily charged with oil than the American nut, and there is more vegetable oil in the product obtained. It has a more pronounced yellow color than the domestic oil. It has such a pronounced yellow tint that in a very material degree it improves the color of the butterine, as well as its flavor or eatable quality.

Color is a mere matter of taste. You can eat butterine that is the color of the tallow or lard from which it is compounded, if you blindfold yourself, and you will not know the difference between that and other butterine with an artificial yellow tint. There is not any difference in the taste; it is only in the looks of it. So the heavier African peanut oil that is used in compounding it improves in some degree the color. I do not know whether it colors the product sufficiently to make it subject to the 10-cent tax or not. I wrote for that information, but have not received it.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, right on that point I wish to ask the Senator a question for information. I understood the Senator to say that this African peanut oil imparted a yellow color. Does it impart such a yellow color to oleomargarine as to give it the color of butter?

Mr. SHERMAN. It does change the natural tint of the oleomargarine as compounded up to that point.

Mr. SIMMONS. Can the manufacturer of oleomargarine, by using this oil, give to that product, which has been made contraband by our legislation, the color of butter, and therefore escape our legislation against the product?

Mr. SHERMAN. Only to the extent that the oil imparts to the product a more saffron tint than the natural lard or tallow color. It does not color the product to such a degree that anyone would mistake it, by reason of its color alone, for the natural butter product. I do not think it could be used as a means of evading the excise tax.

If the peanut oil colored the oleomargarine so that it could not be distinguished from natural butter, the product would be subject to the internal-revenue tax of 10 cents a pound. Personally I would as soon eat butterine colored with peanut oil as butterine colored with annatto. It is a mere question of color and of taste. It is like a dirty tablecloth; your food is just as good, but your appetite is lacking. [Laughter.] So, in coloring butterine, if it could be colored a regular June butter color by the use of peanut oil, I would rather take my peanuts and my butter together. I am not at all afraid of that kind of a mixed drink.

Mr. SIMMONS. I agree with what the Senator is saying about that; but I thought the purpose of this legislation was to prevent fraud in selling this product as butter.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to put a question to the committee, or to the Senators who are responsible for framing the bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am simply trying to get some information about the matter. The Senator lives in a part of the country where oleomargarine is produced in considerable quantities. I should like to ask him further whether, as a matter of fact, this oil is used by the producers of oleomargarine for the purpose of coloring it?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will say to the Senator that it is not used primarily for that purpose. The primary purpose of the use of the oil is to manufacture a palatable butterine. It is not put in primarily for coloring purposes. If the color alone were the end sought, there are artificial colors that could be used and added in concentrated form that would be much less expensive than the use of imported oil. I do not think it is used primarily for that purpose in any place within my knowledge.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator from Illinois will pardon me for the interruption, the difference is that if the oleomargarine were artificially colored it would be subject to the 10-cent tax.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And if it were naturally colored by the color of the peanut oil, it would not be subject to the 10-cent tax.

Mr. SHERMAN. No, sir.

Mr. WILLIAMS. So the Senator's statement that the manufacturers could find a cheaper material wherewith to color the product is erroneous, because the natural coloring, coming from the natural tint of the peanut oil, would not subject the product to the tax.

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand. That is a matter for the revenue officers.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, no; that is a plain matter of law. The law taxes the product when it is artificially colored.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well. If peanut oil were added in such a way and had such a tint as would give to butterine an artificial shade equal to that of butter, it would be as much an artificial coloring as annatto itself, in my judgment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I beg the Senator's pardon. The law provides that oleomargarine in its natural state, whether there enters into it a certain proportion of olive oil or cottonseed oil or peanut oil or what not, if it has its natural color, is not taxed. When it is artificially colored with coloring matter it is taxed. But nobody would construe peanut oil to be an artificial coloring matter.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me say in response to that remark, which is certainly a proper one, that into the revenue district in which Chicago is situated there was brought some natural oil from the Tropics, made from some species of palm. I do not know what its chemical composition was. I only know that palm oil from some tropical country was brought there and used by some of the very butterine manufacturers to whom I have been referring. The internal-revenue collector held that notwithstanding this was the natural color of that species of palm oil, it was an artificial coloring when added to butterine.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; upon the ground that it was not really a constituent part of the butterine in any proper sense, but was added solely for the purpose of coloring.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am unable to distinguish how a manufacturer's intent can be ascertained. It is a good deal like hitting a man; the intent determines the criminality. The manufacturer's intent in adding African peanut oil to butterine may be to make a more nutritious article of food, or it may be to color it artificially so as to avoid the 10-cent tax.

Mr. WILLIAMS. As a matter of fact, I suppose both ideas enter into it.

Mr. SHERMAN. The purpose may be a mixed one.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But the main idea is that the peanut oil actually enriches the article and makes it more palatable, and makes a better butterine and a better oleomargarine. The fact that it colors it is a mere incident. When an artificial coloring is introduced for the purpose of coloring it, for the purpose of selling it as butter, then, of course, the law is violated.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is a matter that is solely within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The internal-revenue officers have a very wide discretion in saying what is and what is not an artificial coloring. I can understand how peanut oil might be added, if it were of that degree of tint, so as to artificially color it and come within the 10-cent tax.

Mr. SIMMONS. I understood the Senator——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator will suspend for a moment to permit the Chair to make a statement, the Chair is aware of the rule which requires that a Senator desiring to interrupt another Senator shall ask permission of the Chair. These colloquies occur so often, however, and are so useful that the Chair will take the liberty of relaxing that rule until there is some indication that it is likely to be abused. The Chair desires to say that in explanation of the failure to enforce the rule at this time.

Mr. SIMMONS. I understood the Senator a little while ago, at the time I interrupted him, to be making the argument that this peanut oil improved the quality of the butterine, and that it was used for the purpose of making a better article. I did not understand him to be arguing that it was used for the purpose of coloring it, but that it was used for the purpose of improving it.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator understood me correctly.

Mr. SIMMONS. And, therefore, that it became an essential element in the product resulting from its use.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir; that is right.

Mr. SIMMONS. If that be true, then clearly the product would not be subject to the excise tax of 10 cents per pound.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me a moment?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. LODGE. When I spoke I mentioned two purposes for which I thought the duty might be imposed, one being revenue purposes and the other protective purposes. I confess it did not occur to me—and I want to make the acknowledgment now—that this duty was imposed for the purpose of preventing manufacturers from using an article which imparted a better color.

Mr. SIMMONS. Nobody has said it was.

Mr. LODGE. Very well; then what is there in the point about it? There is nothing in the point.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have been trying to get information with reference to the argument the Senator from Illinois was making.

Mr. SHERMAN. Annatto is a constituent element of butterine, if it be used to color it so as to bring it within the 10-cent tax. It is not unpalatable. The coloring matter is not unhealthful. It not only improves the appearance of the butterine, but it has certain food elements in it. Taken alone it is not valuable and is not used as an article of food. It is a concentrated coloring matter. But added to butterine, if anything, it enhances the food value of the article.

Coming back to peanut oil, the duty of 6 cents a gallon can be justified only as a revenue measure. The duty of 6 cents a gallon, if I remember correctly the figures of the estimate in the report, would produce about $36,000 a year revenue. I wish to say that the butterine manufacturers will not pay that $36,000. They are now manufacturing oleomargarine at a very close margin and putting it on the market or sending it to the grocery. Ordinarily the grocer is the jobber for them. Just before coming to this Chamber I was engaged in a department for something over four years in the almost continual purchase of butterine in considerable quantities.

Mr. SIMMONS. But does not the Senator think that if, by spending this $36,000, the manufacturers of oleomargarine can produce a product which will be of the same color as butter, and at the same time escape the excise tax upon colored oleomargarine, they will pay it?

Mr. SHERMAN. No, sir. I will say to the Senator that if he will read the section of the present law dealing with this matter, and the decisions made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue here in the Treasury Department, and sustained when made by local collectors throughout the country, I think he will find that there is no danger of any kind of a combination of natural products so as to approach the similitude of butter and escape the 10-cent tax. That, also, is a matter within the discretion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the interpretation of the law, and finally must be determined by the courts. They are the last tribunal to pass on that question.

That, however, is a matter that can be covered either by future decision or by future legislation. I believe in the anti-color law, both here in Congress and in the several States, as it exists.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator will permit me, I should like, for the purpose of information, to ask the Senator from North Carolina a question. It seems to me that the danger the Senator has suggested could easily be determined by what has happened in the past. Under the present law I understand this article is free. Is it not?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish to ask the Senator if the manufacturers of oleomargarine use this article, peanut oil?

Mr. SIMMONS. That is exactly what I am trying to ascertain from the Senator from Illinois. I do not know. I made that inquiry of the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. That is a point upon which I would like to have information.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator wants to know whether oleomargarine made with peanut oil but containing no artificial coloring matter has been subjected to a 10-cent tax, I can answer that by saying no.

Mr. NORRIS. I agree with the Senator from Mississippi the legal effect would be as stated awhile ago, but what I was inquiring particularly about is whether under the present law there has been anyone who by the use of peanut oil has been enabled to escape the 10-cent tax?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Everybody who has used it has escaped the tax, because it was not artificial coloring matter, and nobody has been taxed merely for peanut oil.

Mr. NORRIS. If they use peanut oil for artificial coloring, would it be subject to a tax? I wanted to know the fact as to whether this would make a color and whether they had done that in the past.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from Illinois, as I understood him, was making the argument that this product could be used so as to give a color to oleomargarine somewhat simulating the color of butter and that at the same time it improved the quality of the product.

Mr. NORRIS. If that could be done it would have been done in the past, I should think, and practically would have nullified the law.

Mr. SIMMONS. Then the Senator proceeded to say that if we impose this duty on the product it would not be imported into this country, because, he said, the manufacturers of oleomargarine would not pay this tax. Thereupon I asked the Senator the question whether, as a matter of fact, the manufacturers were using this material for the purpose of coloring oleomargarine and escaping the tax. I asserted that if by the use of this oil they could improve the quality of oleomargarine and at the same time give it a color that simulated butter and escape the tax there could be no question in my mind about the manufacturers being willing to pay this tax and making a profit by doing it, because they would escape the 10-cent tax by paying a tax of 5 cents a gallon. As to whether that is being done or not I was trying to get some information, as the Senator was.

Mr. NORRIS. That is what I am trying to find out. If it could be done, it seems to me certainly it would have been done under the law as it exists now.

Mr. SIMMONS. I was inquiring whether it had been done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois will proceed.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I am quoting from memory, but for the last fiscal year I think there were 126,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine put on the market that went through the different internal-revenue offices of the country. I know from personal knowledge that for more than five years butterine or oleomargarine has been compounded with peanut oil imported. I know that the greater part of the output of the Chicago factories, exclusive of the packing houses, with whom I have had no communication whatever—I speak of the smaller ones—has not escaped the 10 cents taxation on at least nine-tenths of their product, the uncolored remainder being subject to the lower rate. It is a fair assumption that of the entire product of the oleomargarine factories 90 per cent of it has paid an internal-revenue tax to the Government. That would only leave a small portion, say one-tenth, untaxed, and that goes out uncolored; and they send with it coloring matter in order that the housewife may color it after taking it into the kitchen. But that is only a very small per cent of the whole.

Further, if this peanut oil in the heavy vegetable origin I have described does not come in under a 6-cent duty, there will be, necessarily, some substitute used in its place. The manufacturer has tried domestic peanut oil. I wish to say that, on the theory I have advanced heretofore and on my belief, if a gallon of domestic peanut oil could be used by the oleomargarine manufacturer I would legislate in that way, if it answered the purpose as well or take a chance on its not doing quite so well to use the domestic product rather than to bring it from Africa.

Whether this could by any possibility be made an instrument for the evasion of the internal-revenue tax is something I will get to when we reach the amendment later on. I introduced an amendment here some time ago covering this point. It provides in substance that the imported oil used in the manufacture of oleomargarine or butterine shall not be dutiable. If gentlemen who are anxious to safeguard the producer of genuine butter will join with me we will have no difference of opinion.

We have anticolor laws in most of the butter-producing States. The dairymen are imperative on that, and they have had it. I have had my difference of opinion with them in years past, and we adjusted amicably long ago. Nearly every State that produces an appreciable quantity of marketable butter to-day has an anticolor law within its limits in full operation by the pure-food board or some law department of the State.

I am in favor of and would support sincerely any such arrangement. I will support the same regulation now in force passed some years ago. It is a revenue producer it is true. The 10 cents on colored butterine produces a goodly sum each year. But from the dairyman's point of view it was urged for an entirely different purpose. It was urged to prevent deception in the sale of oleomargarine to unsuspecting customers in place of butter. So the 10 cents tax was placed on it for a double motive, and it has answered both purposes.

If, when the amendment is up in due course, any of the gentlemen on the other side wish to have it so amended that any peanut butter used in the manufacture of this article shall in no manner escape the 10-cent duty, I will join with them cheerfully on this subject, because it is far from my purpose that any such effect should be had. All the 126,000,000 pounds that went out on the domestic market last year was sold at a reasonable price.

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the Senator permit me to ask him one question?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SIMMONS. Is the Senator opposing the duty carried in the bill proposed on this article——

Mr. SHERMAN. The 6 cents on peanut oil?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes. Is he opposing it an account of its possible uses in connection with the manufacture of butterine or is he opposing it upon the ground that it is used for the purpose of making a confection?

Mr. SHERMAN. I am opposing it on the former ground, I will say to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. I understood the Senator to say in the beginning that it was used for the purpose of making confectionery.

Mr. SHERMAN. Peanut oil imported? That is the domestic product.

Mr. SIMMONS. Then the Senator does not agree with the Senator from Massachusetts, or certainly one Senator over there, who declared that it was used largely for the purpose of making confections.

Mr. SHERMAN. The imported oil?

Mr. SIMMONS. I just wanted to understand whether the Senator was opposing it on account of the manufacturers of oleomargarine or on account of the manufacturers of confections.

Mr. SHERMAN. No, sir; I am opposing it for neither reason, I will say to the Senator from North Carolina. I am opposing a levy of 6 cents a gallon on peanut oil imported as an ingredient of oleomargarine because it adds to the cost of the tables of the mine workers, of whom there are 20,000 in my district alone and many more thousands in my State, when they buy it. They largely buy no butter, because they can not afford it.

They are eating no Elgin butter in that country. With even $3.50 or $4 for wages in the soft-coal country, with the interruptions in the mining business, they are not to-day paying 40 or 50 cents a pound for dairy butter. They are paying 16 to 18 cents a pound for this same oleomargarine. I am talking for the miner and the wage-earning head of a family. The manufacturer can take care of himself. If you add the 6 cents a gallon on one of the component parts of oleomargarine to the cost of the butterine or the oleomargarine when it comes into his kitchen, you have levied the tax finally on the poor man.

It is like your banana tax. I know who will pay the banana tax. Out of the 450,000,000 bunches of bananas that came in last year, it is not the banana peddler or the banana jobber or the United Fruit Co. that will pay the tax. It is the man who buys bananas at 25 cents a dozen for his children who will pay the tax at last. Do you not remember that in the days of the Spanish-American War we put a tax of a cent on every telegram. It was a small tax. But who paid it? I paid it. The man who sent a telegram paid it. The Western Union and the Postal Cable Companies never paid a cent. They simply put the favor onto the sender of the telegram. With the banana it is the man or child who eats the banana who will pay; and the tax will fall on the man who eats the pound of butterine if you put a duty of 6 cents on each gallon.

Now, let me go further. I am unable to understand the philosophy of the framers of this bill when peanut oil that has heretofore been free, just a general omnibus provision that all that product is free, is now placed on the dutiable list at 6 cents, and at the same time olive oil has a reduction of 40 to 50 per cent. I do not understand that olive oil is something the average wage earner out in the western country is using on his table three times a day or only one time a day. It is possible he may get some peanut oil very cheap. There is a difference in retail. Even the peanut oil from Georgia that is taken to Italy and shipped back can be sold cheaper than genuine California or Italian olive oil. But olive oil is not something that is in favor of the suffering poor when it is reduced 40 to 50 per cent.

If you are going to make this a revenue measure by taxing peanut oil, then tax olive oil that goes along with a hot bird and a cold bottle. This is not in favor, I presume, of the oppressed poor. It is another bearing a strong family resemblance to taxing something that is finally added to the man that pays the bill who is not hit by an income tax. I hold no brief for any of the gentlemen who will be affected by an income tax. It catches all of us fellows here, because we get $7,500 a year, and it will cost us $35 a year. But for those under the exemption it is a different question. Every one of the customs duties imposed is passed along until it gets to the consumer.

If the ultimate consumer is the suffering gentleman for whom relief is desired in this bill, then let us take somebody else instead of levying a duty that will travel along until it is taken out of the mouth of one who earns wages and keeps his family out in my part of the country. Instead of taking it out of his pocket, reach somebody else. Raise the limit on your income tax.

There is another thing here that I can not understand on the peanut-oil question. Is this 6 cents a gallon intended to be protective or revenue? I have been asked some questions. Gentlemen who discuss this in after days can state for what motive this portion of the paragraph was framed. If it is a revenue measure I can understand it. If it is a protective measure I can understand it. Which is it?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Revenue, of course.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Entirely for revenue.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then why do you not tax olive oil more?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We put on olive oil 20 cents a gallon.

Mr. SHERMAN. Do you not think it will produce as much?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The duty on peanut oil is 9 per cent. The duty on olive oil is 20 per cent or more on different varieties of olive oil. Olive oil is consumed along the Atlantic coast by laboring people as much as peanut oil is consumed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Very much more.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me say to the Senator the duty on olive oil is reduced.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. But the duty is double what it is on peanut oil now.

Mr. SHERMAN. What do you tax peanut oil at all for?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. For revenue.

Mr. SHERMAN. For revenue?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. SHERMAN. Who do you expect to pay the added tax?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The people who use it.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is all I want. I am through.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. As they pay every tax.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, Mr. President, if the Senator from Illinois is through, we have all heard him very patiently. He is opposed to this tax because it adds to the cost of living of the mine workers and because it adds to the burdens of the suffering poor. Peanut oil adding to the burdens of the suffering poor! All the laboring men of Illinois and all over the country are distressed to death because 6 cents a gallon is put on peanut oil, which I suppose from that is a daily product of their food. Just think of it a minute! How we are oppressing, weighing down upon the suffering poor by adding to the cost of peanut oil! And this comes from the mouth of a gentleman who I expect will vote against the provision in this bill which puts meat for the poor and bread for the poor upon the free list.

But of course the suffering poor in Illinois do not eat meat and bread; they eat peanut oil, and they can not get along without peanut oil. They can not worship on Sunday or send their children to school on Monday without peanut oil. And the gentleman in the next breath tells us his chief objection to that tax is that it adds to the cost of oleomargarine and that oleomargarine enters into the consumption of the suffering poor, the mine worker of Illinois and his part of the country; and yet, in the very next breath after that, he tells us he is in favor of 10 cents a pound internal-revenue tax upon oleomargarine itself, and that although he had some quarrel with somebody about that years ago he has quit defending the suffering poor when it comes to oleomargarine.

Now, perhaps the most iniquitous law upon the statute book is the prostitution of the taxing power so as to keep the poor people from buying something better and healthier than butter instead of butter. Yet the Senator stands here defending that tax, a purely sectional tax. I have fought it, and I fought it when it was levied. I should like to see it repealed to-day. I should like to see the mine workers in Illinois get oleomargarine for 10 cents a pound less than they now do.

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. POMERENE in the chair). Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will yield in a moment. Oleomargarine has no germs in it. Every bit of the testimony presented in both Houses, from that of Dr. Harvey Wiley down, was to the effect that it was just as healthful, if not more healthful, and just as nutritious as butter; yet this great defender of "the suffering poor," who can not exist night or day without peanut butter, is an advocate of the 10 cents a pound tax on oleomargarine. It looks to me like a peanut argument. Now, I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to ask the Senator whether he favors the repeal of the 10-cent tax on colored oleomargarine?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Absolutely; and that is not all. I favor, if you are going to keep the tax on colored oleomargarine, putting a tax upon colored butter. The Senator knows as well as I do that nearly all the butter that is put on the market is colored artificially to resemble June butter, so that it may be sold at a higher price under the false pretense of being the best product of butter; and yet in the House of Representatives when they presented a bill putting a tax upon colored oleomargarine, and I presented an amendment to put a tax upon colored butter, they voted it down three to one. Why? Because they were afraid of the dairymen, the creameries, and the farmers——

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me ask the Senator another question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And they made a great cry.

Mr. SHERMAN. Did you ever have a cowman after you?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, yes; but not perhaps to the same extent that the gentlemen in the Senator's neighborhood had cowmen after them. I never had a cowman after me so strongly that I was intimidated and backed down and voted to prostitute the taxing power of the Government to discriminate between two healthful articles, in favor of one and against the other. There are a great many cowmen in Mississippi, but they never cowed me quite to that extent. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. For the purpose of eliciting information. I am seeking no advantage at all, and I know the Senator is not. I thought this question all out once.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I know you did, and then you surrendered, and now you are apologizing.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am not apologizing.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I thought you were a moment ago. You said you thought it out and were tired of it, and that you were in favor of the tax.

Mr. SHERMAN. No; I am not. If you want to repeal it, that is a different question, but under the existing laws, in the condition under which we are now legislating—and I am taking the existing laws as they are—when it comes to repealing the 10 per cent tax that is another proposition entirely. I have been in that fight a great many times.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Would you vote with me for repealing it?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; I will vote against repealing it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Ah! That is just what I said—that you were apologizing for your past opposition to it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have not finished the explanation in answer to the inquiry. I have been through that fight a great many times, and I have known a good many people to be converted from other reasons. I have no respect for a sinner who repents because he is afraid of going to hell if he does not do so. I have changed my views because I think it is a fair regulation.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why not tax colored butter?

Mr. SHERMAN. The oleomargarine men in the western country——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why not tax colored butter, I repeat?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will get to that in a moment. The oleomargarine producers, the dairy people, and the farmers in the western country got together and settled it. Whether the consumers are concerned in that I am not saying, but those producers, the farmers, and the dairy people got together and settled it. There is now no controversy out in that section of the country, where most of the butter comes from.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What controversy there was has been silenced; quieted, so to speak; given a soporific, a sedative.

Mr. SHERMAN. The anticoloring law in most of the States is in the statute to stay. That question has passed beyond the stage of controversy in most of the Western States. Nobody wants it repealed and nobody has introduced such a bill. In four legislatures in the Western States with which I am familiar in five years there has not been a bill introduced to repeal the anticoloring law.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Well, but if the Senator from Illinois will pardon me now, the Senator interrupted me to make a statement——

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And I understood that he made it; but I do not understand yet why the Senator should have his soul harrowed up, his mind distressed, and his patience tortured because of the oppression of "the suffering poor" by the tax upon peanut oil——

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not want to drive them to olive oil.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because the tax upon it will make the price of oleomargarine higher; and yet he disdains to harrow up his soul or to have his mind vexed because of the 10 cents tax on oleomargarine, the very product whose increased cost he is complaining of as an element entering into the oppression of "the suffering poor" if peanut oil is taxed.

Mr. SHERMAN. The suffering poor always buy cob pipes and smoke their Kentucky leaf, and so you ought to repeal the internal-revenue tax on tobacco, which is as much of a necessity as is oleomargarine or whisky.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am not proposing to relieve "the suffering poor." It was the Senator from Illinois who was proposing to relieve "the suffering poor." He was proposing to relieve them by putting peanut oil on the free list; and his reason for it was that if peanut oil was taxed, it would add to the price of oleomargarine; and in the next breath he says he is in favor of taxing oleomargarine 10 cents a pound. Now, do not make me make the argument that you have made, which I merely repeated. I am the best-natured man in the world, but I do not want to stand in the attitude of having made that argument publicly anywhere.

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him another question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; certainly.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask if it helps by 6 cents a gallon, or whatever it may be, are you in favor of that?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Am I in favor of this tax? Absolutely.

Mr. SHERMAN. Of 6 cents a gallon?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Six cents, or whatever it is; yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then the only difference between you and me is in the enormity of our sins.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What is that?

Mr. SHERMAN. The only difference between you and me is the degree of our sinning.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, no, Mr. President; the difference is enormously greater than that.

Mr. SHERMAN. On this question of peanut oil.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The difference is that I frankly confess that I want this tax, and I frankly confess that I would rather make oleomargarine cheaper to the poor, who really eat it and who need it, and the Senator, under the guise of contending that he wants cheaper oleomargarine for "the suffering poor," admits in the next breath that he wants to tax it so as to make it higher. The difference between him and me is that he strains at a gnat and swallows a camel, and I am swallowing a gnat, but refusing to put a camel into my stomach. [Laughter.] That is the difference, if the Senator will pardon me.

Mr. SHERMAN. You will be nauseated on this before you are through with it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I should not be at all surprised if you put enough gnats in your stomach that you might be; but the amount of suffering that a man incurs from a gnat or two is nothing in comparison with the attempt to swallow a camel. It is the most horrible experience you ever had, I dare say. I really think that the Senator does not want to strain at this peanut-oil gnat, while he swallows the olemargarine camel; and then contend at the same time that he is consistent. If he will frankly confess that he is inconsistent, that is a different proposition.

Mr. SHERMAN. Is the Senator through?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not know whether I am or not. I will tell the Senator later. [A pause.] Yes; I believe upon looking further in the books that I am through.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the question of the internal-revenue tax on oleomargarine is a delightful one; it has been discussed in Congress for the last 25 years; but I do not want to delay the bill, so I shall not open up the question of the merits of the oleomargarine tax.

I desire to say, however, that I differ with my friend from Illinois on one point. I do not think the people who eat butterine and oleomargarine are going to pay the tax on peanut oil. I think it has been demonstrated, so far as human evidence can demonstrate it, that there will be no importations of peanut oil. Where the eaters of butterine or oleomargarine will suffer, if it be a suffering, will be that they will have cottonseed oil where they now have peanut oil, and although they may not and very likely will not know the difference, by consuming this additional amount of cottonseed oil they will help promote a very worthy industry.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I desire to conclude. I am very glad to have the Senator from Massachusetts add that statement, because I think, so far as there can be any "milk in the coconut" on an oil question, the Senator has discovered it. When you do not avow that the duty is for protective purposes, but say that it is for revenue purposes, I do not think it is entirely a frank avowal of motives. I rather consider—and I think that is the view of gentlemen who are familiar with commercial operations—that the duty is levied entirely for the reason stated by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The importations under the free peanut-oil clause have been considerable. I can not quote them from memory, although I have looked them over within a comparatively short time; but the importations from Africa of the kind of oil that was the subject of the original discussion here, however far we have wandered away from it, has been considerable in the last two or three years, and especially as it has been developed that it answers the purpose of preparing a palatable and edible article of oleomargarine. That was the original question, and not the question of continuing or repealing the internal-revenue tax. We will treat that question when we get to it.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator is speaking of the importation of peanut oil.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to ask him a question in regard to that. I notice from the data furnished by the committee that in 1910 the importations were something over 3,000,000 gallons, while in 1912 they had fallen off to 878,000 gallons. Can the Senator give us any idea as to why there was such a decrease?

Mr. SHERMAN. That depends largely on two things. One is that this product, if imported in bulk hermetically sealed and stored in a cool, dark place, can be kept indefinitely, and it is likely the importations may have been very large one year when there was a large crop and the prevailing prices low, and stored, and that there was a corresponding falling off in the importation or the demand in the next year.

The kind of oil to which I am particularly referring and which is covered by an amendment which I propose to offer to this bill comes entirely from Senegambia. It is derived from a heavy nut which produces a very large percentage of oil when compressed. It is used entirely for this manufacture. There may be a large quantity of peanut oil used for other purposes and coming under the head of the importations quoted.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. NELSON. I have listened to this discussion with a great deal of interest, and I must say that the tax on peanut oil is one of the bright spots in this tariff bill. Peanut oil, as I gather from the discussion, is something the oleomargarine manufacturer uses to deceive the public into buying oleomargarine for butter. I am very glad to see a provision in this tariff bill that helps to protect the farmers against such a fraud, and I hope that instead of 6 cents the tax will be made twice that.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to say to the Senator from Minnesota that the peanut oil I have mentioned is not used by any oleomargarine manufacturer in this country for the purpose of evading the internal-revenue tax or for deceiving the purchaser and cosumer of the article. It is used for the purpose of filling out in the compounding of oleomargarine the necessary animal or vegetable fats.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. NORRIS. It may result in a repetition; but, in order to make the matter clear, I wish the Senator would tell us whether the imported peanut oil is used in the manufacture of what is known and sold in the market by the ordinary grocer as peanut butter?

Mr. SHERMAN. It might be used in a very slight degree, but I understand that peanut butter is entirely a domestic production.

Mr. NORRIS. Peanut butter is made from the peanuts themselves?

Mr. LODGE. From American peanuts.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; and the peanuts remain in the butter.

I wish to say further to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] that while peanut oil is used in compounding oleomargarine, I do not think in any of the points I have mentioned oleomargarine is put on the market because of having peanut oil in it in such a way as to deceive or defraud any purchaser.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, does not the peanut oil change the color?

Mr. SHERMAN. Very slightly, as I have explained; and I think the Senator heard me make the explanation. It does not change it in any degree to deceive any purchaser of butter.

Mr. NELSON. It changes the color so that the oleomargarine more nearly approximates the color of natural butter, does it not?

Mr. SHERMAN. It does not. I do not myself know what the natural color of butter is.

Mr. NELSON. Well, I am sorry.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am sorry, too, to think the Senator does not appreciate the extent of my ignorance. Let me ask the Senator, as he is informed, what is the color of butter in January?

Mr. NELSON. That depends on whether you have a new milch cow or not. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHERMAN. It depends upon the latitude and the cow's habitat.

Mr. NELSON. It depends upon whether it is a short-horn or some other kind of breed, and whether it is a fresh cow in winter. I am glad I can give the Senator from Illinois, who, I know, lives in the big city of Chicago——

Mr. SHERMAN. I am not from Chicago; I live down among the farmers, just as the Senator does.

Mr. NELSON. I am glad that I can inform the Senator that in winter a fresh cow will make very much the same butter as an old cow will in the summer on grass. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to say to the Senator that I live down among the farmers, as he does, and I know both those who raise beef for the market and those who are engaged in the production of butter or selling the product to the dairy people. They are not opposing present conditions in the manufacture of oleomargarine.

Mr. NELSON. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. NELSON. I have no doubt the Senator in his early days lived among farmers and on the farm, but in later days I fear he has lived too near the shadow of the packers.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not blame the Senator. I have lived at lunch counters for 20 years of my life, and that is one reason why, when butterine is manufactured, I want it as good as it can be made. I said to the Senator that I did not know the natural color of butter. I do not know it unless the latitude, the time of the year, and the habitat of the cow are specified. All of those considerations enter into the color of the product. The suggestion by the Senator that I am under the shadow of the packers is gratuitous and unworthy of his usual sense of fairness. They have had no communication with me, directly or indirectly, on this or any other subject. They are citizens of this country, a part of my constituents, and I am glad of it.

The color you have in your mind, and that we all have, is an ideal color. It is the June shade, made by the cow browsing out in the pasture on Kentucky blue grass, or some place where she has natural food. That kind of butter is the kind we all dream of and hope for. It is the kind we seldom get.

I have had some experience with natural butter that is unsatisfactory, as I have had with other products, because natural butter must be good in order to be palatable. I know that the dairies rework butter. I know that they rewash it and rechurn it with preservatives and then send it out and sell it as reworked butter. They are subject to law, and under the regulations of the pure-food law of the country must brand and sell it as reworked butter; so that the dairyman is subject to the same rules that anybody else is, and properly so.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. NELSON. I think the Senator from Illinois is a little astray in that matter. They make what they call renovated butter. There are factories that buy up homemade butter that is not very good, melt it, and make it over again. That is sold in the market as renovated butter. They have to pay a special tax on it. In so far as I know, nobody is deceived in that respect. It is real butter, only it is worked over again, melted, and cream and fresh milk added to it, so it is greatly improved; but still it is nothing but butter—butter from the cow.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is cow butter; that is true; but it has been reworked—"reworked" and "renovated" are identical—and reworked butter is like somebody else that has been worked. [Laughter.]

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. GRONNA. I have listened to this discussion with a great deal of interest, but I fear the country will get some misinformation unless we go into the matter a little further. If I understood the Senator from Mississippi correctly, he said there is a tax of 10 cents a pound on oleomargarine. That, as I understand, is not a fact if it is not colored.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is so.

Mr. GRONNA. There is no tax on oleomargarine in its natural color. Am I right about that?

Mr. SHERMAN. It is taxed, I think, at one-fourth of a cent a pound.

Mr. GRONNA. If there is a tax, it is only a nominal one?

Mr. SHERMAN. A nominal tax.

Mr. GRONNA. The argument of the Senator from Illinois, of whom I am very fond, as he knows, and who is almost always right, is not satisfactory to me in all respects. I can not understand how the consumer of oleomargarine will be benefited by allowing the use of peanut butter or peanut oil, because if it does not change the color of the oleomargarine I understand it will not be subject to the tax. Am I right in that?

Mr. SHERMAN. The oleomargarine will not be subject to the tax unless the use of the peanut oil has so changed its color that the Internal Revenue Commissioner would hold, under the statute, that it had acquired the similitude of butter.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I think we should make that very plain. The State from which I come is more and more interested every year in dairying. I wish to say to the Senator from Illinois that I believe the manufacture of oleomargarine is what prevents good dairy butter being sold to the laborer in the mine. We have plenty of territory in the United States, if an adequate opportunity is given to those who go into the industry, to enable them to manufacture genuine butter in large enough quantities to make it possible for everybody in this country to eat dairy butter.

I believe the manufacture of these spurious goods is one of the grossest injustices to the dairying industry in this country that has ever been perpetrated. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] would make us believe that the manufactured article of butterine is a more wholesome article than butter. He will not make that argument to one who knows what are the ingredients of butter. He may make it in the Senate of the United States, but I say he will not care to make it to a chemist or one who knows the real value of the two articles of food.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Will the Senator from Illinois allow me to make a statement to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. In the early part of the session we had before our committee an expert from the Agricultural Department, and there came up the question as to this very tax on oleomargarine. A question was put to him which is now incorporated in the hearings before the committee charged with investigating the cost of living. He stated that oleomargarine, when properly colored with the extract of carrots, giving it the yellow butter color, was just as wholesome, just as nutritious, just as palatable, and that as to the content of butter fat it was as rich or richer than genuine butter.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes, Mr. President; but he did not state that it was a more wholesome article than butter.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. He stated that it was just as wholesome.

Mr. GRONNA. At no place in the hearings before the Committee on Agriculture of the House will the Senator from South Carolina find that Dr. Wiley said that oleomargarine was a more wholesome article than butter.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. He did not say it was more wholesome, but he said it was just as wholesome.

Mr. GRONNA. I am simply speaking with reference to the claim made by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] that oleomargarine is a more wholesome article of food. I say that in no argument made by anyone before any Committee on Agriculture will you find the statement made that oleomargarine is a more wholesome article of food than butter. I well know, however, that the people of the South for 25 years or more have tried to invade the dairying industry, and to impose upon it an article that would come in direct competition with it. We who produce butter have no objection to your producing oleomargarine, but we do not want you to say it is butter, because it is not.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois further yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If the Senator will permit me, in reply to that I will say that there are millions of people, not only in the South, but elsewhere, who are entitled to have a substitute which, according to experts, is as wholesome, as palatable, and as nutritious as butter itself.

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator will allow me to reply to that, we have no objection whatever to that, but we say you have no right to call it butter.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Under our pure-food law the contents of it must be known. All persons know the name "oleomargarine." They know practically what it contains and how it serves as a substitute for butter. The argument I should make if I were to address myself to the subject would be that the 10-cent tax is a direct imposition of an internal-revenue tax, not for the purpose of collecting revenue, but for the purpose of protecting an industry which makes an article for which there is a substitute in the by-product of another industry.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois further yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator will permit me, may I ask my friend from South Carolina who is the producer of oleomargarine? Is not the manufacture of oleomargarine controlled by certain large factories?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. In answer to that question, I think the argument of the party to which the Senator belongs has always been that the only hope we have of having things properly adjusted in this country through the operation of protection is by encouraging competition. If the manufacturers of oleomargarine can put on the market a substitute for butter, which in all essentials is as good as butter, why should the people be mulcted in this large sum and denied this food product for the sake of a few men who raise cows?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois further yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do.

Mr. GRONNA. I think the Senator from South Carolina will not say, and I know if he does say it he will regret it when he reads it in the RECORD, that there are only a few men engaged in raising cows in this country. He knows as well as I do that there are some 30,000,000 or 35,000,000 people in this country who are interested in the industry of raising cows.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, if the Senator from Illinois will permit me——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I am not going to discuss how many cows there are in this country, but I am surrounded by a host of witnesses who know that something is wrong with the price of butter. It has risen to a point where it is almost prohibitive to the average man, to the common people.

I want to say to the Senator from North Dakota that we should not have any quarrel about this matter, because I think the chemists are largely right. I can take cottonseed meal and cottonseed hulls and feed them to a cow, and milk her, and then churn the product of cottonseed hulls and cottonseed meal and make butter, but if I can find a process by which I can run the same ingredients through a machine instead of running them through the cow, why should I not be allowed to do it, if I can do it cheaper?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have only a few words more to say, and then I will close, with apologies to the Senator from North Carolina. I did not anticipate that this discussion would take so long. I will then yield for the purpose of promoting the disposition of the bill.

I wish to say to the Senator from North Dakota that he wholly misunderstands the purport of the proposed amendment. It is not an attack on the farmer, on the dairyman, or upon the man who handles the dairy product. But the fact remains, just as the Senator from South Carolina says, that the price of butter has risen until the average wage earner in a city can not buy it. He must either use something as a substitute or do without it.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding, let me quote from the Statistical Abstract for 1912, which is the latest available information on the subject. The total quantity of butter produced in 1911 can only be estimated. In 1910 the total quantity of butter produced in the United States was, in round numbers, 1,619,000,000 pounds. That must feed the whole of our 95,000,000 or 96,000,000 people. The total production of oleomargarine for the same year was 126,000,000 pounds. The 126,000,000 pounds could not depopulate the dairies or the farms of milk-producing cows. One hundred and twenty-six million pounds is the total production of oleomargarine for the year 1912. The figures are available here for that year.

In other words, the total annual butter production of the country amounts to 1,619,000,000 pounds. That is all that is available for what are practically now 100,000,000 people, 16 pounds per head, including men, women, and children, per year.

Hundreds and thousands of my constituents are engaged in the dairy business. I am not talking unadvisedly on this subject. I know their feelings. They feel just as strongly on the subject as the Senator from North Dakota does. But they are now producing, everywhere in the western country, every possible pail of milk and every possible pound of butter. With all that production of 1,619,000,000 pounds the price of genuine butter has steadily risen until with the mine worker, the shopman, the locomotive engineer, and the brakeman, butter is on the prohibited list, because it sells for from 40 to 60 cents a pound in the city where he has his home. With him it is a question of giving this substitute, a part of this 126,000,000 pounds, to his children, or doing without anything.

I now yield the floor to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, we have now been discussing this item about an hour and a half. I move to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] to paragraph 46.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, on that I ask for the yeas and nays. The Senator from Massachusetts is out of the Chamber, and I know he desires a record vote on his motion.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gallinger	Martine, N. J.	Simmons
Bacon	Gore	Norris	Smith, Ga.
Bankhead	Gronna	O'Gorman	Smith, Md.
Borah	Hollis	Oliver	Smith, S. C.
Bradley	Hughes	Overman	Smoot
Brady	James	Owen	Stone
Brandegee	Johnson, Me.	Page	Sutherland
Bristow	Johnston, Ala.	Perkins	Swanson
Bryan	Jones	Pittman	Thomas
Burton	Kenyon	Poindexter	Thompson
Catron	Kern	Pomerene	Tillman
Chamberlain	La Follette	Reed	Townsend
Chilton	Lane	Saulsbury	Vardaman
Clapp	Lea	Shafroth	Walsh
Clark, Wyo.	Lewis	Sheppard	Warren
Clarke, Ark.	Lippitt	Sherman	Weeks
Cummins	Lodge	Shields	Williams
Fletcher	Martin, Va.	Shively	Works

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to state that the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] are unavoidably detained from the Chamber. I shall allow this announcement to stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present.

The question is on the adoption of the motion of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] to lay on the table the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], on which the yeas and nays have been demanded. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when Mr. BURLEIGH's name was called). I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Maine [Mr.

BURLEIGH] is detained by protracted illness and hence is not present. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON], which I transfer to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. In the absence of that Senator I withhold my vote.

Mr. SHEPPARD (when Mr. CULBERSON's name was called). The senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. PAGE (when Mr. DILLINGHAM's name was called). My colleague [Mr. DILLINGHAM] is necessarily absent. He is paired with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH]. I desire this announcement to stand for all votes to-day.

Mr. GRONNA (when Mr. MCCUMBER's name was called). I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. MCCUMBER] was expected to return to the city either to-day or Monday, but due to the fact that his daughter is ill with typhoid fever at Detroit Lake, Minn., where the family is at present, it is not known when he can return. I wish to state that my colleague is paired with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] and vote "yea."

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. SHAFROTH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM]. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "yea." I withhold my vote.

Mr. HUGHES (when the name of Mr. SMITH of Arizona was called). The senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] is necessarily absent from the Chamber on public business. He is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON]. The senior Senator from Arizona requested me to make this announcement.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I wish to transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. BANKHEAD] is paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF]. My colleague is temporarily absent on public business. He would vote "yea" if present.

Mr. BACON (after having voted in the affirmative). I am informed that the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] has not voted, and as I have a general pair with him I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MYERS. Has the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with that Senator. In his absence I will refrain from voting. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 47, nays 22, as follows:

YEAS—47.

Ashurst	Hughes	Overman	Smith, Md.
Borah	James	Owen	Smith, S. C.
Bryan	Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Stone
Chamberlain	Johnston, Ala.	Poindexter	Swanson
Chilton	Jones	Pomerene	Thomas
Clapp	Kenyon	Ransdell	Thompson
Clarke, Ark.	Kern	Reed	Thornton
Cummins	Lane	Sheppard	Tillman
Fletcher	Lea	Shields	Vardaman
Gore	Martin, Va.	Shively	Walsh
Gronna	Martine, N. J.	Simmons	Williams
Hollis	O'Gorman	Smith, Ga.

NAYS—22.

Bradley	Clark, Wyo.	Oliver	Townsend
Brady	Gallinger	Page	Warren
Brandegee	La Follette	Perkins	Weeks
Bristow	Lippitt	Sherman	Works
Burton	Lodge	Smoot
Catron	Norris	Sutherland

NOT VOTING—27.

Bacon	du Pont	McLean	Saulsbury
Bankhead	Fall	Myers	Shafroth
Burleigh	Goff	Nelson	Smith, Ariz.
Colt	Hitchcock	Newlands	Smith, Mich.
Crawford	Jackson	Penrose	Stephenson
Culberson	Lewis	Robinson	Sterling
Dillingham	McCumber	R[illegible]

So Mr. LODGE's amendment was laid on the table.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina made his motion to lay the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts on the table before I had an opportunity to address myself to that particular provision.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will state to the Senator if I had known that, I would not have made the motion.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I thought it must have been an inadvertence.

Mr. SIMMONS. I stated to the Senator from Massachusetts, before I made it, that I thought probably it had had enough discussion, and I did not know of anyone else who probably would want to prolong the discussion. I made the motion to save time.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I understood the Senator to say he wanted to make the motion for the purpose of closing debate.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; not particularly for that purpose. If I had known that any Senator desired to speak, I should not have made the motion.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I am not very familiar with peanut butter. I have learned more about it this afternoon than I ever knew before. But I should like to state now what I have learned from the discussion that has already taken place.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON], who has charge of the schedule, stated that this duty was levied for the purpose of revenue. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] favored the provision because he said practically that it would prevent importation and therefore would be in the interest of the butter makers of the United States. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] has shown quite conclusively to me that if this product is shut out, other substitute products will be used in its place, and no one has attempted to answer that statement.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] has shown from the record presented by the committee that the importations of peanut oil have been reduced from 3,284,000 gallons in 1910 gradually down to 878,000 gallons in 1912, and the estimate of the committee is that there will be imported 600,000 gallons during the next fiscal year.

The statement of the Senator from Massachusetts has been undisputed that, owing to the high price of this oil, practically approximating the value of olive oil, there will be no amount imported next year.

The Senator from Massachusetts has also stated another thing to which no answer has been attempted, namely, that this item is not introduced into the bill for the purpose of producing revenue, but it is introduced for the purpose of protecting a substitute product, namely, cottonseed oil. That argument has not been answered, and I do not believe it is possible to answer it.

So far as I am concerned, if it is necessary to establish a great American industry to impose a duty upon its product, I want to do it directly, but not under the guise of producing revenue do I want to impose a duty for the purpose of protecting a southern product.

So, Mr. President, the sum of the arguments that have been presented thus far have led me to this conclusion, and there has been no attempt to answer the statements which have been made.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I do not know whether anyone has attempted to answer the statement of the Senator from Massachusetts. I do not know that the Senator from Massachusetts made the statement quoted by the Senator from Michigan. If he said that the duty upon peanut oil would force the use of olive oil, then he is making an incorrect statement, because the value of olive oil is nearly double that of peanut oil, and the duty on it is a great deal more than the duty on peanut oil.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, I do not know what statement my colleague [Mr. LODGE] made in that respect, but I have a letter from importers of oil, who are doing business in Boston, which states:

> It is used in woolen and other manufacturing. Proposed rate will more than cover the difference in price and will simply mean that its importation will cease. We import on an average 5,000 barrels a year—

That would be substantially 25 per cent of all that will be imported under the proposed law—

> Under proposed duty we will have to stop its importation. To-day we sell imported olive oil at 81 cents a gallon and imported peanut oil at 79 cents a gallon. A duty of 6 cents will prohibit all importations, will compel those who use this oil in manufacturing to buy olive oil at a higher cost, simply adding to the cost of manufacture.

And in another place the letter says that for use commercially it has been imported in competition with olive oil when the prices of olive oil have been prohibitive. That would seem to indicate that olive oil was not selling at twice the price of peanut oil, but that they were selling at substantially the same price.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator can get the Treasury figures for himself. The Treasury figures show the average import value of peanut oil and olive oil, and that olive oil is nearly twice the price of peanut oil.

Mr. WEEKS. The letter is written by people of the highest standing, and I have no reason to doubt the statement which I have read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will continue the reading.

The Secretary continued the reading, on page 11, line 15, as follows:

Hempseed oil, 3 cents per gallon; almond oil, sweet, 5 cents per pound; sesame or sesamum seed or bean oil, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. BURTON. I move to strike out from lines 16 and 17, beginning with the word "almond" and ending with the word "pounds," the words "almond oil, sweet, 5 cents per pound; sesame or sesamum seed or bean oil, 1 cent per pound."

Both of these are now on the free list. The almond oil has been produced in a very limited quantity in this country, but the industry has not developed. There has been some promise of domestic production of sesame oil, but it has not been encouraged. Both these articles are used in medicinal compounds. Sesame oil is used in the making of soap also. I submit that these are utterly injudicious duties.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio to strike out, on page 11, after the word "gallon," in line 16, down to and including the word "pound" in line 17.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] and vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). Making the identical announcement that I made upon the last roll call, I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEA (after having voted in the negative). Has the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. LEA. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island, and I withdraw my vote. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay."

Mr. CHILTON. I transfer my general pair to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH], who is necessarily detained from the Senate on business of the Senate, and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I wish to state that my colleague [Mr. BANKHEAD] is absent on public business, and is paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF]. If my colleague were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. SAULSBURY. I have a pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. ASHURST. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. SMITH] is absent from the Chamber this afternoon on important business.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 42, as follows:

YEAS—29.

Bradley	Crawford	Nelson	Sutherland
Brady	Cummins	Norris	Townsend
Brandegee	Gallinger	Oliver	Warren
Bristow	Gronna	Page	Weeks
Burton	Jones	Perkins	Works
Catron	Kenyon	Sherman
Clapp	La Follette	Smoot
Clark, Wyo.	Lodge	Sterling

NAYS—42.

Ashurst	Johnson, Me.	Pomerene	Stone
Bacon	Johnston, Ala.	Ransdell	Swanson
Borah	Kern	Reed	Thomas
Bryan	Lane	Saulsbury	Thompson
Chamberlain	Martin, Va.	Sheppard	Thornton
Chilton	Martine, N. J.	Shields	Tillman
Clarke, Ark.	O'Gorman	Shively	Vardaman
Fletcher	Overman	Simmons	Walsh
Hollis	Owen	Smith, Ga.	Williams
Hughes	Pittman	Smith, Md.
James	Poindexter	Smith, S. C.

NOT VOTING—25.

Bankhead	Goff	McCumber	Shafroth
Burleigh	Gore	McLean	Smith, Ariz.
Colt	Hitchcock	Myers	Smith, Mich.
Culberson	Jackson	Newlands	Stephenson
Dillingham	Lea	Penrose
du Pont	Lewis	Robinson
Fall	Lippitt	Root

So Mr. BURTON's amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 11, line 18, after the numerals "20," to strike out "per centum ad valorem" and insert "cents per gallon," so as to read:

Olive oil, not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per gallon.

The amendment was agreed to.

The remainder of paragraph 46 was read, as follows:

Olive oil, in bottles, jars, kegs, tins, or other packages having a capacity of less than 5 standard gallons each, 30 cents per gallon; all other expressed oils and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I desire to offer two amendments to this clause in the paragraph, and in order to save time, which seems to be highly valued in this body, if there is no objection, I will incorporate them in one so as to take but one vote upon them.

I move to strike out "20" in line 18 and to insert in lieu thereof "40," and in line 21 I move to strike out "30" and to insert "50."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from California will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 11, line 18, paragraph 46, after the word "section," it is proposed to strike out "20" and to insert "40," and in line 21, before the word "cents," it is proposed to strike out "30" and to insert "50."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from California will be submitted as a single proposition. The Chair hears none. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from California.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, the effect of this paragraph of the bill as it relates to olive oil will be to reduce the duty on olive oil in packages of 5 gallons and over from 40 cents per gallon to 20 cents, and to reduce the duty on olive oil in packages of less than 5 gallons from 50 cents to 30 cents per gallon.

I endeavored to show in some remarks that I had the honor to submit to the Senate yesterday that this reduced tariff would afford no protection to the olive-oil manufacturers in my State. If the reduction is placed upon other grounds, and this duty is not intended to protect the industry, it is idle for me to take up the time of the Senate in discussing the question. I therefore ask the Senator in charge of this schedule of the bill whether it was understood by the committee that this reduced duty of 20 cents per gallon would adequately protect the industry in my State, or elsewhere in this country, or whether the question of revenue was considered and taken into account by the committee or by the Democratic caucus.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The information before the committee, Mr. President, was that the consumption in this country is about 10,000,000 gallons yearly, and that the greater part of it is imported. I think the testimony was that somewhere about 800,000 gallons was produced in the State of California, a very small part of the consumption in this country. In keeping with the other reductions in the bill the committee has reduced the duty upon olive oil as here recommended.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I submit that the Senator from Maine has not answered my question as to whether it was intended or expected that this reduced duty would protect the industry in my State, or whether the duty was reduced upon other grounds and for other reasons.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have already stated to the Senator that the production in this country seemed to be a small amount as compared with the consumption in the country, and that the duty fixed here is about the average in this schedule. The average in the whole schedule is not 20 per cent; and it seemed to the committee that the duty was sufficient.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator again state the maximum consumption?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is about 10,000,000 gallons yearly.

Mr. WORKS. Then, I take it, Mr. President, although I have not yet received a direct answer to my question, that the question of protection was not taken into account at all. I think I have shown quite conclusively by what I have already stated upon the subject and the data that I have furnished that it would not protect the industry in my State. If this tariff is to be reduced as here proposed, I certainly want the people of California to know why.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from California permit me just a word?

Mr. WORKS. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON], as I understood him, said that the annual consumption of this article is 10,000,000 gallons, and yet there seems to have been only 3,600,000 gallons imported last year. That would seem to indicate that there is a very large production in this country now, unless I read the figures incorrectly; and that is the way it is stated in the Tariff Handbook.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is something more than that. Of both kinds of oil the consumption is about 5,000,000 gallons, as given in the handbook; but I stated that the evidence before the committee was that the consumption was about 10,000,000 gallons. In the handbook the importation of both kinds is stated as having been 5,000,000 gallons in 1912—about 3,000,000 gallons of one kind and 1,700,000 gallons of the other.

Mr. WORKS. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine whether it is understood by him and his committee that this reduction would increase the revenue to the Government?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. As I have already stated, the large consumption of the article in the Eastern States, where it is particularly largely used by the poorer people—the laboring people—led the committee to recommend this reduction. A duty of 20 per cent on the article seemed to the committee to be a duty which ought sufficiently to protect a domestic industry and at the same time not impose any unnecessary tax upon an article of food used, as is this, by the laboring people.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, the Senator has not yet answered my question. I assume that he does not desire to avoid an answer. My question was a very simple one, as to whether he understood this duty would increase the revenue to the Government.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is estimated that by the reduction the revenue will be increased, I think.

Mr. WORKS. I think the Senator will find by the estimates to the contrary. The estimates show that it will result in a loss of revenue to the Government.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I find that though the importations might be increased the Senator is correct that the duties collected would be somewhat less.

Mr. WORKS. Now, Mr. President, in view of what has been said by the Senator from Maine as to conditions, I have extracted from a more detailed account of conditions the figures relating to that subject, which I should like read by the Secretary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

OLIVE OIL.

Present tariff: Packages containing less than 5 gallons, 50 cents; 5 gallons and over, 40 cents per gallon.

Reduction proposed: 20 cents per gallon.

Ninety per cent oil sold to consumer in United States is in small cans or bottles, six to a gallon, 20 ounces each.

Average selling price per bottle or can, 80 cents.

Reduction of 20 cents per gallon would be 3⅓ cents per bottle.

Imported in United States during year ending June 30, 1912, 3,050,322.96 gallons, valued at $4,335,294.25; duty paid on it, $1,525,161.58, a value of $1.42 per gallon. This was in packages containing less than 5 gallons.

Also imported 1,709,923.67 gallons, valued at $1,729,491; duty paid, $683,969.44, a value of $1.01 per gallon. This was in packages larger than 5 gallons.

Also imported 702,565 gallons denatured oil; no duty.

Under tariff protection of 1908, 6,000 acres planted to olives, making total acreage of State 18,000 acres, from which is secured at present 8,000 tons for oil and 4,000 tons for pickles, a total of 12,000 tons.

Four years ago average net income was $17; this year average net income is $36.88 an acre.

In 1908 olive industry of California represented $4,500,000; to-day it represents over $7,500,000.

There is in California to-day available for olive trees 375,000 acres.

Total cost harvesting and delivering olives in Europe to the factories rarely exceeds $7 per ton, while cost in United States is seldom under $20 per ton.

Labor in Europe, including field, manufacturing, office, is $1.04 per day.

In California, including some help as mentioned above, it is $2.47 per day.

Average cost California oil in tanks is $1.85 per gallon.

Average selling price, $2.

Manufacturer's profit, 15 cents a gallon.

FREIGHT.

Foreign oil laid down in New York or Chicago, 7½ cents a gallon. California rate delivered any point from Denver east, 15 cents, and to what is known as the Northwest, through Montana and Idaho, from 18 to 20 cents a gallon.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, in that connection I also desire to read a short extract from a showing that was made before the committee having the bill in charge, which is as follows:

The proposed reduction of 20 cents a gallon, as far as we can see, will in no way reduce the cost of olive oil to the consumer, for this reason: Ninety per cent of the olive oil sold to the consumer in the United States is sold in bottles and small cans called sixes (6 to the gallon), and contain 20 ounces of oil each. The average selling price in the United States is 80 cents per can or bottle. A reduction of 20 cents per gallon would be 3⅓ cents per bottle. It is very obvious that the retailer would not sell at 75 cents and lose 1⅓ cents per bottle of his profit, which profit is small enough at the present time. Neither would he make a 76⅔-cent price.

We claim that the proposed reduction on an average annual import of 4,000,000 gallons, or $800,000, would go to the importer alone, and the Government would lose this revenue and not help the consumer and work a very serious hardship on the olive-oil industry of California. A 20 cents per gallon reduction on 4,000,000 gallons would be a fine plum for the importer and absolutely of no benefit to the consumer. The importers' argument has been that a 20-cent reduction would increase the sale and thereby increase the revenue. If you will follow the European markets you will find that all of the olive oil being manufactured is readily sold and that each year the supply is far below the demand, and especially so on the better grades of oil which come in competition with the California products.

In addition to that, Mr. President, without taking up the time of the Senate by their reading, I desire to submit a couple more letters bearing upon this question, in order to make my case on the record, and have them printed as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, such will be the order. The Chair hears none.

The letters referred to are as follows:

LOS ANGELES, February 15, 1912.

Senator JOHN D. WORKS,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We sent you last night a night letter regarding the proposed attack on the olive industry of this State.

Three or four years ago this same question came up regarding the tariff on oil and olives, and at that time strong efforts were made by eastern representatives and importers of foreign olives and olive oil to throttle this industry. While slight changes were made, no material chance was given the industry at that time. It remained practically as it was, with the exception that all mechanical oil that was coming into this country was ordered denaturized and the word "green" was left from the tariff so that it read "olives," which thereby forced the duty on both green and ripe olives. Heretofore ripe or black olives, or what was termed "Greek olives," were coming in free of duty.

Under these conditions, not of the very best to the olive industry, the past three years have seen a wonderful stride for the better in the advancement of California olive oil and olives. It is safe to say that the business has increased over one-third in the past three years and at the present time is still increasing, and there are possibly 2,500 acres of young olive orchards being set out at the present time. From an acreage of about 8,000 bearing trees four years ago there has been an increase to 13,000 to 14,000 acres in old and young orchards combined. If the olive industry is let alone under the present tariff, you will see an increase larger than at any previous year. Under conditions as they now are the olive industry is in a fair way to rival either that of the orange or lemon industry in California.

The reduction as proposed by the Ways and Means Committee would mean in dollars and cents about 20 cents a gallon. The average yield of oil from a ton of olives throughout the State of California in the past four years has been close to 40 gallons. This reduction would mean 20 cents a gallon, or $8 a ton. This $8 can not come out of the manufacturer, because he has not been making 20 cents a gallon profit. The strong European competition has forced him to sell his olive oil on a very close margin and make his profits, if there are any, out of the ripe olives. In consequence of this the reduction must fall on the grower.

The average price paid to the grower during the past five years for what are termed "oil olives" has been $20 per ton on the trees. This year a little more has been paid, possibly $25, but it is safe to figure $20 as the average price for oil olives on the trees. It costs the manufacturer from $18 to $25 to pick these olives. At $20 on the trees for the grower means that the $8 reduction per ton in the tariff taken from the $20 leaves him $12. The average yield of oil olives is 1 ton to the acre, and they have not yielded more up to the present time; that is, taking the total acreage in the State. In some instances there have been taken from 1 acre 2 tons of oil fruit, so that taking the outside limit, 2 tons, $40 on the trees, out of which must come $8 per ton, or $16, the proposed reduction of the tariff would leave him $24 per acre, out of which must come cultivating, irrigating, fertilizing, pruning, and taxes, which at the present time is approximately $9 per acre, which leaves the grower $15 per acre net. This is providing he gets 2 tons to the acre; but as the average yield up to the present time has been only 1 ton, it would only net him $7.50 per acre, so that it is safe to say that the actual earnings, providing this tariff went into effect, on an acre of olive ground would be $7.50 to $15, according to the yield of oil fruit. This reduction which they contemplate making virtually means the annihilation of the olive industry, both oil and pickles, as they will not and can not produce olives at any such prices.

From the manufacturers' standpoint: Imported olive oil, as you know, can be bought at $1.65 per gallon, a fine grade; in fact, an A 1 grade. If we pay the growers $25 a ton on the trees, it costs $20 to pick it and $5 freight, which makes $50. It costs $10 a ton to handle it in the house, making a total of $60. If we get 40 gallons to the ton, this would mean $1.50 for the oil (raw). This oil has to be carried one year at 6 per cent, which is 9 cents a gallon; insurance, taxes, etc., 5 cents a gallon, plus selling cost, 10 per cent, gives you the approximate cost of California olive oil to the manufacturer $1.80 per gallon. This cost is figured extremely low, and I believe that 85 per cent of the oil in the State of California is not manufactured for less than $1.90 a gallon under present conditions. You see that the reduction of 20 cents a gallon would practically cut the manufacturer out entirely.

The retailer says he pays $2.50 or $3 a gallon for oil. This is very true; he does; but on top of our cost must be figured the package, jobbers' profit, and retailers' profit. The jobbers' profit is generally 15 per cent, and the retailers' profit is 25 per cent, or perhaps 30 per cent; so that even with the duty on oil at the present time it is inadequate to increase the olive industry very rapidly.

We have been able under the present protection to figure our cost and made a small profit and increased the interest and acreage in the olive industry, but under this contemplated reduction I don't think that a manufacturer in the State would attempt to press olives into oil unless this tariff reduction fell entirely on the grower, which he can not under any consideration stand.

Yours, very truly,

AMERICAN OLIVE CO.,
W. O. JOHNSON, Manager.

LOS ANGELES, March 13, 1912.

Senator JOHN D. WORKS, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The consensus of opinion of the growers, as well as the manufacturers, is that the chemical bill, which includes olive oil, will not pass the Senate and that they are as ably represented there by our Senators from California, with all the knowledge that they have at hand, without a needless expense of a representative going to Washington.

Of course, you thoroughly understand that while the writer has taken a great deal of interest in this as a manufacturer, the grower is the one most vitally interested and the one upon whom all the hardships will fall. The packer or manufacturer, as you know, will always protect himself, as he will not purchase the fruit unless it can be purchased at a price upon which he can make a profit.

No doubt the various interests here have written you fully regarding the serious condition that this reduction in tariff will put the olive industry of this State in. They might just as well take the entire duty off of olive oil as to take off approximately 20 cents a gallon. A total reduction is the only way that any cheaper price would get to the consumer, for 20 cents a gallon will not in any way affect the price to the consumer. Ninety per cent of the olive oil sold in the United States is sold in small packages, the base of which is sixes—meaning six bottles to the gallon. The average price to the consumer is 90 cents to $1 per bottle. The reduction in tariff, therefore, means a cut of 3½ cents on each bottle of oil. On the face of it it is plain to be seen who wants the profits. It is the importers and brokers. You know and I know that olive oil would not be sold at 85 cents a bottle because the duty was reduced 3½ cents a bottle, as the importer or jobber is not going to lose 1⅝ cents a bottle. You also know that they would not make a retail price of 86⅜ cents a bottle. This whole matter of tariff on olive oil is not a reduction to reduce the cost of living, neither, as some of our Congressmen stated, is olive oil a poor man's food. The whole proposition is to put more money into the pockets of the importers and brokers of olive oil in Chicago, San Francisco, and New York; and the putting of this 20 cents a gallon into the pockets of the above-named gentlemen takes away from the grower $8 a ton, or, in other words, will virtually annihilate the olive industry of this State, which is what our importers are after.

Ten years ago less than 100,000 gallons of olive oil were manufactured in this State. In 1912 there will be over 500,000 gallons of oil manufactured in this State. Five hundred thousand gallons of oil means approximately 15,000 tons of fruit, or a clean, clear case of $120,000, at $8 a ton, out of the pockets of the growers to give to the importers and brokers of olive oil, a profit of virtually 20 cents a gallon on 6,000,000 gallons of oil imported each year into the United States. This in a very few words is absolutely what the reduction in tariff on olive oil means in California, and if you will investigate the facts and figures you will find that these statements are pretty nearly correct.

Trusting that your interests are our interests in this matter, we beg to remain,

Yours, very truly,

AMERICAN OLIVE CO.
W. O. JOHNSON.

—

LOS ANGELES, CAL., February 19, 1912.

Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We have noticed, with regret, from the Associated Press dispatches that the Finance Committee have proposed a reduction of duty upon olive oil of about 20 cents per gallon, and in this regard we wish to impress upon you the unreasonableness of this contemplated action. Up until a few years ago there was no increase in olive acreage on account of the fact that it was not profitable to the growers, but on the other hand a great many acres of olives that had been previously planted were grubbed out so that the land might be available for other products that would give them a living.

During the last three or four years the conditions have been somewhat improved, and in view of this encouragement there are, at the present time, preparations being made for planting out an additional acreage, but if this contemplated reduction in the duty should be passed and become a law, it will, no doubt, give the industry another setback, from which it will take a long time to recover. The present duty upon olive oil really is not sufficient to cover the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. We simply make this statement because it is a fact, although we are not asking for an increase in the duty, and, in order to demonstrate to you with some actual figures the difference in cost, we want to quote from a report which we received from the consul general at Constantinople, Mr. Edward H. Ozmun, dated in 1908, in which he says:

"The cost of wages for adults range from 24 cents to 28 cents per diem, and each person can gather about 60 okes of olives a day. The hire of a horse or mule per day costs 40 cents, and each animal will, or rather ought, to carry about 600 okes of fruit per diem. This, together with the price paid for gathering the olives, and other sundry expenses, such as mending baskets, etc., brings the total cost of harvesting to about 7 paras the oke, or $5.55 per ton."

You will see that Mr. Ozmun has gone into detail in figuring this cost, and we have no doubt but what he is practically correct. In his consular district there are 6,000,000 trees, which means a vast amount of olive oil. In making a comparison of cost we can not do the work for which they pay $5.55 per ton in this country for less than $22 to $25 per ton. It is reasonable to presume that the same difference in cost that prevails in the gathering of the fruit would exist in the taking care of the trees and manufacturing the oil, and such being the case you can readily see that the present duty is not sufficient to cover the difference in cost of production.

We have in California and Arizona a vast area of acreage that is suitable for the growing of olives, and we can not understand why it is not fair to allow us the privilege of building up this infant industry to the extent of the available resources in acreage, instead of reducing the duty and allowing the industry to be squelched with the foreign products produced by a cheap labor.

No doubt you fully realize the importance of retaining the tariff upon the olive oil as it exists at present, and would like to have you call upon us for any information that we may be able to give you relative to the industry for your use in opposing the reduction, and we will gladly use our utmost efforts in a conscientious manner to secure for you any data available. We believe that if a majority of the Senators are made fully acquainted with the actual conditions they will readily see the necessity of protecting this infant agricultural industry, at least, until such time as the available acreage has been planted out and reached the age of production.

Believing you will defend our industry to the fullest extent of your ability, we beg to remain,

Yours, respectfully,

LOS ANGELES OLIVE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.
FRANK SIMONDS, Secretary.

Mr. WORKS. Now, Mr. President, we in California pride ourselves on the fact that we produce the finest and purest olive oil produced anywhere in the world. The olive oil that is produced there is noted for its purity and high quality. It seems to me to be a great misfortune that an enterprise of that kind which has been built up in my State should be destroyed by the reduction of the tariff, as is here proposed.

This bill, however, does not stop at the reduction of the tariff upon olive oil, but further along proposes to reduce the tariff on the olives themselves, striking not only the manufacturer of olive oil, but the grower of the olives. The result of it, in my judgment, will be that the industry will be crippled, at least, for years to come; its advancement will be retarded, and the probability is, as the figures show, that it will result in its absolute destruction.

Mr. President, I ask for a yea-and-nay vote upon the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS], on which the yeas and nays are demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I desire to ask a further question of the Senator from Maine. I understood the Senator to say that there were 9,000,000 gallons of olive oil consumed in this country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That was the testimony given before the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. According to the Tariff Handbook, furnished by the majority, there were imported in 1912 3,050,323 gallons of olive oil in bottles, and of all other olive oil not specially provided for, 1,709,924 gallons, making a total of 4,760,247 gallons. That seems to show that we are producing in this country 4,239,753 gallons, which is the difference between 4,760,247 gallons and 9,000,000 gallons.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do not think those figures can be correct, because I think it is not claimed that the production in California is more than a million gallons, and I understand there is no other production of olive oil in this country.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then, the figures as given in the handbook are manifestly wrong.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. GALLINGER. I do.

Mr. HUGHES. I think perhaps the discrepancy in the figures may be explained by the practice of selling other oils as olive oil. Admixtures of various oils are sold as olive oil. I think, perhaps, that will explain the discrepancy in the figures.

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, my attention was attracted to this apparently very large production in this country, which did not seem to correspond with the amount given by the Senator from Maine; but I assume that there must be a mistake.

I will ask the Senator from California now if there is anything in a suggestion which has been made to me more than once, that cottonseed oil is being exported from this country to European countries, where foreign labels are placed upon it and it is then sent back here as olive oil, just as California wine has to some extent been exported to France and has come back here with French labels?

Mr. WORKS. No; if there is anything of that kind done I have no knowledge of it whatever. As I said a while ago, we in California pride ourselves on the fact that we make a pure olive oil; and I am quite certain that there is no truth in that assertion.

Mr. GALLINGER. I did not impute anything to California; but it has been stated to me that certain enterprising men have engaged in that business. I know nothing about it myself.

Mr. WORKS. If that be true, I will say to the Senator that I have no knowledge of it and never before heard of it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. In connection with the question just asked, a moment ago some Senator said that we had put a tax on peanut oil with the idea of protecting cottonseed oil.

Mr. WORKS. I am not able to hear what the Senator from Mississippi is saying.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I said that a moment ago some Senator charged or insinuated that there had been a tax put upon peanut oil with a view of protecting cottonseed oil. I want to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that we have reduced the duty on olive oil, which really does come in competition with cottonseed oil.

In connection with the question which the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] has asked, it is true that a good deal of cottonseed oil, mixed with enough olive oil to give it a flavor, is sold as olive oil. There is no doubt about that; and the discrepancy in these figures, I imagine, is explainable because of that fact.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator——

Mr. WILLIAMS. By the way, before the Senator proceeds, I want to say that the best quality of cottonseed oil, called "butter oil" in the trade, is as pure, as wholesome, and as good as any olive oil that ever came from any olive orchard in the world. Of course, I do not stand to defend any sort of fraud upon the consumer in selling one thing as being another thing, but, so far as the healthfulness of the product is concerned, it is less apt to have germs in it, does not get rancid so quickly, and is a purer vegetable oil than the olive oil itself. There is no doubt about the fact, however, that a great deal of fraud is perpetrated on the consumer by putting just enough olive oil in the best quality of cottonseed oil—which is "butter oil" and very rich, very nutritious, and very healthful—to give it the flavor of olive oil.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. GALLINGER. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. WORKS. I want to say that this sort of deception may be practiced in Mississippi, but it certainly is not practiced in California.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have made no charge that it was practiced in California, and I wonder how the Senator from California could have arrived at the conclusion that I had made such a charge, when he must have known that I knew that there was not a gallon of cottonseed oil produced in the State of California. I merely said that a lot of cottonseed oil is mixed with enough olive oil to give the flavor and is labeled olive oil. I did that merely because I thought it was honest politics to make that confession, since the Senator from New Hampshire had asked the question. How the Senator from California could possibly have arrived at the conclusion that there was any thrust at him or at California in connection with a product of which California does not produce one gallon I can not imagine.

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from California, as I have always been much interested in the advancement of that great State, and especially in the direction of fruit raising, what the possibilities of California are in this direction? I have seen the olive groves of California to some extent, and I will ask if the possibilities are such that, if properly protected, the domestic production can be greatly increased?

Mr. WORKS. Yes, Mr. President, it may be greatly increased; it has been increasing very rapidly, and in the last three or four years has increased more than at any other time in its history. Some people in my State go to the extent of saying that if the industry is properly protected it will exceed that of the citrus industry. As has been stated, it has become a very important industry in my State, and is one that may grow almost without limit.

Mr. GALLINGER. It strikes me, Mr. President, that the Senator from California, in the most interesting speech he made yesterday and in his observations to-day, has pretty clearly shown that the duty now proposed will work not only to the detriment but to the possible extinction of that great industry in California; and I do hope that our Democratic friends, relaxing their determination to carry this bill through as it is, will see the justice of the proposal which the Senator from California has made, and permit the change in the bill to be accomplished.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I understand—and if I am not correct I shall be glad to be set right—that the present duty is 30 cents a gallon.

Mr. WORKS. It is 40 and 50 cents per gallon, depending upon whether the olive oil is in large or small packages.

Mr. BRISTOW. And the proposed duty in the bill is 30 cents?

Mr. WORKS. And 20 cents.

Mr. BRISTOW. Thirty and 20 cents. The Senator's proposition is to increase the 30-cent duty to 40 cents?

Mr. WORKS. The amendment is to increase "20" to "40" and "30" to "50."

Mr. BRISTOW. To the rates of the present law?

Mr. WORKS. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, in reference to the statement which I made a few moments ago, I will say that I had reference to the testimony given before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives as to the consumption of this product. On reference to that testimony, which I have before me, I find the statement has been made that the consumption of olive oil in the United States is about 10,000,000 gallons a year, of which four and a half million gallons come from Italy, France, and to some extent from Greece. California produces about 800,000 gallons. The remainder, less than 5,000,000 gallons, sold in this country is a compound oil made up of olive oil compounded with cottonseed oil and peanut oil. I was before misled, as I did not read the entire paragraph.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Yes.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine whether or not the investigation which the committee made upon the subject convinced the Senator from Maine that the olive industry in California would not be injured by this reduction?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator from Utah that it seemed to the committee and it seemed to me that a duty as high as this, being about 20 per cent ad valorem, should be sufficient for the industry in California.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Then does the Senator answer my question by saying that he thinks the industry in California would not be injured by this reduction?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do not think it will.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator think that, notwithstanding the reduction, the industry will continue to grow in the future as it has in the past?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator from Utah that I am not sufficiently informed in regard to all the conditions, nor can I look into the future, to say that.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator from Maine think it of any consequence that the industry in California should grow in the future as it has in the past?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do think that it is of importance if it is a business that ought to be legitimately encouraged in this country, but it should not become a burden upon all the people of the country for the benefit of a very few.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator think, then, that the duty ought not to be sufficient to encourage the growth of the industry in California?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Not if it has to be an excessive duty, which I think the present duty is.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Then, if I understand the Senator, he thinks the present duty is excessive, and he is in favor of reducing it to the rate proposed in this bill, irrespective of what happens to the industry in California?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I can not tell, of course, what may happen to the industry in California. I will only say that, in my opinion, any industry of this kind where, as is the case of those interested in the production of olive oil in California, a very few people only are directly benefited by the duty. An industry which can not exist in this country without a high rate of duty and can not exist upon a rate of duty as high as 20 per cent is not one which I believe the Congress of the United States or the people of the United States are interested in encouraging here.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator, then, if I understand him, is in favor of reducing this duty, no matter what may happen to the industry in California?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should be very sorry if anything should happen to the industry in California.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I know the Senator would be sorry; but would the Senator still be in favor of reducing the duty, notwithstanding his sorrow upon the subject?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. If it were a burden upon all the people of this country, as it is, and added to the cost of an article of necessity, as olive oil is to many of our people, I do not believe they should all be taxed for the benefit of a few people in California. I would be willing to give them a reasonable protection, but not to the extent of the present law.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. BRISTOW. Let me inquire of the Senator if he thinks that 35 per cent ad valorem on olive oil is an excessive and unwarranted duty, which is not justified, while a 42 per cent duty on dextrine is a just and proper per cent on that product, for which all the people have to pay?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The condition with reference to dextrine is entirely different, as was pointed out when we went through that matter on yesterday, because the raw material used in the manufacture of dextrine bears a tax. That is not true in the case of olive oil, the raw material of which is not taxed.

Mr. BRISTOW. The raw material, being potatoes, is placed on the free list, but the duty on dextrine is maintained at 42 per cent, and insisted upon by the Senator from Maine, while now he says that a duty of 35 per cent on olive oil is an extravagant and unwarranted duty.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. But there is nothing entering into the production of olive oil which bears a rate of duty, as is the case in the manufacture of dextrine. Dextrine is made from a raw material which bears a duty of 1 cent a pound, as the Senator knows, while olive oil is not made from any raw material which is taxed.

Mr. BRISTOW. The dextrine that we are discussing is made from potatoes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, not at all.

Mr. BRISTOW. The first process would get starch and the second process would get dextrine.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Not at all. It is not made in the same factory at all with potato starch, or by the same concerns. Potato starch is made in one factory and shipped to another as a finished product, and becomes the raw material of the dextrine factory.

Mr. BRISTOW. Then I will ask the Senator another question. In this bill, which he is so ably defending, he places a duty of 1 cent a pound on potato starch, which is at the rate of 57 per cent ad valorem, while now he is complaining bitterly of a duty of 35 per cent on olive oil.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That was a reduction of 50 per cent from the present law upon potato starch, as large a reduction as we have made in the case of olive oil. The duty was a cent and a half a pound upon the potato starch and we reduced it to a cent a pound.

Mr. BRISTOW. It is the same duty, however. That is, the duty on starch is 35 per cent, as fixed by the Senate committee.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. That is a reduction from a cent and a half a pound in the present bill.

Mr. BRISTOW. That is entirely justified on the potato starch made from potatoes grown in Maine; but 35 per cent on olive oil made from a product of California is an enormous duty, if it is imposed, and should be taken off.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It makes but little difference where the potatoes were grown. As I said to the Senator yesterday, they were the culled potatoes. The farmers of Maine would treat with a good deal of humor what the Senator is saying about the price of their potatoes, and about their being protected, because the little potatoes, the refuse potatoes, find a market at the starch factories.

In that connection let me call the attention of the Senator to the fact that we took the tariff bill and found certain rates in it. If we had commenced to make a new bill, and could have started afresh, we would have been in a different position. But we took the duty as we found it, a cent and a half a pound upon potato starch, and made a reduction to a cent a pound. We found the duty upon olive oil, and we made a reduction there. We made as great a reduction in one case as in the other.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I simply wanted to ask the Senator, then, if it is true that this bill is founded upon the bill of 1909, or is it founded upon the business necessities of the country?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In my opinion, it is founded a good deal upon conditions as we found them and existing duties under which business had been built up, which had to be taken into consideration and were taken into consideration, and it seems to me wisely so. We were not constructing a bill from the ground up.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Does the Senator believe it is well to justify a wrong rate in this bill because of a wrong rate in a former bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do not make that argument; but I say we found existing conditions depending upon legislation and upon a tariff bill. Those conditions had to be taken into consideration, and wisely so, in attempting to frame a new bill and making modifications of it.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Did the Senator's committee carefully investigate the conditions relating to the olive-oil industry in California?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We investigated them as carefully as we had time to investigate them. I presume no committee could make the careful investigation which the Senator, perhaps, has in mind. So far as I am concerned, I do not claim that we were able to do so. There were some letters and briefs furnished us, and we gave such consideration as we could to the matter.

I think I should be the last Senator to stand here in this presence and claim that I had special, intimate knowledge, from careful, thorough study, of all the questions presented in this most complex schedule. I should not claim, and I do not think it will be understood, that any member of the committee could do that.

We called to our assistance such help as we could. I want to say upon that point, while I am on my feet, because reference has been made to it, that we had with us as conscientious an expert, as careful and as well-informed an expert, as any committee of the Senate of the United States or any other body has had in framing any schedule. He is entitled to the confidence not only of the committee but of the Senate. He not only recommended himself to the committee, but because of his research, because of his knowledge, he had recommended himself to the Tariff Board when it made its investigations and prepared a glossary.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should like to complete this statement before I yield.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator declines to yield for the present.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. When the President of the United States had under consideration a chemical bill which had been sent to him for signature he called upon this same expert for advice in regard to a veto message which he prepared upon the chemical bill. The Ways and Means Committee of the House had with them this same expert and the Finance Committee of the Senate called to their assistance the same gentleman.

I want to say that he came to us with no bias and with no prejudice. I do not know to what political party he belongs. I am very sure he does not belong to mine. We depended very largely upon him, because he had given very thorough study to this schedule in connection with the Tariff Board and in connection with the Ways and Means Committee. Before that he had been a chemist in the Agricultural Department of the United States; and we necessarily looked to him for a great deal of information. Of course, it is idle for me or for any other member of the committee to come here pretending that by thorough, careful investigation, as the Senator suggests, we have informed ourselves as to every item in this bill. We have of necessity depended upon information furnished us by others.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine further yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I want to suggest to the Senator, then, in the absence of the carefully compiled information that might have been furnished and of course would have been readily received had it been at hand at the time, if it would not be well now to receive as the final word on this subject the information which the Senator from California has furnished upon this important industry?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We had the letters and the briefs from which the Senator has read.

Mr. WORKS. Not all of them, Mr. President.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We had one brief, I know.

Mr. WORKS. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine whether the expert to whom he refers was directed to ascertain what would be a duty sufficient to protect adequately the olive industry in California?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I know he was consulted in regard to that.

Mr. WORKS. Will the Senator kindly answer my question?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I thought I had done so. I know he was consulted in regard to it, but I am not prepared to say whether he was directed specially to ascertain that fact in regard to this one item. I do not think he was.

Mr. WORKS. I will ask the Senator, further, whether in fact the expert did report to the committee what would be the duty necessary to protect the industry?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We consulted him in regard to it, and got his opinion in regard to it.

Mr. WORKS. Now, will the Senator be kind enough to answer my question?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think I have answered it as fully as I can. I have said that we consulted with him and got his views in regard to it. I do not know how I can be more specific than that.

Mr. WORKS. Does the Senator mean to say that the committee got the expert's views in respect to what would be a protective duty?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In regard to what would be a fair duty, under all the circumstances, and in line with the policy of the committee in framing the bill.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. JONES. I will ask whether the committee endeavored to ascertain the difference in the cost of production of olives in this country and abroad?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think we spent very little time upon that subject, because it seemed to me it would have as little weight as finding the difference in the cost of producing corn in this country and somewhere else.

Mr. JONES. So that there is no part of the duty levied by the committee that was intended to cover any possible difference in the cost of production here and abroad? Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The question before us was one of raising revenue and still providing what seemed to be a reasonable, fair duty and making a reduction from an excessive duty in the present law, as we did in the case of nearly all the items of this schedule.

Mr. JONES. Did the committee consider a part of this revenue duty as being put here to take the place of the difference in the cost of production here and abroad?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think we knew nothing about the cost of production here and abroad.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. I did not hear the answer that was given by the Senator from Maine to the question asked by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW]; and if the Senator has no objection, I will ask it again.

The present rate of 50 cents a gallon on olive oil in bottles, jars, kegs, tins, and so forth, is equivalent to an ad valorem rate of 35.18 per cent. The Senator has just denounced that as an outrageous rate and one that could not be justified. Yesterday we passed the paragraph in connection with which there was discussed the question of the rate on potato starch.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We have just been over that.

Mr. SMOOT. In the case of potato starch, with the rate that the committee had provided of a cent a pound, the equivalent ad valorem is 34.58 per cent. Why should a rate of 35 per cent on olive oil in bottles be considered an outrageously high rate, when 34.58 per cent on potato starch was satisfactory, and not an excessive rate?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. At a time when the Senator was not present I tried to state the reason. The raw material of the dextrine—oh, the Senator is speaking of potato starch?

Mr. SMOOT. I am speaking of potato starch.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will come to that. We found a duty of 1½ cents a pound upon potato starch, and we made a reduction to a cent a pound, which was a reduction of practically 50 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, the theory of the bill is that wherever you found a rate you reduced it, no matter whether it was 200 per cent or 20 per cent?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Oh, no; but we made reductions where we thought they should be made, and exercised our judgment about it. We did not make a bill from the ground up, of course.

Mr. SMOOT. That is what we expected the bill to be.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator may make that statement, but he makes it with no idea except for the purpose of discussion here, perhaps.

Mr. SMOOT. Not at all.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Does the Senator think we should have undertaken to make this bill from the ground up, without reference to the rates which had been assessed before, and the conditions under which business had been built up? Did the Senator do that, without reference to former rates, when he prepared the present bill in 1909?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I only assisted in preparing that bill as a member of the Finance Committee, but I will say that we started with Schedule A, and we went through all the items in the bill from beginning to end.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. So did we; but did you do your work without reference to what the preceding tariff had been upon the various articles?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly, Mr. President.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Without any reference to, and without being influenced by, the conditions under which business had been built up, or what the preceding rates had been?

Mr. SMOOT. We took into consideration the difference in the cost of producing the various articles in this country and abroad. I do not say that every item was perfect. I certainly never have claimed that. No bill ever will be made that will be perfect. But what I want to get at is this——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should like to have the Senator answer my question, if he will, since he has put one to me.

Mr. SMOOT. Wait until I get through, please.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Did you take into consideration the preceding rates in the Dingley bill when you made the Payne-Aldrich tariff?

Mr. SMOOT. No, Mr. President. We took into consideration the conditions of the country and the conditions of the business in this country as compared with foreign countries.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And you gave no consideration to the previous rates in the Dingley tariff when you drew up that bill?

Mr. SMOOT. None whatever. They were not taken into consideration, because we revised the tariff; and we started with that in view, and went from the beginning to the end.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have had and have now great sympathy for our Democratic friends in producing a tariff bill. I have full knowledge that they have had all the burdens they could well carry. I know that some of our Democratic friends have learned that it is not an easy matter to construct a tariff bill.

I recall the fact that one gentleman in public life, not a Member of this body, said not long ago that about all there was to do to make a tariff bill was to find out how much revenue was needed and write it in the bill. Our friends on the other side have learned that that is not the fact; that it is a difficult and complex and irritating task to make a tariff bill. Yet I do not think the answer given by the Senator from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON] as to the manner in which the bill was made up will be very satisfactory to the country.

The Democratic Party had tariff legislation under consideration during the last session of Congress, and they have had it under consideration during this session of Congress. It seems to me they ought to be willing to assume responsibility for the bill as a Democratic measure and not fall back on the fact that they consulted a Republican tariff bill and made the rates as they thought they ought to be made.

It strikes me that in a great many instances these rates have been made simply on the hypothesis that the existing rates were too high and could stand some reduction; so the reduction was made without any careful consideration as to the particular item or interest affected. I think that has been a dangerous procedure. In this particular instance, where 50 cents per gallon was found to be the duty, a reduction was made to 30 cents without a careful investigation as to this industry in California, which is struggling not only for existence, but for expansion.

I fear it will be found, as we go along, that this bill has been constructed upon the principle that the "wicked Republicans" imposed a duty of 40 per cent which can well be reduced to 30 per cent, or that they imposed a duty of 30 per cent which can well be reduced to 20 per cent. If any such theory as that has been put into operation, it will not work out well in practice, because there is a protective line; and I want to call attention to that. If 40 per cent is the protective line in reference to any American product, a rate of 38 per cent may be just as destructive as if you took off the entire duty. If there are 3 feet of water that we have to ford, and we put on rubber boots 2 feet high, we might just as well go in barefooted.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. HUGHES. I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that under the Wilson tariff, in 1896, the equivalent ad valorem rate on olive oil in bottles was 29 per cent, and yet the importations were less than in 1905 under the Dingley tariff, when the rate was 42 per cent.

Mr. GALLINGER. We were doing everything on a smaller scale when the Wilson bill was passed and put in operation.

Mr. HUGHES. No; if the Senator will permit me, my recollection of the year 1896 is that the exports for that year were greater than for any previous year in the history of the country.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. GALLINGER. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Will the Senator tell us exactly what he means by "the protective line"? Does he mean a duty sufficient to cover the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad?

Mr. GALLINGER. I mean this, Mr. President: We are building dikes on the Mississippi River. The Government has spent, I believe, nearly $100,000,000 in that enterprise. If we build a 10-foot dike, and the water rises 12 feet, the dike does very little good, and we might just about as well not have any dike at all.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Does the Senator mean, by "the dike," a duty equal to the difference between the cost of production here and abroad?

Mr. GALLINGER. I do. I mean that there is a protective line as between this country and foreign countries which must be measured by the difference in the cost of production, the difference in the wages paid in the several countries, and that if we go below that protective line it does not make very much difference whether the duty is 20 per cent or 40 per cent or whether we entirely wipe out the protection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Then it is the Senator's idea that a duty below that line would not affect the price in this country?

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not know how that may be, but I do know that if you go below that line you inevitably permit an inundation to come from foreign countries into this country.

Mr. SHEPPARD. It has been frequently stated, in both political parties and by a certain school, that a duty of 1 per cent is, pro tanto, that much protection. It seems to be the Senator's idea that before a duty becomes protective it must equal the difference between the cost of production in this country and abroad.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not agree at all to the proposition that a duty of 1 per cent necessarily implies that degree of protection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Neither do I. I dispute the proposition that a duty below the difference in domestic and foreign cost of production is a protective duty. The Senator does not agree to such a proposition?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; neither does the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I merely wanted to understand the Senator's position.

Mr. GALLINGER. So, coming back to the matter of olive oil, I do not know, and we can not determine until we have tested this rate, whether or not it is going to wipe out the olive-producing industry of California. The Senator from California [Mr. WORKS], a very well-informed Senator, says in all human probability it will practically destroy that industry.

I assumed from the statement of my distinguished and good friend from Maine [Mr. JOHNSON], who always means to do just the right thing, that this reduction in duty was simply made with a pen because the committee found a higher duty in the Payne-Aldrich bill, and they felt that that duty ought to be reduced, as they felt that pretty much all the duties in the bill ought to be reduced. I fear that making a tariff bill in that way is going to prove very disastrous to a great many industries in the United States, to some of which I shall call attention as the debate proceeds.

I want to renew my appeal that, in view of what the Senator from California says and in view of what some of us know concerning this industry, I hope the majority will concede the request he makes to have the olive industry in California adequately protected, as he wishes. It is a pretty grave matter to wipe out an industry of that kind, or to cripple it seriously, so as to permit the products of foreign countries to come into our country to be sold to our people.

In that connection I will say that it has always been my theory, which has been pretty well justified by the facts, that if we destroy an American industry and give it to any foreign nation, instead of getting the product cheaper we will get it at a higher price, because the foreign nation, having a monopoly, can then fix the price to suit itself.

I have made this little contribution to the discussion simply for the purpose of appealing to the majority to waive their contention as to the necessity of reducing the rates in the Payne-Aldrich bill, at least to the extent of permitting this industry to have a better chance for life than it will have if the present provision of the bill is adopted without amendment.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, as I listened to the presentation of this matter by the Senator from California, I understood that in his judgment the duty that now exists is necessary, but one of the reasons given for the maintenance of this duty, and one of the considerations that was presented to us, was the freight rate.

I am not willing to concede that we ought to regulate freight rates by tariff duties. I should prefer to vote for a protective duty on this product, eliminating the freight-rate consideration. It seems to me, from the presentation made, that if the freight rate is not considered, instead of 50 cents a gallon the duty ought to be about 40 cents a gallon in the one instance and 30 instead of 20 in the other. That is a duty for which I should like to vote.

I wanted to present this phase of the matter to the Senator, because in fixing protective duties I do not think we can undertake to cover the matter of transportation charges from one part of the country to another.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, the position taken by the Senator from Kansas is about as bad as that taken by the majority on the other side. It simply amounts to discriminating against the industries of California because she happens to be farther away from the great markets of the country. The test ought to be the cost of producing the article in the market. While the freight rates may be too high—and in that case, of course, they ought to be regulated in some other way—certainly it would be utterly unjust to permit that to stand as a kind of discrimination against the people of California, because they live at a distance from the markets and produce at a distance from the markets the things that come from that State.

Therefore I have no sympathy with the position taken by the Senator from Kansas with respect to the matter. Besides that, the discussion to which the Senator from Kansas refers, dealing with the question of freight rates, related particularly to lemons and not to olives or olive oil. I should not want the Senator to be misled by anything that might have been said with respect to that particular question.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I think I remember accurately that among the items in the literature sent to the desk to be read, and that were given in the argument, were the freight rates to Chicago and to New York and to points in Montana and Idaho.

Mr. WORKS. I have no doubt those items are all included in these figures; but it does not by any means follow from that fact that the rate I am contending for is not necessary in order to protect this industry independently of the freight rates. I am satisfied that it is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS], on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT]. I will transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote "nay."

Mr. THOMPSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], who was compelled to leave the Chamber for a short time. If permitted to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I wish to transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. REED. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and vote "nay."

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I wish to make the same announcement for my colleague [Mr. BANKHEAD] that I made on the last vote.

Mr. JONES. I wish to announce the fact that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] has been called from the Chamber by official business. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. LEWIS. I beg to announce a pair for the remainder of the day between the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] and the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON].

Mr. CHILTON. I make the same announcement of the transfer of my pair that I made on the former vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. LEA. I am paired with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT]. If at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask if the junior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have a pair with that Senator, which I will transfer to the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH]. I vote "yea."

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to announce that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] has been called from the city this afternoon, and that if present he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 22, nays 44, as follows:

YEAS—22.

Bradley	Crawford	Page	Sutherland
Brady	Gallinger	Perkins	Warren
Brandegee	Jones	Poindexter	Weeks
Catron	Lodge	Sherman	Works
Clapp	Nelson	Smoot
Clark, Wyo.	Oliver	Sterling

NAYS—44.

Ashurst	Gronna	Martine, N. J.	Simmons
Bacon	Hollis	Norris	Smith, Ga.
Borah	Hughes	Overman	Smith, Md.
Bristow	James	Owen	Smith, S. C.
Bryan	Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Stone
Chamberlain	Johnston, Ala.	Pomerene	Swanson
Chilton	Kenyon	Ransdell	Thomas
Clarke, Ark.	Kern	Reed	Thornton
Cummins	La Follette	Saulsbury	Vardaman
Fletcher	Lewis	Sheppard	Walsh
Gore	Martin, Va.	Shively	Williams

NOT VOTING—30.

Bankhead	Goff	Myers	Smith, Ariz.
Burleigh	Hitchcock	Newlands	Smith, Mich.
Burton	Jackson	O'Gorman	Stephenson
Colt	Lane	Penrose	Thompson
Culberson	Lea	Robinson	Tillman
Dillingham	Lippitt	Root	Townsend
du Pont	McCumber	Shafroth
Fall	McLean	Shields

So Mr. WORKS's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRISTOW. I move to amend this paragraph in line 18 by striking out "20" and inserting "30"; and in line 21 by striking out "30" and inserting "40."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BRISTOW. The present law imposes a duty of 40 cents per gallon in the first instance and this amendment of mine reduces that to 30 cents per gallon, 10 cents less than the present law and 10 cents more than is carried in this bill. The present law provides a duty in the second instance of 50 cents a gallon and the rate proposed is 30 cents. My amendment reduces the present law 10 cents and increases this proposed duty 10 cents. I ask that these two amendments be voted on together, and I ask also for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas asks that the two amendments proposed by him shall be taken as a single proposition. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Senator from Kansas demands the yeas and nays on the adoption of the amendment offered by him.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. STONE. I desire to ask what the amendment is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 11, line 18, in the item "olive oil, not specially provided for in this section," it is proposed to strike out "20" and insert "30," and in line 21, imported "in bottles, jars, kegs, tins," and so forth, to strike out "30" and insert "40."

Mr. STONE. I see. I supposed it had some reference to dextrine or cheap wool grease.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEA (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] to the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] and vote "nay."

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I will transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. STONE (when his name was called). I ask if the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. STONE. I have a pair with that Senator and withhold my vote.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. THOMPSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] and withhold my vote.

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]. I desire to make the announcement for the remainder of the day that I stand paired with that Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). Repeating my announcement upon the last roll call, I vote "nay."

The roll call was completed.

Mr. REED. I am paired with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH], and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I would vote "nay."

Mr. LEA (after having voted in the negative). The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN], to whom I transferred my pair, has come into the Chamber and voted. Therefore I withdraw my vote.

Mr. CHILTON. I again announce my pair and its transfer and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. JONES. I wish to announce the absence of the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] on official business. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 26, nays 38, as follows:

YEAS—26.

Bradley	Cummins	Nelson	Smoot
Brady	Gallinger	Norris	Sterling
Brandegee	Gronna	Oliver	Sutherland
Bristow	Jones	Page	Weeks
Catron	Kenyon	Perkins	Works
Clapp	La Follette	Poindexter
Crawford	Lodge	Sherman

NAYS—38.

Ashurst	James	Owen	Smith, S. C.
Bacon	Johnson, Me.	Pittman	Swanson
Borah	Johnston, Ala.	Pomerene	Thomas
Bryan	Kern	Ransdell	Thornton
Chamberlain	Lane	Saulsbury	Tillman
Chilton	Lewis	Sheppard	Vardaman
Clarke, Ark.	Martin, Va.	Shively	Walsh
Gore	Martine, N. J.	Simmons	Williams
Hollis	O'Gorman	Smith, Ga.
Hughes	Overman	Smith, Md.

NOT VOTING—32.

Bankhead	Fall	McLean	Shields
Burleigh	Fletcher	Myers	Smith, Ariz.
Burton	Goff	Newlands	Smith, Mich.
Clark, Wyo.	Hitchcock	Penrose	Stephenson
Colt	Jackson	Reed	Stone
Culberson	Lea	Robinson	Thompson
Dillingham	Lippitt	Root	Townsend
du Pont	McCumber	Shafroth	Warren.

So Mr. BRISTOW's amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Secretary read the next paragraph, as follows:

47. Oils, distilled and essential: Orange and lemon, 10 per cent ad valorem; peppermint, 25 cents per pound; mace oil, 6 cents per pound; almond, bitter; amber; ambergris; anise or anise seed; bergamot; camomile; caraway; cassia; cinnamon, cedrat; citronella and lemongrass; civet; fennel; jasmine or jasimine; juniper; lavender, and aspic or spike lavender; limes; neroli or orange flower; origanum, red or white; rosemary or anthoss; attar of roses; thyme; and valerian; all the foregoing oils, and all fruit ethers, oils, and essences, and essential and distilled oils and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Mr. SMOOT. I move to strike out, on page 11, line 24, the words "and lemon." I do that for the reason that lemon oil to-day is on the free list, paragraph 639. It has been there in every tariff act, I suppose, since there was a tariff act. It is the product used in many of the medicinal preparations.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, in addition to the reason for making that motion which the Senator from Utah has just given, I wish to suggest that oil of lemon is largely used in manufacturing extract of lemon. In fact, 54 per cent of the cost of the extract of lemon is the oil of lemon, and adding the 10 per cent duty to something which has been on the free list will make the proportional part of the cost of the extract of lemon 59 per cent instead of 54, as it is now.

Outside of staple articles of food probably nothing is used in the average family any more generally than extract of lemon and extract of vanilla. It is sold in very small quantities, in ounce bottles. An ounce bottle of extract of lemon sells at 10 cents, and adding this cost would quite likely make the retail price 15 cents. Therefore, it would probably affect the average family as much as any similar item could. It is not produced in this country to any extent, and, therefore, it can not be claimed that it will add to the production of this country.

I think the motion made by the Senator from Utah should prevail.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah to strike out the words "and lemon" in line 24, on page 11.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SMOOT. I move to amend the bill on page 12, line 1, beginning with the words "mace oil," down to and including the word "valerian" in line 7.

Mr. President, all the oils mentioned in the bill from mace oil down to and including valerian oil are now on the free list and have been. They are not produced in this country and they should be upon the free list. I therefore move that those lines be stricken from the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, these distilled oils are most largely used in the manufacture of perfumery. The duty upon perfumeries has been increased in this bill from 50 to 60 per cent, and the small duty here placed upon the oils which are used in the preparation of those perfumeries is thought to be entirely justifiable as a revenue duty.

Mr. SMOOT. I merely want to call the Senator's attention to the statement he made that perfumery had been increased 10 per cent; that is, from 50 to 60 per cent. I call his attention to the fact that the present law says, "perfumery, including cologne and other toilet waters," and so forth, "if containing alcohol," 60 cents per pound and 50 per cent ad valorem. You have provided in this bill 40 cents per pound and 60 per cent ad valorem, which, of course, is not an increase from 50 to 60 per cent. The equivalent ad valorem of the present law is 72.8 per cent, while the equivalent ad valorem of this bill is 74.72 per cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In each instance it is our understanding that the specific duty in the present bill was placed upon perfumeries to compensate for the tax paid upon alcohol used in their manufacture. We have been advised that 40 cents per pound is sufficient. So, while the duty in the Payne-Aldrich tariff was 60 cents per pound and 50 per cent ad valorem, we have made it 40 cents per pound and 60 per cent ad valorem. When I referred to an increase I referred to an increase in the ad valorem duty, the specific duty being laid in each instance to compensate for the alcohol used in the manufacture.

Mr. SMOOT. That statement, of course, as to the rate agrees with what I said, but as to the equivalent ad valorem I think the Senator will admit that it is 72.8 and 74.72. That is all there is of difference between the rates of the present law and the rates provided in this bill.

Mr. HUGHES. This is one of the commodities which falls in the class of commodities we discussed here the other day, and the same statement can be made with reference to it, namely, that here is a commodity highly protected for revenue purposes. Instead of making a severe reduction in the finished product the duty was laid on certain essential parts which are imported almost exclusively. So, even if a reduction were made upon the finished product, that reduction would go, we believe, to the consumer, and the tax laid upon the intermediate products which go into the manufacture of perfumery would go exclusively into the trade. Everybody, I think, understands that the House and the Senate committees have been trying in this connection to make the perfumery industry pay the rate of duty laid upon these products.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERN in the chair). The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I regret greatly being obliged to impose myself on the Senate again before this vote is taken.

This paragraph must be construed with paragraph 67, the paragraph on soaps. The essential oils mentioned in this paragraph are an indispensable adjunct to every soap manufacturer in the country. I am not informed at present whether the framers of this bill regard soap in the light of a luxury or a necessity, and so I will not undertake to precipitate that discussion in this body.

There are two classifications of soap in paragraph 67 with which these essential oils are connected—the perfumed, toilet, and medicinal soaps, and the other soaps not otherwise especially provided for. Of the list of ad valorem duties I do not care to say anything. The ad valorem duties are evidently imposed for revenue purposes.

Whatever incidental protection will follow from a revenue tariff it is not necessary to consider in the view I take of these two provisions. The latter portion of the paragraph relates to soaps not otherwise especially provided for. That includes all laundry or common soaps used in the kitchen by the housewife or by the laundry in cleaning ordinary garments.

The old rate, Mr. President, on the latter classification is 20 per cent. The new rate is 5 per cent ad valorem. The vice of those two paragraphs construed with each other is that which pervades this bill as I see it in a great many particulars. It taxes what is the raw material to the manufacturer and either greatly reduces or free-lists his finished product. That product goes upon the market and is a highly competitive article. It meets in the domestic market soaps of the kinds specified from at least three great foreign countries, all of them exporting to a considerable degree.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HUGHES. I wish to call attention to the fact that the soap of which the Senator is speaking is the common, ordinary garden variety of soap, of which we are large exporters. Over $3,000,000 worth was exported last year. The rate of 5 per cent still left on that soap in my judgment will be sufficient for any tax that might have been paid on the small amount of essential oil that would enter into the soap. I do not care to enter into it further than that. I do not pretend to be an expert.

Mr. SHERMAN. That exportation is very largely, as suggested to me by Senators, to Cuba and Porto Rico and points of that kind.

Now, in response further to the suggestion made by the Senator from New Jersey, I wish to carry out very briefly the effect of these essential oils if the import duty is increased. There are practically none, from a marketable point of view, produced, or it is not produced in sufficient quantities to affect the soap manufacturers. Very largely the laboratories of foreign chemists or manufacturing chemists are to-day furnishing in the large manufacturing centers of this country these essential oils. In the city of Chicago, in Cincinnati, Ohio, in Cleveland, Ohio, in St. Louis, Mo., and other points—I need not enumerate them all—an examination of the output of the production shows that these essential oils are an element that the manufacturer must always take into account in placing his product upon the market.

Here is the way it works out. The essential oils which are free listed under the present law, under this bill bear various rates of duty of an ad valorem character. This increased cost in this instance is emphatically a tax. This importation of essential oils is not a competitive article. The laboratories of the United States do not send out into the general market enough of these essential oils to affect materially this production. These essential oils are not used altogether in the perfumed, castile, toilet, and medicinal soaps. They are used in the ordinary soaps, the soap of the plain people, if I may be permitted to use that expression; the soap that is compounded of animal fats, vegetable oils, and a certain percentage of alkaloids. In that combination if nothing was put in of these essential oils it would be unusable. If we could go back to the old soap-kettle days when our grandmothers made the soap, what we called the domestic soap, we would not use it nowadays. It is rather offensive. It is just as cleansing as the castile soap of commerce is to-day, or the perfumed soap that is in the boudoir of the highly-cultivated gentleman. There is not any difference in the cleansing property, but because of the offensive animal fats when combined with the alkaloids and the vegetable oils, if these essential oils are not placed in it to subdue or tone down the preparation it practically would find no buyers on the market, not even as to the commonest kinds of country soap in the kitchen.

Now, in order to put them in that form they use these essential oils which are imported. Here is the result: The duty on the essential oils used in common soap when that soap is put on the market will add on an average 5 cents to every box of soap. A box is of standard size, containing a given number of bars—two dozen. You will pardon me for going into these details as much as I do, but I think it is essential to do so.

Mr. LANE. I should like to ask a question of the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. SHERMAN. With great pleasure.

Mr. LANE. I should like to inquire of the Senator whether it is not a fact that where these essential oils are used in cheap soap they are not used for the purpose of disguising a compound which the people would not use if they knew of what it was composed? Are there not large quantities of old, rancid, and diseased fats used in those cheap oils which are deleterious and unhealthful and which ought not to be placed on the market under the name of soap, but which should be sold on their face for what they really are? Is there not one very enterprising gentleman, in fact, who is skimming the sewers of one of our cities and getting out animal fat, and, after disguising it by these essential oils, working it off on the people? It is a composition which the people ought not to be forced to use and which ought not to be sold to them; not, at any rate, disguised as a preparation, if you please, pleasing to the nostrils.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think I can answer that very readily, and I believe correctly, by saying no.

Mr. LANE. Then I will say to the Senator that in the hospitals and in the practice of medicine we dare not use these cheap, inferior, and highly scented soaps in the treatment of disease, for the reason that they are unsafe; but we do use the simple vegetable-oil soaps. I think the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], a distinguished physician, will confirm my statement on that point. We use the mildest alkali in the way of soft soap, if you please, the old soft soap, such as was made a hundred years ago in Spain, for the reason that we are afraid of the preparations in which the essential oils are employed. If the only excuse that can be offered for leaving these articles on the free list is the one which has been set forth, I have but little confidence in it. If you would base the argument on some other use that can be made of such articles, I would have some respect for it; but I have little faith in those soaps; I carefully avoid them; I never allow them to come into my house; and, as a physician, for years I have warned my patients against using them. They are bad soaps.

Mr. LODGE. I was going to ask the Senator if the essential oils were not used generally in the manufacture of soaps. Do we have any soaps with no essential oil in them at all?

Mr. LANE. The best soaps for medicinal purposes must be free of oil.

Mr. LODGE. There must be no essential oil in them?

Mr. LANE. Not at all.

Mr. LODGE. There are a great many soaps that have no perfume at all.

Mr. LANE. Yes; those are the better soaps. If you go into the market to buy soap, let me, as a friend, advise you to steer clear of the highly scented soaps, and get those that have not been doctored up with essential oils. You will come nearer knowing what you purchase, and you will come nearer getting a better article. Any soap manufacturer will tell you that you can cover up an awful mess in soap with a few drops of essential oil. Steer clear of such soap.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator had followed correctly the classification of soaps made in the paragraph, he would not have found it necessary to ask me the question. As to the perfumed and the scented soaps, I make no comments at present. My remarks were confined entirely to the unscented soaps or the common soaps embraced in the general basket clause not otherwise specially provided for. These are the laundry soaps used about the kitchen by the average housewife. They have no perfumery to them that is susceptible of being known to the senses when the soap is used; they are not scented soaps any more than the average type of soap, if I may take some common type like Ivory soap or the soap manufactured by the Babbitts or Fairbanks. The common soaps are unscented, and the oils in them reduce the offensive animal odor of the animal fat contained in the compound. They are not put there for scenting a soap or for perfumery, and do not bring that soap within the classification of those subject to an ad valorem duty.

Now, to return to the original point that I briefly wish to make, I will say that the addition of these duties to the essential oils used in the manufacture of common soap will add to the price by 5 cents per box of two dozen in a box. Soap is wholesaled at a very close margin. I suppose the department in which I once served has bought in the last five years a great deal of soap. We buy on bids and on chemical analysis of the samples submitted or taken at random from the boxes. These bids indicate a very great competition from every part of the country. There is no combination among the soap manufacturers, but every factory is an independent plant and an independent competitor on the market with his fellows.

The bids that are submitted with a 5-cent margin added by the cost of these essential oils that go into the manufacture determine the purchase on the market. Five cents on a box will sell the goods; and if the advantage is given to the foreign manufacturer importing on a reduction from 20 per cent to 5 per cent ad valorem, with these essential oils made dutiable where before they were free listed, the market will not only have to readjust itself for the domestic producer, but it will give such an unfair advantage to the foreign importer into this country that we do not think it will be at all fair to the domestic producer. The result will be that he will lose by that 5 per cent margin, and it is estimated that the result will be the loss of the market, that the output will be lessened, and that the importations from abroad will supplant the domestic product.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Utah to strike out the parts of paragraph 47 which have been stated.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 49, page 13, in line 16, after the word "foregoing," to strike out "wholly or partly manufactured," so as to make the paragraph read:

49. Perfumery, including cologne and other toilet waters, articles of perfumery, whether in sachets or otherwise, and all preparations used as applications to the hair, mouth, teeth, or skin, such as cosmetics, dentifices, including tooth soaps, pastes, including theatrical grease paints, and pastes, pomades, powders, and other toilet preparations, all the foregoing, if containing alcohol, 40 cents per pound and 60 per cent ad valorem; if not containing alcohol, 60 per cent ad valorem; floral or flower waters containing no alcohol, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 50, on page 13, which is as follows:

50. Ambergris, enfleurage greases and floral essences by whatever method obtained; flavoring extracts, musk, grained or in pods, civet, and all natural or synthetic odoriferous or aromatic substances, preparations, and mixtures used in the manufacture of, but not marketable as, perfumes or cosmetics; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I move to strike out paragraph 50, which has just been read. Ambergris is on the free list now under paragraph 489 of the existing law. "Enfleurage greases and floral essences by whatever method obtained" are at present upon the free list under paragraph 639. Civet is free under paragraph 533 of the present law. I therefore move to strike out paragraph 50.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Utah to strike out paragraph 50.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 52, on page 13, which is as follows:

52. Baryta, sulphate of, or barytes, including barytes earth, unmanufactured, 15 per cent ad valorem; manufactured, 20 per cent ad valorem; blanc-fixe, or artificial sulphate of barytes, and satin white, or artificial sulphate of lime, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator in charge of this schedule of the bill to allow that paragraph to be passed over. I think the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] has also spoken to the Senator in relation to it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. He has done so.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Rhode Island was called from the city this afternoon, but will be here on Tuesday morning. He has told me that then he will be ready to take up this paragraph.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The Senator from Utah is correct. The Senator from Rhode Island desired to be heard on that paragraph. I have no objection to its being passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, paragraph 52 will be passed over for the present.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 53, page 14, line 16, after the word "ultramarine," to insert "valued at 7 cents or less per pound, 1 cent per pound; valued over 7 cents per pound," so as to make the paragraph read:

53. Blues, such as Berlin, Prussian, Chinese, and all others, containing ferrocyanide of iron, in pulp, dry or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 20 per cent ad valorem; ultramarine blue, whether dry, in pulp, or ground in or mixed with oil or water, and wash blue containing ultramarine, valued at 7 cents or less per pound, 1 cent per pound, valued over 7 cents per pound, 15 per cent ad valorem.

54. Black pigments, made from bone, ivory, or vegetable substance, by whatever name known, gas black and lampblack, dry or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 15 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 58.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like to ask that paragraphs 57 and 58 be passed over until we reach the lead paragraph, and after we have taken action on that paragraph we can return to and vote upon the two paragraphs I have indicated.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have no objection, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, paragraphs 57 and 58 will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 61, which is as follows:

61. Whiting and Paris white, dry, and chalk, ground or bolted ¼ cent per pound; whiting and Paris white, ground in oil, or putty, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I desire to say in regard to that reduction, which is a very severe one, indeed, that the whiting and Paris white industry is conducted on a very narrow margin. We have to import all the raw material, which is chalk, and, although that is on the free list, the freight they have to pay puts our manufacturers, of course, at an inevitable disadvantage in their raw material, as compared with the manufacturers of France and England, where the chalk is found. The cost of getting the chalk is from $3 to $4.25. The labor is all able-bodied men, and the pay is from $1.65 to $3 a day, while the labor cost abroad is from $1 to $1.50 per ton less. The margin of profit is close, and the freight rates very largely determine the market. It is very difficult for the industry to live, even at the present rate, and the duty has been cut from one-fourth of a cent to one-tenth of a cent, which is a very heavy cut.

I know that it is useless to offer amendments, and I have no desire to detain the Senate, but I wish to make this protest against the reduction. I should also like permission to file, without reading, some statistical statements with regard to the industry. I ask that the statement I send to the desk may be printed in the RECORD without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, permission to do so is granted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

"Whiting" and "Paris white" are commercial terms, and refer to articles of merchandise produced principally from crude chalk, an insignificant amount only being made from English cliff stone.

H. R. 3321 provides for one-tenth of 1 cent per pound. If this became operative, it would, in our opinion, close out the manufacture of whiting and Paris white in this country.

Raw material: There are no deposits in this country.

It is all imported in the crude state, coming in free of duty. A ton of chalk will not make a ton of whiting. It requires about 2,800 pounds of the crude material to make 2,000 pounds of whiting or Paris white. The freight and handling charges on this 800 pounds of waste reduces by so much the duty protection.

Cost of raw material: To the European manufacturer, whose mills are located at the chalk quarry, the cost of sufficient chalk to make a ton of whiting or Paris white does not exceed 50 cents. To the American manufacturer the cost is $3.75 to $4.25.

Consumption: In this country, from 100,000 to 125,000 tons per annum.

Wages: The amount of wages paid out on account of this industry is about $500,000 per annum. If all the whiting and Paris white consumed in this country was imported under the proposed rate of one-tenth of 1 cent per pound, the Government would receive less than one-half now paid out in wages, the industry would be wiped out, and the labor seek other employment. The labor is all able-bodied men. No women or children employed in whiting mills. Labor constitutes a large portion of the cost of whiting and Paris white. Wages in New England mills is from $1.65 to $3 per day. To make a ton of whiting and Paris white we estimate the European labor cost from $1 to $1.50 per ton less than the American labor cost, so that in the raw material and labor the European manufacturer has an advantage of $4.75 to $5.50 per ton. It is only by superior methods of manufacturing that the American whiting manufacturer is able at the present time, with one-fourth of 1 cent a pound protection, to hold the business.

Margin of profit to American manufacturer: Small; so close, in fact, is the margin of profit that the freight rates largely determine the market in which the consumer places his orders. There is no trust or combination in the business. The sharp competition among manufacturers is and always has been ample for protection to the American consumer.

Careful investigation will verify these statements and we feel confident show that any reduction from the present tariff rate of one-fourth of 1 cent per pound is certain to seriously disturb and, if the rate proposed is maintained, probably wipe out the industry in this country.

Yours, respectfully, STICKNEY, TIBBELL CO.,
Boston, Mass.

DECEMBER 12, 1912.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator who has this portion of the bill in charge whether shellacs come under paragraph 59, which was read a few moments ago? Are shellacs included under the term "varnishes"?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. No; they are not.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. In what paragraph of the bill are shellacs found?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think they are found under the term "lac."

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I attempted to find shellacs, Mr. President, but they are not indexed under the term "shellac," and I was told that they came under the head of "varnishes." I have looked through the varnish provision, but, so far as I have been able to ascertain, shellac is not mentioned in terms.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I think the Senator will find shellac in paragraph 530.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Would that be on the free list?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I am quite sure it is on the free list. It is found in paragraph 530, which reads:

530. Lac dye, crude, seed, button, stick, and shell.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But does the word "lac" mean shellac?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We were informed that paragraph 530 covered shellac.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I was in some confusion about it. I looked up the word "lac" and the word "shellac" in the dictionary and found definitions for both of those words, but I was not able to tell which paragraph of the bill covered them. I do not desire to interrupt the regular procedure, however, at this time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. We were informed that shellac came under the paragraph to which I have referred. I will ask the chemical expert if that is correct.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the Senator is sure that shellac is on the free list, I will not interrupt the proceedings at this time.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, at the top of page 16, to strike out:

62. Zinc, oxide of, and white sulphid of, lithopone, and pigments containing zinc but not containing more than 3 per cent of lead, ground dry, 10 per cent ad valorem; when ground in or mixed with oil or water, 15 per cent ad valorem.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

62. Zinc, oxide of, and pigments containing zinc but not containing more than 5 per cent of lead, ground dry, 10 per cent ad valorem; when ground in or mixed with oil or water, lithopone and white sulphide of zinc, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, in regard to lithopone, which is a comparatively new compound developed of late years, I understand that it is a nonpoisonous white pigment which is gradually taking the place, to a large extent, of white lead. It is very desirable, of course, to have a nonpoisonous pigment. White lead, I think, bears a duty——

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts that white lead is found in paragraph 57.

Mr. LODGE. I will inquire what is the equivalent ad valorem on white lead?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. That is what I thought. The duty on lithopone, which, as I have said, is a nonpoisonous pigment which has been developed of late years, is cut to 15 per cent, while the duty on white lead is left at 25 per cent. I merely make this suggestion, and desire to put into the RECORD the statement I have in regard to it. I will not delay the Senate by offering any amendment, but the reduction of duty seems to me a mistake, and I should be glad if the committee would look into the matter, because they have raised lithopone from 10 per cent, as proposed by the House, to 15 per cent, and I think it ought to be raised more. I ask that the statement which I send to the desk may be printed in the RECORD in connection with my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, permission is granted.

The statement referred to is as follows:

APRIL 24, 1913.

We are manufacturers of lithopone, classed in the tariff bill as sulphide of zinc.

H. R. 10 reduces the tariff on this article from about 50 per cent, in the shape of specific duty, to 10 per cent ad valorem, a cut of 80 per cent in the tariff on this article.

We are confident that this exceptionally drastic reduction is due to misunderstanding and confusion of this product with other zinc pigments, particularly zinc oxide, with which it is grouped in H. R. 10.

The manufacture of zinc oxide is well established in this country, and we are inclined to believe that a reduction in duty to 10 per cent ad valorem would have no injurious effect on that industry, as zinc oxide has for some years been largely exported from this country to Europe, and is, we believe, more cheaply produced in this country than anywhere else in the world. This is on account of the superior nature for this purpose of the special zinc ore (found in quantity only in this country) from which the zinc oxide is made direct at minimum cost.

Lithopone, on the other hand, is the result of elaborate chemical processes, the raw materials having to be brought into solution and after purification mixed in suitable proportions to form the basis of lithopone. The process is complicated in character and costly in labor. In its manufacture we use a crude barium sulphate which is imported from Germany in tonnage approximately equal to the tonnage of lithopone produced. We beg to call to your attention that H. R. 10 provides a duty of 15 per cent on this raw material, while reducing the duty on the finished product to 10 per cent ad valorem.

Our other principal raw material is zinc or spelter, and the duty on this it is proposed to reduce from 1 cent per pound to an ad valorem equal to about one-half of 1 cent per pound under H. R. 10, a much smaller reduction in duty than is proposed for lithopone.

We now have invested in this industry large sums of money. The business and the use of lithopone in this country is increasing rapidly, and as a nonpoisonous white pigment is tending to take the place, to a large extent, of white lead. In H. R. 10 white lead, our principal competitive pigment, is accorded protective duty of 25 per cent, while the duty on lithopone is cut to 15 per cent.

We believe that if the industry in this country is not now crippled by too drastic a cut in the tariff we will eventually be able to meet the German manufacturer on an even basis, but we feel that the cut proposed by H. R. 10 is unreasonably severe, and must, as we have said, be due to confusion of this product with zinc white, technically known as zinc oxide. We submit the following data, which is taken from official handbook, showing the heavy and rapid increase in importation of German lithopone into this country at the rate of duty imposed by the present and preceding tariff, and which we submit as a convincing argument that the excessive cut of 80 per cent in duty proposed by H. R. 10 is unjust and unnecessary:

Zinc, sulphide of, white, or white sulphide of.

IMPORTS.

Item.	Dingley tariff.		Payne tariff.	Estimates for a 12-month period under H. R. 10.
	1909	1910	1912
Quantity.....pounds..	1,180,511	2,307,699	6,325,072	7,000,000
Value.....	$30,997	$68,925	$157,921	$180,000
Average unit.....	$0.026	$0.029	$0.025	$0.026
Duties.....	$14,869	$28,846	$79,063	$18,000
Equivalent ad valorem.....per cent..	47.98	41.85	50.07	15.00

Yours, very truly,

THE BECKTON CHEMICAL CO.,
———— ————, President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 64, on page 16, line 13, after the word "or," to strike out "fusians" and insert "fusains"; so as to make the paragraph read:

64. Enamel paints, and all paints, colors, pigments, stains, crayons, including charcoal crayons or fusains, smalts, and frostings, and all ceramic and glass fluxes, glazes, enamels, and colors, whether crude, dry, mixed, or ground with water or oil or with solutions other than oil, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; all paints, colors, and pigments commonly known as artists' paints or colors, whether in tubes, pans, cakes, or other forms, 20 per cent ad valorem; all color lakes, whether dry or in pulp, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Maine on what theory the duty on enamel paints and all paints, colors, pigments, and so forth, has been cut from 30 per cent ad valorem, as provided in the present law, to 15 per cent ad valorem, while at the same time the duty on coal-tar dyes, from which paints are made, has been left at 30 per cent ad valorem, which is the rate of the present law? There is no change whatever in the duty on coal-tar colors, but the articles made from the coal-tar colors, enamel paints, and paints, colors, pigments, and so forth, are cut in two, from 30 per cent to 15 per cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, nearly all the materials that enter into the manufacture of paints have been cut very heavily in the bill. The duty on linseed oil has been largely reduced, and the same is true as to nearly all the pigments and other materials used in the manufacture of paint. The paint trade is a well-established one in this country, and has large exports.

I find from the statistics that in 1912, of varnishes we exported $1,118,000 worth; of other paints and pigments, $3,864,000 worth; of gas black, carbon, and lampblack, $907,623 worth; and of zinc oxide, $1,182,000 worth. In view of these large exports, and the fact that we have reduced the duty upon the materials which enter into the manufacture of paints, the reduction from 30 per cent to 15 per cent seemed wise.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator has not answered my question. I asked him in relation to the coal-tar colors. The duty on coal-tar colors is left at 30 per cent, just as under the present law; and yet they enter into the manufacture of paints, the duty on which is cut 50 per cent. I ask the Senator why the rate of 30 per cent is left on coal-tar dyes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will ask the Senator to what extent coal-tar colors enter into the manufacture of paints?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not know exactly the percentage, but the Senator knows that they do enter into the manufacture of paints.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Are they not a small part of the material required in the manufacture of paints?

Mr. SMOOT. They certainly are not the largest part, I am quite sure; but what I was trying to get at was why a 30 per cent duty is left on coal-tar dyes, as the present law provides?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The coal-tar dyes we have already passed, I think, back in paragraph 21.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have not supposed they were used to a very large extent in the manufacture of paints or varnishes. They are largely used as dyes, and we have placed upon the free list quite a large number of the coal-tar dyes used in the textile industries.

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator say coal-tar dyes are placed upon the free list?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Some of them.

Mr. SMOOT. Simply alizarin.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. And carbazol and the derivatives of carbazol.

Mr. SMOOT. Those are the derivatives; that is all. I believe, though, I gave notice that I would refer back to paragraph 21, in which coal-tar colors are included. Therefore at this moment I shall not take the time of the Senate further.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, is it not true that the lake colors carry a rate of duty, not of 30 per cent, but of 20 per cent?

Mr. SMOOT. No; all lake colors to-day carry a duty of 30 per cent.

Mr. HUGHES. I think the Senator will find he is mistaken about that.

Mr. SMOOT. I think the Senator will find it in paragraph 56 of the present law.

Mr. HUGHES. I mean the proposed law.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, yes; under the proposed law all lake colors carry a duty of 20 per cent.

Mr. HUGHES. Not 30 per cent?

Mr. SMOOT. No; I said 30 per cent under the present law, not the proposed law.

Mr. HUGHES. I misunderstood the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. Under the present law all lake colors, as the Senator knows, carry a duty of 20 per cent, just the same as do all enamel paints, other paints, colors, and pigments. Under paragraph 56 of the present law they carry a rate of 30 per cent.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning with line 23, page 16.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 65, page 16, line 25, to strike out the words "cyanide of, 1½ cents per pound," so as to make the paragraph read:

65. Potash: Bicarbonate of, refined, ½ cent per pound; chlorate of, chromate and bichromate of, 1 cent per pound; nitrate of, or saltpeter, refined, $7 per ton; permanganate of, 1 cent per pound; prussiate of, red, 2 cents per pound; yellow, 1½ cents per pound.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in paragraph 66, page 17, line 4, after the word "silver," to strike out "and" and insert "or," so as to make the paragraph read:

66. Salts and all other compounds and mixtures of which bismuth, gold, platinum, rhodium, silver, or tin constitute the element of chief value, 10 per cent ad valorem.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. This paragraph, as amended, uses the words "silver or tin constitute the element of chief value." Of course, in referring to tin, that means lac spirits; and lac spirits to-day are upon the free list. Did the Senator intend to take lac spirits from the free list and put them in paragraph 66? Was that the intention?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say that I had not had my attention called to the matter of lac spirits.

Mr. SMOOT. It is not specifically stated as lac spirits. The language here is:

Salts and all other compounds and mixtures of which bismuth, gold, platinum, rhodium, silver, or tin constitute the element of chief value.

In other words, if the salts are from tin, they are lac spirits; and to-day lac spirits are on the free list, under paragraph 606.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The committee is informed that lac spirits are tin tetrachloride. Is that what the Senator refers to?

Mr. SMOOT. I say the salts of tin.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They would be included under this language.

Mr. SMOOT. If they are included, they would come in under this rate, and that would take them from the free list under paragraph 606 to-day and put them here with a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem. I ask the Senator if that was the intention of the committee? If not, the Senator should strike out the words "or tin," and let the word "salts" apply only to silver and the other metals named.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say that it was the intention of the committee to include tetrachloride of tin here, and that is what the Senator alludes to as lac spirits. They are made taxable here at 10 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. It was the intention of the committee to take lac spirits from the free list, and impose a duty upon them?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It was.

Mr. SMOOT. Was that for revenue purposes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It was for revenue purposes, and to class them with the other salts and compounds that are given here.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, of course if it is the intention of the committee to put lac spirits in here for revenue purposes, well and good, but I could not find anything in the free list specifically mentioning lac spirits, and to-day they are on the free list under paragraph 606. Of course, knowing that the salts of tin were lac spirits, I wondered whether this language was put in here intentionally or whether it was just a mistake. But the Senator has said it was intentional, and therefore I will not offer an amendment, because I know it would do no good.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 67, page 17, as follows:

67. Soaps: Perfumed toilet soaps, 40 per cent ad valorem; medicinal soaps, 30 per cent ad valorem; castile soap, and unperfumed toilet soap, 10 per cent ad valorem; all other soaps not specially provided for in this section, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, that cut in the duty on all soaps not specially provided for is very heavy, indeed. It is heavier, I think, than the others. I know it is entirely useless to offer any amendment and I do not care to take the time to discuss the matter, but I shall ask leave to print with what I have said a letter on the subject from a constituent of mine. I desire to have it accompany this statement.

Mr. BURTON. I should like to know to what it relates.

Mr. LODGE. Soaps not specially provided for in this section, which are made dutiable at 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BURTON. What is the difference between that and the present duty?

Mr. LODGE. The present duty is 20 per cent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts, the matter referred to will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

LYNN, MASS., May 20, 1913.

Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We beg to take the liberty of writing you personally at this time relative to the proposed change in duty on common soap, which has been reduced to 5 per cent ad valorem in House bill 3321, while a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem has been imposed on essential oils used in the manufacture of this commodity, thereby increasing the cost of manufacture and reducing the protection on the manufactured product.

It would be extremely difficult to determine to what extent the soap industry would be affected by such a drastic act in the tariff, but it seems entirely reasonable that the change in rate should be more gradual.

Unlike other industries, the soap business is largely composed of many concerns of moderate capital and output, and as the matter of volume enters into the cost of production to a very considerable extent, it would be absolutely impossible for any but the very largest manufacturers to compete with the enormous plants in England.

Of late years the supply of raw materials in this country available for soap making have been so deficient that it has been necessary to depend upon foreign markets at greatly increased prices, whereas on account of severe competition the consumer to-day receives greater value for the same or less money than at any time in the history of the business.

This has been made possible only by the application of the strictest economy in every detail, and the margin of profit to-day is so small the average American manufacturer could not possibly compete with the foreign-made goods unless protected by a reasonable rate of duty.

We hope you will use your efforts to prevent a change in the present tariff covering on common soaps, and taking this opportunity to thank you in anticipation of your courtesy, we remain,

Respectfully, yours,

THE GEO. E. MARSH CO.,
JAMES M. MARSH, President.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22, 1913.

To the Chairman and Members Subcommittee Committee on Finance, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: This statement is submitted on behalf of the laundry-soap manufacturers of the United States, representing over 75 per cent of the production of common laundry soap.

On January 6 last a statement on behalf of the common laundry-soap industry was submitted to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House, in which, on behalf of this trade, with reference to the duty on common soap, it was stated:

"No change in this item is requested or desired by the laundry-soap manufacturers. They do not, however, object to the reduction to 15 per cent ad valorem, as was proposed in House bill 20182, provided the raw materials used by them are allowed to remain on the free list and are not taxed, as was proposed in House bill 20182."

The passage of House bill 3321 prompts a further presentation of these views, and a renewal of the petition of the common laundry soap manufacturers in respect of the duty on common soap (par. 67) and in respect of the duty imposed on essential oils (par. 47). The present duty on common soap is 20 per cent ad valorem; and instead of a reduction to 15 per cent ad valorem, as was proposed in House bill 20182, the duty has been reduced to 5 per cent ad valorem in House bill 3321, while a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem has been imposed on essential oils used in the manufacture of common soap, thereby increasing the cost of manufacture, and reducing the duty on the manufactured article.

COMMON LAUNDRY SOAP.

(Paragraph 67.)

There is no soap trust. There is no combination of soap manufacturers.

There is keen competition in all sections of the country. This competition compels each manufacturer to give the largest possible cake, or the best possible quality, or the lowest possible price, or all of these; otherwise this volume of business can not be increased or even maintained. The prices to the consumers of the common laundry soaps we are discussing run between 2½ cents and 5 cents per cake or bar.

While there have been large and almost universal advances in the cost of other essentials of life, the retail price of laundry soap has shown no substantial change during a long period of years.

The number of soap factories in the United States, according to the United States census, is 436, scattered through 38 States in numbers varying from 1 to 67.

Character of establishments (out of 436).

Individual ownership	146
Firms	108
Corporations	182

Invested capital.

Less than $5,000	101
$5,000 but less than $20,000	103
$20,000 but less than $100,000	140
$100,000 but less than $1,000,000	79
$1,000,000 and over	13

While the largest and strongest of these institutions may successfully compete with foreign manufacturers with the very slight duty of 5 per cent ad valorem, it is respectfully submitted that a large proportion of the common-soap manufacturers of this country, as shown by the preceding table of capital invested, are of comparatively moderate financial strength, and that they would find it extremely difficult to meet the foreign competition which would be invited by the proposed radical reduction of 75 per cent from the present duty.

The cost of soap is so largely determined by volume of output that the lowest competitive basis can only be realized by manufacturers operating on a very large scale. Some of the largest and wealthiest manufacturers of common soap in the world are located in England, and the proposed reduction is so radical that there is danger that they will rapidly appropriate the markets of our smaller soap manufacturers, especially those near the seaboard.

THE PROPOSED REDUCTION EXCESSIVE.

The reduction proposed—that is to say, from 20 per cent to 5 per cent ad valorem—is equivalent to 45 cents on a $3 box of soap and 60 cents on a $4 box of soap. A duty of 5 per cent would only represent 15 cents on a $3 box of soap or 20 cents on a $4 box of soap as against the present duty of 60 cents on a $3 box and 80 cents on a $4 box.

This statement shows the extremely radical cut in the duty; the proposed reduction upon common soap is greater than that proposed upon any other article in Schedule A with the exception of borax, which is produced almost exclusively in the United States.

A large part of the raw materials used in the manufacture of soap—expressed vegetable oils and essential oils—are to-day purchased through European markets.

With the decrease in the supply of animal fats in this country available for soap-making purposes, the tendency is to constantly use more and more of imported vegetable oils. Most of these oils pass through European markets and are largely controlled thereby. In view of these conditions the proposed duty of 5 per cent, equal to 15 or 20 cents a box, is not sufficient to insure to the American producer equality with his foreign competitor, but will give the European manufacturer an advantage. England and Germany have at present an advantage over the United States in the cost of labor, of alkalies, and of the vegetable oils, which are imported through the European markets.

The proposed duty would adversely affect our trade with our insular possessions. Before the acquisition by the United States of Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines, and Panama the entire soap markets of these countries were practically in the hands of foreign manufacturers. Since the acquisition of these possessions the United States tariff has enabled the American manufacturer to obtain an increasing trade, which will be checked and probably lost under the proposed duty.

The following table shows the shipments of common soap from the United States into Porto Rico:

1906	$230,107
1907	257,198
1908	348,733
1909	392,970
1910	410,765
1911	502,610
1912	555,192

The shipments from the United States to the Philippines were:

1906	$11,810
1907	6,806
1908	21,900
1909	22,917
1910	28,423
1911	41,244
1912	90,952

The shipments from the United States to Hawaii were:

1906	$70,628
1907	93,759
1908	124,273
1909	96,514
1910	117,950
1911	127,235
1912	161,490

The shipments from the United States to Panama were:

1906	$82,659
1907	102,688
1908	136,466
1909	141,814
1910	123,903
1911	139,611
1912	149,295

The American soap manufacturer knows by experience that English and Spanish soaps will immediately invade the Porto Rican market should the duty be reduced to the extent proposed. The Philippine market will in all probability also be lost by us to English, Spanish, and Japanese manufacturers.

AMERICAN EXPORTS OF SOAP DO NOT WARRANT THE RADICAL REDUCTION PROPOSED.

The Government figures relative to the total exports of common soap are misleading, unless carefully analyzed. The total exports in 1912, for example, in pounds, 57,855,457, and in dollars, $2,695,991, include the exports to Panama and the Philippines and also include a very large quantity of saponified cottonseed oil "foots," shipped in barrels, which is used in fulling mills and for other textile purposes, for which it is peculiarly adapted. These figures are not a correct index of the exportations of common laundry soap manufactured by your petitioners.

The exports of all soaps, excepting toilet or fancy soaps, from 1907 to 1912, inclusive, are as follows:

	Total, including Panama and Philippines.	Total, excluding Panama and Philippines (net foreign).	Panama, Philippines, Porto Rico, and Hawaii.
1907	$2,661,218	$2,551,723	$340,957
1908	2,165,267	2,006,841	631,432
1909	2,341,708	2,176,977	654,215
1910	2,140,676	1,988,350	681,041
1911	2,305,010	2,124,155	810,700
1912	2,695,991	2,449,744	962,929

It will be noted that the total exports of common soap (including "foots" soap) during the last six years have remained nearly stationary, while the exports to our insular possessions have steadily increased.

Notwithstanding constant efforts to build up an export business, American soap makers have met with almost entire failure, and it certainly will not help them to tax their imported raw materials and throw open their home market to foreign competition.

We renew our appeal not to make so radical a reduction in the duty on common soap, again calling attention to the fact that the industry in this country is a highly individualized business in which there is the keenest competition. The price at which common laundry soap is sold has not contributed to the high cost of living, since with the general increase of prices in other commodities in this country the price of common laundry soap has remained practically unchanged.

ESSENTIAL OILS.

(Paragraph 47.)

The essential oils used in the manufacture of common laundry soap are now and always have been upon the free list. It is proposed in H. R. 3321 to impose a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem upon these oils. A distinction should be made between the high-priced, more delicate perfumes used by the perfumers and the low-priced oils used in the manufacture of common laundry soap, namely, citronella, rosemary or anthoss, cassia, caraway, aspic or spike lavender, thyme, lemon grass, lavender, sassafras, oil of camphor, myrbane, and oil of cedar wood.

The oils in this list are practically used exclusively in the manufacture of common laundry soaps and are properly classed among the raw materials of the common laundry-soap industry. It is respectfully urged that an exception therefore be made as to the essential oils named, and that they be retained upon the free list. They are largely used in the manufacture of common laundry soap to counteract the natural odor of the soap, and for this reason have doubtless heretofore been included in the free list in preceding laws. They are necessary ingredients of common soaps and should not be taxed as luxuries.

The laundry-soap industry has not objected to a reduction of duty upon common soap, provided such reduction was not unreasonable in view of trade conditions, but to couple an excessive reduction of the duty on the manufactured article with a duty upon the essential oils used in the manufacture of soap is imposing a double burden upon the industry.

From a careful consideration of trade conditions it is evident that the proposed reduction from 20 per cent to 5 per cent ad valorem upon common soap is too radical.

It is respectfully submitted that the duty on common soap should not be reduced below 10 per cent ad valorem and that the essential oils used by the makers of common soap should remain on the free list.

We therefore petition that the following amendments be made in H. R. 3321:

1. Amend paragraph 67, line 17, by striking out the figure "5" and substituting therefor the figure "10."

2. Amend paragraph 47 by striking out, in line 14, the words "caraway; cassia; citronella and lemon-"; and, in line 15, the words "grass," "lav-"; in line 16, the words "ender, and aspic or spike lavender"; in line 17, the words "rosemary or"; in line 18, the words "anthoss; thyme"; and by inserting in the free list, in paragraph 566, at the end thereof, the following: "citronella, rosemary or anthoss, cassia, caraway, aspic, spike lavender, thyme, lemon grass, lavender, sassafras, oil of camphor, myrbane, and oil of cedar wood."

Respectfully submitted.

H. W. BROWN, OF THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., Chairman,
W. H. WADHAMS, OF B. T. BABBITT, Secretary,
F. H. BRENNAN, OF THE N. K. FAIRBANK CO.,
L. H. WALTKE, OF WM. WALTKE & CO.,
Committee of National Conference of Laundry Soap Manufacturers.

Mr. SMOOT. Is the Senator quite sure that the use of the word "perfumed," the first word in the paragraph, and the word "unperfumed," in line 8 of the paragraph, will not make all perfumed soaps dutiable at 10 per cent?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In reply to the Senator's question, I will say that I did not think of that. I thought it might be extremely difficult to find any soaps that were not perfumed soaps, and it might be hard to find soaps that would fall under the second classification.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator knows that that matter was decided in the Pears' Soap case.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. My attention was called to that case, and the decision distinguishing perfumed soap from unperfumed soap.

Mr. SMOOT. I think this would be better understood, and no mistake could follow, if we should strike out the word "perfumed" on line 6, page 7, and the word "unperfumed" on line 8. Then I do not think there would be any question as to what soaps would fall in each of the brackets. Then it would read:

Toilet soaps, 40 per cent ad valorem; medicinal soaps, 30 per cent ad valorem; castile soap and toilet soap—

That is, pure castile and castile toilet soap—

10 per cent ad valorem; all other soaps not specially provided for in this section, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. I think that would lead to very great confusion. It would make two toilet soaps.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should like to pass for the present the paragraph dealing with this subject. We have had more or less difficulty with it.

Mr. SMOOT. I meant "unperfumed toilet soap"; that is, take out those words, so it would read:

Castile soap, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, the Senator means to leave out "and unperfumed toilet soap"?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes. I do not want the word "toilet" left in. In other words, I suggest having it read this way. I will read the section just as it would appear:

Soaps: Toilet soaps, 40 per cent ad valorem; medicinal soaps, 30 per cent ad valorem; castile soap, 10 per cent ad valorem; all other soaps not specially provided for in this section, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Then there would be no question as to the perfumed soaps, and there would not be any question as to the castile soap being dutiable at only 10 per cent. There would not be any question as to the classification of the soap, because the Senator knows that after the decision that was rendered in the Pears' Soap case it was decided that there was hardly any soap made without perfume being used in it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I should be very willing to pass that section. I ask that section 67 may be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, the section will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning with paragraph 68, page 17, line 11.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 68, page 17, line 16, after the word "pound," to strike out "cyanide of, 1½ cents per pound," so as to make the paragraph read:

68. Soda: Benzoate of, 5 cents per pound; chlorate of, and nitrite of, ½ cent per pound; bicarbonate of, or supercarbonate of, or saleratus, and other alkalies containing 50 per cent or more of bicarbonate of soda; hydrate of, or caustic; phosphate of; hyposulphite of; sulphid of, and sulphite of, ½ cent per pound; chromate and bichromate of, and yellow prussiate of, ¾ cent per pound; borate of, or borax refined; crystal carbonate of, monohydrate, and sesquicarbonate of; sal soda, and soda crystals, ¼ cent per pound; and sulphate of soda crystallized, or Glauber salts, $1 per ton.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I notice that cyanide of soda, as well as cyanide of potash, in paragraph 65 are stricken out. I assume they have been placed upon the free list.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They are both placed upon the free list.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What was the object of that?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They are largely used in mining; and while cyanide of soda is produced to some extent in this country, our information was that cyanide of potash is imported. As I say, both are largely used in mining, and they were placed upon the free list. They are in the free list, which is arranged alphabetically.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Does the Senator say cyanide of potash is used in mining?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. It is.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What was the revenue from it? All the statistics seem to have been eliminated, because it was stricken out.

Mr. HUGHES. If the Senator will turn to the free list, I think he will find the information he desires.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, the statistics in relation to it are on the free list side?

Mr. HUGHES. Yes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What is the paragraph of the free list?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Five hundred and eighty-four.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the Senator will find that paragraph on page 147.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Cyanide of potash is in paragraph 584.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What paragraph of the bill is it?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Paragraph 584 for cyanide of potash, and paragraph 609 for cyanide of soda.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Why was it taken from the dutiable list and put on the free list?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. These articles are very largely used in mining, and are not produced in this country to any great extent.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course I assume that everything that is imported or that is produced is used for something; but these seem to be the only articles of the various preparations of potash and of soda which are taken from the dutiable list and placed on the free list, and I was curious to know why that had been done. Of course I know they are used for something.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maine yield to me for a moment?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Certainly.

Mr. PITTMAN. Both cyanide of potassium and cyanide of sodium are used in the reduction of gold and silver ores, and they are almost essential to the development of the gold and silver mining industry throughout the country. Both of these products are largely controlled by monopolies. In fact, all of the cyanide of sodium that is used in this country is produced practically by one concern. That material has had a tariff duty of 25 per cent in all past tariff bills, and the concern that produces it has held up the price in this country to a point about 25 per cent above that in Mexico and other countries.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I understood the Senator to say there was none of it produced in this country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I said I was informed that very little or none of the cyanide of potassium was produced here, but that a little of the cyanide of sodium was.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator from Nevada now says it is produced by some monopoly. Is that a domestic monopoly?

Mr. PITTMAN. It is both. A large portion of it is controlled by the Deutsche Gold & Silberscheideanstalt, of Frankfort on the Main, Germany. They own another institution in this country known as the Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co., of New York.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Why should the American market be opened for the benefit of a foreign monopoly?

Mr. PITTMAN. There is this reason for it: They are producing cyanide of potassium in Great Britain, and it will be noticed that the tariff on cyanide of sodium has been much higher than that on cyanide of potassium. That has enabled the monopoly that controls cyanide of soda to sell almost exclusively in this country; and they have increased the production of this one institution from about 1,000,000 to 12,000,000 pounds per annum.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What is the reason it is not made in this country?

Mr. PITTMAN. The main reason is that a patent on the cyanide of sodium is held by this German concern, which also owns the American concern, and therefore there can be no competition wih the cyanide of sodium.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The article now being upon the free list, and we being absolutely in the hands of the foreign monopoly, does the Senator think the price is likely to be reduced when they have no competition?

Mr. PITTMAN. I believe what will probably occur is that there will be a competition between the British producers of cyanide of potassium and the German producers of cyanide of potassium, which will also reduce the price of cyanide of sodium.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Did they compete before, when the articles were on the dutiable list?

Mr. PITTMAN. They are competing in other countries where they have no duty, and the price is much lower there than in the United States.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I fail to see why they should not compete for this market if they were both subject to the same duty.

Mr. PITTMAN. The reason of it is that the sodium product is running the potassium product out of the market.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The two products themselevs compete?

Mr. PITTMAN. The two products compete.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. They perform the same function in the mining industry?

Mr. PITTMAN. A very similar function.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course personally I know absolutely nothing about these articles. I was simply led by curiosity to ask the question. But I fail to see what object is to be gained by surrendering this market to either or both of two foreign monopolies.

Mr. PITTMAN. As has been suggested to me by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH], we are not surrendering the market to the foreigner at all. We have to-day none but foreigners controlling our market, and if the market must be controlled by foreigners we would rather have competition between those foreigners.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I understood the Senator to say that the article was made here to some extent, under permission from the foreign patentees.

Mr. PITTMAN. No; not under permission. The foreign institution absolutely owns, in its entirety, the domestic institution. It is the same institution operating in two countries.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It seems to me, according to the theories I have heard advanced on several other articles, that this article not being produced in this country, would be an ideal article from the Democratic standpoint upon which to raise revenue, and I fail to see why we should surrender the revenue on this article and get no compensation whatever except to help a foreign monopoly.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Government has derived little duty, because the tariff only prevented the importation of cyanide of potassium from Great Britain, while potassium of soda was made by the protected monopoly in America, and sold at a price permitted by the tariff. But we are also, I believe, opposed to monopolies, and both the Republican Party and the Democratic Party have constantly urged the encouraging of industries of all characters in this country. I want to state that the mining industry of this country is one of the greatest of its industries. Having placed upon the free list all of the tools and implements essential to the other industries, I think it is no more than right that when we are dealing with an essential of the development of mining in the western country we should also place it upon the free list, especially when it is controlled by a monopoly.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and continued to the end of paragraph 70, page 18, as follows:

69. Sponges: Trimmed or untrimmed but not advanced in value by chemical processes, 10 per cent ad valorem; bleached sponges and sponges advanced in value by processes involving chemical operations, manufactures of sponges, or of which sponge is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

70. Talcum, ground talc, steatite, and French chalk, cut, powdered, washed, or pulverized, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PAGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Maine on what particular ground the committee has reduced the duty on talc from 20 to 15 per cent?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator that it is in general line with the reductions which have been made all through the bill.

Mr. PAGE. The committee was not looking for an increase of revenue under this item, was it? I observe by the handbook that the revenue, commencing at $5,000 in 1896, and increasing to $9,000 in 1905 and $23,000 in 1912, under the committee's estimate will be $19,000 in 1914; so that I judge that as a revenue producer you reduce rather than increase the revenue on talc.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Under the estimate, the Senator is correct; there would be some reduction.

Mr. PAGE. Did I correctly or incorrectly understand that one of the principles that actuate the Democratic Party in the preparation of this tariff bill is that there shall be a strong competitive basis, and that where competition is severe and the industry is not in the hands of a trust it has been the policy of your party to retain the duties on all industries in order that they may live? Am I correct in that assumption?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I will say to the Senator that I am informed that talc enters into other manufactures; and in line with the general rates under the bill, the basket clause carrying a duty of 15 per cent, we made the duty upon this article to correspond. We took French chalk, which had been classified, I think, with other kinds of chalk, and put it in this section with talcum.

Mr. PAGE. This happens to be an article that is produced in my own county, and I was a little curious to know just the basis of the committee's reasoning.

I recall very distinctly that during the campaign which led up to the election of President Wilson it was asserted many times by him that he did not wish to disturb any legitimate industry if it was on a competitive basis. I can not understand why this industry, which needs protection, should be disturbed, in view of the fact that the increase of imports has been very, very great for these many years. I think the imports are about three times as large now as they were in 1896, and they have increased about 250 per cent since 1905.

I happen to know, because I am in a position to know from my close association with this corporation that makes talc in my State, that it has been figuring on the very closest basis in order to live. Year by year the amount of imported talc has increased. Let me give you the figures.

In 1896 there were 6,000,000 pounds imported; in 1905, 8,000,000 pounds; in 1912, 20,000,000 pounds; and your estimate is that in 1914 under this bill the imports will be 22,000,000 pounds. With this constant increase of talc coming in from foreign countries it seems to me it comes entirely within the pledge of the President that where a small industry was on a competitive basis it should not be disturbed.

I do not know that I care to discuss this matter or to take time with it, because it is a very small one; but I hardly think I can do less than make a motion to restore the present duty of 20 per cent. I will not ask for a roll call upon it. I believe that if there is any article in the whole schedule that comes within the promise of the President that a business that is on a strictly competitive basis should not be disturbed it is talc.

If the President did not mean what he said about business on a competitive basis like this, what did he mean when he told us that such industries should not be disturbed? I think his statement was that manufacturers of American goods that were on a competitive basis need have no fear that they would be disturbed. I know that this little industry in my own county has been struggling very hard for the past six or eight years to meet the intense and immense competition of foreign imports, and your own statement here shows that the importations have been so great that it seems to me you ought not to disturb this schedule.

Mr. President, I move that line 5 of section 70 be amended by striking out "15" and inserting in lieu thereof "20."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed, on page 18, line 5, to strike out "15" and insert "20."

Mr. GRONNA. Do I understand that the amendment by the Senator from Vermont is to paragraph 69?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; paragraph 70.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Page 18, line 5. It applies to talcum, ground talc, and so forth.

Mr. GALLINGER and others. Question!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator in charge of the bill will not object, I should like to have some explanation about paragraph 69. Why does the committee estimate that with a duty of 10 per cent there will be a less importation than under a duty of 18.81 per cent? I find in your estimate that in 1912 under the present law there were imported sponges to the amount of $311,489, and there was collected of revenue $58,596. The estimate in the handbook is given here at $150,000 and an estimated revenue of $15,000 under the proposed bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. In reply to the question of the Senator from North Dakota, it seems to me there is evidently a mistake in that estimate. It must be a mistake.

Mr. GRONNA. I am simply asking for information. I can not comprehend how it can be estimated that the importations would be more than cut in two when the rate is reduced nearly 50 per cent.

Mr. GALLINGER and Mr. LODGE. It is a mistake.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I share with the Senator in surprise that there should be any such estimate.

Mr. JONES. I should like to know in the matter of the manufacture of sponges what basis there is for the estimate that there will be practically $200,000 increase when there was only $58 worth imported under a 30 per cent duty, and they estimate an importation of $200,000 under a 15 per cent duty.

Mr. SMOOT. I was just going to call the Senator's attention to the fact that that was an error. There is no doubt of it in the world. But I should like to ask the Senator from Maine what items could be called manufactures of sponge. I know the present law has the exact wording. I remember that at the time I tried to find some articles in the United States manufactured from sponges, but I have not been able yet to find one. Of course it is the sponges themselves. You can see there is a mistake in the book, because it says the present ad valorem is 18.81 on the importations of 1912, whereas the rate specifically states that sponges are 20 per cent.

Mr. GRONNA. I thought there must be some mistake. That rate is 20 per cent. The new rate proposed is 10 per cent. It is figured out that the ad valorem rate under the present law is 18.81.

While I am on my feet, I should like to know from the Senator from Maine to what extent we produce or manufacture sponges in this country. I know very little about it, and I am anxious to know how much of an inudstry there is in this country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I can not answer the Senator to what extent. I know sponges are gathered here and are very largely imported. The extent of the manufacture of sponges I am unable to state.

Mr. HUGHES. My understanding of it is that the bleaching and cleaning of sponges is regarded as a manufacture. That seems to be consistent with the language of the law that they are "further advanced in value."

Mr. GRONNA. I will ask the Senator from Florida if he will kindly tell us something about the industry of sponges?

Mr. BRYAN. I could not do that at length; it is getting late. I understand that sponges are taken up and brought to land and cleansed. I suppose what is meant by manufacturing is the bleaching and cleansing of the sponges and getting them in a shape to be used. Of course, they could not be used as they are caught. There are two portions of my State where quite a number of sponges are manufactured.

Mr. SMOOT. Then the wording is wrong, because it says "bleached sponges and sponges advanced in value by processes involving chemical operations." Then it says "manufactures of sponges." So the wording of not only the present law, but the wording of this proposed law which has followed the present law is wrong in relation to the manufacture of sponges.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I must be very unfortunate in expressing myself. I have tried to get information as to what extent this industry is carried on in the United States. It seems to me that the committee ought to be prepared to give the information. I am asking the question in good faith. I should like to get some information as to what extent the industry is carried on in this country.

Mr. BRYAN. I have no disposition to conceal from the Senator any information I have, which is very little.

Mr. GRONNA. I am sure the Senator has no such disposition.

Mr. BRYAN. On the Gulf coast of Florida there is a town near Tampa in which it is the principal industry. I think nearly everybody who lives at Tarpon Springs is engaged in the sponge industry. It is also carried on quite extensively around Key West. I know of it principally from the fact that every now and then the legislature is appealed to for legislation to protect the sponges from destruction. There is quite a Greek colony on the lower Gulf coast engaged extensively in the industry of sponges. I know very little about the matter. If the Senator is interested in it, he can very quickly find the information and familiarize himself with the subject.

Mr. GRONNA. Is the industry carried on to any great extent in any other State except Florida?

Mr. BRYAN. I do not know. I doubt if it is.

Mr. HUGHES. I should like to call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the reason for the apparent error in the estimate under this bracket is that they have been separated into crude and bleached sponges. That will account for it.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator can not explain it in that way, because this says "sponges, 20 per cent," and in your report you say that the importation of sponges in 1910 and 1912 was 18.58 per cent. Of course it is a mistake; that is all.

Mr. HUGHES. No; it is not a mistake, if the Senator pleases. I am convinced upon an examination that it is not a mistake. In 1912 under the Payne-Aldrich law the imports were $311,000, and our estimate for the proposed law is $150,000, and below it we have $200,000. We have simply separated the crude sponges from all other forms of sponges and manufactures of sponges. That is the "error" which was made.

Mr. SMOOT. I will not detain the Senate any further than to state that the present law specifically says that the rate is 20 per cent; it is no matter whether there is a large importation or a small importation, they can not be made here to bear 18.58, because the law says they are 20 per cent.

The reading of the bill was continued, as follows:

71. Vanillin, 10 cents per ounce; vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound.

Mr. LODGE. The same question arises in regard to vanilla beans and tonka beans, taking them from the free list and putting them on the dutiable list, that has arisen in the case of the essential oils, and so forth. These are used very largely in the making of flavoring extracts. They are in general and common use. The vanilla bean is of course probably more largely used than anything else. But that question in principle has been argued to-day in various directions. It has been passed upon by the Senate aginst the contention of this side that articles of that sort, not the growth of the United States, should be on the free list. I therefore will not think of detaining the Senate at this time, but I ask to have priuted in my remarks a very brief statement from a maker of flavoring extracts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., May 5, 1913.

Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The imposition of a duty of 30 cents per pound on vanilla beans will still further injure the flavoring-extract industry, which is struggling under an enormous load of laws, rulings, duties, taxes, etc., at the present time. We are paying a tax to the Government of $2.10 per gallon on every gallon of alcohol that we use in our business. Alcohol constitutes one of the principal products that is used in the manufacture of flavoring extracts, probably not less than 50 per cent of the cost of the raw material.

Vanilla extract and other extracts are household necessities used in innumerable common articles of food which would be nearly, if not wholly, unpalatable without them. Medical authorities recognize the dietetic value of flavoring extracts in foods.

All materials used by extract manufacturers have increased in cost to such a great extent that the profit to the producer has been reduced to the narrowest margin. Within the past five years vanilla beans have increased in cost from 50 per cent to 200 per cent. Lemon oil has advanced from a price of 65 cents per pound, which prevailed three years ago, to $3.20, the present market price. This represents an increase of 450 per cent. Neither lemon oil or vanilla beans are produced in this country, and therefore need no protection. An advance in price to the consumer will be absolutely necessary if the proposed duty on vanilla beans and lemon oil should become a law. This increased cost to the consumer would also bring about largely the sale of inferior substitutes for pure vanilla and lemon, or imitation extracts, which would supersede pure flavors, to the harm of everyone who uses flavoring extracts in foods.

There are about 900,000 pounds of vanilla beans shipped to this country annually. Of this amount 400,000 pounds are consumed here. These are Mexican beans and Bourbon beans from the islands of Madagascar, Seychelles, Reunion, and Comores. The balance of 500,000 pounds are made up of inferior quality beans coming from the Tahiti Islands. These beans are all shipped from the islands to San Francisco, and practically the entire crop is reshipped from that point to Hamburg, Germany. In the event of the tax on vanilla beans it will undoubtedly follow that shipments of the Tahiti beans will be made direct from the islands to Hamburg, thus eliminating any income to the Government. This method of shipment will surely come about when the Panama Canal is opened, so that the revenue from Tahiti beans, which constitute at least 50 per cent of the importations at the present time, will be entirely lost.

Respectfully, yours,

BAKER EXTRACT CO.,
By T. W. CARMAN.

Mr. SMOOT. There is a little difference between vanilla beans and the items that have been considered in the same way to-day, and I wish to state briefly what it is.

In five years 2,006,693 pounds of vanilla beans passed through the United States from Tahiti, for which American merchants supplied merchandise. In other words, San Francisco has been a clearing house for vanilla beans and they have furnished the natives of the island of Tahiti with goods taken in exchange for vanilla beans. That amounts to about $5,000,000 at the price of vanilla beans. We have, of course, also the American manufacture of vanilla beans, but the great bulk of the trade in the United States is the export trade; in other words, they handle them in San Francisco and they go right through and are sold to England, Germany, and other countries. If this duty is placed upon vanilla beans, that trade is not going to come to the United States; San Francisco will lose that trade entirely; vanilla beans will be shipped direct to foreign countries; and that is where the trade will go.

Mr. JONES. The Senator certainly must know that the estimate is that at 30 cents a pound there will be a million pounds come in, and when free only a little over 100,000 pounds came in.

Mr. SMOOT. I did not speak of that. I spoke of what had come in the last five years, that had passed through San Francisco and been shipped to foreign countries. That is only an estimate on the part of our friends on the other side.

Mr. WEEKS. I should like to inquire of the Senator in charge of the bill how he expects it to be possible to reduce the price of vanilla beans by adding a duty of 30 cents. I notice the price has increased between 1910 and 1912 from about $1.50 a pound to $2 a pound, which is now the prevailing price, and yet it is anticipated that by adding a duty of 30 cents a pound the price will be reduced from $2.50 to $2.

Mr. HUGHES. Does the Senator say that is now the prevailing price?

Mr. WEEKS. I understand so. It is the last price given in the table which has been submitted.

Mr. HUGHES. Does the Senator understand that $2.41 is now the prevailing price?

Mr. WEEKS. I understand so.

Mr. HUGHES. Not in 1912. This is 1913.

Mr. WEEKS. In 1912 the price was $2.41. Now how do you expect to reduce that to $2 by adding 30 cents a pound?

Mr. HUGHES. What is it now?

Mr. WEEKS. I understand it is about the price it was last year. I have not the exact price here.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, if the Senator had gone back of 1912 he would have found a possible explanation. In 1912 the price was $2.41; in 1910 it was only $1.51; in 1905 it was $1.43. In other words, vanilla beans vary in value from year to year like almost everything else. The estimate is that the normal price for vanilla beans is now $2. It was put in at that price, or perhaps at less than that price, with a duty added making it $2. It will not do to jump at a conclusion that the normal price of vanilla beans is $2.41 just because that happened to be the price in 1912; nor does it do to jump at the conclusion that anybody has supposed that putting a duty of 30 cents a pound upon it could reduce its price. The natural supposition is, in all charity, that the man in making the estimate was taking the price of vanilla beans this year instead of for 1912.

Mr. WEEKS. I should like to call the attention of the Senator from Mississippi to the fact that the price has not been variable except in an ascending scale. There has been a constant rise in the price.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I beg the Senator's pardon. If he will look further back he will find that one time the price was over $4.

Mr. WEEKS. I did not know but what the committee had some information which led them to the conclusion.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Doubtless the committee did have it. The Committee on Ways and Means did have it, I have not the slightest doubt.

Mr. WEEKS. That is what I asked for.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] a moment ago, always being critical, said that we were going to increase the importations from 841,000 pounds, in round numbers, to 1,000,000 by putting a duty upon the article. If the Senator had taken the trouble to look back he would have found the reason for that estimate. We imported 237,000 pounds in 1896; 608,000 pounds in 1905; seven hundred and ninety-six and a half thousand pounds in 1910; and eight hundred and forty-one and over a half thousand pounds in 1912.

Mr. JONES. But there was an increase of only 50,000 pounds in the last two years when they were on the free list. So the committee has made a very violent assumption in estimating that there will be 50,000 pounds imported next year.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will put that in the form of percentage he will find the basis of the estimate, whether correct or incorrect. It was the supposition that they will continue to increase their importation at the same percentage, and therefore the conclusion was arrived at that it would be a million pounds.

Of course, it sounds awfully funny to say that you are going to increase the importation by raising the duty, but the man who made this estimate went on the basis that America would not consume that much, and that the percentage of increase which had been going on for years would continue to go on in spite of the taxes, and it will, because vanilla beans and these things are used in connection with products that people are going to have anyhow.

Mr. JONES. The suggestion of the Senator may be correct, but according to the tables here the actual increase from 1910 to 1912 was practically 50,000 pounds. That would be 25,000 pounds a year. But granting that it will increase 50,000 pounds in the next year, it would still be 100,000 pounds short of the million.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Again the Senator is wrong. In 1910 the importation was 796,589 pounds and in 1912 it was 841,639 pounds.

Mr. JONES. Where am I wrong?

Mr. WILLIAMS. You are wrong, because you continue to contend that the increase was only 50,000 pounds a year, when, had you taken the trouble to go back to 1905, you would have found the importations were only 608,000 at that time.

Mr. JONES. I was not referring to that, I will say to the Senator from Mississippi. I was merely referring to the fact that from 1910 to 1912 the increase was practically only 50,000 pounds.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Ah, for that one year?

Mr. JONES. No; for two years.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; but the Senator said that was the yearly increase.

Mr. JONES. No; I said that from 1910 to 1912, which is two years, according to my arithmetic, the increase was only 50,000 pounds, or 25,000 pounds a year.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will not the Senator allow us to dispose of this item?

Mr. SIMMONS. Let us dispose of this paragraph.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I withdraw the motion.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. GRONNA. Will the Senator from Utah yield to me?
Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.
Mr. GRONNA. I ask that this item be passed over until Monday. I should like to go into it. I do not care to delay the Senate, but I would prefer to have it passed over until Monday.
Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. According to the arrangement under which we are proceeding that reservation was made in favor of any Senator who desired a paragraph to be laid aside for further consideration.
Mr. SIMMONS. I will ask the Senator from North Dakota to let action be taken on it now, with the understanding that we can go back to it if he so desires on Monday.
Mr. SMOOT. Then, Mr. President, with that understanding, I move, in line 7, page 18, in paragraph 71, after the word "ounce," to strike out "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound."
Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. That can be considered as the pending amendment.
Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator desire a vote on that amendment now?
Mr. SMOOT. I have made a motion for that purpose.
Mr. BURTON. I desire to be heard briefly on that, Mr. President.
Mr. SMOOT. Then, I am perfectly willing to have it passed over.
Mr. GALLINGER. There was a little private understanding that we should adjourn a little earlier to-day, and I think the amendment had better go over.
Mr. SIMMONS. That is entirely satisfactory, although I am somewhat anxious to finish this schedule.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.
The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded with the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, July 28, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 26, 1913.

SOLICITOR GENERAL.

John William Davis, of West Virginia, to be Solicitor General, vice William Marshall Bullitt, resigned.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

B. A. Enloe, jr., of Oklahoma, to be United States marshal for the eastern district of Oklahoma, vice Samuel G. Victor, whose term has expired.

POSTMASTER.

GEORGIA.

Teressa G. Williams to be postmaster at Greenville, Ga., in place of Pearl Williams, deceased.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 26, 1913.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Jefferson K. Quillin, Clayton.

FLORIDA.

William E. McEwen, Wauchula.

HAWAII.

John M. Bright, Lahaina.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Frank P. Hobbs, Wolfeboro.
James H. Willey, Milton.

NEW YORK.

Robert S. Ames, Lake Placid.
Richard L. Earl, Honeoye Falls.
Alpheus D. Jessup, Florida.
Nellie E. Lempfert, Stony Brook.
Charles Miller, Baldwin.
Robert W. Parrish, Brown Station.
James L. Reeve, Mattituck.
Frederick H. Smith, Milton.
Hugh Smiley, Mohonk Lake.
Stephen R. Williams, Kenmore.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

John F. McGowan, Hartford.
Alfred E. Paine, Doland.

WEST VIRGINIA.

C. B. Riggle, Middlebourne.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, July 26, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.
The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:
Father in heaven, fill us with grace divine, that, with clear vision, a willing heart, and inflexible will, we may as individuals, and therefore as a people, keep step with the onward march of progress toward the ideal civilization, when laws shall be few and cheerfully obeyed and each man concerned lest he cheat his neighbor, bear false witness against him, or put a stumblingblock in his way; when distrust shall give place to confidence, selfishness be drowned in generosity, hate consumed in the fire of love, contentions be lost in the music of concord, and each vie with each in living the golden rule that Thy kingdom may come and Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. In the Christ spirit. Amen.
The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read.
Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.
Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Massachusetts to withhold his point of order until I can make a request for unanimous consent.
The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts yield to the gentleman from Tennessee for the purpose of making a request for unanimous consent?
Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I must treat everyone alike.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Eighty-two Members present; not a quorum.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.
The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 4 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, July 28, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII,
Mr. MANN introduced a bill (H. R. 7134) authorizing the Department of Commerce to make original investigation and research concerning forms and processes of manufacture, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:
By Mr. MOSS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 7135) granting an increase of pension to Gideon Mason; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.
Also, a bill (H. R. 7136) for the relief of Mrs. Harvey Sayre; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:
By Mr. BURKE of South Dakota: Petition of the South Dakota Bankers' Association, Watertown, S. Dak., favoring the passage of a 1-cent letter-postage rate; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.
By Mr. LONERGAN: Petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, favoring the passage of House bill 103, regulating locomotive headlights; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
By Mr. WALLIN: Petition of the president of the United States Life Insurance Co., of New York, protesting against the passage of legislation exempting life insurance companies from the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

MONDAY, July 28, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The VICE PRESIDENT resumed the chair.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

SENATOR FROM GEORGIA.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a certificate from the governor of Georgia certifying the election of Hon. AUGUSTUS O. BACON as a Senator from the State of Georgia, which was read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF GEORGIA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Atlanta, July 25, 1913.

To the President of the Senate of the United States:

This is to certify that at an election held pursuant to law in the State of Georgia on the 15th day of July, 1913, by the electors in said State having the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature, AUGUSTUS OCTAVIUS BACON was by said electors duly chosen a Senator from said State in the Senate of the Congress of the United States for and during the remainder of the term of six years beginning on the 4th day of March, 1913, and ending on the 3d day of March, 1919, the returns from said election having been canvassed by the general assembly of said State and the result certified to this department on this date.

In witness whereof his excellency, the governor, and the great seal of the State of Georgia hereto affixed at the capitol in Atlanta this the 25th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1913.

JOHN M. SLATON, Governor.

By the Governor:
PHILIP COOK, Secretary of State.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, for over 20 years past the advocates of popular government have been pressing forward toward a change of our plan of electing United States Senators. During the present year a sufficient number of States had ratified the right of the people to elect their Senators, and the proclamation was issued announcing an amendment to the Constitution to this end. On July 15 the first election was held under the new amendment, and in the State of Georgia the people for the first time selected a United States Senator at the ballot box.

It is with great pleasure that I bring to the attention of the Senate the fact that, without opposition, the senior Senator from Georgia received all the votes cast at this election, that his credentials are here and have been read, and that he is present. I ask that an opportunity be given that he may qualify as elected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator elect will present himself at the Vice President's desk for that purpose.

Mr. BACON was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. SMITH of Georgia; and the oath prescribed by law was administered to him.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Fall	Martine, N. J.	Smith, S. C.
Bacon	Fletcher	Myers	Smoot
Bankhead	Gallinger	Nelson	Sterling
Borah	Gronna	Norris	Stone
Bradley	Hollis	O'Gorman	Sutherland
Brady	James	Overman	Swanson
Brandegee	Johnson, Me.	Page	Thomas
Bristow	Johnston, Ala.	Perkins	Thompson
Bryan	Jones	Pittman	Thornton
Catron	Kenyon	Reed	Tillman
Chamberlain	Kern	Robinson	Townsend
Chilton	La Follette	Saulsbury	Vardaman
Clapp	Lane	Sheppard	Walsh
Clark, Wyo.	Lea	Sherman	Warren
Clarke, Ark.	Lewis	Shields	Weeks
Crawford	Lodge	Simmons	Williams
Cummins	McLean	Smith, Ga.	Works
Dillingham	Martin, Va.	Smith, Mich.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-one Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The presentation of petitions and memorials is in order.

PETITION.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a petition of sundry citizens of Ingham County, Mich., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women, which was referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 2836) to provide a penalty for retention or misuse of confidential records by former Government employees; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A bill (S. 2837) granting a pension to Matilda Robertson (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McLEAN:

A bill (S. 2838) granting an increase of pension to Ruth E. Putnam (with accompanying paper); and

A bill (S. 2839) granting an increase of pension to Theodore C. Bates (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. POMERENE:

A bill (S. 2840) for the relief of Edgar R. Kellogg; and

A bill (S. 2841) for the relief of the estate of Francis E. Lacey; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHIELDS:

A bill (S. 2842) to reimburse Jetta Lee, late postmaster at Newport, Tenn., for key funds stolen from post office (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Claims.

THE MODERN BY-PRODUCT COKE OVEN (S. DOC. NO. 145).

Mr. BANKHEAD. I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a public document a pamphlet I hold in my hand, by C. A. Meissner, chairman coke committee, United States Steel Corporation. I will say by way of information to the Senate that it is a treatise by an eminent author on the conservation of the mineral resources of the United States. I have examined it carefully, and I think it contains more valuable information which will lead to greater economy in the production of coke, iron, and steel, if the suggestions are carried out, than any other document printed. The paper contains illustrations which I ask may be printed in connection therewith.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the paper with illustrations will be printed as a public document.

THE TARIFF.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3321, the unfinished business.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

Mr. THORNTON. I desire to announce that at the close of the routine business on next Thursday I shall expect to address the Senate on the pending tariff bill with particular reference to the sugar schedule.

Mr. GRONNA. I wish to announce that at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. THORNTON] I shall wish to make some observations on the tariff bill, and especially on the agricultural schedule.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, before the pending tariff bill can be intelligently discussed it is necessary to understand the circumstances and conditions under which it was conceived and brought forth. It may not be without profit to review briefly the events of the last four or five years, which have culminated in the legislation of this Congress.

I shall not enter upon a detailed discussion of the bill now before us, for all know how useless that would be, inasmuch as it is already clearly known that a sufficient number of Democratic Senators are bound to vote for the administration's measure, either upon its first passage through the Senate or after conference, as it will be after the final vote is had. Furthermore, it is better for the country to have this question settled without further delay. Already weary months have been spent by the majority in shaping a bill, the fundamentals of which had been established by Executive order in advance, and I trust no one will unduly postpone the time when the new inevitable fiscal policy, promulgated by men more foreign in their sympathies than American, shall begin its operation. I shall delay the vote but a short time.

It is said that the Payne tariff bill caused the pending measure. To a certain extent that is true; but it was not because the Payne bill was intrinsically a bad bill that a political upheaval occurred, but rather it was partially because politicians said it was a bad bill and a betrayal of Republican pledges. I am clear in my own mind, however, that the act of 1909 was the convenient means which accomplished Republican defeat and gave the Democratic Party its opportunity.

Industrial, moral, and intellectual progress was never so great as under the unhampered operation of the Payne tariff law. It closed no factory. It denied to none an opportunity to work at the greatest wage ever paid in any land at any time. It filled our Treasury to overflowing and supplied the money for the most extensive internal improvements ever undertaken in our national life. Under it the prosperity of every producing and creating class of our citizens has been increased. Under it our markets abroad have been extended. Under it our production at home has multiplied. The impetus given to manufacture drew labor from every quarter and the demand which high wages created for foodstuffs caused these products to increase in value, and the Democratic campaign cry of 1896 that prices were too low was changed, and in 1912 they were too high. Nothing could more clearly show the substantial business prosperity which has maintained under the existing tariff than its ability to withstand up to this time even approximately the destructive attacks by the present administration. But if this is so, how can it be said that the Payne law was the cause of the unfortunate political condition in which the country finds itself to-day?

Recently veterans of the Civil War from Dixie and the Northland held a reunion on one of the most famous battle fields of the world. They gathered at that place, made sacred by the results of those gloriously awful three days' struggle, and with faltering steps and age-dimmed eyes they sought familiar spots which lagging memories said were there. Gettysburg is a beautiful place, where grass and flowers and trees and marble attempt to cover the scars of war on the sides of its hills, but it is not that sloping grave-studded field of Pennsylvania that makes Gettysburg sacred. It is because that there 50 years ago 160,000 of the flower of the fairest Nation on earth met in the greatest battle of history. It is because from its hills and vales the spirits of 40,000 American heroes took their flight to the realm where war drums never beat and where battle flags are forever furled. It is because that was the spot where the resurrection light of a redeemed and united Nation penetrated the gloom of agony and death.

The Battle of Gettysburg had to be fought, but the field is entitled to neither blame nor censure.

The Payne bill was the Gettysburg where the factions of the Republican Party were formed in battle array, and it was but an incident to the political results which followed. The Democratic Party, in the campaigns of 1910 and 1912, were beneficiaries of Republican dissensions. When the tariff revision of 1909 occurred, the inevitable conflict between certain long-recognized and arrogant leaders of the Republican Party on one side and a new set of equally determined men who desired to be leaders on the other side was on. The tariff furnished the opportunity of the latter class to exploit the dictatorial and inexcusable methods of the former, and in the struggle for leadership the Republican Party was sacrificed. I myself desired a more radical revision of the tariff, not that I expected any great benefit therefrom to the consumers, but because there seemed to be a great demand for such a revision, and it could be made at that time without injury to the welfare of the country.

The struggle against the political boss was waging before the tariff bill of 1909 was drawn. Its first expression was given when certain Republican leaders in the House resisted the reform measures of President Roosevelt. Insurgency against the rules of the House developed into insurgency against Speaker Cannon and his kitchen cabinet. It was a protest of Representatives against the close corporation of legislative party managers. The cause of insurgency was everlastingly right, as history will record, but it furnished the opportunity for the professional agitator. It became popular to attack any active and prominent Republican, and many men who otherwise would have been born to blush unseen in the desert of obscurity suddenly sprang into prominence, and the lecture platforms throughout the country were the opportunity both for profit and exploitation as they were also for much desirable information and entertainment.

In the midst of this excitement the tariff bill of 1909 came up for consideration. The history of that struggle when read in the clearer light of the future will disclose that it was a contest waged principally for the object of leadership. The bill in the Senate was in charge of men who gave little thought to Republican harmony and treated all opponents of the measure as part of the enemy. The minority faction of the Republicans had the opportunity to gain notoriety by fighting the majority, and neither side manifested any strong desire to unite their forces against the common political enemy and in favor of a bill which would be reasonably acceptable to all.

In the Civil War there were guerrilla bands which fought from ambush and fired from the rear.

Stonewall Jackson, one of the greatest generals of the Confederacy and one whom the Northern Army had not captured or destroyed, was, by mistake, shot by his own soldiers. So, in the tariff war, there were influences which worked by methods not known to usual warfare, and the Republican Party, either intentionally or by mistake, was shot to pieces by its own forces.

The Democratic Party was the beneficiary of this condition, it having been furnished the ammunition with which to rout its disorganized opponents.

From the insurgent effort has come great good to the country, and, as usual in matters of reform, some harm has attached. Popular government, except in this Congress, is more a fact to-day because of the agitation against machine methods and political bossism. The demand for cleaner politics and wider participation in government by the people is irresistible, and, if a republic is desirable, this movement is right. Real, genuine reform is never lost, although it may be retarded and temporarily suspended. It seems to me that greater and more substantial progress could be made if those elements which effect it and really desire it would not forget that in striving for a good care should be taken to do no wrong. The muckraker while wearing the livery of a just cause is its worst enemy. Justice is not advanced by doing injustice. To-day, as at all times in the past, the sensational is too prominently featured and too little attention given to the truth. Indeed, a saturnalia of abuse and misrepresentation seems to be reigning, and Congress has been stampeded into investigations of itself, and the two Houses are struggling between themselves to get possession of self-convicted scoundrels who have capitalized for financial gain the existing disposition to abuse Congressmen. Too frequently investigating committees of Congress become the instruments of partisan politics, and contempt is thereby heaped upon the National Legislature. In the wild scramble to disclose corruption the honest and sincere are deliberately and with malice aforethought besmirched with the slime of the muckraker. This is not only wrong to the individual unjustly attacked but it tends greatly to weaken just and proper criticism by creating doubt in the mind of the public as to the truth of anything that is published.

Business men and laboring men who have felt that under the Constitution they were permitted to present their views to their representatives and that it was their duty to do so are being attacked because some mountebanks have boasted of their ability to influence public men and mold legislation. That improper methods have been employed at times, that some cases of corruption have existed, no one doubts, but that men in public and private life as a general rule are honest and incorruptible is beyond dispute. Is the Nation to be strengthened either at home or abroad, is liberty to be more secure and government more desirable, by creating general contempt for business men and Congressmen? Have we reached the time when success in business without regard to the means employed to attain it is to be condemned? Criticism of wrong should be as severe as the facts warrant, and public men especially should not escape if their public acts and conduct are such as to merit condemnation. Faithfulness to public service demands that criticism of improper action should be free and unhampered, but it should always be based upon unquestioned facts and not upon innuendo or falsehood.

Why, sir, our grandeur as a Nation has been achieved, so far as its material greatness is concerned, by men of superior genius who have had the ability and courage to see and undertake and accomplish the things which have been done. Our mines and factories, our railroads and steamboat lines, our telegraph and telephone, in fact, our every great thing, has been brought to pass by men who were wise enough to see opportunities, courageous enough to undertake their development, and skillful enough to carry them to success.

This would be a sad and poor world if all of its citizens had no greater business ability than is possessed by the professional political agitator. The great majority of those who place successful men in the class of semicriminals have never given labor a day's work, have never established or maintained an industry that has added a material thing of value to the comfort and happiness of mankind. It should be our business to so legislate as to prevent oppression and wrong by the influential and strong upon the weak and helpless, but the door of opportunity for unbounded honest success should be kept wide open, and simply because a man has and is, is not sufficient reason for wholesale condemnation. It is only wrong which should be attacked, and success is not prima facie evidence of wrong.

The Democratic Party, through a division in the Republican ranks, is in charge of the Government by virtue of a minority of the votes cast at the last election. Government by the minority is contrary to the spirit of democracy, and at the earliest legal opportunity the majority should assume control. The Democratic Party as at present constituted has had little experience in affirmative legislation and administration. Some of its members have had, but such are in the hopeless minority.

Its mission has been one of opposition. For years it has been engaged in the work of destruction. It has experienced its most exquisite pleasure in fomenting discord and encouraging class strife. Coming, as a majority of its strength does come, from a section where labor is the poorest paid, the most servile, and has the fewest political rights of any in the United States, it stands as the laboring man's friend; yet one of its first acts of legislation was to write into the statutes a law which while giving labor a stone when it asked for bread records the shameful fact of class legislation dangerous to the very life of the Republic.

Such a party is now in full control of the Nation, and after months of secret work the Democratic Senate has presented the pending bill. It was conceived in hatred of the American policy of protection and brought forth in the darkness of the secret caucus chamber under the professional charge of one who has never had any experience in business obstetrics. Is it any wonder the thing is misshapen and deformed? Is it any wonder American progress and prosperity look with disfavor upon it?

In the campaign of 1912 Mr. Wilson assured the people that no legitimate business would be disturbed by a Democratic revision of the tariff. The Baltimore platform, as understood by the ordinary citizen, declares that no legitimate business would suffer, but now we are told that by legitimate business was meant business that could stand without protection. Is that what the Democratic candidate meant before election? Certainly that is not what many of the men who voted for him understood him to mean. I realize, of course, that Democratic platforms have declared that protection is unconstitutional, and since election the President has announced that a protective tariff is a clog to industry, and by throwing it off business will be benefited. It is predicted that the wits of business men will be sharpened so as to meet their foreign competitors.

All Democrats will claim when they come to vote on this bill, although many of them will not so claim in private conversation, that the proposed bill when enacted into law will make business better. It is loudly asserted that it will reduce the cost of living and at the same time encourage business. A great benefit will result to American producers by the admission of millions of dollars' worth of goods made by foreign labor and foreign capital, which these American manufacturers must supplant if they are to keep their factories running and their men employed. How will they do it? The Democrats say reduce their profits. But suppose, as is the fact with a majority of them, the profits are already as small as possible for a going concern. They could reduce their wage scale, but that might subject them to an investigation by this administration and, besides, it means injustice and suffering to the laborers. Finally the advocates of this bill will say, then let these men go out of business, for inasmuch as it needs protection it is not legitimate. But this would leave the field to the foreigner and to the big concerns who are already condemned as trusts. Will this administration abandon its anteelection arguments and favor monopoly in order to meet the conditions of foreign competition? Turn whichsoever way they may the advocates of competition between American producers and foreign producers without a tariff to equalize the difference between conditions here and abroad will meet disaster.

But let us see how consistent our Democratic friends are in their position as to legitimate industries.

American sugar production, according to the junior Senator from Kentucky, is not economically legitimate if it requires protection. Comparatively few people produce sugar, while all the people consume it. Therefore instead of artificially promoting it the Government should destroy it and all of the financial investments in it. Why should not this argument apply to all products North and South if it is the proper policy to follow? But in this bill rice, a southern product, is protected. Is rice more economically legitimate than sugar? Certainly not. It seems to be politically economical to protect a southern product. For years the country has been told that cotton was an example of a legitimate American product. It needs no protection. Is that true? Does not cotton need and receive protection?

I admit that, according to the Republican doctrine of protection, viz, a duty which measures the difference in cost of production here and abroad, there would be little chance to put a legitimate duty on cotton, for certainly the wages paid in the cotton fields are the lowest paid in the United States, and they compare more favorably with prices paid in competing countries. Negro slaves rocked and nurtured the cotton industry of the South in its infancy, and they and their equally hopeless descendants have tended southern cotton fields ever since. The southern planter has no fear of strikes and eight-hour days. His labor is not organized. It is not disturbed by any wicked notions of lobbying for higher wages and a wider participation in the profits of the master. And yet, in spite of the fact that its labor is the most abject and unambitious, the cotton interests are demanding and receiving enormous protection at the hands of the Federal Government. Every year since I have been a Member of Congress, I believe, representatives of the cotton States have asked and generally received hundreds of thousands of dollars for the benefit of cotton. Hundreds of thousands of public treasure have been spent to combat the boll weevil. I have gladly voted for these appropriations, because I have believed that cotton was a product legitimate to America and necessary to its highest welfare. But it is not more legitimate, not more indigenous to the United States, than sugar cane, sugar beets, wheat, maize, or other products of agriculture. Just recently I listened to an eloquent argument by the junior Senator from South Carolina in favor of a proposition to expend millions of public money to purchase a zone of land 50 miles wide from the Gulf to the Cumberland Mountains through Alabama, in which zone no cotton was to be raised, in order to stop the eastward march of the cotton pest. Is the boll weevil more to be dreaded than the flood of pauper-made products which it is proposed shall inundate our prosperous northern and western fields and factories? Ah, gentlemen, you may refine your definitions of reform and preach your foreign-born doctrines. You may loudly proclaim your intention to benefit the consumer the while you are in secret caucus writing a sectional and destructive tariff, yet in the last analysis you will be obliged to face the American people in the open when they will have found you out. If protection is good for any legitimate industry in any section of this country—and by legitimate industry I mean any industry which can and ought to be maintained here—then it is good for all such industries in all parts of the country where it is needed, and the Congress can not in fairness or good conscience discriminate in favor of one industry as against others.

I realize, of course, that some Senators of long and distinguished experience and of great ability have more influence in great matters of legislation than others of less ability and experience. I can understand how potently eloquent the chairman of the Finance Committee, who but two short years ago protested with righteous indignation against the cotton schedule in a tariff bill then pending before the Senate because its proposed duties were too low, although they were much higher than those he has reported in the pending bill, could be. I can readily imagine how he could secure enough sympathy to temporarily raise the House duties on cotton products, the manufacture of which has roused his somnolent State with the hum of industry. I can understand how the distinguished senior Senator from Missouri, with his mysterious yet all-powerful diplomacy, could, in a measure at least, provide for the zinc and lead industries of Missouri, but I can not understand how Senators from other States similarly situated can submit to the dictates of their party leader against their publicly and privately declared convictions. Has party fealty and caucus rule reached that stage when they can control the consciences and votes of United States Senators? I fear the record will so disclose.

I believe in party harmony, and to that end I am in favor of party conferences where great policies are discussed and where every legitimate argument can be presented, but the highest public service by the legislator can not be secured by secret caucus action when such action is intended to and actually does bind him to do otherwise than his ideas of duty dictate. Parties are necessary to the proper conduct of government, but no party platform of principles can be framed which will command the unqualified approval of all of its members, much less can such a platform bind any free man upon all matters of legislation the provisions of which are not known and can not be known when the platform is adopted. No free, intelligent, patriotic representative is bound by everything in a party platform, and he feels at liberty at all times to express by his voice and vote his conscientious views. The secret caucus and undue influence of the President sometimes dissuades a legislator from his notions of duty. This is wrong and subversive of true representative government.

I stated before the lobby investigating committee that I had not seen nor discovered any insidious lobby working for or against the tariff bill through improper methods, but that the nearest approach to improper influence was that exerted by the President through the secret party caucus. After weary weeks of investigation by the committee I am still of that opinion. Nothing has been disclosed by the hearings which bear out the innuendo of the President that the largest and most industrious lobby ever known was working insidiously, with plenty of money to influence Congressmen, to defeat the present tariff revision; but it is generally believed that some Senators will vote for the bill as reported because it is an administration measure. And because the President will not compromise, these Senators will not support amendments which they believe would make the bill better if they were adopted. I have no fault to find with an Executive who urges his views strongly upon Congress, but his true relation to legislation is that which attaches to his power and duty of recommendation before a measure is enacted and of approving or vetoing after it is passed by Congress. It is the duty of Congress to legislate, and the presumption is, or should be, quite as strong that a Senator is as conscientiously striving to do his duty as is the President; but because of the surrender of the Senators and Representatives to the Executive and to the will of the caucus Congress is made subordinate to the President and its Members condemned if they shall dare to differ from him.

Legislation should be in the open. Its preparation should be in the light and all discussions which result in effecting it should be public. I have distinguished authority for this statement if it needs any substantiation, which it does not. Permit me to quote, however, from a speech made by Gov. Wilson, then candidate for President, at Portland, Oreg., on May 18, 1911:

> It would be a great benefit both to our legislatures themselves and to the whole of the people if our methods of legislation might be simplified and made more public and open, so that everybody might know at each stage of legislation just what was being done and who was doing it.
>
> As a matter of fact, it is a very confused and almost necessarily private process. When one asks who drafts the measures which are submitted by the hundreds to our legislatures the answer must be "Everybody." The bills introduced are by no means confined to those which are drafted by Members of the House. Indeed, it is probable that in every legislature the number of bills drafted by the members themselves is very much smaller than the number drafted by outsiders. They are drawn up, most of them, in lawyers' offices here, there, and everywhere for the purpose of accomplishing every sort of object sought by individuals or by groups of individuals or by organized business interests of one kind or another. Such bills are introduced by the Members of the Houses "by request" or else are taken over by them as their own and introduced without any indication that they come from outside quarters.
>
> When they come to be considered it is only a bill here and there that is debated in public upon the floor of either House. Our legislation is, as a matter of fact, chiefly done in committee room. Sessions of legislative committees, except when they consent to hold public hearings and occasionally arrange to hear argument by outsiders, are private and, for the most part, confidential. It is considered a breach of legislative etiquette to reveal what took place in committee. Bills are smothered by the dozen after getting into committee if the members of the committee itself do not wish them reported out for action by the Houses. Those which are reported out are generally accepted by the Houses on the authority of the committees which report them and are passed for the most part almost without comment, or else rejected equally without debate.
>
> It is easy to see that the characteristic feature of all this method of legislation is privacy. I do not mean that the privacy is in all cases deliberate. It springs out of the system itself—out of the multitude of bills to be handled and the inevitable haste in handling them. But often this privacy is made use of in the most sinister fashion for private ends and undoubtedly constitutes the main opportunity for those who wish to work schemes of their own and get legal regulations which will serve their own purpose. The political machine, when it controls legislation, can operate successfully only in private. The minute what is going on is made public it becomes impossible to carry it out. Similarly, when great commercial or financial interests have schemes of their own to work through legislation privacy is indispensable. What they wish to do could not be done in the open without such exposure and criticism as would inevitably defeat it.
>
> These circumstances are not often consciously and distinctly analyzed by the mass of voters, but undoubtedly the great body of our citizens is vaguely conscious of them and they lie at the basis of a great deal of the distrust and uneasiness which is felt when our legislatures are in session. The great thing to be desired in this, as in all other matters of government, is publicity. There is no more reason why committee meetings, where important public matters are handled, should be private than that legislative sessions themselves should be private. If legislation is in fact accomplished in committees, committees should be public and not private instrumentalities.

He then discusses at length the seeming necessity for the Chief Executive to urge by every means within his power the measures which he believes are right, in order that the people may have their cause properly presented, but this whole method he admits is defective. Listen further to what he says:

> The defect of the whole method is that it does not lead to sufficiently thorough debate. There is no one of equal authority and influence with the Executive to debate public matters officially with him; no single legislator occupies his place of advantage in getting at public opinion. There is no one in a situation of authority which enables him to answer the governor or the President as effectively as the governor or the President can himself speak by reason of his larger authority. This is not a desirable state of affairs. The great thing to be desired is debate, debate among authoritative persons as well as debate upon the stump, and the more thoroughgoing, the more fearless this debate is, the better.
>
> Moreover, it is still further belittling to our legislators that the discussions led by our Executives should be held outside of the legislative chambers. To do this is to make the little debate that occurs in the legislature a thing of little or no significance, and it is clearly desirable, indeed imperative, that in order that the authority of our legislative bodies should be revived the most effective and thorough-going debate should take place within their chambers. Undoubtedly the hope of the immediate future is that, by slowly getting rid of machine control and the control of secret interests of other kinds inside our legislative chambers, they may thoroughly regain their self-possession and their self-respect, and in regaining these may return to their one-time practice of debate and put everything that they do to the public ordeal. That way lies the recovery of their prestige, and I think there can be no doubt that the present processes of reform will presently bring about that much-to-be-desired result, when the people will again depend, and depend with confidence, upon their legislators and not lean as if for rescue upon their Executives.

Every thoughtful man will agree with the words of Gov. Wilson that legislation should be in the open and free from dictation by special interests either from without or from within the Government; by organizations of capital, of labor, or by political machines, and everything which is conducive to legislative freedom is to be commended.

Has this administration discouraged secret legislative methods or has it encouraged them and participated in them to an extent never known before? Every time this matter is called to public attention Democrats arise and make answer by calling attention to similar offenses by Republicans in previous Congresses. Is such answer sufficient? Why, Mr. President, I have taken much satisfaction in contemplating the fact that this was a progressive age and that we had our faces to the future instead of to the past. Until this Congress I had not supposed that it was a good answer to the charge of bad methods to point to previous practices. The Republican Congress did indulge what I regard as improper methods, and I have never excused them; but it never employed any so flagrantly violative of the principles of open and therefore frank and honest means of legislation as those practiced at this session of Congress and since the President delivered at Portland the speech from which I have quoted. It is more than possible that the semiclose-corporation methods employed in framing the Payne bill may have been a reason why the people put the Republican Party out of power, and yet the Democratic administration goes its predecessor several better and refers to Republican precedents as its only excuse.

Until the Congress of the United States assumes its full constitutional functions as the lawmaking branch and divests itself from all coercive or other improper influences either from without or from within the Government it will not command the respect and confidence of the people, and never in the history of our country has it been placed in so abject and humiliating a position as it finds itself in to-day. Why, Senators in charge of this bill do not understand it. We can not get an intelligent explanation of its items, and when we ask for one we are told that the matter in question was put in by the committee's expert, and the committee knows little about it.

It is no answer to the charge of caucus coercion to say that no vote was taken to bind its Members to support the administration measure. I am, of course, unacquainted with what actually occurred in the secret Democratic caucus, but I speak the common belief that a thorough understanding was reached which will be most effective in binding some Senators to vote against amendments which they believe would improve the bill. If this is true, then surely machine dictation has been potential in shaping this legislation.

As a total result of this Congress up to date it has been humiliated and disgraced before the country by unwarranted insinuations that its Members are unfit to legislate, and by their action they have acknowledged the impeachment. The business men, farmers, and laboring men, who had felt that they were a part of this Government and entitled to be heard by their representatives on matters affecting their comfort, prosperity, and happiness, have been made to feel like trespassers and offenders. The vilest self-convicted scoundrels have been permitted to smirch with their own unsupported statements the characters, or at least the reputations, of honest, conscientious men in and out of public life; and because of the official publication of these matters decent men have felt compelled to make answer to charges which no court of justice would have admitted in evidence, because of their total lack of truth and probability.

It is confidently expressed that this bill now before us will result in better business, greater general prosperity, and cheaper living. The Democratic Party promised these conditions. The President before his election and since has publicly expressed his confidence that they would prevail, and yet recall how inconsistent has been the administration's conduct with its promises. Soon after his inauguration President Wilson is reported to have made a speech in which he proposed "to hang as high as Haman" any man or concern that precipitated a panic. But why talk of a panic? Are business men or even speculators opposed to greater prosperity? Not long after this threat by the President his Secretary of Commerce is reported as intimating that if a business man failed or if in order to meet the foreign competition recommended by the President he had to reduce his force of laborers or lessen their wages he would be investigated, and perhaps prosecuted. Why suggest such a thing at the dawn of the brighter day for business? Not long after this remarkable statement by the Secretary of Commerce the distinguished and capable Secretary of the Treasury assures the country that he has $500,000,000 of public money which he is ready to distribute among the banks in case of need. What need? Are demands for money being made because of any unusual necessity for it by reason of moving crops or increase of business? It can not be that with increased prosperity leaping and bounding just ahead there is need of this reassuring unsolicited promise of the Secretary of the Treasury.

But this is not all. When it became sure that the President's tariff bill was to be ratified by his party in Congress Mr. Wilson presented his currency bill with the clear inference that it is needed to offset any bad effects of the tariff. Surely all this is treason to the oft-repeated assurances by those in control of the Government that the tariff per se and of necessity is to strike the shackles from business.

Mr. President, if business disaster prematurely comes, its coming will be due more to the oft-expressed fears of this administration than to any efforts by wicked business men, who as patriots are expected to be happy the while their business is threatened with destruction and themselves with prosecution.

There is one thing which stands out clearly at this time and that is this: The administration would be supremely happy if it was well assured that the condition of the country would be no worse than it is to-day. It has no real hope that things will be better; it justly fears they will be worse, and it is looking everywhere for some scapegoat for its own handiwork.

This measure for the first time in our history disclaims the principle of protection. Whatever protection is in the bill is purely incidental, although from its sectional character I can not say that it is accidental. There is too much method disclosed for accident. The distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, in speaking for the majority members of his committee, stated that no attention had been given to the question of cost of production. That is but one illustration of the foregoing statement that protection had been ignored, for the true principle of protection is founded on difference in cost of production here and abroad. He clearly demonstrated that the one publicly declared reason for the revision made is a desire to cheapen the cost of articles to the consumer. Now, Mr. President, things must be cheapened to the consumer or this legislation must result in failure and its creators will be condemned, and if it does cheapen consumption it must not be done at the expense of general prosperity or by reducing the ability of the people to purchase. There is but one possible theory on which goods can be cheapened in price and general prosperity maintained by the reductions in tariff proposed in this bill, and that is that the profits of the manufacturer and the farmer are so large that they can be reduced to meet foreign competition and further that the consumer will get the benefit of such reduction. Is it within reason to suppose that our farmers and manufacturers are as a whole enjoying extraordinary and unreasonable profits?

The records do not so disclose. It is possible that some of our largest concerns who produce vast quantities of goods at a small profit per unit may continue to do business, but the great majority of the business of manufacture and agriculture is conducted at so small a margin of profit that it can not continue if that margin is reduced. The large concern may endure through the temporary reign of Democracy. It may be able to cooperate with its foreign competitors so as to do business, but is that to be the policy of Democracy? The trend of the times is against monopoly.

Is there any assurance that a reduction of the tariff will be reflected in retail prices? It was not so reflected in the retail price of shoes when in 1909 hides were put on the free list and the duties on shoes was reduced 75 per cent. Lumber was not lessened in price to the consumer when the tariff was reduced one-half. But it is possible to reduce the retail price of things. It was done in 1893 to 1897. General industrial depression is absolutely sure to reduce retail prices. Close the factories of this country, destroy in a measure home production, and the thousands of wage earners and small business men who furnish the best market for the products of agriculture and industry will be compelled to reduce their consumption and these products will outrun the demand and their price will drop. But what will it profit a man if the price of food and raiment is small if he has not the power to purchase?

The distinguished chairman, Mr. SIMMONS, frankly admits that the bill is intended to permit the importation of more foreign goods. Who is to make these imported goods? Foreign labor, which in no place on earth, save possibly in Canada, receives more than 50 per cent as high wages as in the United States, will produce them if they are used at all. These imported goods will be made abroad, and therefore can not be made at home, and so far as they at least are concerned American labor will be denied the opportunity to work. The distinguished Senator, however, speaking for his Democratic colleagues, suggests that while our home market, which is the best on earth, may have to be surrendered in a measure to the foreigner, markets abroad will be opened to us. But again, what shall it profit our people to give up the best on earth for the hope of gaining a greater chance at the markets of the world in competition with the monopoly-encouraged, bounty-fed products of other countries?

Mr. President, this bill is inspired by antagonism to American prosperity. Trusts and monopolies are the expressed objects of attack, but every legitimate industry is subject to Democracy's destructive fire, and in its ostensible efforts to injure the bad it recklessly and wantonly destroys the good. We can and should destroy domestic monopoly, and great progress has been made in that direction; but the policy of free trade is a blow to all domestic business conducted under the American conditions of wages and living and opens the door to destruction by possible foreign trusts and monopolies, under whose tyranny this Government would be helpless.

We can rid our barns of rats without burning the buildings. We can cut off all special tariff favors without destroying the opportunities for American labor and enterprise.

The distinguished chairman has stated as a fact that some things upon which a tariff is now levied cost no more to produce here than in the competing foreign countries. Unfortunately I and other Senators of the minority have not been privileged to hear the arguments which have led the Senator to his conclusions, but if it is true that such duties do exist, then I certainly would favor reducing them to a minimum, which would be an amount sufficient to protect against the possible inundation of our markets for the temporary purpose of destroying home production.

I voted for Canadian reciprocity, so called, and in doing so I am now aware that I made a political mistake. I was confident at that time that the reciprocal arrangement thus proposed would unite the two countries, of common ancestry, of similar conditions as to wages and living, by closer ties of common interests. I felt that the waterways which lie along the boundary and which belonged to both nations should have their mighty possibilities developed for those nations' common good, and it seemed to me that the agreement for mutual benefits might be helpful to that great purpose. Since reciprocity was defeated, however, the United States Senate has passed a resolution authorizing the President to enter into treaty relations with Canada for this purpose. I did not, however, rightly interpret the sentiment either of our own people or that of the Canadians. Many of the men and papers who supported President Taft in his efforts for Canadian reciprocity afterwards were either silent when he was attacked for urging the pact or else they openly condemned him for his efforts. Canada repudiated the action of this Government and defeated the agreement when the matter came before her people. Since that action by Canada I have taken every opportunity to reverse the vote by which Congress passed the measure, and I felt then, as I do now, that no form of Canadian reciprocity will ever again receive my support unless Canada shall have first passed and presented the proposal and the American people shall have given it their approval. And yet, here is a proposition to give to Canada all and more than was offered under the reciprocity act without asking anything in return, and the same privilege is extended to every nation on earth where cost of production and conditions of living are greatly below those maintaining in the United States.

No tariff bill was ever presented to Congress so unjustly discriminatory against the northern and western farmer, and yet its advocates have the temerity to say that the farmer will be benefited by subjecting him without any protection to the competition of the world. If the farmer resented reciprocity, what will he say to this measure which sacrifices everything and obtains nothing?

It might be interesting to take up in detail and discuss the items of this bill, but it would be unavailing so far as changing the decree which has gone out to the effect that it must pass without change, and the country is impatient for the final vote.

I could call attention to numerous cases where in this bill the foreign producer has been placed not on an equality simply with American producers, but where he has been given a direct and material advantage over them. I could point out many provisions in which duties are raised upon articles which do not and could not compete with American products and which therefore without question increase the cost to the consumer by the full amount of the duty and that without conferring even an incidental benefit upon a single American. I could specify items which will result in placing our people in the hopeless grasp of foreign monopolies over which our Government can exercise no control.

I could refer to instances which show the potential in- not compete with American products and which therefore without let or hindrance the American people. I could show that the policy and result of this measure is to place this great Republic at the mercy of other nations for some of the very necessaries of life, such as sugar, wool, meat, and flour. Other civilized countries have felt that it was the height of wisdom to become and remain independent of every other nation so far as necessaries are concerned. Swords have not yet been beaten into plowshares nor spears into pruning hooks, and even as the rumbling of international trouble disturbs our ears it is proposed that we shall make our Republic dependent upon foreign nations for those things which are necessary to its existence in peace and war. But, Mr. President, many of these things have already been disclosed and others will be specified as we progress with the consideration of the bill. I am sorry that the Senate is foreclosed from effecting changes which unfettered patriotic judgment dictates as right. I can only hope that my fears are groundless and that American peace, prosperity, and progress will continue.

I have the honor to represent in part one of the greatest States in this Union of great States. Her agriculture, manufacturing, mining, and lumbering interests are of mighty importance not only to her people but to the people of the whole country. In patriotism and love of country she is unsurpassed by any other. She sent more than her full quota of her best citizens to help preserve the Union. More than were needed of her loyal sons presented themselves at McKinley's call for men to maintain the Nation's honor in the War with Spain. She is ready at all times, as she has been in the past, to do everything which becomes a liberty-loving, patriotic Commonwealth to contribute to the stability and greatness of the United States. She asks no favors which she is not willing to accord to every other State; but she insists that this country, with all of the resources and possibilities which have been bestowed by a bountiful Providence upon her shall be held and developed primarily by and for the American people. She believes in benefiting the world, but that such benefit shall be given not by lowering American standards to that of the lowest competitor, but through such a beneficent administration of national affairs as will attract to us the eyes of all nations, who will here see and emulate the glorious possibilities of a Government not only of and by, but for its own people. She would not equalize world conditions by degrading our people to a lower level, but through example would inspire others to raise themselves. As an humble representative of such a State I protest against the enactment into law of a bill inspired by prejudice, framed in darkness, and with no possibilities for good to any American except the importer who sells foreign-made goods and the retired capitalist, who neither toils nor spins and who, contrary to Divine injunction, takes his only care for what he shall eat and drink and wear. This Government should be interested more largely in opportunities for doing and being than in the chances for simply existing.

Mr. President, I can see no good that will come to the American people by the enactment of this bill into law. It contains some things which I would be willing to support if I could vote upon them divorced from their caucus-forged bonds to other provisions which I regard as dangerous not only to our revenues but to our prosperity. I shall support such amendments as are offered which, in my judgment, will improve the measure. If every Senator would vote his honest convictions we would be able to remedy some of its glaring defects; but believing as I do that the measure as a whole is wrongly based and inimical to the progress, prosperity, and happiness of my countrymen, I shall vote against it on its final passage, and I am now ready to perform that duty.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, in his able defensive speech on the pending bill the chairman of the Finance Committee sought to justify the drift of the bill toward free trade by citing the result of the last presidential election. The tariff, he said, was the paramount issue in the campaign, and out of the 531 votes in the electoral college President Taft received only 8, and Mr. Wilson received 435.

The bill now before the Senate, Chairman SIMMONS contends, is "a fair interpretation of the will of the people."

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], also a prominent and distinguished member of the Finance Committee, in some remarks submitted a few days ago seemed to take the same ground when he claimed that the so-called Wilson-Gorman Tariff Act had nothing to do with the panic which followed; that the American people have since found out that any statement to that effect was a lie——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I desire to ask the Senator if I understood him to use the words "panic which followed"?

Mr. WARREN. I did.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Did the Senator intend to use the word "followed," or did he intend to say "which preceded"?

Mr. WARREN. I intended to use it as I have said it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I merely wanted to know.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator from Mississippi claimed that he was authorized to so state "by the authority of the last election, which put Woodrow Wilson in the White House."

PARTY PLATFORMS—1912.

Now, Mr. President, the facts are that three great political conventions were held last year, each of the three political parties adopting a platform of principles on which it sought the votes of the people. As to the tariff, the several declarations of principles were, in effect, as follows:

Republican: Maintenance of a protective tariff, with a reduction of duties that may be too high and with a general readjustment of duties by means of accurate information obtained by an expert commission.

Progressive Republican: A protective tariff which shall equalize conditions of competition between the United States and foreign countries, both for the farmer and the manufacturer, and which shall maintain for labor an adequate standard of living.

Democratic: A tariff for revenue only, on the ground that a protective tariff is unconstitutional.

To soften this declaration, notwithstanding the solemn assurance of our friend the Senator from Mississippi that the people no longer believe that harm can come from destroying the protective-tariff system, the Democratic platform contained these words:

> We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.

To further allay the fears of the American people that the success of the Democratic Party would mean the destruction of the protective system of tariff legislation, Mr. Wilson, the then candidate, now President, in his speech at Pittsburgh on October 18, said:

> The Democratic Party does not propose free trade or anything approaching free trade. It proposes merely a reconsideration of the tariff schedules such as will adjust them to the actual business conditions and interests of the country. * * * They will not undertake the task like amateurs, either. They will seek and obtain the best possible advice in the country, but they will seek it far and wide and not only in the quarters from which it has usually come.

Without stopping here to comment upon the atrocious betrayal of these ante-election promises by the Democratic Party and its nominee for President, and its President, as evidenced in the bill now before us, which confessedly will "destroy legitimate industry" in striking down the sugar and wool and other industries, we pass on, and find that, so far as the tariff is concerned, the Republicans and the Progressive Republicans were practically as one party in the last campaign. Any Republican would have been content to have the Progressive tariff plank substituted for that of his own party, and the Progressives would have been content with the Republican tariff plank. Consequently, in voting on the tariff the two parties might well be considered as united.

HOW THE PEOPLE VOTED.

The returns show that of the popular vote of the country—

	Votes.
Mr. Taft, on a protective platform, received	3,484,529
Mr. Roosevelt, on a protective platform, received	4,123,206
Total for protection	7,607,735
Mr. Wilson, on a tariff-for-revenue platform, received	6,290,818
Majority of protection votes over tariff-for-revenue votes	1,316,917

Surely a very handsome majority.

Had the votes for protection, over those for a revenue tariff, decided the election of electors, Mr. Wilson instead of receiving 435 votes in the electoral college would have received but 152, or only a little more than one-third as many.

Had the electoral vote, by States, been decided upon the numbers cast for protection and the numbers cast for a revenue tariff, the result would have been like this:

	Electoral vote.	Wilson.	Roosevelt.	Taft.
For a revenue tariff:
Alabama	12	82,438	22,680	9,732
Arizona	3	10,324	6,951	2,986
Arkansas	9	68,838	21,673	24,467
Florida	6	36,417	4,535	4,279
Georgia	14	92,076	21,980	5,181
Kentucky	13	219,584	102,766	115,512
Louisiana	10	60,971	9,323	3,834
Mississippi	10	57,227	3,645	1,595
North Carolina	12	144,597	69,130	29,139
Oklahoma	10	119,156	.....	90,786
South Carolina	9	48,357	1,293	536
Tennessee	12	130,275	63,710	59,392
Texas	20	219,489	26,745	25,830
Virginia	12	90,332	21,777	23,288
Total (14 States)	152	.....	.....	.....
For a protective tariff:
California	13	283,486	283,610	3,914
Colorado	6	114,232	72,306	58,386
Connecticut	7	74,561	34,129	68,324
Delaware	3	22,631	8,886	15,997
Idaho	4	33,921	25,527	32,810
Illinois	29	405,848	386,478	253,593
Indiana	15	281,890	162,007	151,267
Iowa	13	185,325	161,819	119,805
Kansas	10	143,663	120,210	74,845
Maine	6	51,113	48,495	26,545
Maryland	8	112,674	57,789	54,956
Massachusetts	18	173,408	142,228	155,948
Michigan	15	150,751	214,584	152,244
Minnesota	12	106,426	125,856	64,334
Missouri	18	330,746	124,371	207,821
Montana	4	27,941	22,456	18,512
Nebraska	8	109,008	72,614	54,216
Nevada	3	7,986	5,620	3,196
New Hampshire	4	34,724	17,794	32,927
New Jersey	14	178,289	145,410	88,835
New Mexico	3	20,437	8,347	17,733
New York	45	655,475	390,021	455,428
North Dakota	5	29,555	25,726	23,090
Ohio	24	423,153	229,327	277,066
Oregon	5	47,064	37,600	34,673
Pennsylvania	38	395,619	447,426	273,305
Rhode Island	5	30,412	16,878	27,703
South Dakota	5	48,982	58,811	.....
Utah	4	36,579	24,174	42,100
Vermont	4	15,354	22,132	23,332
Washington	7	86,840	113,698	70,445
West Virginia	8	113,046	78,977	56,667
Wisconsin	13	164,228	62,460	130,695
Wyoming	3	15,310	9,232	14,560
Total (34 States)	379	.....	.....	.....

Two and one-half times as many electoral votes for a protective tariff presidential candidate as for a revenue tariff candidate.

And so free trade or tariff for revenue only received the indorsement of but 14 out of 48 States, while a protective tariff was adhered to by 34 States—more than two-thirds of the States in number. And it is also a significant fact that of those free-trade or tariff-for-revenue-only States, 12 of them were the old solid South, rock-ribbed, always-that-way States, the other 2 being the newer States of Oklahoma and Arizona; while on the other hand all of the old northern and western group that have ever heretofore declared for a protective tariff, and including the southern States of Maryland, Missouri, and West Virginia and the new State of New Mexico, 34 in all, recorded their votes for protection.

So it is idle to claim that the people of this country are clamoring for a change from protection to free trade or a tariff for revenue only.

Taking it another way: In point of population the States voting for the revenue-tariff idea contain the following:

Alabama	2,138,093
Arizona	204,354
Arkansas	1,574,449
Florida	752,619
Georgia	2,609,121
Kentucky	2,289,905
Louisiana	1,656,388
Mississippi	1,797,114
North Carolina	2,206,287
Oklahoma	1,657,155
South Carolina	1,515,400
Tennessee	2,184,789
Texas	3,896,542
Virginia	2,061,612
Total (14 States)	26,543,828

The States casting a majority vote for the protective idea have a population as follows:

California	2,377,549
Colorado	799,024
Connecticut	1,114,756
Delaware	202,322
Idaho	325,594
Illinois	5,638,591
Indiana	2,700,876
Iowa	2,224,771
Kansas	1,690,949
Maine	742,371
Maryland	1,295,346
Massachusetts	3,366,416
Michigan	2,810,173
Minnesota	2,075,708
Missouri	3,293,335
Montana	376,053
Nebraska	1,192,214
Nevada	81,875
New Hampshire	430,572
New Jersey	2,537,167
New Mexico	327,301
New York	9,113,614
North Dakota	577,056
Ohio	4,767,121
Oregon	672,765
Pennsylvania	7,665,111
Rhode Island	542,610
South Dakota	583,888
Utah	373,351
Vermont	355,956
Washington	1,141,990
West Virginia	1,221,119
Wisconsin	2,333,860
Wyoming	145,965
Total (34 States)	65,097,369

Thus the vote for the revenue-tariff idea represents but twenty-six and a half millions of our people, while the vote for the protective idea represents sixty-five millions, speaking in round numbers.

Carrying the point a step further, we find from the latest available statistics that the estimated true value of all property in 1904 in the 14 tariff-for-revenue States was as follows:

Alabama	$965,014,261
Arizona	306,302,305
Arkansas	803,907,972
Florida	431,409,200
Georgia	1,167,445,671
Kentucky	1,527,486,230
Louisiana	1,032,299,006
Mississippi	688,249,022
North Carolina	842,072,218
Oklahoma and Indian Territory	459,021,355 / 636,013,700
South Carolina	585,853,222
Tennessee	1,104,226,979
Texas	2,836,322,003
Virginia	1,287,970,189
Total	14,673,520,324

The estimated true value of all property in the 34 protective-tariff-voting States in 1904 was:

California	$4,115,491,106
Colorado	1,207,542,107
Connecticut	1,414,655,063
Delaware	230,209,976
Idaho	342,871,863
Illinois	8,816,356,191
Indiana	3,105,781,739
Iowa	4,048,516,076
Kansas	2,253,224,243
Maine	775,622,722
Maryland	1,511,488,172
Massachusetts	4,956,578,913
Michigan	3,282,419,117
Minnesota	3,343,722,076
Missouri	3,759,597,451
Montana	746,311,213
Nebraska	2,669,563,633
Nevada	220,734,507
New Hampshire	516,809,204
New Jersey	3,235,619,973
New Mexico	332,262,650
New York	14,769,042,207
North Dakota	735,802,909
Ohio	5,946,969,466
Oregon	852,053,232
Pennsylvania	11,473,620,306
Rhode Island	799,349,601
South Dakota	679,840,939
Utah	487,768,615
Vermont	360,330,089
Washington	1,051,671,432
West Virginia	840,000,149
Wisconsin	2,838,678,239
Wyoming	329,572,241
Total	91,390,308,420

Thus it will be seen that the relative standing in the country of the protective-tariff and the revenue-tariff ideas is as follows:

	Revenue tariff.	Protective tariff.
Electoral votes	152	379
Population	26,543,828	65,097,369
Property value	$14,673,520,324	$91,390,308,420

Mr. President, it is perfectly apparent from the discussion so far of the pending tariff measure that the opinions of Senators are as widely apart, almost, as the poles, relative to the subject, between those who believe in protection so placed as to be practically a tariff for revenue also and those who oppose protection and insist upon a tariff for revenue only, not even willing to have incidental protection, but instead a tariff so placed, much of it, that neither protection nor any considerable revenue can result.

I myself am a believer in a protective tariff, and wish at all times to be counted upon that side of the equation.

If a line of conduct or belief has led invariably to success, we should credit it accordingly. And in my own opinion, if I have read history correctly and have observed events with care, it is safe for me to assert that an adequate protective tariff has brought us prosperity and consequent happiness, while a free-trade policy—or its first cousin or nearer relative, a tariff for revenue only—has invariably brought us into nonprosperous times and consequent sorrow.

Notwithstanding the fact that the subject of the tariff is old and has been talked about and thought of much by all of us, yet from the very nature of things it is never shopworn nor outlawed. It is always with us, and must necessarily be with us so long as we have a Government and the Government is supported in whole or in part from the levying of taxes, directly or indirectly.

Pursued as I am, and as doubtless others are, by inquiries as to what the pending bill contains and how it compares with former bills, and by many requests for some history concerning the numerous bills which have been enacted during the life of the Republic, I have thought it best to prepare and put into the RECORD a sort of brief résumé of the leading and important tariff measures, with facts and comments as to tariff legislation according to my views, even though it may smack a little of the elementary.

It was very early in the history of our Republic when the doctrine of protection found a place in our laws. The State of Pennsylvania in 1785 enacted a protective tariff law imposing specific duties on articles imported into the State from abroad and ad valorem duties on others. It was intended to encourage manufacturing within the State, and so well did it fulfill this intention that Pennsylvania to this day has been an advocate of the protective idea. The Pennsylvania law was the model for the first tariff law enacted by the Federal Government, in 1789.

FIRST NATIONAL PROTECTIVE LAW.

The date of the first protective tariff law, July 4, 1789, is significant, and the language of section 1 of the act is equally so. It is:

> Whereas it is necessary for the support of the Government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States, and the encouragement and protection of manufacturers that duties be laid on goods, wares, and merchandise imported: Be it enacted, etc.

Protective legislation in connection with laws for protection to American shipping brought immediate prosperity to the young Nation, paid the expenses of the Government, and enabled it, by 1834–35, to wipe out the national debt, including the $15,000,000 paid for the purchase of Louisiana.

Various revisions of the first tariff law were made in the period between July 4, 1789, and the War of 1812, none of them downward and most of them upward. Conditions improved wonderfully during this period, and the transformation from household industry to an organized system of factories was begun.

Mr. President, I do not wish to go very deeply into ancient history; but in order to make some comparisons and to show some coincidences I shall trespass upon the time of the Senate for a few moments to touch upon some of the high points from that period up to the present time.

Census reports for 1810 show that the manufactured products of the country aggregated $127,694,602, the growth of but a few years under protection.

During the progress of the War of 1812 a tariff practically prohibitive was in force, and this extreme application of the protective idea threw the people of the country on their own resources, and establishments for the manufacture of cotton goods, woolen cloth, iron, glass, pottery, and other articles increased in number wonderfully.

A report of conditions in the United States at the close of the war, made by Mathew Carey, showed that employment was at hand for every man, woman, and child able and willing to work, cotton manufactures aggregating $24,000,000 annually; woolen manufactures, $19,000,000; all manufacturing establishments busy; money easy; debts collected without difficulty, and the country generally prosperous except in a few places which suffered desolation during the war.

After the close of the war the prohibitive war duties were reduced by temporary legislation 29 per cent; and then followed the act of April 27, 1816, which was not as protective as the advocates of that policy desired.

It is worthy of notice that one of the strongest advocates of the protective-tariff idea at the time this bill was under consideration was John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, and one of his speeches was the most notable effort of the session in favor of protection.

INADEQUATE TARIFF BRINGS DISASTER.

The inadequate protective duties of the act of 1816 opened the way for an onslaught on American markets and industries by Great Britain which proved more injurious to this country than a successful war would have been. First came a brief period of fictitious prosperity in which floods of foreign goods at low prices came into the country, bringing on extravagant speculation in business. Then came liquidation and bankruptcy to the merchant and farmer.

Thomas H. Benton, writing of that period, said:

> No price for property, no sales except those of the sheriff and the marshal, no employment for industry, no demand for labor, no sale for the produce of the farm, no sound of the hammer, except that of the auctioneer knocking down property. Distress was the universal cry of the people; relief, the universal demand, was thundered at the doors of all legislatures, State and Federal.

How accurately this description fits a later period of depression which most of us remember, namely, the depression caused by the Wilson-Gorman law.

The iron trade, the pottery industry, the glass factories, the manufactures of cotton goods, the woolen industry—all were hard hit. England glutted the markets of this country with cheap goods and nearly ruined us.

The hard times of that early period were attributed by the free-trade advocates to the failure of banks and the decrease of currency, just as the free traders of to-day blame the panic and hard times of 1893–1897 on former President Cleveland and the banks as per Senator THOMAS a few days ago.

A memorial to Congress adopted by a convention in which delegates participated from nine States contained the following statement showing the unfortunate condition of the manufacturing industries:

> While so many of our manufactures are thus ruined, our working people destitute of employment and of the means to support their families, our cities and towns are filled with the manufactured productions of other nations, by which we have been and are ruinously drained of our wealth. That these complicated evils which oppress us and which have taken place during a season of profound peace of nearly five years' duration, after a war closed with honor, which left us in a state of high prosperity, evince that there is something radically unsound in our policy which requires a radical remedy in the power of the National Legislature alone to supply.

COUNTRY DEMANDS PROTECTION.

The demand for a remedy was met by Congress with the passage of the protective-tariff act of May 22, 1824, and the still more highly protective act of May 19, 1828, the latter act remaining in force five years.

Under the operations of those two tariff laws prosperity returned to the country, manufacturing was revived, work was abundant, and the public debt was rapidly wiped out of existence.

Henry Clay, in a speech delivered in 1832, said that if a term of seven years were to be selected of the greatest prosperity enjoyed by the people since the establishment of the Constitution it would be exactly that period which immediately followed the passage of the tariff act of 1824.

The history of our country shows that ofttimes prosperity as well as adversity brings discontent.

Under the protective tariffs of 1824 and 1828 there was universal prosperity and, as stated, the revenues of the Government exceeded the expenditures to such an extent that the public debt was paid and a surplus of funds in the Treasury was being accumulated. To reduce revenue and avoid the dangers of a great surplus revision of the tariff was urged. It was contended that the tariffs of 1824 and 1828 imposed duties on many fabrics and commodities not made in the United States and thus imposed unnecessary burdens of taxation on the people.

It was during this period of discussion that the consideration of the tariff question lost its economic features and took on a political and sectional side, which seems to have ever since characterized it.

The antagonism between the North and South was becoming more and more marked, radical free trade being advocated generally by southern statesmen and protection by those from the North.

The questions involved in slavery entered into the consideration of the tariff, so that tariff became one of the acute political issues of the time.

One outcome of the controversy was Henry Clay's famous "compromise" tariff act of 1833, which reduced rates of duty and provided for a sliding scale of further reductions and ultimate free trade in a large number of articles.

That act greatly increased the importation of foreign goods, which were forced into our markets, sold at auction and on liberal terms of credit to merchants and speculators, whose commercial paper was taken and discounted by the banks. The imports increased from $108,609,700 in 1834 to $176,579,154 in 1836, and the balance of trade for the four years of 1834 to 1837, inclusive, was $99,168,104 against us.

DEPRESSION FOLLOWS TARIFF REDUCTION.

The panic of 1837 told the same story of depression as that following the tariff reduction of 1816. The American market was overwhelmed; domestic production displaced; the labor and industries of the country disorganized; the people impoverished and their purchasing power destroyed. Then followed diminished importations, loss of revenue, and universal financial embarrassment. The Treasury became practically bankrupt. Receipts fell below expenditures year by year and were replenished by increasing the national debt.

The balance of trade against the country and consequent exportation of specie brought on a financial panic in which a great many of the banks of the country were obliged to suspend specie payments.

As usual, and as now, the defenders of the low-tariff and free-trade policies attributed the hard times and panic to the bankers, when, in fact, the banks were victims, with others, of the adoption of a tariff system not in accord with our industrial and business life.

The condition of the country as it existed before protection was restored is described in Hunt's Merchants' Magazine for 1842, page 482, as follows:

> These continually accumulated disasters down to the 1st of April had thrown a degree of gloom over the commercial circles seldom witnessed. The heavy spring payments had been falling due; remittances from the country could not be obtained; the banks were fearful of extending themselves in the smallest degree; goods could scarcely be sold for money at any price; the accounts for abroad gave but little indication of a speedy revival and of a demand for American produce; and the sluggish and uncertain action of Congress tended to enhance the dread of the future.

In Colton's Life of Henry Clay, volume 1, is this deplorable picture:

> The revulsion of 1837 provided a far greater havoc than was experienced in the free-trade period of 1820 and 1824. The ruin came quick and fearful. They were few that could save themselves. Property of every description was parted with at prices that were astounding, and as for currency, there was scarcely any at all.

The Government failed in efforts to place a loan of $12,000,000 in Europe, and in response to advertisements for a popular loan only $250,000 was offered, at rates ranging from 28 per cent to 32 per cent per annum. The American Almanac estimated the losses during that depression in six leading lines of trade at $785,000,000. Over 30,000 merchants went into bankruptcy, and 50,000 settled with creditors, who sustained losses of $250,000,000.

The country returned to the protective policy in 1842, when the act of August 30 restored protective duties, substituting on many aricles specific for ad valorem rates.

Of that tariff act John Quincy Adams said:

> The tariff of 1842 has wrought wonders for the purposes for which it was enacted—the procurement of an adequate revenue and protection for the native industry and free labor of the land. It has fully performed its promise in the production of revenue. It has restored the paisied credit of the Nation, filled the coffers of the Treasury, and has already paid off a large proportion of the heavy debt contracted by the preceding administration.

A New York paper in November, 1842, said:

> When the tariff bill was passed imposing a greater duty on foreign goods it was alleged by most men that it would increase the price of foreign articles nearly or quite to the amount of the duty, and then it would be an indirect tax on the people. Contrary to this prediction, the fact has turned out differently.

The flourishing condition of the country which immediately followed enabled the people to increase their purchases of all kinds of commodities, domestic as well as foreign. Although the importation of protected articles diminished, those of the noncompetitive classes, upon which the duties operated simply for revenue, so increased, owing to the general prosperity of the country, that the Treasury soon held a surplus. Before the act of 1842 was superseded by the act of 1846 $15,000,000 was paid on the national debt.

In contrast with the adverse balance of trade of $99,168,104 against us in the four years 1834 to 1837, there was a trade balance in our favor of $28,000,000 for the four protective-tariff years 1843 to 1846, inclusive.

William D. Kelley said in his speech before Congress January 3, 1866:

> When the tariff of 1842 went into effect our country was being flooded with British manufactures of every variety, from a tenpenny nail to a circular saw, and from table cutlery to butt hinges, thumb latches, etc. But when 1847 came around four years of adequate protection had so stimulated the skill and ingenuity of Americans and had brought from Great Britain so many skilled workmen that our own market was ours for at least an infinite variety of hardware, and we have held it in many departments of the business from that day to this, no one being able to undersell us in our own streets.

While the act remained in force only four years and three months and was the last protective measure in operation until the Republican Party restored and extended the policy in 1861, it operated to so strengthen established industries and to give others a firm foothold that they were able, by retrenchment, the practice of great economy, reduction of wages, and extension of working hours, to better withstand the severe competition to which they were subjected from 1846 to 1860.

Efforts to repeal the 1842 protective law were made in 1844 and failed. Speaking in opposition to a change in the tariff at that time, Senator Berrien, of Georgia, said there had been since August, 1842, a sensible improvement in the condition of the country; whether because of that tariff or in spite of it was not the subject of his inquiry. He stated the following facts:

1. The credit of the country was prostrate and has been redeemed. Its stock is again above par.
2. The Treasury was empty; it is now replenished.
3. The commerce and navigation of the country have increased.
4. Its agricultural condition has improved.
5. There has been a marked improvement of our great staples.
6. A reduction in the prices of almost all if not absolutely of every article of consumption.
7. To crown the whole, every branch of industry has been stimulated to increased activity, and confidence has been restored.

The presidential election of 1844, resulting in the defeat of Henry Clay, protectionist, and the election of James K. Polk, free-trader, brought the era of protection to an end until it was restored in 1861. The Walker tariff law, based on the theory of a revenue tariff, went into effect December 1, 1846, and remained in force until July 1, 1857, when duties were further reduced to harmonize with the revenue standard, and a material change was made in the principles of the Walker tariff by placing many raw materials on the free list.

During the period those tariff laws were in operation a problem of greater importance—that of slavery—occupied the attention of the country, and the relative merits of protection and free trade were placed in the background.

Nevertheless the revenue tariff of 1846, which practically placed manufactures on the free list while retaining duties on raw material, was the cause of increasing importations of competing manufactures, the reduction of wages, and the surrender of profits.

Thus the correcting of one error by making a second one did not bring success. The first error was taxed raw materials and free manufactures; the second, free raw materials and taxed manufactures, neither of which theories can be accepted as correct. A true protective theory requires an adequate tariff on both raw materials and manufactures. A free-trade policy, to be consistent, must naturally demand that both shall be free.

The culmination was the panic of 1857, when, through the exhaustion of the country, trade declined, the sales of public land almost stopped, and the revenues of the Government receded below the expenditures. The depression of business continued until 1861. The balance of foreign trade against us for the four years 1857 to 1860, inclusive, amounted to $169,555,44,. The national debt was increased from $45,000,000 in 1847 to $90,000,000 in 1861. The credit of the Government was poor, and bonds offered by President Buchanan in 1860 brought practically no offers, while an issue of Treasury notes were bid for at from 12 to 30 per cent discount.

In his message of December 14, 1860, President Buchanan said:

> Panic and distress of a fearful character prevail throughout the land. Our laboring population is without employment, and consequently deprived of the means of earning their bread. Indeed, all hope seems to have deserted the minds of men.

In fact, I think there may be Senators now in this body who can recall the pinching times of the Buchanan administration and can remember the poor credit of our Government at that time.

And yet the country was operating under the most anti-protective tariff law ever enacted, a law based upon the views and report of President Polk's Secretary of the Treasury, Robert J. Walker, the ablest opponent of the policy of protection the country has produced.

The test of that law was made under favorable conditions. When it was enacted the country was enjoying an amazing degree of prosperity and business enlargement. The discovery of gold in California, the construction of thousands of miles of railroad, the opening to settlement of millions of acres of land in the Mississippi Valley and beyond, all contributed to keep capital invested and labor employed. Had it not been for these extraordinary aids to commerce and business the revenue system doubtless would have broken down long before 1857.

The conspicuous results of the Walker tariff between 1846 and 1860 were that wages of labor were not increased, but reduced. Not a single new competitive industry was established in the country. The importations of manufactured articles greatly increased. The exports of gold to settle the adverse balance of trade impoverished the country and caused the business depression of 1857–1860.

The protective element obtained control of Congress in 1860 and a protective tariff bill was passed March 2, 1861, receiving President Buchanan's signature shortly before his retirement from office. This bill provided for a moderate increase of ad valorem rates but changed many duties from ad valorem to specific. The act did not provide enough revenue to meet the extraordinary expenses of the Civil War and the rates were increased at a special session of Congress in August, 1861.

It is worthy of note that during this period one of the most effective advocates of protection was a northern Democrat, William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, once a free trader but converted to protection by observing himself the effect of the two policies on the business of the country.

In his introduction to his published speeches and addresses, Mr. Kelley said:

> The theory that labor—the productive exercise of the skill and muscular power of men, who are responsible for the faithful and intelligent performance of civic and other duties—is merely a raw material, and that the Nation which pays least for it is the wisest and best governed, is inadmissible, in a democracy; and when we shall determine to starve the bodies and minds of our operatives in order that we may successfully compete in common markets with the productions of the underpaid and poorly fed peasants of Europe, and the paupers of England, we shall assail the foundations of a Government which rests upon the intelligence and integrity of its people. To defend our country against this result is the office of a protective tariff, and for this duty it alone is sufficient.

It was during this period of a protective tariff that the country prospered in the face of a financial panic. The panic of 1873 was short lived and was followed by a period of great industrial prosperity and growth. The wealth of the country, 1873–1879, increased 44 per cent. The manufactures of the country increased 27 per cent. Iron and steel production increased 200 per cent. Railroad mileage increased 40,000 miles. The national debt was reduced by $322,462,622.

In his speech delivered December 8, 1881, Justin S. Morrill, of Vermont, said:

> In six years ending June 30, 1881, our exports of merchandise exceeded imports by over $1,175,000,000—a large sum in itself, largely increasing our stock of gold, filling the pockets of the people with more than two hundred and fifty millions, not found in the Treasury or banks, making the return to specie payment easy, and arresting the painful drain of interest so long paid abroad. It is also a very conclusive refutation of the free-trade chimeras that exports are dependent upon imports, and that comparatively high duties are invariably less productive of revenue than low duties. The pertinent question arises, Shall we not in the main hold fast to the blessings we have?

A surplus in the Treasury invited reductions in the tariff and downward revision was enacted in the law of March 3, 1883.

It was thought by the protectionists that if concessions were made tariff agitation would cease, and that act contained reductions and compromises which proved unsatisfactory in that they injured the industries affected. The act was a general downward revision of the tariff, an increased free list, and its effect on a number of industries was disastrous.

The act of October 1, 1890, the McKinley Act, was a complete and practical revision of the tariff. Many changes were made from ad valorem to specific rates. The free list was enlarged. The McKinley Act was in force four years, during which there was unusual prosperity in all lines of industry in the country. Employment was plentiful and wages were high.

The history of that period again shows that prosperity as well as adversity breeds discontent.

The Cleveland administration, with antiprotection control of Senate and House, came into power, and its most noted achievement was the Wilson-Gorman Act of August 27, 1894.

It is needless to recite here the conditions of the country which attended the passage and administration of the Wilson-Gorman law. Its scars have not been entirely effaced even by the lapse of nearly a score of years of prosperity. That the country was prostrated, business almost annihilated, factories and works closed, real estate depreciated in value, work denied millions of men willing to work, wages reduced to a mere pittance is not denied. But that the depression was due to the effect of the Wilson-Gorman law is now denied by the opponents of the protective-tariff system, the latest explanation of the depression being, as stated by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS], that it was the result of a conspiracy between President Cleveland and Wall Street.

It is certain, however, that no financial panic could cause the general misfortunes which visited the country during Mr. Cleveland's second administration and continued until the enactment of a protective-tariff law was insured by the election of Mr. McKinley and a protective-tariff Congress.

This brief review of tariff legislation in our country—by no means a complete review, but simply a mention of the salient features of tariff legislation preceding the Dingley Act—brings into view the fact that coincident with all legislation along the lines of free trade or revenue tariff this country has suffered from depressions in business, stoppage of manufacturing, dearth of work for all classes of workingmen, increase of importations of manufactured articles, disarrangement of the finances of the Government, and what may be generally classed as "hard times."

On the other hand, coincident with the periods of protective legislation, there have been generally prosperous conditions, ample work, increased wages, growth in manufacturing, growth in agriculture and stock raising, generally sound financial conditions, and general "good times."

Without insisting that the hard-times periods of our history were due absolutely to the low tariffs of the same periods or that the good-times periods were caused by high tariffs, I contend that it is nevertheless significant that adversity has attended one and prosperity the other.

Conditions at the present time are similar to what they have been many times in the past, and while I hope history is not to repeat itself, I confess that I am apprehensive that the causes which operated so disastrously in our case in the past will have the same effect when again applied.

I earnestly hope that our experiences under this legislation will show that protection has built up our industries and commerce to such a plane of stability that we can withstand the flood of competing goods from all parts of the world which are being now accumulated to pour in upon our home market as soon as the barrier of protection is removed by the enactment of the pending bill.

We shall have to contend with sugar from Cuba and Java; wool from Australia and Argentina; coal from Canada; fruits from Italy; manufactures of all kinds from England and Germany and, perhaps, Japan; cattle and meats from Mexico, Argentina, Australia, and Canada—in fact, we shall have to defend our market from unequal competition directed against us from every quarter of the globe.

I shall not predict that we can not withstand the onslaught that will be made against us, for I have faith in the ability of the American people to cope with every misfortune and every adversity which they may be called upon to face.

I do not want to be a prophet of evil, but at the same time I feel that the experiences of this country as a result of low-tariff or revenue-tariff legislation and consequent reduction of compensation of labor have been sufficiently distressing to justify the apprehension, anxiety, and distrust in the future of our business and commercial interests.

There is this light in the situation: The American people are quick of discernment and quick to act. A majority in Congress may fool itself, but it can not fool the people who created that majority. And if the predicted disasters follow the enactment of this law it will be speedily replaced by one in harmony with the theory of protection.

The history of the tariff is full of coincidences, and for that reason I took the short time to put in a résumé of the facts. The election of President Polk, free-trader, over Henry Clay, protectionist, thus making possible the Walker Free Trade Act of 1846, was brought about through the defection from the Whig Party of the Abolitionists, who corresponded in a measure to the Progressives of to-day, whose third-party movement defeated the Republican candidate in the recent election. Regardless of the Abolitionist defection, Clay probably would have been elected if Mr. Polk, during his candidacy for the Presidency, had not assured the voters of Pennsylvania that he would not injure American industries. In a letter to Judge Kane, of Pennsylvania, which was widely circulated in that State, Mr. Polk said:

> In my judgment it is the duty of the Government to extend as far as it may be practicable to do so, by its revenue laws and all other means within its power, fair and just protection to all the great interests of the whole Union, embracing agriculture, manufactures, commerce, and navigation.

This promise to the voters of Pennsylvania saved that State to Polk.

Again, in 1892, Mr. Cleveland at various times during his candidacy sought to allay the fears and apprehensions of the people in regard to the tariff. In a speech in Madison Square Garden, July 20, 1892, he said:

> We are not recklessly heedless of any American interests, nor will we abandon our regard for them.

In his letter of acceptance, September 26, 1892, he wrote:

> Tariff reform is still our purpose. We wage no exterminating war against any American interests. We believe a readjustment can be accomplished in accordance with the principles we profess without disaster or demolition. We contemplate a fair and careful distribution of necessary tariff burdens rather than the precipitation of free trade. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising the majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests.

And in 1912 we have Mr. Wilson asserting at Pittsburgh that—

> The Democratic Party does not propose free trade or anything approaching free trade. It proposes merely a consideration of the tariff schedules such as will adjust them to the actual business conditions and interests of the country.

How alike the ante-election promises of Polk, Cleveland, and Wilson!

And thus doth history repeat itself.

Despite his promises to Pennsylvania, President Polk was sponsor for the most extreme free-trade tariff act in our history.

Despite his promise to the American people that a readjustment of the tariff would be made without disaster or demolition, Mr. Cleveland favored the Wilson bill as it passed the House, with a greatly extended free list, including free wool, free coal, free hides, free lumber, and so forth.

And despite his promise of less than a year ago that the Democratic Party proposes merely a consideration of the tariff schedules such as will adjust them to the actual business conditions and interests of the country, President Wilson is now forcing his party to place certain products on the free list, with the inevitable result, in the minds of many of his own party, Members of Congress and others, that the industries producing those products will be seriously crippled, if not entirely destroyed.

And thus again will history repeat itself.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. SIMMONS. What is the amendment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read it.

The SECRETARY. In paragraph 71, page 18, lines 7 and 8, the Senator from Utah proposes to strike out, after the word "ounce," the semicolon and the words "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound."

Mr. SIMMONS. I understood the Senator from Utah, just before we adjourned on Saturday, to withdraw that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The RECORD shows that the amendment was pending. That is all the present occupant of the chair knows about it.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from Utah is not in the Chamber, and I will ask that the amendment be passed over during his absence. He undoubtedly stated that he would withdraw the amendment, though the clerks may not have gotten his statement; but I would not like to have action taken upon it on my statement about it in the absence of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. STONE. That the Senator from Utah may be present, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the last lines of the RECORD of the proceedings of Saturday.

The Secretary proceeded to read from page 2805 of the RECORD, and read as follows:

> Mr. GRONNA. I ask that this item be passed over until Monday. I should like to go into it. I do not care to delay the Senate, but I would prefer to have it passed over until Monday.
>
> Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. According to the arrangement under which we are proceeding that reservation was made in favor of any Senator who desired a paragraph to be laid aside for further consideration.

Mr. JONES. I understand that the absence of a quorum was suggested by the Senator from Missouri.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair did not hear him.

Mr. JONES. I know that he made the demand, because I had risen to make it when he raised the point.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from Missouri did suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Bacon	Chamberlain	Gallinger	Kenyon
Bankhead	Chilton	Gronna	Kern
Brady	Clark, Wyo.	Hollis	La Follette
Brandegee	Clarke, Ark.	Hughes	Lane
Bristow	Crawford	James	Lea
Bryan	Cummins	Johnson, Me.	Lewis
Burton	Dillingham	Johnston, Ala.	Lodge
Catron	Fletcher	Jones	Martin, Va.
Martine, N. J.	Reed	Smith, Ga.	Thompson
Norris	Robinson	Smith, Md.	Thornton
O'Gorman	Saulsbury	Smith, Mich.	Tillman
Oliver	Shafroth	Smith, S. C.	Townsend
Overman	Sheppard	Smoot	Vardaman
Page	Sherman	Stone	Walsh
Perkins	Shively	Sutherland	Warren
Pomerene	Simmons	Swanson	Williams
Ransdell	Smith, Ariz.	Thomas	Works

Mr. SHEPPARD. My colleague [Mr. CULBERSON] is unavoidably absent. He has a permanent pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. GRONNA. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. MCCUMBER] is necessarily absent from the city, due to serious illness in his family, at Detroit Lake, Minn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-eight Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I hold in my hand a plain letter from a plain man which, however, I think is a sufficient answer to the very elaborate argument of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] the other day upon the subject of American wages, especially in the mining business. I have not had time to verify all the figures in it, but I think it will be found to be correct. I ask to have it read as a part of my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi asks consent to have read the letter he has sent to the desk. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

PROVIDENCE, July 26, 1913.

MY DEAR SIR: Having read your debate in the Senate Chamber with Mr. SMOOT, of Utah, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD July 18, 1913, in which the Utah Senator claims the tariff laws of his party are responsible for the high rate of wages in our country, and in order to prove his claims in that respect he cites the lead-mining industry as a shining example of what protection will do for the individual engaged in that line of industry. Now, Mr. WILLIAMS, I am not going to indulge in glittering generalities, hot-air logic, or blow-hard argument. I am just going to prepare for your consideration some figures and a few facts which I have learned after studying the returns of the last national census reports in connection with mines and mining. In speaking of the industry throughout the country they say we have employed during the period above mentioned 1,086,782 wage earners, and they receive $599,705,989 as compensation for their services, which gives each wage earner $551.82 per year, $10.61 per week, or $1.77 per day. This national average includes every branch of the industry throughout the length and breadth of our land, and the gross valuation. The total cost was $1,238,410,322, which allows each individual worker $1,140 as his share of total amount. Now, Mr. Senator, let us go into his State of Utah and find out how much they are paid there. The same source of information which I quote from says there is employed in the mining business 11,004 wage earners and they are paid $8,986,851, averaging $816.69 per year, $15.70 per week, or $2.61 per day, and as the result of their united efforts they produce $22,083,282 of mining commodity which gives each man or boy $2,007 as the result of his toil. In the State of Utah the principal productions consist of copper, silver, and gold ores—this accounts for their high rate of wages within the State. We will now take up the particular industry Mr. SMOOT speaks of—the lead-mining industry. The reports says there are 21,603 wage earners distributed among a half dozen of States; chief of or principal one is the State of Missouri, which employs and produces about 75 per cent of men and material connected with the business. Now, those 21,603 men and boys receive $10,477,657 as the reward of their yearly toil, which gives each one of them the princely sum of $485 per year, $9.33 per week, or $1.55 per day. This pay, Mr. Senator, is in the lead business, which Mr. SMOOT says pays all the way from $3.50 per day up to $4.75 per day. Why, sir, the actual average pay is only one-third—33⅓ per cent—of what he claims it is—$3.50 the lowest pay he mentioned. Now, Mr. Senator, we have working right here in the city of Providence in nonprotective industries such people as Senegambian niggers from the Cape de Verde Islands, dark-skinned Arabs from the northern shores of the Mediterranean, who receive $2.25 per day for nine hours' work, and this pay received by those unskilled alien workmen employed in nonprotected industries is more than the wages received by the wage earners employed in the highly protected industries of the State of Rhode Island. And those industries that I refer to are woolen and worsted, cotton and jewelry, foundry and machine-shop products. In the woolen and worsted trade there are 24,924 wage earners who get $11,537,699; the average per operative amounts to $463 per year, $8.90 per week, or $1.48 per day. The cotton business employs 28,786 workers, and they receive $11,796,733 per year, which gives each one employed in that business $410 a head, or $7.88 per week, or $1.31 per day. The jewelry business—one of the most highly protected pets in the tariff laws—employs 9,511, whose total income is $4,760,780, average $500 each per year, $9.61 per week, or $1.60 per day, while the highly skilled workmen that are engaged in the foundry and machine-shop business number 10,937 and receive $6,899,657 for the year's work, which averages $631 each, $12.13 per week, or $2.02 per day. Now, any fair-minded person can by carefully comparing the wages received by those wage earners that are employed in the protected industries that I have described with the wages received by those uneducated, ignorant, unintelligent aliens that are employed in such industries as the building trades, sewer construction, macadamizing and road building, freight handling, longshoreing, coal, including trimming and shoveling, wheeling and delivering—now, Mr. Senator, any person can see that the tariff doctrine which Mr. SMOOT so piously reveres, preaches, and fervently prays for does not raise wages in Rhode Island any more than it does in Utah or Mississippi. Now, Mr. Senator, let us take the tariff rates or taxes that is levied for the benefit of the wage earners employed in the lead business. According to the rate in the Payne-Aldrich bill, 1½ cents a pound on lead ores, that amounts to $30 a ton, while the rate on zinc ores is 1 cent a pound, which makes $20 on zinc ores. Now, 21,603 wage earners get $10,477,657, or $485 each; they produce 1,335,637 tons of lead and zinc, which cost $21,363,094 to produce. Now, the labor cost is $7.84 per ton. If you imported this much lead and zinc from any foreign country—the combined product, 1,335,637 tons, 2,671,274,636 pounds—you would have to pay at the customhouse on the lead $14,021,153.85, while the zinc product would cost $17,365,243.79; here we have a total tax of $31,386,397.64. This protection is $23,903 more than the cost of production. Now, Mr. Senator, who gets this overprotection of $20,908,740.64, the miner or the mine owner? I solemnly say it is the mine owner and not the humble mine worker. Now, Mr. Senator, in looking over the statistical abstract of the United States for the year 1912 I find that the price of lead in the New York City market is $86 per ton, and on the same page in the same volume I find the market price of zinc in St. Louis, Mo., is $108 per ton for the year of 1909, and the following year—1910—lead rose to $88 while zinc remained the same—$108 per ton. Now, sir, if those two prices I find in the abstract are honest facts, where does the labor cost $7.84 come in? The freight rate along with marine insurance is ample and sufficient protection for the scanty mite he is paid for his labor in that industry. Why it is a mere bagatelle, a beggarly pittance, compared with the wholesale selling price in New York City. There is not a commission man in the United States that would contract to supervise the importation and distribute the same amount of lead and zinc that was produced in this country for 1909 for the original cost—$31,363,094—for the simple reason that the cost of receiving, delivering, and distributing is in our country nearly if not as large as the original cost of production. Now, Mr. Senator, if I were a Member of the United States Senate I honestly and candidly say to you I would use all the influence within my ability to place lead and zinc on the free list. Hoping my humble contribution to this great national discussion—tariff reform—may throw a little light on the subject, I remain,

Yours, most respectfully,

THOMAS F. CAWLEY,
69 Hope Street, Providence, R. I.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, of course I have not the honor of knowing that plain, truthful gentleman who has just written to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], and I do not believe that the Senator from Mississippi has closely examined the letter, or he would not have had it read.

In the first place, I want to state that no man who employs miners in the lead mines, not only in Utah, but in other States in the West, will say that they are employed for $1.71 a day or for $1.16⅔ a day, as is stated by this writer in his second statement. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] is a Member of this body; he knows what the miners' wage is in Colorado; and I do not think it is very much different from what it is in Utah. The wages, Mr. President, of miners in the State of Utah are regulated by the miners' union. I myself have been somewhat interested in mining in my own State. I have seen the pay rolls; I know what miners are paid; and I know that what I stated here to the Senate was absolutely true. Now, a man in Rhode Island picks up what he claims to be statistics and tries to controvert the statement that was made by me, when he does not know what he is talking about, and I will prove it to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me a moment, he does not seem to have caught the drift of the letter. The writer is not telling what some individual miner is paid upon some particular day or during some particular month, but he has gone to the United States census reports to find the number of wage earners and the amount of wages paid, and he has divided one by the other and he has exploded—the Senator from Utah is right that I have not had any time to verify the quotations from the census report; but if the writer of the letter has quoted the census figures correctly, and I presume that he has—he has exploded that fallacy and he has proven that under the guise of a high per diem, when you come to consider the constancy of employment and the gross amount paid for the gross number of laborers, your figures do not hold out.

Mr. SMOOT. The trouble with the whole thing is that the number of employees in the mines, as well as in the cotton and the woolen mills of the country, as given by the Census Bureau, include all the employees that have been employed during the year. They may have worked 3 months, they may have worked 6 months, they may have worked 9 months, or they may have worked 12 months, but the number given includes them all.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand that.

Mr. SMOOT. If a man had worked 3 months and then quit and another man had been employed to take his place and he worked 3 months and then quit, and another one had been employed who worked 3 months more and then quit, and at the end of the 9 months another one was employed to work the remainder of the 3 months of the year, that would show that there were four men employed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand that; but the Senator from Utah also understands that, no matter how many employees there were, if the aggregate amount paid to labor during the year was so much and the aggregate number of laborers were so many, the amount paid to each laborer per day would be so much. It does not make any difference. The way the Senator from Utah arrives at his figures is to take some fictitious person who was employed the entire year, and then he multiplies that per diem by 365 days and arrives at his conclusion in that way.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Mississippi does me a wrong and he does his own intelligence a wrong when he makes that statement. I say to the Senator now that there is no miner in the State of Utah or in the State of Idaho or in any of the Western States who is employed for the production of gold or silver or lead who works for $1.71 per day. The miners' union regulates that. Their wages range from $3.50 up to $4.75 per day, according to the work that is done.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is while they are working.

Mr. SMOOT. That is per day.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. Now, the Senator brings in figures here, or presents them here to be read, to try to make it appear that the amount that is paid to the miners in the State of Utah is $1.71 a day.

Another things he refers to, Mr. President——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I presume the figures are correctly quoted from the census report. Does the Senator dispute the census figures?

Mr. SMOOT. The gentleman misconstrues what the census figures mean. I will say to the Senator that if the wage for miners was $800 a year—I am speaking now in round figures, so as to make it plain—and one man was employed three months and he had $200 paid to him, and another man was employed for the three months following him and he was paid $200, and another man was employed for the three months following and he was paid $200, and another man was employed for the next three months and he was paid $200, that would show, by the census figures, that there were four men employed, receiving $800; and the way that this man has figured it out here, four men being employed for one year with a wage paid of $800, therefore the wage of the miner in the State of Utah is $200 per annum. That is the way that the writer of that letter has figured it out.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, is not the Senator from Utah mistaken? Do not the census figures show, as to the wage earners, their average number?

Mr. SMOOT. That is the average number.

Mr. HUGHES. No; the average number means the average number that are employed, not for one day, but during the year.

Mr. SMOOT. That is not the way the report is made. The average number is the number employed during the whole year.

Mr. HUGHES. Of course, that gives you the average number. Therefore it could not happen, as the Senator has said, that the man would be carried in the final list, although he was employed for only two months. He would only show in the average.

Mr. SMOOT. The way the report is made—and I know it is made from the mines in the West—is, we take the number of employees during the year that have been reported, and report that. We also report the amount of production in tons, but not in dollars and cents received.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator must be mistaken about that. I am in a position to say that the Senator is mistaken about that.

Mr. SMOOT. Well, let the Senator's word go for that. It has been discussed here many times, and it has not been disputed here before.

Mr. HUGHES. I have made some personal investigation of this matter, not only in private establishments but in the census reports, and I never heard that statement.

Mr. SMOOT. I have made the investigation a good many times, and I know that there is no miner in the State of Utah who receives $1.71 a day for mining.

Mr. HUGHES. I did not say that.

Mr. SMOOT. But that is what this writer says.

Mr. HUGHES. I am not speaking about his figures.

Mr. SMOOT. That is what I am talking about.

Mr. HUGHES. I do not know anything about them. I am simply calling the Senator's attention to the fact that there is a column here in the Statistical Abstract, which shows that these figures relate to the average number of men employed, not the actual number.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Utah a question. The Senator tells us that one miner works for two months and gets $200 and then quits; that another miner goes to work for two months and gets $200, and then he would quit; that another would do the same thing; and then that another would do the same thing. Why do all those miners quit after working for two months in such profitable employment?

Mr. SMOOT. They go from one mine to another; they go from one district to another; they may have friends in another district, and they move from one to another. I ask the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] if that is not so? If the Senator from New Jersey knows so much about this, I will ask him what do the miners in the State of Utah receive?

Mr. HUGHES. I do not have any idea. I did not venture an opinion as to what they receive, and I am not talking about that. The Senator may be absolutely right. I am simply calling his attention to the way the Statistical Abstract figures are prepared.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to ask the Senator from Colorado if there is any miner in the State of Colorado employed in mining copper or silver or lead who receives only $1.75 a day?

Mr. THOMAS. No, Mr. President. I think the contention of the Senator from Utah with reference to the wage scale is correct. He has also given the reason for it, that the miners' union fixes the rates below which no man can be employed.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the writer of the letter which has been read also states that lead-bearing ores of all kinds carry a duty of 1½ cents a pound, or $30 a ton. What do they carry? The present law provides:

> Lead-bearing ores of all kinds, 1½ cents per pound on the lead contained therein.

Is that $30 a ton on the lead ore? Any man who knows anything about mining knows that the statement in the letter is not true. Ten per cent lead ore is good ore, and many a mine is worked in this country that does not contain 10 per cent of lead ore. So instead of $30, according to the statement which was read here to illuminate the minds of Senators of the United States, the duty would amount to about $3 per ton, instead of $30.

The writer of the letter then gives figures as to the importations of lead ores into this country, multiplies the amount by 30, and says that is the amount of money that the American people have been assessed because of this 1½ cents a pound rate on lead ore.

He uses the same argument exactly with relation to zinc. Of course, I am not going to take up the zinc schedule and show in detail the inaccuracy of his figures; but he says the rate is 1 cent a pound. Upon what kind of zinc ore? Ore to-day carrying less than 10 per cent is free, and the duty is graduated up until it reaches 1 cent a pound, not upon zinc ore, but upon the zinc contained in the ore. I simply wanted to say this much to the Senator from Mississippi in answer to this letter.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, if I were to employ a man at $15 a month and kept him employed 10 months, and had no use for him the other two months, I would pay him $150, and when I came to divide the $150 by 365 days I would have paid the man 41 cents a day; but if I resorted to the popular Republican method, I would multiply the $15 per month by 12 instead of 10. I would then get 50 cents a day, and I would contend that the man was paid 50 cents a day. If I had used him only two months during the entire time, when I needed him very badly, and paid him $20 a month and multiplied it by 12, I would increase what he had actually received from about 10.9 cents per day, when it was averaged throughout the year, to about six or seven times as much.

From the very manner in which the letter was written the author is evidently a very plain man, a workingman. I never heard of him; I know nothing about him, and have not verified his figures; but it struck me his statements came with such a ring of sincerity, that there was about them so much of the characteristic workingman's disposition to look into things for himself, that I wanted his letter honored by a place in the RECORD. If I have served no other purpose I have served the purpose of securing a very valuable admission from the Senator from Utah. Just a moment ago he triumphantly announced that the miners' union in Utah fixed the price of wages. Hitherto he has been contending that it was the tariff. We have got at least that much out of the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, Mr. President, I think the Senator is absolutely mistaken in not applying also the reasons that have been given heretofore, that the tariff has a great deal to do with wages. I have never said that it had not. Men are not compelled to work in the mines; they can work at anything else they desire, not only in Mississippi, but in every other State in the Union. I desire to ask the Senator from Mississippi, now, if he does not believe that that letter is inaccurate and misleading?

Mr. WILLIAMS. In so far as the man's method in getting at what the true wages are, it is not inaccurate, but, on the contrary, the statements of the Senator from Utah are inaccurate. So far as the man's calculation of the rate upon lead is concerned, it is self-evidently inaccurate, because he multiplied the rate per pound by the entire weight of the lead ore.

It is God's everlasting gospel truth, and you can not get away from it, that the amount of money paid out for wages in a year divided by the number of men who have worked throughout the year for those wages for the average time worked during the year is the absolutely true wage payment of American labor. When you say that your lead miners are paid $3.65 a day and then neglect to notice the fact that half or two-thirds of them are not employed all the year, and when you arrive at an annual payment for wages and divide that by 365 days you are not arriving at a correct result. The census does proceed upon the right principle. The census takes the average number of men employed, and it takes the entire amount paid for wages.

Now, in another respect the letter which has been read is not inaccurate. The writer of the letter goes on and gives the value of these products, and the laborer's share of the total gross value is very small, indeed.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I wish to say to the Senator from personal experience, that if you take prospecting, developing, and mining all together, I believe that 90 per cent of the total amount goes for the transportation of the ores and to the laboring men. This is something that theory will not dovetail with. We know the absolute facts and conditions——

Mr. WILLIAMS. The census reports are not theory.

Mr. SMOOT. Well, Mr. President, the Senator, from what he has just stated, tries to impress upon the Senate that the figures of the man who wrote the letter which has been read are correct, and that $1.71 per day is the wage paid to the miner in the State of Utah or in the State of Colorado, whereas the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] himself, one who is interested in the preparation of this bill, says that those figures are not true, whether they are census figures or the figures of the gentleman from Providence, R. I.

Mr. THOMAS. They are not correct in so far, Mr. President, as they apply to conditions in the Senator's State and in mine.

Mr. SMOOT. This learned gentleman refers to my own State.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I am not so much interested in the way Senators have figured these matters out, as I am in the way this alleged information was presented to the Senate. I do not believe the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] will think, after he has considered the matter carefully, that he has done just exactly the proper thing. He admits he knows nothing about this man and that he has not verified the figures; yet the gentleman who wrote the letter—an anonymous letter, so far as we know anything of the writer—has used language in reference to a Senator that is not, to say the least, very complimentary. What I am objecting to, Mr. President——

Mr. WILLIAMS. What was the uncomplimentary language?

Mr. TOWNSEND. He was stating in a most sarcastic manner matters in reference to the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. WILLIAMS. He said the Senator from Utah zealously preached and fervently prayed for the doctrine of protection. That is true. There is nothing sarcastic or rude about that.

Mr. TOWNSEND. We all heard the letter.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I zealously preach the opposite doctrine and fervently pray for its consummation.

Mr. TOWNSEND. We all heard it, and we all understood just exactly why the writer said it. What I am objecting to is the continuance of this practice which has been indulged by men throughout the country of writing letters, making reckless and unauthenticated statements which are not founded upon facts, or may not be, and then giving them prominence by placing them in the RECORD as an argument in favor of some question under discussion here by men who do not vouch for the writers at all and who do not even know them.

I do not object to anything being placed in the RECORD that is going to shed any light upon the discussion prepared by men who are known to be honorable, competent, and capable, but I do seriously object to this kind of irresponsible arguments being placed in the RECORD of the United States Senate. I do not think it is fair; I do not think it is just to the Senate or to the country. We all get many letters. I have the same right to bring in here and have printed letters I have received saying mean things about some Senators which I knew would not bear investigation, but certainly I would not present them, because they could serve no purpose, unless it might be to prejudice somebody. It is to that I object.

I asked the Senator when he rose what he was going to introduce, but I did not hear him. I do not say that I would have objected to its introduction, because I would have had confidence in the good judgment of the Senator from Mississippi. But it does not seem to me that it has any place in the RECORD.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I have been duly impressed with the sacrosanct manner of the Senator from Michigan, and I feel rebuked to an extent that I can hardly express, especially as it comes from the other side of the Chamber, where they have never hesitated to put into the RECORD every time they could letters from men whose pocketbook nerve was touched by tariff legislation.

There is nothing in this letter that is rude, either to the Senate or to the Senator from Utah, and the Senator from Michigan can not make it so appear, simply because it is not a fact.

In connection with the letter, it is evidently, from the very face of it, the letter of a plain American who has been giving himself the trouble to study the tariff to the best of his ability. That he has made some mistakes may be true, but I am not prepared to believe, just because he is, as the Senator from Michigan seems to think, upon the other side of the issue, that he is purposely misquoting the census figures. That he may have made some mistakes I doubt not. I said at the beginning that I had not verified his quotations; but in so far as that is concerned, he has just as much right to be heard through me, as one of the ambassadors of one of the States upon this floor, as has the Senator from Michigan himself, provided only that his language is decent and respectful to the Senate and to Senators; and it was decent and respectful to both.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I respectfully ask that we now proceed with the reading of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question before the Senate is the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. GRONNA obtained the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me for a moment?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly, Mr. President.

Mr. GALLINGER. Referring to this amendment, in connection with the suggestion made by the Senator from Mississippi to the Senator from Utah that this debate has developed the fact that it is the labor unions, and not the tariff, that fix wages in the mining regions of the country——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I said the Senator from Utah had made that admission.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the Senator from Utah will not agree to that.

Mr. SMOOT. I qualified it, Mr. President, and said——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I leave it to the record. What the Senator said is in the record. It will not be changed, I am sure.

Mr. SMOOT. What I said, Mr. President, was that anyone would know that the miners were not receiving the amount stated by the gentleman who wrote this letter, for the union rates of wages were such that the figures could not possibly be true.

Mr. GALLINGER. The only observation I wish to make is that if we did not have tariff duties on these products, and the products came from foreign countries instead of being developed from our own mines, the labor unions would not have any wages to fix.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I rose for the purpose of briefly discussing paragraph 71; but before I do that I want to say, in all kindliness, to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], that he has not familiarized himself with all kinds of labor when he says that the way to determine the amount of wages per day is to figure the number of laborers and the number of days of labor. I wish to say to the Senator that in my State, which is an agricultural State, we find it difficult to keep men for any great length of time even at very high wages. We find that to be especially true during the time we are harvesting the grain, and more particularly during the time we are thrashing the grain, when we are paying all the way from $2.50 to $3.50 per day.

I make this observation for the benefit of the Senator from Mississippi, because he is mistaken in the statement he made a few moments ago. We pay these men $3.50 a day and board. I have myself paid that rate to hundreds of them. After they work 10 days they want to go to town or want to do something else. North Dakota is a prohibition State. There are no saloons in those towns, and they have to go across the line into Minnesota; or, if they are closer to Montana, they go into Montana. They will go and stay away two or three days. They will come back, not to work for me, but perhaps for my neighbor. After they have worked 10 days they have earned $35; and if the Senator from Mississippi knew conditions in the West as I know them he would know that when laboring men of that class get $35 it almost burns a hole in their pockets and they are ready to spend it for some purpose. It takes all the way from 25 to 30 men to constitute a thrashing crew. Let us say that we thrash 10 days. That would be, at the maximum, 300 men. We may have employed 500 men during that time, not because we do not want to employ the same men right along, but because they do not want to stay on the job.

I have a great deal of respect for every word uttered by the Senator from Mississippi; but there are certain small things, at least, with which the Senator from Mississippi has failed to familiarize himself, and this is one of them.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. My friend was never worse mistaken in his life. The Senator from Mississippi is perfectly familiar with the very condition which the Senator from North Dakota is describing. Perhaps the greatest floating labor in the world is the negro labor of the South. If you are hiring a wage squad of 12 men you will probably have to change the personnel of your wage squad every month, pretty nearly, or certainly a part of it, but that has not anything to do with what I was asserting. The Senator seems to have misunderstood what I said.

Mr. GRONNA. No; I did not misunderstand the Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS. My assertion was simply that if you want to arrive at the labor cost of any product in the world, the only possible way in which you can arrive at it is to take the total volume of the product and the total amount of wages paid out and the total price and value of the product, and in that way find out——

Mr. GRONNA. How about the number of men?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will come to that in a minute—and in that way find out what proportion of the total cost the labor cost constitutes. In arriving at the total labor cost the Census Bureau arrives at the average number of men working, and if these figures are correctly quoted from the report of the Census Bureau, they are based upon the average number of laborers working during the year. In other words, if one man works three months and another man works four months and another man works five months, those three men constitute one man. That is my understanding of the principle upon which the census is taken.

Mr. GRONNA. I was not basing my argument upon the census figures. I was basing my argument upon the statement made by the Senator from Mississippi. Certainly, he is mistaken when he says that the amount of wages per day is based upon the number of men and the total amount of wages.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, the Senator must pardon me——

Mr. GRONNA. I may have employed 3,000 men, and yet I may not have had, at one and the same time, more than 300 men.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand that, of course; everybody understands that. I was referring to the number of men reported by the census as being employed. If I understand the method upon which the Census Bureau proceeds, it is not the method the Senator is attributing to me, and my remarks were made with reference to the quotations from the census. The census gives the total amount paid out for labor and the total number of laborers arrived at by their calculations. That does not mean that a man that works three hours is counted as having worked any longer than that.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; but when I am asked by the census enumerator how many men I employ, I state that on an average I employ so many men; and when I am asked: "How many men did you employ last year?" it may be ten times or it may be twenty times as many men as I employ every day.

Mr. WILLIAMS. There is no difference between us on that point—not a particle.

Mr. GRONNA. Very well; then I am ready to proceed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If they came to me and asked me how many men I employed, if I had a wage squad of 10 men, I would say "Ten men," although perhaps the personnel of the 10 men would change somewhat every month.

Mr. GRONNA. Very well, Mr. President; I understand, then, that the Senator from Mississippi agrees with me.

I stated on Saturday that I should like to make some observations on this paragraph, No. 71, but not for the purpose of criticizing the action of the committee, because I believe the committee has acted wisely in reducing the duty on vanilla extract. I believe the duty was too high and is too high in the present bill. But I wish to ask the Senator in charge of this schedule of the bill why there should be a duty on the natural product—that is, the vanilla bean? As I understand, the vanilla bean is a product of South America, and possibly there is some raised in Mexico. We import all of this product. None of it is produced in the United States.

Vanilla may be classed as a luxury, but we know that it is used by every housewife and that in every home you will find vanilla used for various purposes. It is not regarded to-day as a luxury any more than spice is a luxury. So I desire to suggest to the committee that vanilla beans be placed on the free list.

I do not share the belief of the Senator from Utah that tonka beans should be placed on the free list. I, for one, wish no tonka beans were permitted to be imported.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator from North Dakota if he can imagine any article that is more universally used than vanilla?

Mr. GRONNA. No, Mr. President; I will say to the Senator that I can not.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is in practically every home—of the rich and of the poor.

Mr. GRONNA. It is in every home, so far as I know.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has been on the free list heretofore, as I understand.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; it has been on the free list, and it is on the free list in the present law.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is now proposed to make it dutiable?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator does not think that ought to be done, I apprehend, and some of the rest of us do not think it ought to be done.

Mr. GRONNA. No, Mr. President; I had hoped, and I hope now, that the Senate will again place it on the free list. I say this in no spirit of criticism at all, since I approve the action of the Senate committee in reducing the duty on vanilla extract.

I believe there should be a duty on the tonka bean. I do not agree with the statement made by the Senator from Utah. The tonka bean, as I understand, is used for various purposes; but the oil is also extracted from the tonka bean and sold for vanilla. I have been told by men who are engaged in the extract business that it is a mild poison. For that reason I desire to suggest to the committee that a duty, perhaps a heavier duty, should be placed on the tonka bean, but certainly the vanilla bean should be on the free list.

I do not care to delay the Senate further. I simply desired to make these few observations.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, the trade in vanilla beans has become quite an important one with the business men of San Francisco. There has grown up a system of exchange or barter of the vanilla bean raised in the island of Tahiti for the goods of this country shipped to that island. In other words, the vanilla bean is taken as money in exchange for goods from this country sent to the island.

The vanilla bean has been on the free list, and this trade has been built up under that system. If a duty of 30 cents a pound is now imposed upon vanilla beans, the result will be that the merchants of San Francisco, in the first instance, will be compelled to pay that 30 cents a pound in addition to what they have been paying, and of course that will be carried along to the consumer. In other words, it is simply imposing a direct tax upon the people of this country for a necessary that is used in almost every household in the United States. I am unable to see upon what theory any such tax as that can be imposed.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I move as an amendment, to strike out, after the semicolon, in line 7, page 18, the words "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound."

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. Mr. President, the duty imposed upon vanilla beans in this paragraph is imposed purely as a revenue duty. The statistics show that we imported in the year 1912, $2,625,153 worth of vanilla beans. The duty laid is a very small one, 30 cents per pound, equivalent to an ad valorem duty of about 15 per cent, and simply for purposes of revenue.

It is true that there are some vanilla beans, called the Tahiti beans, imported from Tahiti into San Francisco. Some of them, but not all, are exported. From the brief of the firm engaged in the business it appears that about two-thirds of what were imported by them were exported. The committee heard the representative of the firm, and felt that if the firm wanted to reexport and chose to do so a drawback could be obtained under the tariff act if the goods were exported after being imported into this country. But it is purely as a revenue measure that the duty is imposed.

Mr. LODGE. Does the Senator mean that they are exported in the same form in which they are imported?

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. No; they are sorted, and some work is done upon them; so there is something done in the way of manufacturing them—advancing them in value.

Mr. LODGE. Of course under the existing law there would be a drawback. I do not know how the administrative features of this bill are in that regard.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I have been informed that there would be a drawback provision because of the work expended upon them in the way of sorting.

Mr. LODGE. I mean I should think that would appear in the figures.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. They have not taken advantage of it; but there has been no reason for doing so, because vanilla beans have been upon the free list heretofore.

Mr. LODGE. That is true.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. While I am on my feet I will say a few words in regard to tonka beans. They are used in making coumarin, a preparation which is largely used as a flavoring extract in the manufacture of tobacco. The duty here imposed is a small one of 25 cents per pound, equivalent to 14.2 per cent ad valorem, which we felt was in accordance with other duties laid in this schedule.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in 1912 there were imported from Tahiti 325,264 pounds of vanilla beans. Of that amount there were exported, for the same year, 239,158 pounds. There were imported from other countries than Tahiti 516,364 pounds, or there remained in the United States, to be consumed in the United States, 602,470 pounds.

The estimate that is given in the Democratic handbook states that there will be a million pounds of vanilla beans imported, which, at the rate of 30 cents a pound, amounts to $300,000. If we export from now on the same proportion that we have in the past, that will be 400,000 pounds, leaving 600,000 pounds to be used in the United States. At 30 cents a pound that is only $180,000, instead of $300,000, as estimated in the handbook.

The importers of vanilla beans say it is almost impossible for them to handle the bean after it reaches this country in connection with other beans that are imported here and export the same bean. It is almost an impossibility, and unless it were the same bean it would be impossible for them to get the drawback on the amount exported.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Utah to what countries these beans are exported after they have been imported into the United States? It seems to me rather a singular trade situation that a product of that kind should be imported into the United States and then exported from the United States.

Mr. SMOOT. After these beans are prepared by the importers of the country some of them go to Ireland, some to England, and other European countries. The trade with San Francisco has brought from Tahiti the vanilla beans to the merchants of San Francisco, and the business of preparing them for the market has been carried on there to a great extent.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. GRONNA. I rose to ask the Senator from Utah if he is not mistaken in his figures. A million pounds at $2 a pound would be $2,000,000.

Mr. SMOOT. I had reference to the duty.

Mr. GRONNA. At 15 per cent ad valorem it would amount to $300,000.

Mr. SMOOT. I said that the estimate of 30 cents a pound duty on a million pounds amounted to $300,000.

Mr. GRONNA. My objection to the duty on the vanilla bean is that it taxes the breakfast table of the American people to the extent of $300,000 a year, according to the committee's own estimate.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the motion which I made on Saturday was to strike out "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound." I understand, however, that the Senator from North Dakota has offered an amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair suggests that it would be better to vote on it as a divided question.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the amendment be stated from the desk.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota to be stated from the desk?

Mr. STONE. Yes; let it be stated.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from North Dakota proposes, on page 18, lines 7 and 8, to strike out "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound."

Mr. STONE. The Senator from North Dakota means to transfer vanilla beans to the free list?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; transfer them to the free list.

Mr. STONE. Vanilla beans have been on the free list.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; so I understand.

Mr. STONE. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah if he is prepared to say whether the figures I now give are correct, or approximately correct—that the imports for the last year were 1,140,000 pounds?

Mr. SMOOT. For the year 1912?

Mr. STONE. Nineteen hundred and eleven.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; for the year 1911 they were 1,140,630 pounds.

Mr. STONE. That is about the same as I stated.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. STONE. The figures were given to me as 1,140,000, without the odd figures.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. STONE. The great bulk of these beans came from the Tahiti Islands, the French Oceanic possessions.

Mr. SMOOT. About 60 per cent. I will give the Senator the exact figures. From Tahiti there came 617,076 pounds, and from all other countries 523,554 pounds.

Mr. STONE. Yes; but a good part of that which came from other countries was from France, and those were beans that were taken from the Tahiti Islands to France and from France imported into the United States. They do not produce the beans in France. They come from a French possession, French Oceania.

Mr. SMOOT. The Tahiti bean is imported directly from Tahiti to San Francisco; but the Indian beans that the French handle, of which the Senator speaks, perhaps, go directly to France. The Tahiti beans do not go to France and then come into the United States.

Mr. STONE. I think they do.

Mr. SMOOT. I am informed that they do not, Mr. President.

Mr. STONE. I think they are taken from this French possession to France, and that quite a large amount in pounds is afterwards sent from France to the United States.

The great bulk of these beans coming into the United States—the Senator says 60 per cent, and I think he is approximately correct about that—come from the Tahiti Islands to San Francisco. There is a firm in San Francisco that has built up a very considerable business in the importation of these beans, a good part of which are distributed in the United States, but I think the greater part of which they carry on through the United States to foreign countries.

Mr. SMOOT. About two-thirds.

Mr. STONE. About two-thirds. For what purpose does the Senator understand that these vanilla beans are used?

Mr. SMOOT. They are used for the manufacture of extract of vanilla and some classes of people use them in closets as a scent.

Mr. STONE. Perfumery?

Mr. SMOOT. No, vanilla.

Mr. STONE. They are used to manufacture vanilla extract.

Mr. SMOOT. The great bulk, I think.

Mr. STONE. The greater part of them, practically all of them, which in turn is used as a flavor in the manufacture of ice cream and things of that kind.

Mr. SMOOT. In puddings and everything almost that is cooked in the home.

Mr. STONE. It is a flavor, and a part of it is used to make perfumes, and, as the Senator says, in closets, bureau drawers, and trunks, and things of that kind. It strikes me that that is a luxury; and I submit that it is a subject of legitimate taxation in a bill framed upon the theory of raising revenue by imposing duties on luxuries especially, higher duties on luxuries and lower duties on necessities.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. STONE. I am through.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I wanted to ask for information from the Senator from Missouri, in charge of this schedule——

Mr. STONE. I am not in charge of the schedule.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Oh! I wanted to ascertain where the million pounds came from that has been discussed.

Mr. STONE. Whefe it comes from?

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Yes; where are the figures found?

Mr. STONE. The figures that I have before me—I do not vouch for their entire accuracy except as they are taken——

Mr. SIMMONS. The figures are taken, if the Senator will permit me, from the imports of merchandise for the year ending June 30, 1911.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I was asking the question because the Tariff Handbook that is furnished us, on page 86, gives the importation for 1910 as seven hundred and ninety-six thousand and odd pounds, and in 1912——

Mr. SIMMONS. That is correct for 1910; but for 1911 the figures the Senator has there——

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. The importation for 1911 is not here. In 1912 the last importations were 841,639 pounds. Is that correct?

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. That is the last year's importation when they were on the free list. Now, the estimate of the committee is that by putting it on the dutiable list at 30 cents a pound we will increase the importation 200,000 pounds.

Mr. STONE. I do not know whether we will increase the importation 200,000 pounds or decrease it 200,000 pounds. An estimate made by Treasury officials based upon percentages in past bills is an exceedingly unreliable basis upon which to proceed. You can not tell; it may be greater or it may be less. Those estimates are made by officials. I do not know how valuable they are.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will state to the Senator, if the Senator from Missouri will permit me, that the importation of this article seems to vary very much in different years. In 1907 it was 969,000 pounds; then, in 1908, it fell to 571,000. The next year, 1909, it went up to 1,121,000 pounds, and immediately fell down the next year to 797,000 pounds. In 1911 it went up to 1,140,000 pounds.

Mr. STONE. Now, Mr. President, I think we have spent time enough on vanilla beans, and I ask that we may proceed.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I desire to be heard briefly.

Mr. STONE. Very well.

Mr. BURTON. I trust Senators on the other side of the aisle will vote to retain vanilla beans on the free list. There are numerous objections to the imposition of this duty. In the first place, it is making an article dutiable which has not been so before. That in itself should arouse inquiry.

It is said as a justification of this act that it is for revenue. Now, if you are going to raise revenue by the imposition of duties on these classes of noncompeting articles, why not impose duties on coffee and on tea, on categories of products which amount to something instead of creating vexation and confusion in the administration of the revenue laws by picking up a score of items like this?

Mr. STONE. Does not the Senator from Ohio think there is any difference between the workingman taking his cup of coffee and the young man and the young woman who go to a café after the theater to get a dish of ice cream?

Mr. BURTON. I think the young lady and the young gentleman are quite as fond of the ice cream and the glass of soda as of a cup of tea.

Mr. STONE. And the workingman's cup of coffee?

Mr. BURTON. One is a necessary article just as much as the other.

Again, it is very undesirable to interfere with the general adjustment of trade. Manufacturing and commercial operations have adjusted themselves to a condition in which these articles have been free from duty.

There is another objection which lies in the fact that these beans are largely exported as well as imported, and it is the experience that, notwithstanding our drawback provision, this article is so materially modified after it is imported and before exportation that it is very doubtful whether the drawback could be collected.

Again, this article has increased in value very considerably in the last 12 months, perhaps as much as a dollar a pound.

I have here a couple of letters, Mr. President, which I shall ask to have printed in the RECORD. One of them states the case so clearly, however, that I will read it. If there is no objection to it, I should like to have the letter printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. BURTON. I will say that I have received letters in regard to this article not only from manufacturers of flavoring extracts but from chemists, grocers, and bakers, all making a strenuous protest. This letter is under date June 5:

NEWARK, OHIO, June 5, 1913.

Senator THEODORE BURTON, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We wish to enter our protest against the placing of any duty on oil of lemon or vanilla beans, and ask that you consider the following reasons:

1. These items can not be produced in this country.

2. They are used almost exclusively by flavoring-extract manufacturers, and the burden of any duties would be borne by the poorer classes of people. The wealthy can use fresh fruits to obtain the flavor of orange, lemon, etc., while the poor, and especially the rural classes, must depend upon flavoring extracts.

3. The advance in prices made necessary by existing pure-food laws has already placed burdens upon this industry equal to, if not in excess, of that borne by any other industry except the tobacco and liquor business.

4. Any further advance is like "the straw that broke the camel's back," and it will—

I want to call attention to this point—and it will entirely eliminate the 5-cent package and make it necessary to change the 10-cent package to a 15-cent seller.

There are a number of these little duties here. The percentage may seem to be very small, but it will make to the consumer—the person who buys at the retail store—the difference between what is now a comparatively cheap parcel—say 5 cents and 10 cents, or possibly 15 cents—because the manufacturer and the retailer will take into account this duty and compel the purchaser to bear the full burden of it.

5. Flavoring extracts should rightly and justly be considered as necessities and not luxuries, and the raw flavoring materials have always been on the free list.

Now, here is another point that has not been brought out in this discussion:

6. Any further duty would likely result in manufacturers making imitation extracts in which they would use only 20 per cent alcohol. This would mean that the Government would lose much more in internal revenue than they would gain by the proposed duty. The internal revenue on a gallon of alcohol is now $2.09, and it does look as though this ought to be enough to exact from the extract manufacturer.

7. The addition of these duties would bring protests from millions of housekeepers all over the land.

We therefore request and urge that you consider this matter and hope that you will be able to enter your protest against any further duties upon these products.

Thanking you for any consideration given our request, we are,

Very truly, yours,

THE STYRON-BEGGS CO.,
F. L. BEGGS, Secretary.

The further letter submitted by Mr. BURTON is as follows:

DAYTON, OHIO, April 14, 1913.

Hon. THEODORE BURTON, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: May we not ask you to use your best endeavors to have eliminated from the Underwood tariff measure the provision assessing a duty of 50 cents per pound on vanilla beans, a product not heretofore taxed?

By reason of short crops in various countries this article is selling at practically $1 more than several years ago, and to increase the cost still further by this tax will further increase the price to the consumer. The most pernicious effect, however, will be the encouraging of the manufacture and sale of substitutes or imitations of vanilla flavor, which, while not injurious, are certainly undesirable for use as vanilla flavor. Manufacturers who have been trying to build up a business on pure goods will be very much hampered in this situation, and as it particularly affects ourselves and others in this State we hope you can consistently give the matter your attention in the direction indicated.

Yours, truly,

THE CANBY, ACH & CANBY CO.

Mr. BURTON. In view of the fact that this discussion has been rather lengthy, Mr. President, I do not wish to take up more time. It is evident that this will impose an additional burden on the consumer far in excess of any benefit derived by the revenue. It is likely to lead to the use of substitutes which will diminish the quantity of internal-revenue tax, which will diminish in an altogether greater sum than anything that can be collected in the way of duties.

Mr. GALLINGER and Mr. STONE. Question!

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] to strike out, in line 7, "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound."

Mr. BRANDEGEE, Mr. BURTON, and Mr. GALLINGER called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRANDEGEE (when his name was called). I am paired for the rest of the afternoon with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON]. If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay." I withhold my vote.

Mr. JONES (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] during the rest of the afternoon. If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT]. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. I wish to transfer it to the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] and vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. JONES. I will transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GALLINGER (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], who has not voted. I will transfer that pair to the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. LEA. I am paired with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] and vote "nay."

Mr. OVERMAN. May I inquire if the senior Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. OVERMAN. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from California. As he is not present I will withhold my vote.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND], who is necessarily detained from the Chamber on important business, and therefore I withhold by vote.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I announce my pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF]. I will let this announcement stand for the remainder of the day.

Mr. PITTMAN. I vote "nay."

Mr. MYERS. Has the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. LEA (after having voted in the negative). I understand that the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] has a pair, and so I withdraw my vote. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (after having voted in the negative). After I transferred my pair to the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] he has come into the Chamber and voted. I therefore want to withdraw the announcement and withdraw my vote and announce that I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 30, nays 37, as follows:

YEAS—30.

Borah	Clark, Wyo.	La Follette	Smoot
Bradley	Crawford	Lodge	Sterling
Brady	Cummins	Nelson	Townsend
Brandegee	Dillingham	Norris	Warren
Bristow	Gallinger	Oliver	Weeks
Burton	Gronna	Page	Works
Catron	Jones	Sherman
Clapp	Kenyon	Smith, Mich.

NAYS—37.

Ashurst	Kern	Robinson	Stone
Bacon	Lane	Shafroth	Thomas
Bryan	Lewis	Sheppard	Thompson
Chamberlain	Martin, Va.	Shields	Thornton
Fletcher	Martine, N. J.	Shively	Tillman
Gore	Owen	Simmons	Vardaman
Hollis	Pittman	Smith, Ariz.	Walsh
James	Pomerene	Smith, Ga.
Johnson, Me.	Ransdell	Smith, Md.
Johnston, Ala.	Reed	Smith, S. C.

NOT VOTING—29.

Bankhead	Goff	Myers	Saulsbury
Burleigh	Hitchcock	Newlands	Stephenson
Chilton	Hughes	O'Gorman	Sutherland
Clarke, Ark.	Jackson	Overman	Swanson
Colt	Lea	Penrose	Williams
Culberson	Lippitt	Perkins
du Pont	McCumber	Poindexter
Fall	McLean	Root

So Mr. GRONNA's amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT], which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 18, lines 7 and 8, strike out "vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound."

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was continued, as follows:

SCHEDULE B—EARTHS, EARTHENWARE, AND GLASSWARE.

72. Fire brick, magnesite brick, chrome brick, and brick not specially provided for in this section, not glazed, enameled, painted, vitrified, ornamented, or decorated in any manner, 10 per cent ad valorem; if glazed, enameled, painted, vitrified, ornamented, or decorated in any manner, and bath brick, 15 per cent ad valorem.

73. Tiles, plain unglazed, one color, exceeding 2 square inches in size, 1½ cents per square foot; glazed, ornamented, hand-painted, enameled, vitrified, semivitrified, decorated, encaustic, ceramic mosaic, flint, spar, embossed, gold-decorated, grooved and corrugated, and all other earthenware tiles and tiling, except pill tiles and so-called quarries or quarry tiles, but including tiles wholly or in part of cement, 5 cents per square foot; so-called quarries or quarry tiles, 20 per cent ad valorem; mantels, friezes, and articles of every description or parts thereof, composed wholly or in chief value of earthenware tiles or tiling, except pill tiles, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. WEEKS. I rise, Mr. President, to ask the Senator in charge of the bill if he knows what percentage in the cost of tiles includes the labor cost? What part of the total cost is labor cost in making tiles?

Mr. STONE. I ask the Senator if he knows.

Mr. WEEKS. I am asking for information.

Mr. STONE. The bill, of course, is not based on the Republican theory the Senator has in mind of the difference in the cost of production in this country and abroad.

Mr. WEEKS. That would not make any difference, then, in the duty which would be imposed in this case?

Mr. STONE. It would not.

Mr. WEEKS. The Senator says it would not?

Mr. STONE. It would not. I should like, however, as the Senator asked the question, to repeat the question, just for information, being a little curious myself, as the Senator is, to know what the difference in the labor cost is.

Mr. WEEKS. I would not take the time of the Senate to have asked the question if I had had the information at hand, but I supposed that those who framed the bill would have it ready to impart to those who had not the information.

Mr. STONE. For what purpose did the Senator seek the information?

Mr. WEEKS. I will go on and explain the purpose for which I sought the information. I have a protest from the International Brick, Tile, and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance against this duty, in which they say:

We protest against the heavy reduction proposed. The American tile worker, presser, and kiln placer receive $14.50 and $15, respectively, while the Belgium worker receives $3.92 and $4.90 for the same labor; wages for the same line of work in Spain and Italy are less than those paid in Belgium. Ruination for plants as well as for the laborers if the tariff proposed is enacted.

I simply want to submit that information to demonstrate the fact that no attention whatever has been given to the result to labor in imposing this duty.

Mr. STONE. What per cent of the American production is represented in labor?

Mr. WEEKS. The figures are given in the statistics which are on the desk of every Senator.

Mr. STONE. The Senator asked the question and I thought——

Mr. WEEKS. The Senator has the information before him.

Mr. STONE. Yes; I have the information before me. I do not see the point of the Senator's contention. I ask for a vote on the paragraph.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No amendment has been proposed. The reading will proceed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was to strike out paragraph 74, embraced in lines 4 and 5, on page 19, as follows:

74. Roman, Portland, and other hydraulic cement, 5 per cent ad valorem.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri to let that amendment go over to-day. I wish to call his attention to the fact, as I believe, that it will take in a cement that the committee has not considered.

Mr. STONE. What cement?

Mr. SMOOT. The white Portland cement, used where it is required that no staining shall be done. The ordinary, common Portland cement stains wherever it is used upon real white work, and now they are making what is called the Roman cement, a white cement, and to-day, even under the rate they have, it is a little less than 12 per cent equivalent ad valorem. I wish the Senator would let the amendment be passed over, and I will call his attention to it and see whether he will not agree to a change.

Mr. STONE. Of course, if the Senator makes the request, under the rule that has been observed I shall not object to passing it over. Does the Senator ask to have it passed over until to-morrow?

Mr. SMOOT. Until we return to the amendments.

Mr. STONE. Well, during the consideration of the schedule?

Mr. SMOOT. No; I may not be prepared to present it at that time. I will suggest to the Senator to let it go over until the bill has been read, as other paragraphs have gone over, and then we will take up from the beginning those paragraphs that have been passed over in the order in which they were passed over.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator is speaking about Keene's cement?

Mr. SMOOT. No; Keene's cement is provided for in paragraph 76. It is white Portland cement. I think that the wording of it can be arranged so that it will apply only to that cement and not to common Portland cement.

Mr. STONE. I will not ask the Senator to state now what he thinks the wording should be. We will let it be passed over and later hear what he has to say.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be passed over.

The next paragraph was read, as follows:

75. Lime, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. JONES. I ask that that paragraph may go over. I will say that I will be ready to take it up either to-morrow or at any time before the conclusion of this schedule.

Mr. STONE. The lime paragraph?

Mr. JONES. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will go over.

The next paragraph was read, as follows:

76. Plaster rock or gypsum, crude, ground or calcined, pearl hardening for paper makers' use, Keene's cement, or other cement of which gypsum is the component material of chief value, and all other building cements not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Missouri, because I know that unless I can make some impression upon him I have no hope of being able to make any upon the paragraph.

Mr. STONE. If the Senator will pardon me, as my attention was diverted for a moment, I should like to have the amendment read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. In paragraph 76, page 19, line 11, after the word "section," it is proposed to strike out "10" and to insert "20," and at the end of the paragraph to add the following proviso:

Provided, That the duties levied and collected upon the commodities covered by this paragraph shall in no event be less than the duties levied and collected by any adjoining country upon the importation of said commodities into such adjoining country from the United States.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, the print of the bill which I have before me does not seem to correspond with the one which the Senator from Iowa has.

Mr. CUMMINS. The paragraph to which I offer the amendment is numbered 76, and is upon page 19 of the bill. The amendment proposed is to strike out "10" and to insert "20," which will make the duty 20 per cent instead of 10.

Mr. STONE. And then to add the countervailing provision?

Mr. CUMMINS. And the substance of the other part of the amendment is to provide that we shall not admit these commodities into the United States from Canada upon any better terms than Canada will admit our like commodities into that country.

Mr. President, there is, I think, the best reasons in the world for some change in this paragraph. I shall not enter into any extended history of the development of the enterprise. I would not be entirely candid, however, if I were not to say that it is one of the all too few manufacturing enterprises which have been carried on with some success in my State. The corporation or company which has its headquarters in Fort Dodge, Iowa, which was the home of my late colleague, Mr. Dolliver, is one of the relatively large companies engaged in the business.

Prior to the Payne-Aldrich tariff law these commodities carried a high duty, higher, indeed, in my opinion, than was necessary to exemplify the doctrine of protection. They are among the very few the duties upon which were very radically reduced in the Payne-Aldrich law. My late colleague, Mr. Dolliver, had a theory with regard to that, which I shall not state, because I think it is immaterial. It is only necessary to say that under the Dingley law these commodities, taken as a whole, carried a duty of nearly 50 per cent. I can not recall the exact rate, but Senators can easily ascertain by referring to the Tariff Handbook which accompanies the bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Forty-four per cent.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Payne-Aldrich law reduced these duties so that upon an average they were 25 per cent, a reduction of nearly 50 per cent. The pending bill reduces that average to 10 per cent. It is not fair to the industry.

I would not be so insistent upon it if it were not for the action of the only, or substantially the only, competing country with regard to the subject. I assume that all Senators know that the principal product that is manufactured from gypsum rock is what is known as hard plaster—wall plaster. We formerly had a market to some extent for this commodity in Canada. Canada now has very extensive manufactures both east and west. Our market for hard plaster in Canada formerly was in the western portion of the Dominion. Canada, however, inspired with a desire to further the interests of her own people, has advanced the duty upon this commodity to $2.50 per ton, whereas the 10 per cent proposed in this bill will levy a duty on importations from Canada into the United States of from 35 to 50 cents per ton, which will give the market of this country in large measure to Canada.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator from Iowa states that the duty under the Dingley law was practically 50 per cent.

Mr. CUMMINS. Forty-four or forty-five per cent; I have forgotten which.

Mr. JAMES. Forty-five per cent, and it was reduced in the present law 25 per cent.

Mr. CUMMINS. It was reduced to 25 per cent; not reduced 25 per cent.

Mr. JAMES. Very well. Is it not true that the rate was still prohibitive and that there have been practically no more importations under the Payne-Aldrich law than there were under the Dingley law, showing that the rate under the present law is just as prohibitive as was the rate under the Dingley law?

Mr. CUMMINS. I think, Mr. President, that the Senator from Kentucky has stated substantially the truth, but he forgets that Canada has just prepared herself for taking the market of this country. These great factories in Canada are of comparatively recent origin, and it seems to me that when you propose to allow Canada to come into the United States with a duty of 35 cents a ton, and Canada is requiring us to pay $2.50 a ton upon the same product, you are legislating not in behalf of the people of the United States, but you are legislating in behalf of the people of Canada. It will be so interpreted, and it will be so found in effect.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do.

Mr. WEEKS. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. JAMES] has just stated that the duty which now prevails is practically prohibitive. I have here a statement that 400,000 tons of this article were imported from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick into New York alone last year, which would not indicate that the duty was prohibitive.

Mr. JAMES. Four hundred thousand what?

Mr. WEEKS. Four hundred thousand tons.

Mr. CUMMINS. I understand the Senator from Kentucky to mean that the amount of this article imported into the United States was but a small proportion of the amount consumed here.

Mr. WEEKS. I think that may be true.

Mr. CUMMINS. And in that sense the statement of the Senator from Kentucky is correct.

Mr. JAMES. In order to be absolutely accurate about it, so that there will be no mistake, I will state that the record shows that there were $363,000 worth imported in 1905 under the rate of 44.21 per cent under the Dingley law, and $437,000 worth imported under the 25 per cent rate of the present law in 1912. So the increase by reason of reducing the tariff, as the Senator says, practically 50 per cent was about $60,000. The total production in this country is $12,803,758 worth.

Mr. WEEKS. That was in 1909.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, it must not be forgotten that this is a comparatively new industry; it is now really in a stage of development, although the hard plaster is generally accepted as a most available and most valuable commodity for use in the building of houses. Canada, however, will produce the article as cheaply as it can be produced in the United States. I am not contending that it can be produced much more cheaply in Canada than in the United States, but assuming that it can be produced with substantial uniformity in cost, it is still, as it seems to me, unpatriotic to allow Canada to come here with a duty imposed by us upon her product that amounts to nothing whatsoever; it is a mere nominal duty. You might just as well put the commodity on the free list. Of course, you do secure a little revenue, but it will have no tendency, or substantially no tendency, to prevent importations. A very little difference in freight rates will more than overcome all the duty that is here imposed, and if we are to perpetuate what I regard as a false system of allowing freight rates from Canada to the United States to be adjusted upon the basis of through rates, the outcome will be that there will be factories in Canada that can reach the interior of the United States, or at least some parts of the interior of the United States, for a less freight rate than can our own factories; and you will have legislated our enterprises into a position of positive disadvantage as compared with their foreign competitors.

Why not treat Canada in this respect as Canada treats us? If Canada were willing to give us free trade in this commodity, it would be a serious question with me as to whether we ought not to accept the proposition; but so long as Canada excludes us absolutely from her market, to admit this product of that Dominion into our market upon a ridiculously low duty, which is merely nominal, and that must have been imposed with no other idea than that of being nominal, does not comport with my idea of tariff making.

I do not know how carefully the committee has studied this question. It may be that it has gone all over these facts and many others of which I may be ignorant, and may, therefore, have reached a conclusion that is entirely satisfactory to its intelligence and its patriotism; but if it happens that some point of this history has been omitted from the consideration of the committee I hope that mere pride in the authorship of this bill and a mere general intent of not admitting amendments to it proposed by this side of the Chamber will not interfere with a fair consideration of this question.

I have not asked for even the Payne-Aldrich duty, although it was a reduction of 50 per cent from the old duty. I have asked only for a duty of 20 per cent upon the product, with the countervailing provision that we must get into Canada upon the same terms that Canada comes into the United States. I hope, therefore, that if the Senator from Missouri who has charge of this schedule is not ready to make decisive answer at this moment he will take time for reflection and ascertain whether this is just what ought to be done for a great American industry.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, practically all gypsum imported into the United States comes from Canada. In 1912 we produced $12,800,000 worth of gypsum and gypsum products.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. I did not mean to interrupt the Senator. I thought he was through.

Mr. CUMMINS. I had finished save for one question. Has it come to the knowledge of the committee that Canada originally imposed a duty of a dollar and a half a ton upon wall plaster, but, finding that that would not entirely protect her market against the invasion of the American product, had advanced her duty from a dollar and a half to two dollars and a half per ton?

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I do not think what Canada or any other country does is important in reference to imposing duties upon gypsum when the fact remains, which I was about to state, that we produced $12,800,000 worth in 1912 against $566,000 worth of importations; or, in other words, we make of gypsum and gypsum products about twenty-two times as much as we import.

Mr. CUMMINS. I understand that, and I know the force of it; but with commodities manufactured in adjoining countries, assuming that they are manufactured at about the same cost, when one country bars us out of her market with a duty of two dollars and a half per ton does the Senator intend to take the position that he is satisfied to allow that country to compete in our market under a nominal duty?

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, that proposition might be applied to almost every commodity we import. We might be asked by Senators on the other side, who advocate distinctively a protective duty, whether there is reason for it or not; whether we ought not to insist in every case that we will not permit their commodities, their manufactures, or their productions to be imported into our country and admitted to our markets unless they consent to allow our productions and commodities and manufactures to go into their markets on equal terms.

Mr. President, I do not take that view in the aspect of the case as presented. There may be exceptional instances for adopting that policy; but in relation to this particular article we are now considering we produce it largely in the United States, and of that production there is consumed in the United States twenty-two or twenty-three times as much as we import.

Our importations come chiefly from Canada, comparatively little coming from other countries. For example, last year we imported of gypsum and gypsum products $566,000 worth, of which there came from Canada $437,155 worth. I have the figures here before me, running back through a series of years, showing a similar comparison. Canada is the producer whose products are entered for competition on our markets.

Mr. President, when we are producing so vastly more than our competitor produces or offers for market here, we might as well ask, Are we fronting a condition where we need fear this competition?

Then, Mr. President, we are brought to answer this question: For what purposes are gypsum and gypsum products used? They are used in making plaster far more largely than in anything else, and in wall plasters, in paints, and in fertilizers. Gypsum is a fertilizer, and is so used in the country. There is a growing demand for it as a fertilizer.

I heard the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] the other day and other Senators on the other side speaking with wailing voice and almost with tears pearling down their cheeks about the ingratitude and the inattention of the Democratic Party to the welfare of the farmers of the country. Here is one instance where we are proposing to reduce duty to give to the farmers of this country a cheaper fertilizing product, and the Senator from Iowa comes and asks us to postpone the consideration of this paragraph and appeals to us to take into consideration whether we should not increase the duty imposed by the pending bill by doubling the rate proposed in the interest of some concern in the great agricultural State of Iowa, one of the greatest in the Union. Yet, Mr. President, the fact remains that we have practically no competition with the world and practically no competition with Canada in the sale in our market of this product, used, as I have said, for various purposes, and, among others, for fertilizing the lands in Iowa; though, I may say in passing, the lands of Iowa need little fertilization, but they may need it in the future. They are like the lands in Missouri; but there are other States where the agricultural lands do need to be fertilized. The Senator, I think, is making a request of the committee that is hardly warranted by the facts, and, so far as I am concerned, I am not in favor of granting it.

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the State of Missouri or any other State of which the Senator who has just taken his seat knows use a large amount of gypsum rock as a fertilizer?

Mr. STONE. As I have just said to the Senator, the virgin lands of Missouri up to date have not needed much fertilization, and I do not think the virgin lands of Iowa need much fertilization; but I do say that, according to the statistics and the evidence furnished by the Geological Survey, to which I refer the Senator, gypsum and its products are used and can be used to very great advantage as a fertilizer, and we want to give the farmers of the country cheap fertilizer. I should like to know whether the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] favors that?

Mr. CUMMINS. I have no doubt, Mr. President, that there is some gypsum used for fertilizing.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. A very great deal of it.

Mr. CUMMINS. It is used, I apprehend, mainly in the East. Fortunately, we have better use for it in the West. But the Senator from Missouri is always delightfully entertaining and charmingly insincere [laughter]—and I do not say that in any disparaging way—because he knows how to reach his object, and just now he has sought to reach it by retorting upon my friend from Kansas on account of his solicitude for the farmer. I want the Senator from Missouri, however, to know that while we have concern for the farmer, we also have concern for the manufacturer.

If I believed that a duty of 20 per cent on a product that is not worth more than a dollar a ton in its crude state would be a burden upon the farmers who had occasion to use it as a fertilizer I might surrender my convictions to the eloquence of my friend from Missouri. But I know and the Senator from Missouri knows that it would be no burden if this duty were advanced to 20 per cent.

The high-priced product is wall plaster. By far the larger part of the domestic product in value is the hard plaster. The effect of what is proposed by the Democratic side of this Chamber is, in the first place, to allow Canada to supply New England, or a part of New England, from Nova Scotia, where the gypsum rock is found in large quantities. The second thing that will be accomplished is to allow the Canadian factories to supply the western part of our country with hard plaster simply because she may have some advantage in freight rates to certain parts of our Western States.

Personally I do not believe a duty of 20 per cent will change the price of this commodity one farthing. If it were made free, I do not believe it would change the price a farthing. What it will do, however, is to shut up a part of our market, so far as the domestic producers are concerned, and give that market to Canada. There are parts of Canada that we can reach more cheaply than they can be reached from the Canadian factories. I want the chance to go to Canada to sell our output. I want you to give us the same chance there that you intend to give Canada in certain parts of the United States.

Mr. STONE. May I ask my friend why Canada puts a wall of two dollars or two dollars and a half a ton on gypsum against the United States unless she is afraid the United States will invade her market?

Mr. CUMMINS. I can tell the Senator from Missouri why Canada puts a duty of two dollars and a half a ton on gypsum.

Mr. STONE. Is it because Canada thinks we can produce it here, from our gypsum quarries, with our labor, and carry it into Canada and sell it there so much cheaper than they can produce it there?

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator from Missouri can not drive me into any inconsistency about that. I know why Canada put a duty of two dollars and a half a ton upon this commodity. It was because we would have taken her markets if the duty had not been imposed. In these days, however, markets are very largely a matter of cost of transportation. If Canada allowed us free entry into her borders, I think we could compete with Canada in the United States without any duty whatever. This is not a protective duty in the proper sense of the word. It is an effort to expand the commerce of the United States. It is an effort to give us a fair chance to do business outside of the United States.

You put a countervailing duty upon wheat. I agree that it can not be said as to every commodity that we must insist upon the same rate as a condition of entering a foreign market that we impose as a condition of entering our market. That could not be asserted as a general principle. I agree with the Senator from Missouri that we must take account of all the circumstances and conditions which surround us in determining whether or not that ought to be done.

But I should like to have the Senator from Missouri tell me a good reason for putting a countervailing duty on wheat that will not apply to a duty upon hard wall plaster. We produce a very large amount of both. Our resources are practically unlimited as to both. Yet you have said in this bill that Canada can not bring her wheat into the United States free until she permits us to enter her markets free. I ask you to say the same thing with regard to this enterprise. If you can give me any good reason for differentiating between the two products, I should like to hear it.

We are here legislating, as I suppose, for the good of the American people. We want to preserve, so far as we can, our home markets, and we want to widen and broaden our markets in other countries. We want an opportunity for every American who is willing to work to work a full day and as many days of the year as he may be willing to employ himself. The result of his labor must be sold either in our own markets or in the markets of foreign countries. It is just as much your duty, when you come to an enterprise like this, to see that we have a fair chance in Canada as it is to see that our laboring men are employed to supply the American market.

If I agree with you therefore—and I am not prepared to dispute it, because I do not know; I have not investigated it—that there is no difference in the cost of production, if I assume it, when I know and you know that this commodity is being sold all over the United States under competitive conditions at the lowest possible price that will yield any profit whatever to those who are engaged in it, you must concede that the duty that has been put upon it does not affect in any degree whatever the price, if we can produce it as cheaply as it can be produced in Canada.

Under these circumstances, if these statements be true, to stand here and weakly surrender our chance abroad, to stand here and weakly allow Canada to exclude us from her borders while throwing wide open the gates for her products, is to me as indefensible as it is mysterious. I can not understand that way of making a tariff law. I can not understand that way of taking care of the people of this country. We want as many men engaged in making gypsum and hard plaster as we can put to work; and if we are making it as cheaply as they are making it abroad, if it is being sold under competition, as it is, if it is being sold at a low price, as it is, why, in the name of justice, will you not do something to batter down the high wall that Canada has built up between herself and the United States and give our people who can reach certain parts of Canada under more advantageous conditions than her own factories an opportunity to supply those markets?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I have received from constituents at home a statement on this question which is addressed to Congress, issued by the president of the United States Gypsum Co. It is very brief, and I ask that the Secretary read it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. JAMES. I could not hear the request of the Senator. What was it?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That a document on this subject be read.

Mr. JAMES. Who is the document from or by?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The document is from the United States Gypsum Co. It is their statement on this question. I ask that it may be read by the Secretary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

CONCERNING THE TARIFF ON GYPSUM.

(Schedule B.—H. R. 3321, sec.,76.)

To the honorable Members of the Sixty-third Congress, United States Senate and House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

The present tariff on crude gypsum rock is 30 cents a ton, and $1.75 on manufactured gypsum products. The proposed rate is 10 per cent ad valorem, which means practically no duty, while Canada maintains a prohibitive tariff of $2.50 against entry of our manufactured product. The proposed tariff will virtually give Canada the benefit of free trade. Approximately 400,000 tons is imported from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick into New York. At Caledonia and Paris, Ontario, there are three gypsum mills whose products can be turned into western New York and Pennsylvania markets immediately. This will interfere with the American mills in Oakfield, Akron, Garbutt, and Wheatland, N. Y., and Michigan mills at Grand Rapids, Grandville, and Alabaster will likewise suffer from this competition. There are two large Canadian mills at Winnipeg which have forced six manufacturers at Fort Dodge, Iowa, out of Canadian markets through the aid of the present Canadian tariff of $2.50. These Winnipeg mills now have an open field and are assailing the trade of six American gypsum companies in Iowa, two in South Dakota, one in Montana, one in Oregon, and one in Washington. The Canadians, as you are already aware, treat their tariff in a very different fashion than is customary in the United States. They evidently set out to prohibit the use of our products and imposed, at first, a duty of $1.50. They also have a clause which prevents dumping, and have not hesitated to send their inspectors to our offices to determine that no lower prices were being made in Canada than our average mill price received for American markets. Finding that the $1.50 rate just mentioned was insufficient, they added $1 on it, and at once accomplished their purpose, which is effective at the present time, and will be doubly so when all our border markets are thrown open to their industries and we stand defenseless in the open outside their walls.

On the other hand, if it were the inclination of Canada to treat us as well as we treat her at the present, which treatment will be even more generous under the proposed tariff of 10 per cent ad valorem, the American gypsum industry would be willing to forego such tariff entirely and favor free trade if such concession were necessary to warrant and obtain reciprocity from Canada, but the improbability of Canadian reciprocity makes it imperative, in the interest of those American properties mentioned above, that the present rate or increased tariff be strictly maintained.

Respectfully,

UNITED STATES GYPSUM CO.,
S. L. AVERY, President.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator who has presented that document if it is not a fact that the United States Gypsum Co. is practically the owner of all the companies and mills that have been recited?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, I do not know.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. And that it is in fact a Gypsum Trust?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I suppose the Senator would tack on the word "trust" to any company or corporation which makes anything in this country.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I will take out the word "trust," then. Has not the United States Gypsum Co. an absolute monopoly of this industry?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I know nothing about the company, Mr. President. I stated to the Senate, when I asked that the document be read, that it had been forwarded to me by several of my constituents, who, I presume, are stockholders in the company. I do not know where it is located, or what dividends it pays, or whether it has any watered stock, or anything of the kind.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator does not even know whether it was organized in New Jersey, does he?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not. If it is a trust, I suppose it did not get far from New Jersey.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I should like to say, Mr. President, that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] seems to treat rather majestically and lightly the question of gypsum as a fertilizer. It may be, as has been stated by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], that in the rich fertility of the lands in the State of that Senator and in the State of Iowa they know no such thing as using gypsum as a fertilizer, but gypsum is a universal fertilizer in my part of the world. I have bought many tons of it in my life. It is a universal fertilizer for clover and vegetation of that character, and in the form of plaster of Paris it enters directly into the home of every man, woman, and child in the country.

Where there are a few mill owners that may be, directly or indirectly, detrimentally affected by this tariff there are a million and one householders that are more seriously affected. The day was, as almost all of us will remember, when the plaster of a house was of a very soft character. You could dig it out with your finger nail. But with the improved system of using calcined plaster—Keene's cement, as we term it—and plaster of Paris it becomes as hard as adamant and is known in many instances as adamant plaster.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I do.

Mr. GRONNA. I wish to ask the Senator from New Jersey if he knows who controls the industry of manufacturing gypsum in Canada?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I do not know anything about that.

Mr. GRONNA. Then, if the product of that country is in the hands of a trust, what reason has the Senator to believe that the foreign trust would be more reasonable in their prices than they are in the United States?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I know nothing about the situation there.

Mr. LODGE. A foreign trust is all right.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am informed and believe, however, that while "trust" is naturally an unpleasant word to the other side—it has been your death knell, and it will keep you buried for many years—this combination or corporation, or whatever else you may term it, known as the United States Gypsum Co., owns these mills. I say, while there may be a few mills that may be affected detrimentally and disastrously, there are a million and one householders who are affected by the tariff on this product. Everyone who builds a small cabin today instead of having his ceiling plastered nearly an inch thick with plaster that is liable to fall off and do damage to those beneath is now using a thin skin of Keene's cement, if you choose, or adamant, or plaster of Paris. All these things affect every householder. As a builder, having used it in some 85 houses, I say God speed the day of cheaper adamant, cheaper plaster, cheaper plaster of Paris.

Mr. SIMMONS, Mr. KENYON, Mr. GRONNA, and Mr. LODGE addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will suggest to Senators that we are getting into the chorus business again.

Mr. GRONNA. May I ask the Senator another question before he takes his seat?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Yes, sir.

Mr. KENYON. Who has the floor, Mr. President?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I think my friend from North Dakota has the floor.

Mr. GRONNA. I desire to ask the Senator from New Jersey a question. He seems to be an expert in building; but I think he is mistaken in saying that he would prefer a thick coat of plaster to a very thin one.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I did not say that. The Senator misinterpreted what I said. I said that in days past a thick coat of plaster was used; and probably in the structure of this very building there are instances where you will find an inch of plaster, or mortar. It was not plaster; it was a material so soft that it could be dug out with the finger nail. But the invention of what is known as Keene's cement, adamant, or plaster of Paris, has reduced the thickness necessary until it is now a mere shell or skin, answering the same purpose, making lighter ceilings, and hence a blessing. So it enters into everybody's household, and I can not understand why my friend from Iowa should stand up and make such a defense of the farmer. Why, the day will come in the very near future when you will need plaster of Paris every day, and as builders we need it all the time.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, does the Senator from New Jersey undertake to guarantee that we will have cheaper plaster because we are going to buy it from a trust in Canada?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I can only say that I can not get it out of my mind that a tariff is a tax, and that if the tariff does not increase the price it defeats the purpose for which it is levied. It does increase the price. I am not worried about Canada; Canada can take care of herself. I am worrying about the American people.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I desire to correct one statement that was made by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE]. I did not rise to "start anything"; but I simply wish to say that I think the United States Gypsum Co. in its inception was intended to be a trust, and to take in all the gypsum mills of the country. They failed in that, however, so that in my home town, Fort Dodge, there are some five or six independent concerns engaged in competition. I dislike a trust as much as does the Senator from New Jersey.

I can add nothing to what has been said by the senior Senator from Iowa on the subject of Canadian competition and the Canadian market. There is a theory about this matter, however, that I desire to call very seriously to the attention of my Democratic friends.

It is true, as my colleague [Mr. CUMMINS] has said, that the gypsum industry is the main industry of Fort Dodge. That is my home, and that was Senator Dolliver's home; but I am not pleading for any protection to the industry because of local interest. In fact, it is one of the schedules that I shall ask to be excused from voting on, because one member of my family happens to have a little stock in one of the mills; and although that member of my family is not of my political persuasion, I have such a conviction that Members of Congress ought not to vote on schedules in which they or any members of their families may be at all interested that I shall not vote on the gypsum schedule, and I am not going to discuss the merits of it.

That industry, however, was a thriving industry in Fort Dodge. Senator Dolliver, as the Members of the Senate know, in the tariff fight of 1909 broke away from his party and conducted a vigorous and courageous fight to reduce the tariff duties on woolen goods. He fought Schedule K. This reduction in the Payne-Aldrich Act was made, as I firmly believe, and his friends firmly believed, for no purpose in the world but for revenge as to Senator Dolliver. The then chairman of the Finance Committee cut the gypsum tariff to the quick in order to humiliate him at home, and to show that he had no influence in the Halls of Congress. That is the reason the tariff duties were cut on gypsum in the Payne-Aldrich Act.

Before that time Senator Dolliver, who had earned a place on the Finance Committee by long years of service, was denied that place; and then, on top of that, these duties were cut. That is the reason of the cut in those duties. There is no use in beating around the bush on that proposition at all. That did not accomplish its purpose, however. It did not discredit Senator Dolliver in his home. It did not drive him out of the Republican Party, because our people at home honored him all the more, even if their industries were to suffer. They honored him for his courage and his bravery and his manhood in fighting the high tariff duties of the Payne-Aldrich bill.

Mr. President, I am sorry that after that has been done in the Payne-Aldrich bill our Democratic friends go still further and cut that tariff in two. That was a tariff duty, levied, not for protection, not for revenue, but for revenge; and I am sorry the process has to go on any further.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I had risen for another purpose; but after what has been said by the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON], I think I ought to say, as a member of the Finance Committee of 1909, that if the duty on gypsum was reduced for purposes of revenge on Senator Dolliver it certainly was not known to the members of the Finance Committee. I had no such knowledge, and I do not know of any other Senator who had.

Mr. KENYON. I did not say the members of the committee did it. I specifically charged it to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LODGE. This is all news to me, Mr. President. I did not suppose there was any such motive in the reduction at that time. But what I rose to call attention to was what I think has been overlooked—that the provisions of this section, and the opposition to the proviso offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], arise from the introduction into this bill of an entirely new economic theory in the imposition of tariff duties.

Hitherto it has generally been supposed, I think, by all economists that there were two opposing theories in the imposition of tariff duties. One was that known as the free-trade theory; the other the theory of imposing a duty for the purpose of protection of domestic industries. Of course, "tariff for revenue only" is a mere political phrase. It is not a theory, and no tariff for revenue only can exist. A duty may be imposed for revenue only, but a tariff throughout can not exist for revenue only, because if you once impose duties generally you are bound to have some duties produce protection.

This bill has free-trade provisions, protective provisions, and what may be called tariff-for-revenue duties, I suppose. It certainly illustrates and combines the two great conflicting theories in the imposition of tariff duties. But it has introduced a third theory, and a wholly new one, and that is the imposition of duties in such a manner as to give protection to the foreign competitor. That, I think I am not mistaken in saying, is a novel idea. I have pointed it out in one or two instances already, where the duty is raised on the raw material, or kept at the same rate, while it is lowered on the manufactured article.

Now, in this particular case our only competitor in regard to gypsum is Canada. I am not quite clear what the fertilizer proposition has to do with the only duty in the paragraph which the Senator from Iowa has tried to amend. I suppose the product mentioned in the first line would come under fertilizer. The cements, of course, have nothing to do with fertilizers. I thought before I spoke there was a separate duty on crude gypsum, but I see there is not. It is proposed to lower the duty to such a rate that our market will be open to Canadian competition, while Canada will not admit us to her market. That is hardly a fair basis of competition. The only argument in behalf of it is that our production is worth $12,000,000 a year, and it is proposed to give entrance to that great market to Canada and get nothing in return.

Then, we hear the old song that it will lower prices. What possible reason is there to suppose that the Canadian manufacturers are coming in here to lower prices? They live on the same continent with us. Their wages probably do not differ materially. They could not sell very much lower. Neither their natural advantages nor their economic advantages are sufficient to enable them to do that. They will undoubtedly want to make as much as the traffic will bear. It is a simple gift of our market to the Canadian producer without any return.

Further, it is legislation along the line of the new theory of giving protection advantage to the foreign producer. We are told, I think without sufficient authority, judging from what has been said by the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON], that there is a trust in this country. There is no reason to suppose there is not another trust over the line in Canada. But the American trust or monopoly from which our Democratic friends shrink with horror has no alarm for them when it comes in pleasant foreign dress.

Mr. President, I merely wanted to call attention to what seemed to me the underlying principle here. I have not examined the case sufficiently to know the details in the labor cost, and I should not enter into it if I had. The Senator from Iowa has covered the entire case; it could not have been done better; and it seems to me there is no answer to the argument he made for the proviso he has proposed. I merely wish to call attention to the underlying theory which lies in the result of this duty and the resistance to the proviso and many other duties imposed in this bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I simply want to say a few words.

The Senator from Iowa referred to the uses of this material. I have some familiarity with it, because it is used rather extensively in my part of the country, and especially for purposes of the fertilization of land. It is a substance very similar to lime. Of course, it is a superior substance in every way, but it is used for almost the identical purposes for which lime is used. Lime is used for plastering houses, and so is gypsum. Lime is used as a fertilizer, and so is gypsum. Neither lime nor gypsum is in the proper sense a fertilizer; that is to say, it does not add anything to the fertility of the soil directly, but both are used upon sour soil, such as we have in the South, and which, I suppose, they have in some States in the West, for the purpose of liberating certain imprisoned properties of productivity in the soil. In one year there were sold in the city of Norfolk 30,000 tons of this material for use upon the soil of the surrounding country.

Mr. President, there are in the United States, I think, 82 factories or mills engaged in manufacturing this material. This crude gypsum material is called land plaster when it is used as a fertilizer. Five of those factories are located upon the coast; the other 77 factories are located in the interior of the country.

Crude gypsum is found in various parts of this country—in New York, West Virginia, and in various States in the interior.

There is absolutely no competition, and in the nature of things there can be no competition, between the gypsum produced in the 77 factories that are located in the interior of this country and the gypsum produced in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, for the very simple reason that on account of its bulky character and its low value—about $1.17 per ton—high transportation cost makes competition in the interior impossible.

The only competition that exists or can in the nature of things exist, whatever the tariff rate may be, is within a zone of, say, 100 miles along the coast. The five factories located on the coast are the only ones that have complained, so far as I know, of the duty in this bill.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If the Senator from North Carolina will permit me, I should like to say that competition may prevail along the border on the Lakes. It is the mills and manufactories in Michigan that would naturally sell their product to Canada if there were not prohibitive duties there, and to prohibit the factories in Michigan from crossing the border by a duty of two and a half dollars and voluntarily give to the Canadian manufacturer our market in Michigan at a paltry 10 per cent ad valorem looks to me to be a little reckless.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not know that there are any of these factories located upon the Lakes, nor do I know what would be the cost of transportation from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to the points the Senator speaks of.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am not speaking of New Brunswick or Nova Scotia.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is about the only part of Canada where it is produced.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am speaking of the place where it is produced immediately on the border, in the Central West; and I ask you why you should give Canada our State as a market in the face of the fact that they have erected an absolutely impassable wall over which we can not go with our product to the Canadian market?

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, we have not given nor will this bill give Canada the market of the interior. As I have just explained, so far as the committee was advised—and we had a good deal of data upon this subject—we were advised that there could be no competition by reason of freight rates with reference to the 77 factories located in the interior of the country. If there are some factories located on the Lakes, I do not know what that situation would be. They might be in the same position as the factories located upon the coast.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It is because I do know——

Mr. SIMMONS. The factories located upon the Lake would have the same position as the factory located upon the coast.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It is because they are located at my home, it is because hundreds of men are employed in that industry, that I ask you not to present the American market to Canada as a free gift, when they are building a protection wall so high we can not possibly take our product there.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator know the difference between the freight rate to the point he speaks of in his State and the freight rate from Nova Scotia to New York?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I know it is the water rate, and not only from Lake Michigan but the shore of Lake Superior, Lake Huron, and Lake Erie, and it is the cheapest possible rate. While we could take our products there if we have an opportunity, why you should level our protection against Canada now developing this industry to proportions which ought at least to have our serious consideration, when they are at the same moment constructing a tariff wall so high that we can not sell our products to them, is beyond my calculation.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, we have not leveled the wall. We have retained in this bill an ample duty to give the American producer, either on the seacoast or the Lakes, under even the Republican theory of protection, sufficient advantage to compensate the difference between any cost here and in Canada. There is but little difference, if any, in the cost of producing this material in Canada and in this country. In Canada they have practically the same scale of wages that we have in the United States. In Canada gypsum is found in the bowels of the earth and can be gotten out of the bowels of the earth under their system of labor just as cheap as it can be gotten out of the bowels of the earth under our system of labor. There is practically no difference in labor or material cost.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. If that be so, why can not Canada compete with us with the same rate of duty? If Canada can produce it as cheaply as we can, and she does, why does Canada want to build up a wall so high we can not compete with Canada after we are giving her an opportunity to compete with us?

Mr. SIMMONS. I can not explain to the Senator the reason for Canadian duties. Canada has duties upon a great many things that she can produce as cheaply as we can produce. It is not to be assumed that all the Canadian duties are leveled at the United States. Canadian tariff laws apply to the world, I assume, just as our tariff laws apply to the world.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senator will let me develop the idea I have in my mind I will be glad to yield to him in a minute.

Mr. CUMMINS. I intended to ask a question in regard to that very point.

Mr. SIMMONS. Well, go ahead.

Mr. CUMMINS. I think it was the year before; Canada advanced her duty to $2.50 a ton; possibly it may have been longer than that—I am speaking now of my State—we sent into Canada, toward Winnipeg, in one year 100 carloads of plaster. Now, I ask the Senator from North Carolina whether he thinks it is his duty to help, if we can be helped without injury to the country at large, to regain that market?

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator very frankly that so far as I am personally concerned I should like to see a countervailing duty upon a great many things that are produced mutually in Canada and in this country, but I do not think this is a case similar to that of wheat and flour. Mr. President, if we can pay these Canadian duties and sell this material in large quantities to Canada, it shows we can produce it cheaper than Canada and need not fear Canadian competition.

I think the Senators are laboring under the mistaken assumption that the 425,000 tons of gypsum we imported last year was manufactured or calcined gypsum, whereas it was crude gypsum. The importations of manufactures of gypsum are negligible.

Mr. CUMMINS. If the Senator from North Carolina got that idea from me I was faulty in expression. I think a very large part of the imports was of the crude material used for fertilizing in New England and Eastern States.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, as a matter of fact, we are large producers of crude gypsum in this country. As I said, it is found in various States, in various localities, and in considerable quantities.

In 1911 we mined in the United States 2,323,970 tons of crude gypsum. In 1910 the entire production of crude gypsum in the Dominion of Canada amounted to only 525,000 tons. So Canada is not much of a producer of crude gypsum and we would not be in much danger of being overwhelmed with Canadian importations of gypsum even if the whole Canadian output was imported.

I can not see, Mr. President, any reason why this duty should be higher than we have fixed it in the bill. When you consider the fact that the labor cost here, even from the Republican standpoint, and in Nova Scotia is about the same, that it is a mineral product and the labor cost of mining is small, I can not see the necessity of a larger duty than 10 per cent, even from the protection standpoint. It is twice as high as the duty which we put upon lime, which, as I said before, is used practically for the same purpose. This would seem a case where the Republican argument that a duty is needed to equalize difference in labor cost does not apply, for there is no difference.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I am not going to enter into a discussion of this matter, but as I was a member of the Finance Committee in 1909 I wish to say that I never heard it intimated by Senator Aldrich or any member of that committee that the reduction of the duty on crude gypsum was made as a revenge against the then senior Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. I think the Senator from Utah is now replying to what my colleague, the junior Senator from Iowa, said.

Mr. SMOOT. The junior Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. I may say, however, in justice to my colleague, who is not here at this moment, I have never made it a subject of discussion, although I know that Senator Dolliver so believed.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I never heard it before intimated, and it came as a surprise to me to-day that that intimation should be now made. I simply state that as a matter of history.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Sentor from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I beg the Senator's pardon, but he was addressing himself in a somewhat low tone of voice to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], and I caught just enough of what he said to make me somewhat interested in it.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say for the information of the Senator from Missouri that I stated that I was a member of the Finance Committee of the Senate in 1909, when the present tariff law was framed and passed, and that I never heard it intimated before to-day that the rate upon crude gypsum was reduced as a revenge upon the then Senator from Iowa, Mr. Dolliver. I repeat, I was very much surprised to hear it to-day, because it is the first time that I ever heard it intimated. I say this by way of information and that alone.

I do remember, Mr. President, that at that time the reduction of duty on that article was discussed. My own State of Utah produced crude gypsum, and the great bulk of the shipments from my State went to California. I tried to have the then existing rate of 50 cents per ton maintained, and I remember the argument then made was that it was a fertilizer used in the Eastern States, that it was shipped direct from Nova Scotia, and that the freight rate from the interior part of the country was so great that the duty could not be maintained without working a great hardship upon the people of the border States. That was the argument and the only argument that was made at that time which I ever heard. I was then opposed to the reduction of the duty to 30 cents a ton, and no doubt former Senator Dolliver would sustain this statement if he were in the Chamber to-day.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I understood the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], in discussing this matter a few moments ago, to say that the cost of production in this country was no greater or even less than it was in Canada.

Mr. CUMMINS. No, Mr. President; I said that I had not investigated the question; but, generally speaking, I do not believe that it costs any more to make a thing here than it costs to make it in Canada. It was simply from that general view which I have of the level of prices in both countries that I made the statement which I did.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, whatever may have been the purpose of the committee which had control of the formation of the Payne-Aldrich bill in reducing the tariff upon gypsum, if it was to punish Senator Dolliver's friends who manufactured gypsum because he had differed from them upon various schedules in that tariff bill, it did not serve its purpose. While we have been so often assured that the Payne-Aldrich bill was a bill framed for protection, as most Senators on the other side were glad to say, but, I always thought, for plunder, now we have found out that it had also another ingredient in it—that of punishment. That, however, is not our purpose here.

Personally, I had great affection for Senator Dolliver; I thought, and I yet think, that he was one of the greatest men who ever sat in this Senate; but however much I may revere his memory, I am not content that a duty in this bill shall remain prohibitive because the factories which are engaged in the manufacture of the article happen to be in the city which claimed him and honored him so highly and loved him so greatly.

In 1905 there were practically $370,000 worth of this gypsum imported into this country under the Dingley bill rate. After the duty was lowered in the Payne-Aldrich bill in the year 1912 only $400,000 worth of it was imported here.

Mr. CUMMINS. I beg pardon, but may I interrupt the Senator from Kentucky?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. JAMES. Certainly.

Mr. CUMMINS. The amount just mentioned by the Senator from Kentucky includes gypsum rock, ground gypsum, and calcined gypsum, as well as the article to which he refers.

Mr. JAMES. So much more the reason why this duty ought to be reduced. The production in this country in the year 1912 was $12,000,000 worth. I have always understood that the Republican policy of protection was based upon the theory that the tariff should equal the cost of production—that is, the difference in the cost of labor—between this and the foreign country. Now, it is not contended here that we can not produce this article as cheaply as they can produce it in Canada. I believe we can produce it cheaper than they can in Canada, and I believe the argument the Senator from Iowa has made—that Canada imposed a high tariff rate upon gypsum and then had to increase it in order to keep our United States manufacturers from taking their market—shows that we can produce it here cheaper than they can produce it there.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. JAMES. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. CUMMINS. If all that be true, does the Senator from Kentucky think that his entire duty is discharged when he attaches a revenue impost upon this article? Does he not think that he ought to do something to open up the markets of Canada to our people? If we can produce the commodity more cheaply than it can be produced in Canada, why is he not willing to help the American people a little to get into Canada, if by trying to do so he will not increase the price one penny in his own country?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, all the argument the Senator has made has been for the manufacturer. He seems to see only the manufacturer. The Senator loses sight of the consumer. I am not willing to give this market to the manufacturer of gypsum or plaster rock simply because the Senator argues that if we do not put the duty high enough Canada will come into this country and will take the market away from the American manufacturer.

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the Senator from Kentucky believe that the duty which has been imposed upon this article has affected its price one particle?

Mr. JAMES. If the duty which has been imposed upon this article has not affected its price, then certainly the reduction of the duty will not affect its price.

Mr. CUMMINS. Very well; but after we have agreed on all that, will not the Senator do a little to enable us to sell this commodity in Canada?

Mr. JAMES. That argument, Mr. President, carried to a finality, would mean that you never would get tariff duties reduced at all. In Canada they will say, "We have a rate now of $2.50 per ton, and if we reduce that rate at all the United States will take our market." Then in the United States they will say, "If you reduce at all the rate of duty on that commodity the Canadian will take our market"; and thus the consumer will be ground between the upper and nether millstones.

Personally, so far as I am individually concerned, I believe that we ought to consider first the question of obtaining revenue, and it ought to be obtained from those articles that will bear least heavily upon the consumer. Here is an article that goes into the building of homes in this country. Forty-five million of our people to-night will sleep in homes they do not own. The reduction of this tariff will make it easier for them to own a home. I believe we ought to look out for them just a little, instead of looking out for the Canadian market for the manufacturers in the Senator's own State.

Mr. CUMMINS. I notice, however, that the Senator from Kentucky has agreed in this bill that if the President finds that any country is discriminating unduly against us the duty shall be raised. I should like to hear the Senator explain the two doctrines, and tell us if they do not conflict with each other?

Mr. JAMES. In the first place, as to this article, there is no discrimination against us by Canada. Canada will simply come into this country and sell in competition with our manufacturers, provided she can by paying the 10 per cent duty; but the Senator has told us she can not, and that the Canadians could not even hold their own market unless a duty of $2.50 a ton was placed on gypsum.

Mr. CUMMINS. I did not say that.

Mr. JAMES. What did the Senator say?

Mr. CUMMINS. I said there were certain parts of Canada that we could enter because of the cheaper cost of transportation. The truth is that regarding all such commodities as these the great protection is in the cost of transportation. Canada can get to certain parts of our country, no matter what reasonable duty is placed upon this commodity, and we can get to certain parts of Canada more cheaply than Canada can, with any kind of a reasonable duty; but Canada has imposed a prohibitive duty of $2.50 a ton, which is really, at the present price, probably 60 or 70 per cent of the entire value of the product.

Mr. JAMES. Because Canada wants to give to the manufacturers of gypsum a monopoly upon her people is no reason why we should give to the manufacturers of gypsum the same character of monopoly in this country upon our people.

Mr. President, in this country the production of this commodity is $12,000,000 worth a year, the revenue derived from the duty now imposed is only $111,000, and the imports amount to only $400,000; but we are now told that the tariff must equal the cost of transportation instead of the cost of production. I believe this is a just reduction, and, really, if I had my own way I would place the article on the free list. There is no competition at all under the present tariff rate. We fix the rate at 10 per cent ad valorem in the hope and belief that it will bring both honest competition and produce revenue.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I should like to ask my friend the Senator from Iowa whether I am correct in the impression I have that he voted against what is known as the bill providing for reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada during the last administration?

Mr. CUMMINS. I have not referred to the reciprocal provision in this bill——

Mr. STONE. I asked the Senator——

Mr. CUMMINS. Which is that if the President finds that any country is unfairly discriminating against this country or is not recognizing fair and reasonable reciprocal obligations, then an added duty is placed upon certain commodities, thereby recognizing the retaliatory theory.

Mr. STONE. The Senator and I do not quite understand each other. We had here before us some two years ago, I think, a proposition for reciprocal trade relations between Canada and the United States.

Mr. CUMMINS. That is what it was named; but it was not so in fact.

Mr. STONE. Well, that is not important at present. I do not care to enter into that. I thought it was, but the Senator thinks it was not.

Mr. CUMMINS. Well, it was called that.

Mr. STONE. But what I wish to ask of the Senator now is whether I am right in understanding that he opposed that trade pact, that international trade agreement?

Mr. CUMMINS. I opposed the bill to which the Senator refers. I do not call it a trade pact, however.

Mr. STONE. Oh, well, we will not quarrel about mere matters of terms.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not want to assent to the Senator's terminology; that is all.

Mr. STONE. We are agreed that the Senator was opposed to it. How would the Senator now feel if the proposition were made in the Senate of the United States for mutual free trade between the United States and Canada on gypsum?

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator from Iowa has no hesitation whatever in answering that question. He is not as mysterious as he thinks some of his brother Senators are. Guided by what I believe to be the truth with regard to gypsum and its products, if Canada were to agree that our product might enter her markets free, I should be willing to agree that Canada's product should enter the markets of the United States free.

Mr. STONE. In the act to which I have adverted and against which the Senator spoke and voted I find, on examination, that plaster rock or gypsum was put upon the free list as between these two countries.

Mr. CUMMINS. Certainly; but the trouble——

Mr. STONE. How did that strike the Senator at that time?

Mr. CUMMINS. The difficulty with that bill was precisely the difficulty with the Democratic bill now before the Senate. It had some good things in it, but it had so many bad things in it that no patriot could vote for it, as I viewed the question. There are a lot of good things in the bill now before the Senate—plenty of them—but it has so many inconsistent and indefensible things in it that I can not vote for it. I have no apology to make for voting against the so-called reciprocal agreement with Canada. I believe in reciprocal treaties and I believe in reciprocal trade; I think, however, such agreements can not be effectuated by any general law. I think they must relate to a particular thing, so that there can be intelligent examination and a conclusion with respect to the benefits to be derived from trade in the particular commodity or commodities that are covered by the treaty.

Mr. STONE. Now, Mr. President, if the Senator is through with his explanations and apologies, I should like to have this paragraph disposed of.

Mr. CUMMINS. I beg pardon, Mr. President. What did the Senator say? Did the Senator say "if I am through with my apologies"?

Mr. STONE. I said if the Senator was through with his explanation and apologies. They have been well said; the work has been well done——

Mr. CUMMINS. As I remarked a few moments ago, it is impossible for the Senator from Missouri to be serious.

Mr. STONE. Oh, I am very serious about that.

Mr. CUMMINS. Oh, very serious! The Senator from Missouri, in that low tone of his which catches the reporter's ear but often misses the ears of his brother Senators, frequently says something that he does not really mean. I resent a little what he has just said.

Mr. STONE. Then I withdraw it.

Mr. CUMMINS. Certainly; I knew the Senator would withdraw it, because when he speaks so that everybody can hear he always tells the truth as he understands it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, the argument in favor——

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the Senator from Mississippi desire to ask me a question?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; I got up to make a few innocuous observations of my own.

Mr. CUMMINS. I have not the least objection in the world to the Senator doing so, but somebody called me and said that the Senator from Mississippi desired to ask me a question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I desire to make "a few unnecessary remarks," as the darky said about John Allen's speech. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, the argument underlying the theory of countervailing duties is as old as is the spirit of retaliation, and there never was a particle of sense in it. When you reduce it to its ultimate analysis it is this: One country says to another country, "If you do not quit punishing your people by refusing to let them have valuable things from my country at a cheap price, I will punish my people by refusing to let them have valuable things from your country at a cheap price." So they go on forever retaliating under the guise of reciprocating. The consequence is that one country builds its tax laws upon the example set by another country, instead of building its tax laws upon the necessities and conditions of its own people without regard to anybody else.

As I understand, a ton of gypsum rock is worth at present about a dollar and a half. If so, if you put a tax of 10 per cent upon it, you would possibly raise its price, if imported from Canada, to $1.65; or if it were sold in the American market by the American producer and he feared Canadian importations, or if Canadian importations threatened his market, the price might be lower than that.

As I understood the Senator from Iowa, he said a moment ago, I believe, that 60 carloads of gypsum rock had gone from his own country up to Winnipeg; in how short a time I have forgotten.

Mr. CUMMINS. I did not say that.

Mr. WILLIAMS. How much was it the Senator said went to Winnipeg?

Mr CUMMINS I said that in one year we shipped to Winnipeg 100 carloads of plaster; not gypsum rock.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Very well; I thought it was 60 carloads, or rather, I remembered it wrongly. One hundred carloads of plaster, then, were shipped in that one year to Winnipeg; and that was at a time when Canada had what duty?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not remember whether at that time Canada had a duty of $1.50 or not.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Afterwards she raised it to $2.50.

Mr. CUMMINS. But it was at a time, of course, when the eastern mills in Canada could not get to Winnipeg on anything like the freight rate that we could reach Winnipeg.

Mr. WILLIAMS. As I understand, now, we shipped 100 carloads in one year to Winnipeg, paying a Canadian duty of $1.50 a ton.

Mr. CUMMINS. I am not sure about the duty at the time of these shipments.

Mr. WILLIAMS. At any rate, we paid the Canadian duty, whatever it was.

Mr. CUMMINS. We paid whatever the Canadian duty was.

Mr. WILLIAMS. We paid the duty and shipped it. It does not look from that as if we were in danger of any great flood of Canadian gypsum coming into our country. The Senator from Iowa, with his usual candor and intellectual integrity, has admitted that so far as he knows the cost of production is about the same in the two countries, the cost of labor being about the same, and the other factors that enter into the cost of production being about the same.

There is nothing in the world more absurd than having a gypsum bed on the American side of the Canadian line and another gypsum bed on the Canadian side of the American line, and fixing a tax which must be paid upon the American side by the American farmers and the American constructors and fixing a tax upon the Canadian side that must be paid by the Canadian farmers and the Canadian constructors. If anything is more absurd than protectionism itself, it is levying these duties where both sides admit that taking the entire line from east to west, if there were absolute free trade it would be about as fair for one as for the other. I should like to see free trade in gypsum between the two countries—in fact, free trade in everything. I think it would be a good thing if the United States and Canada could enter into a zollverein—a customs union—of some sort.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. WILLIAMS. In one moment I will. But the Senator can not state a single reason for the application of a countervailing duty on gypsum that would not apply to every other product produced in both countries; and he can not make an argument in favor of it, if his purpose in raising our duty is to force Canada to lower hers, that is not an argument in favor of freer trade and therefore an argument in favor of what we on this side would welcome as readily as he.

I do not believe you can force Canada into lowering her duties upon gypsum by raising our duties upon gypsum, because according to the Senator's own statement we have the better of Canada in cheapness of production or, at any rate, in the ability to sell cheaply, whether it be from transportation rates, cheapness of production, or what not, as is evidenced by the fact that, although we have had a very stiff duty to pay, we shipped 100 carloads to Canada from one place in this country during one year.

I now yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there is a notion prevalent in certain quarters that Canada is ready to enter into free trade with the United States. That is a mistaken notion, as I chance to know myself. Certainly under the Laurier government the public men of Canada over and over declared that they would not enter into free trade with the United States.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Did the Senator understand me to say that Canada was ready to enter into free trade with us?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; I did not. My observation is made simply to disabuse the minds of some people who have said to me that Canada was ready for that. I know that Canada has not been ready for it, for the reason that Canada wants to keep out our manufactured products.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; I think the Senator is right.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I think Canada has committed the very foolish error of undertaking to build up her manufactures at the expense of her people generally. I think she is worshipping the idol almost as much as we ever did, and that nothing will convert her from its worship for some years to come. I did not say that. What I said was that I should like to see it. I know that the free trade that stretches from the State of Washington to the State of Florida, and from the State of Maine to the Sate of Texas, has been the chief cause of the prosperity and upbuilding of this country, and that if a customs union applied from the frozen seas to the Panama Canal it would build up all of this North American country. Therefore I expressed the idea that I should like to see it, as far as I was concerned. No; Canada has not yet progressed that far.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do.

Mr. WEEKS. There is one element in the cost of producing gypsum which I think the Senator from Iowa overlooked in making his statement, and that is the cost of the crude material. In Nova Scotia the crude material is found on the seashore and on the surface. It is mined and produced almost exactly as iron ore is produced in the Mesabi Range, practically with a steam shovel, while the crude gypsum in the United States is mined or quarried, and the cost of producing it is materially greater. It does not strike me as important from the standpoint of the Senator from Mississippi that we paid $1.50 a ton duty for sending 100 carloads of finished gypsum into Canada, and were able to do it, because the freight rate from any point where it was then produced in Canada was so much greater than the duty that it was absolutely necessary that the inhabitants of Winnipeg should buy at a nearer point than the producing point in Canada. For instance, the freight rate to Washington from a producing plant in Virginia is $2.60 a ton, and yet I believe it is not more than 100 miles from here. So the freight rate is the large element in determining the sale point of the finished gypsum.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I know nothing about those facts. I mean I knew nothing about them until the Senator informed me of them. I am very glad to hear them, and what the Senator has said reenforces the strength of my argument. If such a valuable product as rock gypsum, valuable for fertilizing purposes, valuable for cement, and valuable for plaster or for construction, is to be obtained in such a very cheap manner, is to be found right on the surface, so that all you have to do is to shovel it into a car and bring it to our people, it would be all the greater shame to put a heavy tax upon it and make it expensive to them. The blessings that God has given His children in this world, the valuable things that can be gotten cheaply, are not too great; and it would be folly, just in proportion as a thing is cheap and valuable, to make it cost more to your own people. It would be still more foolish to do that merely because somebody else wanted to make it cost more for their people to get some valuable thing cheaply from you. It is the old phrase of "cutting off your nose to spite your face." It is equivalent to saying: "Here, Canada, stop it. If you do not quit refusing to let your people have at a cheap rate our things that are worth a great deal to them, we will refuse to let the people of the Republic have at a cheap rate the things you have that are worth a great deal to them"—cutting off your nose to spite your face.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS].

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, this amendment is properly divisible; but inasmuch as apparently I have made no impression upon the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], and believing as I did when I began that if I could not make an impression on him I had no hope of any recruits from the other side, I do not intend to ask for a roll call, and therefore I shall not ask for a division of the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I now ask to have the Senate pass on the committee amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The committee amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 19, line 10, before the word "cements" it is proposed to strike out the word "building," so as to read:

76. Plaster rock or gypsum, crude, ground or calcined, pearl hardening for paper makers' use, Keene's cement, or other cement of which gypsum is the component material of chief value, and all other cements not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of paragraph 77, page 19, as follows:

77. Pumice stone, unmanufactured, 5 per cent ad valorem; wholly or partially manufactured, ¼ cent per pound; manufactures of pumice stone, or of which pumice stone is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator in charge of this part of the bill why he deems it necessary to maintain a duty of 50 per cent on pumice stone wholly or partially manufactured, while he reduces the duty on the unmanufactured stone from 21 per cent to 5 per cent?

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if we are going to have discussion of this paragraph, I think we had better proceed now to the consideration of executive business, and take up this paragraph to-morrow morning. I am told that it is desired to have an executive session.

Mr. GALLINGER. The question will be pending.

Mr. BRISTOW. Pending; yes.

Mr. STONE. I move, Mr. President, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

BANKING AND CURRENCY (S. DOC. NO. 144).

Mr. OWEN. Just a moment, before the motion is acted upon. I should like to ask unanimous consent to have printed a little four-page pamphlet which I have here upon the banking question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. As a public document?

Mr. OWEN. As a public document.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator who is the author of the document?

Mr. OWEN. The author is the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have no doubt it is of great value.

Mr. OWEN. It is of great value.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I simply wish to ask the Senator whether it is a statement made by him in the Senate?

Mr. OWEN. It is not.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There being no objection, the request of the Senator from Oklahoma will be complied with.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 15 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, July 29, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 28, 1913.

AMBASSADORS.

James W. Gerard to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Germany.

Frederic Courtland Penfield to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Austria-Hungary.

MINISTERS.

Charles S. Hartman to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Ecuador.

Joseph E. Willard to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Spain.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Charles S. Hamlin to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

NAVAL OFFICER OF CUSTOMS.

James H. Barry to be naval officer of customs, district of San Francisco, Cal.

SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS.

Justus S. Wardell to be surveyor of customs in the district of San Francisco, Cal.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Joseph J. Scott to be collector of internal revenue for the first district of California.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

John O. Davis to be collector of customs for the district of San Francisco.

SOLICITOR GENERAL.

John William Davis to be Solicitor General.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Maurice T. Dooling to be United States district judge for the northern district of California.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Albert Schoonover to be United States attorney for the southern district of California.

POSTMASTERS.

IOWA.

J. F. Goos, Sabula.

KANSAS.

Hugh O'Hara, Frontenac.
L. A. Walker, Parsons.

NEW YORK.

Frank C. Lent, Atlanta.
Frederick H. Payne, Berkshire.
Barton L. Piper, Watkins.

OKLAHOMA.

L. B. Avant, Avant.
J. H. Cunningham, Carnegie.
Lee Roy Daniels, Hydro.
J. C. Groves, Porum.
W. E. Hunt, Thomas.
J. E. McCutchan, Pawnee.
L. M. Nichols, Bristow.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, July 28, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord God, our heavenly Father, we wait upon Thee for that light which never shone on sea or shore, but which illumines the soul and brings it in rapport with Thee; which is altogether reassuring, uplifting, ennobling, fitting it for whatever comes of joy or sorrow, hope or disappointment, victory or defeat. Give us of that light that we may go on our way with faith, hope, and confidence doing whatsoever our hands findeth to do with might, leaving the results to Thee, who doeth all things well, ruling and overruling by Thy providence for the good of Thy children. And we will praise Thy holy name forever. Amen.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] raises the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Ninety-one gentlemen are present, not a quorum.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I think we will have a quorum present to-morrow. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Tuesday, July 29, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Acting Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of Leipsic River, Del. (H. Doc. No. 165); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Public Printer submitting an estimate of appropriation for deficiency in the appropriation for leaves of absence for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913 (H. Doc. No. 166); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Acting Secretary of Commerce submitting an estimate of appropriation for subsistence, travel, and other expenses of detailed employees in the Bureau of the Census (H. Doc. No. 167); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. OGLESBY: A bill (H. R. 7137) to provide for the purchase of a site for a Federal building at Mount Vernon, N. Y.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HAY: A bill (H. R. 7138) to provide for raising the volunteer forces of the United States in time of actual or threatened war; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHERLEY (by request): A bill (H. R. 7139) to provide for the use of water power at Dam No. 41 in the Ohio River at Louisville, Ky.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. AUSTIN: Resolution (H. Res. 213) requesting the Secretary of the Interior to furnish certain information to the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department.

By Mr. HOWARD: Resolution (H. Res. 214) directing the Civil Service Commission to transmit to the House all papers and documentary evidence in its possession relating to the solicitation of campaign funds in the Government building in the city of Atlanta in the year 1912, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 7140) for the relief of the heirs of Joshua Nicholls; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BOOHER: A bill (H. R. 7141) granting a pension to George W. Nave; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CULLOP: A bill (H. R. 7142) granting an increase of pension to John Russell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7143) granting an increase of pension to David S. Trent; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DYER: A bill (H. R. 7144) granting an increase of pension to Pleasant F. Clutts; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL: A bill (H. R. 7145) granting an increase of pension to Frank Unnerstall; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7146) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the city of Sikeston, Mo., two cannon or fieldpieces; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. KAHN: Petition of the Public Ownership Association of San Francisco, Cal., demanding that the United States Government take over the Central Pacific Railroad under Government ownership; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KONOP: Petition of sundry citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against action of Austria in Balkan territory; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RAKER: Petition of the Public Ownership Association of San Francisco, Cal., asking that the Government take over the Central Pacific Railroad; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ROGERS: Petition of the overseers and voting operatives of the Appleton Mills, of Lowell, Mass., protesting against the wool and cotton schedules in the tariff bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCULLY: Petition of the Girard Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, protesting against a resolution for a Federal constitutional amendment granting suffrage to women of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the National Civil Service Reform League of New York, protesting against the clause in the tariff bill providing for employment of agents and inspectors, etc., for the period of two years who have not passed the civil-service examination; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Reform Club tariff reform committee, relative to the banana tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, protesting against the tax on colored oleomargarine and the prohibitive duty by the Austria-Hungary Government on cottonseed oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. J. M. C. SMITH: Petition of the Maryland Life Insurance Co., of Baltimore, protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLIS: Petition of the officers and directors of the First National Bank of Delaware, Ohio, protesting against the passage of the Federal reserve act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, July 29, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

TARIFF DUTIES ON WOOL.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I send a telegram in the nature of a petition to the desk and ask that it may be read by the Secretary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read the telegram.

The Secretary read as follows:

[Telegram.]

NEW YORK, July 28, 1913.

Senator BRANDEGEE, Washington, D. C.:

The seasonal character of the woolen industry in all of its branches makes it all important that the dates when changes in the rates of the wool and woolen schedule go into effect should be certainly and immediately known. The dates in the House bill and those in pending Senate amendments are radically different as to the effect which will be produced upon the business of manufacturers, importers, and wholesale and retail dealers. Lack of definite knowledge is causing stagnation now which is constantly becoming more serious and will cause enormous losses in the next season's trade which might possibly be avoided. Can not the leaders of both parties get together to-morrow and, with fair consideration of those engaged in the industry, reach some conclusion concerning the effective dates of possible changes for raw wool and for finished products and thus enable those engaged in the industry to arrange their business with some intelligent understanding as to the future? The situation is exceedingly embarrassing, for the American production now is not more than one-quarter of the normal output. The vital question just now is not what the changes in rates shall be, but what will be the time limit of the present law on wool and woolens, respectively. To know that is extremely important with regard to orders to be taken by manufacturers for the spring season, and for importers and dealers as well. That season is opening now. Foreign manufacturers are already in the field, and our people are absolutely helpless because of the uncertainty. I ask this in behalf of our people in Connecticut. Please answer to Norwalk, Conn.

E. J. HILL,
Late Member of Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee to the telegram which has just been read. I think his attention was diverted during the reading of it.

Mr. SIMMONS. It was.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I will state that it is a telegram from Hon. E. J. Hill, late a member of the Ways and Means Committee in the House.

Mr. SIMMONS. I presume I have received the same telegram.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am glad the Senator did, and I suppose other Senators have received the same telegram.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will say to the Senator that I have transmitted the telegram to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. As the Senator understands, the question that Mr. Hill presents is a very delicate one to deal with in advance of action by the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I do not think it would be a very delicate question to deal with. It may be a question that would involve conference.

Mr. SIMMONS. I mean delicate in the sense that no one feels authorized to state what would be the result of a disagreement between the two Houses in conference, which probably might change the date. No one can tell what will become of a disagreement when the matter gets into conference. The Senator knows that under the bill as passed by the House the time for the wool schedule to go into effect is the same time that is fixed for the general bill to go into effect, and in the Senate committee amendment the time for the change as to raw wool to go into effect is December, as I remember, and of manufactured wool January. Assuming that the bill will pass as reported by the committee, there will be a dispute between the House and the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, in order to make more specific and clear what I, at least, understand as the object desired to be attained by the author of this telegram, I wish to say that Mr. Hill states in his telegram in substance that whatever the rate decided upon as to raw wool and as to the manufactured product, the question that is particularly worrying the whole industry in all its branches at present is as to when the rates which shall be fixed by this Congress upon those products shall take effect.

It must be perfectly apparent to everyone that the whole industry, from the purchaser of the raw material to the manufacturer, who is receiving orders and is attempting to make contracts for future delivery for the next year's supply, and the merchants, jobbers, wholesalers, and retailers, must be utterly at sea as to when to buy or what prices will be reasonable. Without waiting for the result of a conference upon the disagreeing action of the two branches of Congress, which conference may not go into session for many weeks yet, and possibly months, and may not come out until several weeks after entering upon the conference, what I had hoped for was that the chairman of the Finance Committee and the members of both parties might in some way hold some conference now as a result of which Congress might pass a joint resolution stating when whatever rates are fixed should go into operation, in order that the present incubus of doubt and uncertainty which rests upon the entire industry might be lifted from it.

Mr. WARREN. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WARREN. I did not hear the letter read. I only know it is from Mr. Hill, of Connecticut.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It is a telegram from Mr. Hill.

Mr. WARREN. What is the import of it? Does it apply only to the date of the duties going into effect?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I regard the matter of such importance that I will ask the Secretary to read it again, if there is no objection.

Mr. WARREN. I would be glad to have it read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again read the telegram.

The Secretary again read the telegram.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WARREN. For a moment only. I understand that the bill as reported by the committee provides that the tax shall become effective as to raw wool the 1st day of December.

Mr. SIMMONS. As to raw wool.

Mr. WARREN. And as to manufactured wool the 1st day of January.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is right.

Mr. WARREN. There is, of course, too short a time between the two dates. I will say, so far as the woolgrowers are concerned, the damage has pretty much happened, although to the few woolgrowers who have not yet been compelled to dispose of their wool to meet their debts and are still holding their product it might be of some advantage.

I wish there might be some decision such as the Senator from Connecticut asks for. I am sorry that the committee did not put a later date for wool and manufactured wool, and I do not think there is time enough between the two.

So far as the woolgrower is concerned, the fact is that we have dragged along until this year's product has been largely disposed of and we shall not get perhaps a finality as to the conference on this bill until pretty near the 1st of December. Yet it is highly important to the great industry and would be of great benefit if there could be some action taken as to the particular thing simply of the dates of application to the wool and the manufactured product as the Senator from Connecticut proposes.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, of course it is very important to all the industries of the country affected by the bill to know as soon as possible when it is going into effect. I think, as it has been said by Senators on the other side, that the country has settled down to the conviction that the bill is going to become a law, and they are anticipating and, as far as possible, adjusting themselves to it.

Of course, it is uncertain when the bill will become a law. That is a thing which can not be helped. I think it is true, as has been stated by Senators on the other side, that all the industrial interests, having accepted the certainty of the passage of this bill, are now more interested in the date when it shall become operative than they are in the rates, because they regard the question of rates as practically settled.

The best way and the most practicable way to meet this situation is to secure by the cooperation of both sides as speedy action on the bill as possible. I had hoped that there would be no disposition in any direction to delay the matter, so that the country might be given the benefit of the certainty which would result from final action.

I do not know that the wool situation is so different from that of all other industries affected. To some extent I think it is, but I do not suppose it is radically different. Yet I would be willing, if I could do anything, to relieve the situation which this telegram discloses and which we all heretofore have perceived in part; but, as I said, it is a very delicate matter. The Senate committee has fixed one date for this schedule to go into effect and the House has fixed in the bill another date. Conferees have not been appointed. It is not definitely known who will be the conferees either in the House or in the Senate. I do not suppose there is anyone in the House who would feel justified in speaking with authority for the conferees of that body. I surely would not feel justified in speaking with authority for the conferees on the part of the Senate.

As I have said to the Senator, I have done all I think I can do; I have brought this matter to the attention of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. I hope that during the day I may have some conference with him, but until I have had that conference I do not care to make any further statement about the possibility of any assurances that might meet the situation as outlined in the telegram of Mr. Hill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, of course, no one expected that the Senator from North Carolina would be able to pledge either the majority in the House or in the Senate to any definite response at this particular time to the matter raised in the telegram and the question asked of him. What the telegram is designed for and what I think it is probably effective in accomplishing is to bring the subject to the attention of Members of Congress with a view of conferences, and that the Senator says he is about to enter into.

I do not think the matter is a delicate one, as the Senator says. Entirely irrespective of the rates and entirely irrespective of when the bill is to take effect, Congress could now, if it wanted, pass a joint resolution, after proper conference and proper thought and discussion of the subject, declaring when these new rates on wool shall take effect.

For instance, we could pass a joint resolution providing that the rates prescribed in the bill should take effect six months after the passage of the bill, or that they should take effect upon a certain date so far in the future as it would be certain that the bill would be passed before that time, but the trouble at present is not at all dependent upon the result of a conference or upon whom the conferees on the bill on the part of the two Houses may be; that is not the question. The question at present, which, as I understand, is embarrassing everybody, is that the House recommends that these duties shall take effect upon one date and the Senate Committee on Finance recommends that they shall take effect upon another date, and several amendments have already been introduced proposing that they shall take effect upon still other dates, which results in an utter confusion in the minds of everybody interested in this enormous industry all over the country.

Why it should be a delicate matter or why it should be even a difficult matter for both parties, after full and free conference upon that one question, to arrive at a definite date when the rates should take effect, at whatever point fixed, I do not see.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, the Senator should have understood me in using the word "delicate" as referring to my giving assurance about it until I had had a conference with Members of the other branch of Congress. I will state to the Senator that I do not know what course may be ultimately pursued, but the Senator knows it would be a very unusual proceeding, when we are considering a tariff measure, for Congress to pass a separate joint resolution providing and fixing a date when a measure or a part of a measure shall go into effect. What he has suggested is out of the ordinary, and his whole suggestion and that of Mr. Hill requires consideration before any statement of purpose can be properly made.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I was not criticizing the Senator from North Carolina for using the word "delicate," if that is what he means by it. In fact, if he means by the word "delicate" that he is not in a position at present to promise anything, the Senator could safely have used a much stronger word, because, of course, he has not the power, and nobody would want him to exercise it if he had it, on the spur of the moment, without conference and consideration.

As to the course suggested by me of the passage of a joint resolution which would fix definitely some date when these new rates would take effect, the Senator says that might be an unusual procedure. I am not certain whether or not it has ever been done; but even if it were unusual, if I recall recent history, there have been several somewhat unusual things done in the last few years in legislation. I should not think that the mere fact that it was a new departure, or that we were unaccustomed to it, need prevent us from doing it if, in our sound judgment, we thought it was a wise and a proper thing to do.

It seems to me if we could agree upon a date it could not possibly hurt anybody. In the amount of trouble that is sure to arise in the era of passing from one principle of raising revenue and one principle of tariff duties to another, necessarily there is some confusion. Even if the majority be correct in their claim that their proposal is the better system, there necessarily will be great confusion. If we can, by even the smallest degree, ameliorate the necessary hardships and uncertainties incident to the passage from one policy to another, nobody would be harmed by our doing it, Mr. President.

Mr. SIMMONS. I imagine the Senator from Connecticut would have some trouble if he were to sit down and undertake to write a joint resolution such as he is now proposing. I do not know whether he would base such a joint resolution upon the certainty that this bill will pass or not. Probably he would base it upon a contingency; and an act of Congress based upon a contingency would be rather an odd spectacle, I think, in legislation.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think, Mr. President, that my hand retains sufficient cunning to rise superior to the tremendous task of framing even a contingent joint resolution. I admit that I am somewhat cheered by the use of that hypothetical word in the mouth of the Senator, for I had hitherto regarded—I say it not by way of boasting, but confessing—that it was pretty certain that some bill changing the rates of duty upon wool would be passed; but if the Senator at this stage of the proceedings regards it only as a possible contingency, I hope the producers of the country will cheer up and take a little hope, which I think up to this point they have abandoned.

Mr. SIMMONS. I assume from what Senators on the other side have said that they regard it as a certainty.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think, Mr. President, to be perfectly frank—and I have so written all my constituents who have been interested in this measure—that it was certain a Democratic tariff bill would be passed, the particular schedules not being absolutely certain, but its passage being certain unless we could convert some of the majority to the truth, to our way of thinking; but the more I see of the conduct of the majority during this session the less hope I have of being able to bring any of them to repentance and to seeing the true light.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not think the Senator has any chance of doing that.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think that is true.

Mr. POMERENE and Mr. JAMES addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield first to the Senator from Kentucky.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just a moment. The Chair inquired if the Senator from Connecticut would yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If that is the inquiry of the Chair, I say no. I yield first to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, I merely wanted, in regard to the statement of the Senator from Connecticut that unusual things have been done in the last few years in Congress, to ask him, in the case of a bill which we were considering and which we expected to pass, if it did become a law whether we could, by a joint resolution such as the Senator suggests, control legislation thereafter to be enacted as to the time when the schedules themselves would be effective?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Certainly not, if the majority wanted to violate the pledge they had given to the country; but even I have not had that opinion of the majority. If the majority pledged itself to the country that the rates they had prescribed should go into effect on a certain day, I think they would have conscience and honor enough to conform to the pledge and to put it into the bill according to the joint resolution.

Mr. JAMES. That is quite true. Then, of course, the joint resolution which the Senator suggests would be entirely unnecessary, because the same thing could be done by agreement just as effectually as by action of Congress.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Absolutely. It could be done by agreement; and if there was any way of Congress pledging itself in a matter of honor like a unanimous-consent agreement, as in the Senate, I am certain that an agreement by both branches of Congress would satisfy the country. My suggestion of the passage of a joint resolution was simply the putting of it in official form, which would be the proper way of the two Houses joining in concurrent action.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. With pleasure.

Mr. POMERENE. I agree with the Senator from Connecticut that the thing to be desired is to know when this bill and each schedule thereof shall go into effect. It seems to me that it is difficult to tell in advance just what this body may do. Further, it is more difficult to tell just what the conference committee might do. In view of those uncertainties, it seems to me that the Senator from Connecticut could aid very materially in clearing the atmosphere if he and his colleagues on the other side of the Chamber would suggest an early day when we might vote upon the bill. I hope the Senator from Connecticut will make a suggestion in that behalf.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator from Ohio flatters me in attributing to me the enormous influence he thinks I have with the minority of this body.

Mr. POMERENE. If the Senator does not have that influence, he ought to have it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Whether I ought to have it or not is a question of opinion; but I will say to the Senator that, so far as I have heard, I believe there is absolutely no disposition upon this side of the Chamber to unnecessarily delay the passage of the proposed tariff bill. The Senator knows, and every other member of the majority knows, that a matter of this kind in all its parts ought to be considered carefully and thoroughly. It is due to the country that there should be adequate debate upon these proposed revolutionary changes, which we believe are seriously to incommode the industries of this country.

If the Senator could give us some assurance that immediately we shorten the debate to the minimum upon the tariff bill we would be allowed to go home and pacify the apprehensions of the country, excited by its passage, instead of being plunged into the consideration of another embarrassing question, to wit, the change of our whole banking and currency system, which is quite as basic a controller of the welfare of the country as the tariff, I think we might get together upon this question a great deal more quickly than it looks as though we could at present.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is what I think.

Mr. POMERENE. And it does seem to me that, in view of the great apprehension which the Senator feels from the contemplated passage of this bill, we could largely do away with the uncertainty by passing it at once. The distinguished ex-Congressman whose telegram was read here suggests that business men are more interested in the date when the schedules are going into effect than they are in the particular rates. I know that that sentiment prevails generally everywhere. I am sure that that is true in my own State. Having that thought in mind, and in view of the further fact that the Senator has assured his constituency that a Democratic measure is to be passed, it seems to me that, whether we look at it from a Democratic standpoint or from a Republican standpoint, the sooner we vote upon the bill and can give the assurance of certainty to the public the sooner we will to that extent be aiding everybody.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the solicitude of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] that we should take speedy action on the pending bill is very touching. I recall the fact that when the last tariff bill was under consideration it was debated here for two months and was in conference a full three weeks. I recall the fact that the present bill was held in committee and in caucus by our Democratic friends covering a period of a good many weeks; in fact, I believe it was so held something over two months, and there did not seem to be any solicitude to get it before the Senate. Now, when we are legitimately debating a very important measure, we are appealed to to allow it to pass speedily so as to pacify the country.

Mr. President, as I recall the matter, although it may not have been stated in terms, we were invited by the President of the United States to come here to consider tariff legislation. Since then, for some inscrutable reason, the Chief Executive, if we may credit what we are told and what we read, has determined to force a currency bill through Congress at this present session. One of the morning papers tells us that that is his purpose and determination, and that nothing is to stand in the way of it. Indeed it is stated with apparent authority that it is to be submitted to a Democratic caucus. I simply desire to say that if we are to be kept here until the snow flies we might as well be kept here on the tariff bill as on any other bill, and there is abundant material for discussion that will interest the country in reference to the pending measure.

I will further add that I think it is rather a spectacle, after Congress has been kept here in session late in the summer during the past five or six years, that we should again be kept here all summer, sweltering in the heat, when everybody is tired out and a great many Senators are absent and more will be absent, for the purpose of considering a measure which I think I am safe in saying no considerable proportion of the Senate believes will be enacted into law at this session of Congress.

For that reason, Mr. President, I join with the suggestion made by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] that if we can have the least earthly assurance that when we have passed the tariff bill, for the consideration of which the President invited us in session, and then can have an opportunity to get a little rest, such as the Government clerks take every summer, such as the Cabinet officers take from time to time, such as everybody takes in the summer season, and which is thought to be a necessity for the health of the people—if we can have any assurance whatever along that line, I think we will probably make more progress toward securing a vote on the tariff bill than we otherwise will. Under these conditions we will probably be able to agree upon a time to vote, which will be hardly possible if currency legislation is to be pressed upon a tired and reluctant Congress.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. With pleasure.

Mr. POMERENE. I did not mean by anything that I suggested that we should not have reasonable debate on this bill. I agree that we ought to have; but I do not believe that it should be unreasonably prolonged. I was led to make the suggestion in view of the solicitude which is felt, not only on the other side but upon this side, that the uncertainty as to the date when this bill may pass and the date when schedules may take effect should be removed as quickly as possible. That suggestion is met by my very good friend from New Hampshire by saying that if we can not secure an agreement as to what shall be done on the currency question, we shall continue the uncertainty under which the public is suffering by means of further debate on the tariff bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, after this side of the Chamber shall have debated this bill as long as our Democratic friends debated the last tariff bill there might be some reason for the chiding in which the Senator indulges. We look upon this bill with far more solicitude than even the Democrats could have looked upon the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. We believe it is going to destroy innumerable industries of the industrial North, and we are not going to permit it to pass, without any reference to any other bill, without full debate. The Senator will not even intimate that the debate thus far has not been legitimate or that there has been any unusual delay or any discussion for the mere purpose of delay.

Mr. POMERENE. The only difference seems to be that the solicitude of the Democrats, so far as the Payne-Aldrich bill was concerned, was justified, even in the estimate of most of the Republicans of the country.

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, that does not appear; the facts do not warrant that statement. The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] presented some figures yesterday which disprove that allegation. There is no evidence whatever in support of that contention. The vote at the last presidential election does not justify the claim that the people of this country have ever voted for a bill such as we are now considering.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I should like to be courteous to all, and I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. KERN. I only desire to ask the Senator from New Hampshire if in the last campaign all the members of the Progressive Party, from Col. Roosevelt down, did not on every stump in this country denounce the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and denounce President Taft for his connection with it?

Mr. GALLINGER. They did find fault with some schedules of the bill.

Mr. KERN. And yet the Senator now stands here, as the Senator from Wyoming did on yesterday, and seeks to convey the idea that the Progressive Party and the Republican Party were united in the defense of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. The so-called Progressive Party did find fault with some schedules of that measure, but they never committed themselves to a bill such as we are now considering.

Mr. KERN. I was addressing myself to the remarks of the Senator from New Hampshire and the remarks of the Senator from Wyoming, in which they pictured the two political parties to which I have referred as standing together for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill as against the Democratic Party.

Mr. GALLINGER. Not that exactly.

Mr. KERN. I want to say that no more ferocious assaults on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill were committed than were committed by the party headed by Col. Roosevelt in the last campaign.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I do not agree to that. What we contend is that the Progressive Party, as well as the Republican Party, stood for adequate protection to American industries. That is all we claim. I want to add that, in addition to the votes to which the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] called attention, there were hundreds of thousands of protectionist Republicans who voted for Mr. Wilson, simply because they feared the candidacy of a certain other gentleman, whom they determined to defeat at all hazards.

Mr. KERN. Why?

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator asks why?

Mr. KERN. Yes; why did they fear the candidacy of the other gentleman?

Mr. GALLINGER. It is not necessary to go into that. It is a fact, and the Senator from Indiana knows it to be a fact. Every intelligent man knows it to be a fact. There were hundreds of thousands of Republicans in the country who voted for Mr. Wilson for that reason.

Mr. KERN. Hundreds of thousands?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes; hundreds of thousands.

Mr. KERN. I was not aware of that fact.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is a fact, nevertheless.

Mr. KERN. I hope they will remain true to their allegiance.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator's hope is illusory. It will not happen. They will not remain. They are going to leave the Democratic Party as speedily as they can, as a large majority of the people of this country are going to leave the Democratic Party at the first opportunity.

Mr. KERN. And become standpatters?

Mr. GALLINGER. They will become protectionist Republicans.

Mr. KERN. Standpat Republicans? I doubt that.

Mr. GALLINGER. Protectionist Republicans, as against the free-trade theories and doctrine of the Democratic Party.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do.

Mr. WARREN. I desire to say that the Senator from Indiana probably did not hear, nor has he probably read, what I said yesterday. The matter of the Payne-Aldrich bill was not under discussion in my remarks. I stated that the majority of the people of the country recorded themselves for the protective principle as against free trade or a tariff for revenue only.

Mr. KERN. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. KERN. How did the hundreds of thousands of Republicans referred to by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] record themselves on the tariff question?

Mr. WARREN. They recorded themselves, as oftentimes people do, as accepting the least of what they deemed two evils in the personality of candidates.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, in reply to the Senator——

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Certainly.

Mr. BRISTOW. In view of the remarks that have been made, I desire to say that, so far as the discussion of the tariff is concerned, as far as my part in it goes, it has not been and will not be influenced in the slightest degree by what Congress may do after this bill is passed. If it is decided to stay here and enact additional legislation, I will stay and do the best I can. For me that should not be an excuse for hastening or for delaying the passage of this bill. I believe any tariff bill should be thoroughly discussed. I think we owe that to the country in order that it may know what our opinions are on the various paragraphs of the bill, and then let the country pass upon the measure, as it ultimately will.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut again yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do.

Mr. KERN. May I inquire of the Senator from Kansas if he disclaims allegiance to the Republican Party? He speaks of "my party."

Mr. BRISTOW. I never spoke of "my party."

Mr. KERN. I understood the Senator a moment ago to say "the party to which I belong."

Mr. BRISTOW. I spoke of the debate, as far as any part that I took in it was concerned. I had not in mind any party. I am undertaking to discuss a great economic question.

Mr. KERN. I was about to inquire of the Senator from Kansas whether he has not been engaging and taking part in Republican caucuses during the present session of Congress.

Mr. BRISTOW. I have not. I was not aware that there had been any Republican caucus. If there has been, I have not heard of it and have not attended.

Mr. JAMES. What about a Republican conference?

Mr. BRISTOW. I would attend it if I thought I could do good by doing so.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, there has been no Republican caucus during the present session, and there will be no Republican caucus.

Mr. KERN. May I inquire what you call the assemblages or conferences or consultations that you have held?

Mr. GALLINGER. The Republicans of the Senate, now in the minority, get together and talk over matters in a good-natured way, just as our Democratic friends do, in the cloakroom, but we hold no caucuses.

Mr. KERN. In the presence of newspaper reporters?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; they have not asked to be present. I think we might well have permitted them to be present. Not a word has ever been said in a Republican conference that the newspapers and the world might not have known.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do.

Mr. BRISTOW. The remarks of the Senator from Indiana lead me to say, in addition, that personally I should not attend any caucus of any party, whether I belonged to it or not, if that caucus was to shape legislation in secret. I do not believe that is the proper way to legislate. I think a bill made in a secret party caucus should be discussed fully in the open after it is made; and the fact that the majority saw fit to take this bill into a secret caucus to perfect it and keep it for six weeks or more is no reason for hurrying it through the Senate without full and proper discussion.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not decline to yield to any Senator; but I simply wish to express the hope that I will be allowed to conclude the very brief remarks I have to make, and then Senators may talk among themselves as much as they please about other things after I have sat down. But I will yield to the Senator from North Carolina, because I do not wish to discriminate.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not desire to address myself to the subject the Senator is discussing; and if he wishes to continue, I will wait until he is through.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, referring to the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] that there had been an admission in the telegram we are discussing that the vital question is not one of rates, but is as to when they take effect, I wish to say that the language of the telegram is:

> The vital question just now is not what the changes in rates shall be, but what will be the time limit of the present law on wool and woolens, respectively.

"The vital question just now" is not one of rates. Of course, knowing that Mr. Hill is a good protectionist, I assume he has taken it as a foregone conclusion that the question of rates is going to be decided upon a Democratic theory, and therefore that is conceded, and the vital question now is when the rates shall take effect. Of course, no member of any party would mean to be literally bound to the statement that the rate on wool is not a vital question.

As to the further suggestion of the Senator from Ohio that it is important that we should get together and tell him what we are going to do upon the currency question, I would politely suggest to him, if he considers that matter of such great importance as his earnest manner would indicate, that he betake himself with his harmonizing influence to another body and see what effect he will have in getting an agreement as to what currency legislation is going to take place out of the control in which it has rested, and apparently is likely to rest, in another body for several weeks to come, at least.

Not to be diverted any further, Mr. President, I am glad to hear the chairman of the Finance Committee say that he will take up this matter in earnest with his colleagues, and that he has already laid the foundation for a conference with the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House. I am certain that if the chairmen of these two great coordinate committees, with their influence as the leaders of their parties upon this branch of legislation, take up this matter with the serious purpose of attempting to inform the country as to when the change of rates on wool and woolen goods shall take effect, there is not a doubt that it is absolutely within their control to relieve the country from any apprehension as to the woolen schedule concerning the time when those rates shall take effect.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I recognize the fact that we are dealing with a great subject, and that discussion and debate are necessary. I have not at any time criticized the minority for the time they have taken in discussing the pending bill. I think discussion on their part is entirely legitimate; and possibly with the exception of some little waste of time in connection with certain items, for which nobody could be held responsible, so far as I know, there has been no abuse of the privileges of debate on the part of the minority. Surely I am not disposed to criticize them, nor am I disposed to press them unduly.

Personally I have not yet suggested a time for a vote upon this bill. I have refrained from doing so because I thought we had not proceeded sufficiently far in the discussion to enable the minority to name a date when they would be willing to vote. I have been advised, however, that members of the Finance Committee representing the minority have been conferring with a view to ascertaining what date they might possibly agree upon. I have had assurances that were very pleasing to me that there was a disposition on their part to fix as early a date as they thought would allow sufficient time for debate.

I hope the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], in making his statement a little while ago about "staying here until the snow flies," did not mean that there is any disposition, any change of purpose, on the part of the minority that will result in a prolonged and unnecessary discussion of the bill. I can not believe he meant that.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do.

Mr. LODGE. I think what the Senator from New Hampshire meant—I know it is my own view—is that if we are given to understand, as we now are, that we are to remain in session indefinitely, in order to dispose of a banking and currency bill as soon as the tariff bill is out of the way, I think it will inevitably delay the consideration of the tariff bill, for the simple reason that then there will be no particular object in hurrying.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does not the Senator consider the situation of the country?

Mr. LODGE. I am considering the situation of the country.

Mr. SIMMONS. And the earnest desire of the business interests of the country at this time that the matter should be settled? Does he not consider the great interests that are involved?

Mr. LODGE. I am quite as anxious about the situation of the country as any Senator. I am speaking of the practical result. Senators on this side are just as anxious to finish this bill as Senators on that side.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have been led to believe that.

Mr. LODGE. We do not want to delay it. Now we are told that no matter how soon we act we are to be kept here just the same; we are to be kept here indefinitely—until December. It may be that we should put all that aside; but human nature is so constituted that when we are told that there is to be no chance for rest, recess, or any change after we pass the tariff bill, it removes one incentive for rapid work.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, in view of the great anxiety of the country, in view of the deep and wide and far-reaching interest of business in the speedy determination of this measure, I am exceedingly sorry to hear the intimation of the Senator from Massachusetts that the bill may be held up because it is proposed to pass some other measure during the present session of Congress.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not misrepresent me.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not intend to do so. I thought that was the meaning of the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. I did not say there was any intention of holding up this bill. There is no such intention; but it is inevitable that if the chance of adjournment is indefinitely removed the energy for work will be diminished.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask the Senator if he does not think his statement now and his statement a little while ago justify the conclusion that he meant that if we were to be held here to consider and act upon a currency measure this bill would be purposely delayed?

Mr. LODGE. No, Mr. President; there will be no purpose of delaying this bill, no matter what is determined upon.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am very glad to hear the Senator say that.

Mr. LODGE. I am speaking of what will inevitably happen. From his long experience in the Senate the Senator knows as well as I do that if there is a prospect of adjournment and getting a vacation, to which we are entitled—some of us are now passing our fifth summer in succession here—there is many a Senator on this floor who will sacrifice something he wants to say, and perhaps ought to say, in order to get away. He knows that early adjournment is a stimulant to legislative action.

Mr. GALLINGER. We would agree to longer hours, for example.

Mr. SIMMONS. But the consideration of another bill ought not to be a stimulant for delay, except as an incident.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, many people feel that this is no time, in the heat of summer, with an exhausted Congress after a long tariff debate, to take up a banking and currency bill, which in my judgment is ten times as important in its effect on the business of the country as the tariff, grave as that is. They feel that it is not the time to take up such a bill and undertake to deal with it. It is not the time to reach decent legislation upon that subject.

We all know that the banking laws need reform and change. We are agreed on that. There are many points in the law that have been presented on which I think all men who have reflected on the subject are agreed. There are some others to which many people are utterly opposed, as they think they will be ruinous in their effect. We must have, we ought to have, a long and thorough debate. It is not good legislation to try to force through a bill of that sort in a tired Congress, when it ought to have the best attention of a Congress in its consideration, and it will not make a difference of three or four weeks in the time when the banking and currency bill becomes a law.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I have no disposition whatever to enter into any discussion with reference to the proposed currency legislation. That is a matter which must take care of itself. I am not advised, personally, as to its situation nor as to the probability of action with reference to it at this session. All I was concerned about at this time and all I desired to know was whether there was a fixed purpose on the part of the minority to delay the tariff bill if currency legislation was projected upon Congress. I am glad to have the assurance of the Senator from Massachusetts that there is no such deliberate, fixed purpose.

Mr. LODGE. There is no such intention, Mr. President.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is all I was concerned about. I do not desire to say anything further on the subject.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me a moment, all I desire to say is that men will not and can not be expected to work as well if they know there is stretching before them a session of indefinite length as when they can see some end to their labors and some prospect of getting away. They will not work as well even if they mean to hurry a bill as much as they can, which I think is the present intention.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if anything has been said here this morning which leaves the impression that there is going to be any delay upon this side of the Chamber by reason of the threatened currency legislation, that does not represent the view entertained by a considerable number of Senators on this side of the Chamber. Whatever debate may be necessary or proper to present this bill properly to the country will undoubtedly be had and ought to be had. But, expressing my own view, and I think that of some others, there should be no delay here simply because other important legislation is contemplated. If any intimation has been made to that effect or so understood, while it may represent an individual view, it does not represent the entire view entertained on this side of the Chamber.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I am exceedingly glad to hear the statement of the Senator from Idaho. I had understood that to be the feeling of many Senators, at least, on the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have on more than one occasion made that very suggestion to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; and therefore I was somewhat grieved when I heard the Senator's statement this morning, because I did not know exactly what the Senator meant.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator need not be grieved and he need not be laboring under any misapprehension. What I meant to say or what I meant to imply was that if we can come to an agreement to vote on the tariff bill with the understanding that we have then accomplished our work for the session, then we can doubtless shorten the debate for the reason that we can lengthen the hours and some Senators would refrain from making speeches that they had contemplated making. But if we can not agree upon a vote, and we certainly can not now, and I apprehend we will not in the near future if the newspapers every morning tell us that the President of the United States is going to force a certain other measure through that is going to be determined in Democratic caucus, as I understand it is to be determined in Democratic caucus in the near future in another body—if that matter is facing us no unanimous-consent agreement to take a vote on this bill is possible; while if a different condition prevailed a unanimous-consent agreement might be arranged and we could shorten the time of the debate very much.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have not asked for a unanimous-consent agreement because I knew that the other side was not at present ready to respond to such a request.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have only one further word to say, and that is that the Republicans have had no caucus and will have no caucus on this or any other bill, and the further observation that so far as I am concerned I want this debate to go on in a proper way, a decent way, giving every Senator on both sides of the Chamber—and I exceedingly regret that we are not given more enlightenment on the other side as regards this bill—an opportunity to express his views, to debate amendments, and to take such time as he feels he is entitled to because of the great interests that are involved in this legislation.

I think after a little we will come to the conclusion, which has been expressed to me by more than one Democratic Senator, that we are not going to have currency legislation at this session, and we will get an agreement to vote on this bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I think before we get through with the consideration of the schedules Senators on the other side will have all the enlightenment from this side that they want.

Mr. GALLINGER. We are very greatly in need of a little more than we have had up to the present time.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think this side has been discussing the schedules pretty fully, certainly to our satisfaction if not to the satisfaction of the other side.

Now, Mr. President, while I have no criticism to make of the time taken by the other side in general debate and even in the discussion of the schedules, I think both sides of the Chamber, if I must speak frankly, are wasting nearly every day a good deal of time in the discussion of purely collateral and sometimes immaterial matters. We have to-day spent nearly an hour and yesterday we spent probably two hours in the discussion of matters not pertinent to the bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE and Mr. SUTHERLAND addressed the Chair.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senators will let me finish, I am not criticizing, but I am saying that is one of the things that is taking up a good deal of our time.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I wish to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. SIMMONS. And one side is just as responsible as the other side. I am not blaming the other side of the Chamber. I am just expressing the hope that we may curtail these discussions and get down to a consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I understood the Senator to say that a great deal of time had been taken up by the discussion of immaterial and irrelevant matters.

Mr. SIMMONS. I said sometimes immaterial and irrelevant matters.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Do I understand that the hour which has been occupied this morning is an instance of the immaterial matters?

Mr. SIMMONS. No; I did not mean that this was an immaterial discussion, but I think we have taken more time this morning in the discussion of this matter than was necessary. I am not blaming that side or that Senator. I have been a party to it as much as he has.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator agrees, does he not, that the question raised this morning as to when the wool rates shall become effective is a very material question?

Mr. SIMMONS. I am not questioning that it is an important matter at all; I am just expressing the hope that we may curtail these discussions as much as possible.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SIMMONS. With pleasure.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, this general debate in the Senate has continued, I think, for a little less than two weeks.

Mr. SIMMONS. And very satisfactorily, I will say to the Senator. I am making no complaint about it.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I want to ask the Senator from North Carolina, because I do not remember the date, how long this bill was in the Democratic portion of the Finance Committee and in the Democratic caucus before it was reported after it came from the House?

Mr. SIMMONS. It was over six weeks after it came from the House before it was reported.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Something over two months, was it not?

Mr. SIMMONS. I can not state definitely. It was somewhere near two months.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator remember what date it came here? Was it not May 13?

Mr. LODGE. On the 8th it passed the House.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think it was referred to the committee on the 13th.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It came to the Senate the 8th day of May. So it was pending before the Democratic portion of the Finance Committee and the Democratic caucus something over 2 months—2 months and 10 days. It seems to me that after the bill has been debated in the Senate even that length of time, which will bring it to about the 15th or 20th of September, the Senator from North Carolina might then begin to express impatience.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator mean that it is the purpose of his side to debate it that long?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I am not informed just what the purpose of this side is, but I suggest that a bill of sufficient importance to justify the Democratic part of the Senate in considering it for 2 months and 10 days is certainly a bill of sufficient importance to justify the Senate as a whole in discussing it more than two weeks, and it would not be out of the way if we discussed it two months.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator mean to say that I have stated that the discussion of it at this time was not proper and legitimate, or that I have in any way complained of it?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understood the Senator to express some impatience at the progress of the debate now going on He criticized the time——

Mr. SIMMONS. I said the discussion of the bill was proceeding very satisfactorily, but what I complained of was the time consumed in discussing these things outside of the bill when the bill was not before the Senate; and I was not complaining of that side any more than this side.

Now, to be entirely accurate, I will state to the Senator the bill was referred to the committee on the 16th day of May. I was mistaken when I said it was the 13th. It was reported back July 11.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think we are making very satisfactory progress.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, what is before the Senate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The presentation of petitions and memorials is still in order.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. President, if in order, I should like to give notice——

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unfinished business.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I shall have to object until the morning business is completed.

Mr. SIMMONS. I thought the morning business was over, and that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLEAN] was rising to take the floor on the unfinished business. I was advised that he would speak upon it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The presentation of petitions and memorials is in order.

Mr. SIMMONS. Then I withdraw my request.

Mr. McLEAN. I rose simply for the purpose of giving notice that on Wednesday, July 30—that is, to-morrow—I will address the Senate on the pending tariff bill.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. LODGE. I present a petition of the Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, favoring the improvement of certain waterways in that State. I ask that the petition be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
BOARD OF HARBOR AND LAND COMMISSIONERS,
State House, Boston, July 16, 1913.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition of the undersigned, the Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, respectfully represents—

That in view of the importance of a comprehensive development of the rivers and harbors of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and in order to provide an adequate depth of water not only along the coast line but extending to and through the various harbors, rivers, and inland waterways, and to enable the Commonwealth by appropriations therefor to formulate and carry into effect plans for dredging and other works in conjunction therewith and in furtherance of projects approved by Congress, it is respectfully requested that the policy of the United States with respect to the improvement of rivers and harbors be continued and extended to the end that there may be such practical cooperation between the Federal Government, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, other New England States, municipalities, and private parties with respect to such works as will result in a more extended improvement not only of harbors but of various rivers, particularly the Connecticut, Merrimac, and Taunton, on which are now located, and may be located, manufacturing plants and other commercial and industrial establishments which are handicapped by reason of noncompetitive means of receiving and forwarding freight and raw material.

D. S. McNARY,
GEORGE E. SMITH,
CHARLES C. PAINE,
Harbor and Land Commissioners.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine (for Mr. BURLEIGH) presented a memorial of the Business Men's Association of Orono, Me., remonstrating against the reduction of the duty on wood pulp and print paper, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LEA presented a paper in support of a bill (S. 2330) for the relief of the estates of Nathan and Rebecca Dungan, deceased, late of Gibson County, Tenn., which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama:

A bill (S. 2843) appropriating $100,000 as reward for the discovery of a remedy to put an end to the ravages of the boll weevil; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. SHAFROTH:

A bill (S. 2844) granting a pension to Sarah A. Van Note; and

A bill (S. 2845) granting a pension to Mary E. Kellermann; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Maine:

A bill (S. 2846) granting an increase of pension to George H. Partridge; and

A bill (S. 2847) granting a pension to Sarah J. Hamlin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Maine (for Mr. BURLEIGH):

A bill (S. 2848) granting an increase of pension to William A. Rhoades; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PENROSE:

A bill (S. 2849) to increase the pension of those who have lost limbs or have been totally disabled in the same in the military or naval service of the United States;

A bill (S. 2850) granting an increase of pension to Susan Liggins; and

A bill (S. 2851) granting a pension to Cornelius Branning (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 2852) for the relief of John Lindsay; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 2853) for the relief of George W. Hahn; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LEA:

A bill (S. 2854) granting an honorable discharge to William C. Chandler; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 2855) to correct the naval record of Lieut. William S. Cox, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

AFFAIRS IN MEXICO.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask to have it read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The resolution (S. Res. 142) was read, as follows:

Whereas every true American citizen feels an instinctive sympathy with any people who are pouring out their blood and treasure in order to secure the blessings of liberty for themselves and their posterity: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations is hereby requested to advise the Senate whether, in their opinion, this Nation should recognize the belligerency of the revolutionists in Mexico and accord them the proper international status to which they may be entitled; and

Resolved further, That the President and Secretary of State are hereby requested to lay before the Senate such information as they may possess regarding the cause and progress of the present revolt in Mexico.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from Texas, before the resolution is referred, that after the words "the President and Secretary of State are hereby requested" the words "if not incompatible with the public interest" be inserted.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that those words be inserted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so modified, and it will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

THE PANAMA CANAL (S. DOC. NO. 146).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report by the Commission of Fine Arts, containing their recommendations regarding the artistic character of the structures of the Panama Canal, made in pursuance of the authority contained in section 4 of the act of Congress to provide for the opening, maintenance, protection, and operation of the Panama Canal, and the sanitation and government of the Canal Zone, approved August 24, 1912.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 29, 1913.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The message will be printed, and the message and accompanying papers, maps, and illustrations will be referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3321, the tariff bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I do not know that I can add anything of value to this discussion; it has already covered a wide field, and the senior Senator from North Dakota very ably presented the cause of many of the agricultural interests of my State as well as those of his own. They are to some extent identical. But I have been deeply interested in the debate, and certain considerations relating to party policies, and, I may say, to sectional interests and power, have appealed to me; likewise the thought that the bill before us does not reflect the national sentiment and is contrary to a sound and progressive national policy. To these matters, without much effort as to arrangement, I thought I might call the attention of Senators, and then quite briefly to the effect this bill, if it becomes a law, will have upon a prospective industry of my State.

From the beginning it has seemed to me not altogether a question of a radical reduction in this or that schedule, or of putting on the free list articles now subject to a substantial duty. Such a course might have been pursued and the revenues to the Government from this source been thereby reduced and the bill be yet considered a high-tariff measure.

We may even grant, for the sake of argument, that this was done in 1909, with the result that a law which was unsatisfactory and which, in the opinion of many, left a party-platform pledge for a substantial revision downward unredeemed.

But in making that or any other pledge for revision or reform of the tariff there was no abandonment of the principle of protection. American labor was to be protected by a tariff which would measure the difference between the cost of production here and abroad. The new American industry which gave promise under favorable conditions as to wages and cost of maintenance of supplying some need of our people, and thus becoming an important factor in our economic life, was to receive such protection in the way of tariff duties as its development required. The importance and the value of a diversity of industries for the country as a whole or for any State of the Union was to be recognized, for it was assumed that this diversity lay at the very foundation of our national progress and that in the opportunities thereby given to individuals to pursue the vocations best suited to their skill, taste, or ambition was to be found not only that which educates, but which gives to society itself its greatest interest and charm.

But the principle of protection, which we contend has been promotive of these beneficent ends, is now at stake. The semblances of it which are still retained in this bill when considered in connection with the purposes of the Democratic Party, expressed or implied, serve but to emphasize the one purpose to speedily abandon the protective principle and thenceforth levy such duties as are imposed on the basis of a tariff for revenue only. In view of our conditions yet, in view of what we may accomplish for certain industries and certain sections, and thus, as I believe, accomplish for the general welfare by a wise application of the principle of protection, and in view of what is threatened, this is a momentous question.

Is the country ready for an abandonment of the principle? Has the country demanded it? Does the Democratic Party quite dare undertake the responsibility of it?

The evidence, however, that this is the situation is cumulative. It is found, first, in the time-honored declaration of the Democratic platform that a tariff other than for revenue is unconstitutional, and that the collection of taxes shall be limited to the necessities of government. The party has been compelled from time to time by new conditions, by the logic of events, to abandon the principle of strict construction as applied to much of the legislation and many of the necessary activities of government during the last 50 years. But to that one dogma, ignored at the beginning of the Government and often repudiated by the people since, the party still adheres. Note the contrast! The Republican Party, in 1860, in the convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln, declared—

That while providing revenue for the support of the General Government by duties upon imports sound policy requires such an adjustment of these imposts as to encourage the development of the industrial interests of the whole country, and we commend that policy of national exchanges which secures to the workingmen liberal wages, to agriculture remunerative prices, to mechanics and manufacturers an adequate reward for their skill, labor, and enterprise, and to the Nation commercial prosperity and independence.

And to these principles there enunciated the Republican Party still adheres; not only that, but with the election of 1912 as the test, it would appear that these are the principles to which nearly 8,000,000 out of some less than 14,000,000 voters in the United States now adhere.

And yet, strange and absurd even as it is, the claim is persistently made, and echoes of it are heard in this Chamber, that the people have spoken and by their sovereign voice have commissioned the Democratic Members of the Senate and House to carry out the declarations of your platform in regard to tariff reform and future tariff policies. It simply forms another, a second, part in the chain of evidence which proves the purpose to overthrow the principle of protection and hazard all its benefits and the future material development which, we are confident, it would insure.

In a free government all law should embody the will of the people. How vain the boast that by this proposed legislation you reflect the will of the people. How easy of demonstration that by it you do violence to that will. By actual count 6,303,063 voters voted for the Democratic electors. By actual count 7,608,093 voters voted for presidential electors running on platforms both of which declared for the policy of protection. A majority of 1,305,030 in a total vote of 13,911,156 is a decisive majority.

Aside from the plurality rule and the electoral system which puts in power an administration having a decided minority of the popular vote, and of which rule and system we do not complain, we are face to face with the situation as to whether on a question of universal interest, and affecting the general welfare as no other does, the will of the minority is sufficient mandate to reverse the policies of 50 years and to which the people by their last expression gave unequivocal approval.

The thought appeals to me, and there is some inspiration in it, that we are in the daily business of enacting laws, not for North Carolina nor for South Dakota, but for the Nation, and there should be some care, it seems to me, to ascertain the Nation's will, that we may reflect it in what we do here. To my mind this is the way in which the Nation's interests will best be conserved.

It is interesting as a study in politics to know what forces dominate in any given political crisis and the influence of historical associations or tradition even, or of soil and climate even, in the formation of political doctrines of the tenacity with which they adhere. I am here induced to make a brief analysis which I think will show the power behind the throne, the slender right in the way of production and resources on which the power is founded, and with what unfairness and injustice to many millions of our fellow citizens it is about to be wielded.

In doing this, permit me to say that no one more than myself regrets a reference to the dominating power of a section of this great country over all the rest; no one more than myself would regret to say or do aught in revival of a spirit of sectionalism or to suggest that there were industrial or political differences between us that can not be reconciled or barriers that can not be overcome. I can not believe there are, for though a stranger to it, I love your Southland through knowledge of some of her people, and I count it high honor to have greeting acquaintance with the men in this Chamber who so fully exemplify and so ably represent the courtesy, the chivalry, the intelligence, and the patriotism of the South.

But the fact remains that through your representation at the other end of the Capitol and on this floor your 20,000,000—and I am not counting your colored vote any more than you do, and I voice no prejudice against a white man's government "down there," only I would not, for economic reasons, have you "cover too much territory"—your 20,000,000 are rulers over 90,000,000. With your 57,000,000 bushels of wheat, you, in effect, determine that the producers of 630,000,000 bushels shall come into direct competition with the surplus wheat of the world under whatsoever conditions as to labor, cultivation, or soil that surplus is produced. With your 60,000,000 bushels of oats in 15 Southern States, you control in the determination that the producers of 947,000,000 bushels shall be protected by a tariff of only 6 cents per bushel. With your 710,000 bushels of barley raised in the 15 Southern States in 1909, you say that the growers of 172,633,000 bushels of barley shall compete with the many million bushels which will be imported under the rate provided in this bill, a reduction of 50 per cent from the rate of 1909. Nobody will be more highly pleased over this item than the American Brewers' Association, though it will be at the cost of many million dollars to the farmers of the Northwest alone.

I here refer to a table I have compiled from the census reports of 1910, showing the production of these crops in the several States of the South in 1909 and the total production in the other States of the Union, and ask that the same be printed in connection with my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OWEN in the chair). Without objection, permission will be granted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Farm statistics.

[1910 census reports.]

State.	Wheat.	Oats.	Barley.	Flax.
	Bushels.	Bushels.	Bushels.	Bushels.
Alabama	113,953	3,251,146	372	.....
Arkansas	526,414	3,212,891	1,267	.....
Florida	137	606,380	10	.....
Georgia	752,858	6,199,243	655	.....
Kentucky	8,739,260	2,406,064	65,596	.....
Louisiana	488	420,033	.....	2,215
Maryland	9,463,457	1,160,663	135,454	.....
Mississippi	4,670	1,268,785	753	.....
North Carolina	3,827,145	2,782,508	7,535	.....
South Carolina	310,614	5,745,291	3,483	.....
Oklahoma	14,008,334	16,606,154	127,641	9,093
Tennessee	6,516,539	4,720,092	53,201	.....
Texas	2,560,891	7,034,617	52,438	.....
Virginia	8,076,989	2,884,495	253,649	.....
West Virginia	2,575,996	1,728,806	8,407	.....
Total in South	57,477,735	60,027,768	710,461	11,308
Total in North	625,901,524	947,115,212	172,633,751	19,501,457
Total in United States	683,379,259	1,007,142,980	173,344,212	19,512,765

Mr. STERLING. This table shows also the flaxseed yield in the United States for that year. From the table it will appear that Louisiana and Oklahoma are the only Southern States which in 1909 produced any flax at all—a magnificent total for the South of 11,308 bushels—but you have it in your power, and you have exercised the power, to make a reduction of 40 per cent in the none too high duty under the law from 1897 down to the present time.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon an interruption?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. LANE. Is it not a fact that the brewers are using less and less barley all the time and are substituting rice for it? Is not rice in large part taking the place of barley in the manufacture of beer?

Mr. STERLING. If it is a fact, this is the first intimation I have had of it. I can say now that I never have had the slightest intimation to that effect.

Mr. LANE. The Senator did not know that the brewers are using rice largely in the production of beer at this time?

Mr. STERLING. No.

Mr. LANE. A few years ago they used none, but now they are using it by the thousands of bushels.

Mr. STERLING. No; I confess I did not know that.

Mr. LANE. It is true, nevertheless.

Mr. STERLING. But I was speaking of flax; the law is a protection to the producers of 19,512,765 bushels of flax. With the tariff at 25 cents per bushel under the present law, there was imported into the United States in 1911 about ten and a half million bushels, with a value of $21,379,000, of which amount over 5,000,000 bushels of poorer and cheaper flax came from Argentina, and I think about 2,500,000 bushels came that year from our neighbor on the north, Canada.

I think, with the duty reduced from 25 to 15 cents per bushel, the committee's estimate of the importations to follow is altogether too low.

And so with the other farm products. The producers of 28,000,000 bushels of potatoes, 395,000,000 pounds of butter, 426,000,000 dozen eggs in the entire 15 States of the South determine, through their Representatives, that the producers of 350,000,000 bushels of potatoes shall sell their surplus in free competition with the rest of the world; that the producers of 1,225,000,000 pounds of butter shall have as their protection the unreasonably low rate of 2½ cents per pound, which would easily mean a loss of $15,000,000 to the producers of the American product; that free competition with Canada shall be the lot of the producers of 1,165,046,485 dozen of eggs is all settled by the votes of the States producing a little more than one-third that number.

Cattle, sheep, swine, and meats are all on the free list at the behest of the men who represent those who produce a number and quantity of each vastly less than the rest of the Union. Of cattle and swine, considerably less than half as many, while of sheep there is produced in the South less than one-sixth as many as in the sheep and wool producing States of the North. And so it is throughout the whole list of agricultural farm products, upon the success in producing which the success of about every other American enterprise ultimately depends.

I appreciate the high, almost ethical, grounds upon which you claim to base the right to make these sweeping reductions, although in the light of history and of facts we are tempted to question the entire sincerity of that claim and wonder, after all, if your action is not grounded on those ancient cornerstones of your tariff-for-revenue-only fabric, tradition, and strict construction. The alleged ground is reduction in the high cost of living. It must be admitted that the practice has not always been in accordance with the precept in fixing the rates provided for in this bill. There are a few products of southern industries worth while and which escape the free list—one is rice, a delicious, nutritious, and reasonably cheap food. It is to be hoped the industry will be kept alive and encouragement given to this diversity of your farming interests by your proposed tariff of 1 cent a pound on cleaned rice, with a tariff of one-fourth of a cent a pound on rice flour. Both justifiable, perhaps, for revenue purposes; but the incidental protection was not lost sight of, and I here hazard the statement that but for the protection the industry could not live. But let me ask our Democratic friends, Why imperil the industry? True, you put wheat on the free list and made ruinous reductions in the tariff on other cereals in the North. But we are not asking that on that account you carry out to your own everlasting detriment any make-believe policy of consistency between North and South in the adjustment of the agricultural schedule. Why not have the courage of your commercial and industrial convictions and protect certainly and amply an industry which in 1908 represented an investment of $200,000,000, and which in five typical rice-growing parishes in Louisiana in the period from 1880 to 1908 enhanced or added to the value of assessable property more than $56,000,000. To say that you are commercially in favor of a policy which fostered such development but are politically opposed to it is an abject admission. Moreover, it involves, in the last analysis, a political economic untruth. In the clash between business and commerce and a political tenet the tenet may, under peculiar conditions, persist for a long time, but trade will triumph in the end.

But it is the high cost of living! How much do you reduce it while taking this long shot at the rice industry? Let us see. One cent a pound on cleaned rice. From a pound of rice a dish may be made from which a company of 15 may be served; that is one-fifteenth of a cent per man. So your duty of 1 cent, granting that the full amount is added to the cost to the consumer, would make his rice cost him, if he ate it once a day for 300 days in the year, a total of 24 cents. He must be not only poor but most narrow and unappreciative who would complain of such an expenditure, and if there be such a class in the United States, the duty on rice ought to be retained at the existing rate for—educative purposes.

It is to be observed in the matter of rice that the Democratic Party betrays some interest in manufactures as against the agricultural interests—another evidence of the statement I have frequently heard on this floor—by retaining the duty on rice flour at one-fourth of a cent a pound as it is under the Payne-Aldrich law and as it has been from the time of the enactment of the Wilson law.

But it is a home industry. Our southern friends are not insensible of what manufactures mean to the South when they are in the South. They delight in the furnace fires, in the hum of the machinery, in the employment of the labor, in the enhancement of property values, and in the additions to the assessor's roll consequent upon all these things, and so they retain the old duty on rice flour instead of cutting it to one-eighth of a cent per pound, as should have been done to have had the proper adjustment between the producer of the raw material and the producer of the finished product.

But speaking of small fractions in this schedule of southern products, nothing, it seems to me, so illustrates the intense desire to appear to be consistent as the cut of one-eighth of 1 cent per pound on unshelled peanuts—a reduction from one-half to three-eighths of a cent—it looks like peanut politics; but it will be a great relief to the ultimate consumer of a pound of peanuts. There is a county down in North Carolina, the name of which has been known in every household in the North for many years. It would be pertinent to ask the senior Senator from that State if in saving the ultimate consumer of a pound of peanuts one-eighth of 1 cent he does it all for "Buncombe."

Is it not a fact that the duty should have been increased instead of lowered? Is it not a fact that they can produce peanuts cheaper in Japan than we can in this country, and would not you by encouraging the industry bring into use and make valuable thousands of acres of otherwise almost valueless and unused lands, furnish profitable employment to a lot of people out of a job, and greatly add to your material well-being?

And is there not a fear that by this reduction, picayunish as it is, you are endangering a useful and important industry?

But although we think you do "protest too much," we take you at your word. You say it is to bring down the high cost of living and arguendo the duties under existing law are the cause of the high cost of living. The proposition is not demonstrable. The Senator from Massachusetts in his admirable speech the other day pointed out some of the causes of the high cost of living. They are very well summed up in the cost of the higher living to which taste, convenience, the improvements and comforts of the age, and sometimes, perhaps, the love of display are all the time inviting us. Hardly a Senator on this floor but who is old enough to tell the whole story of this wonderful march—I will not say it is all progress—from a simple, comparatively inexpensive mode of living to the wonderfully complex and costly mode of to-day.

Mr. President, I find no fault with the sentiment. It is but natural. Discontent with present conditions lies at the foundation of the progress of the race, and men aspire to reach a social plane, a material plane, and a standard of living as high as that enjoyed by their fellows; and from this spirit rather than from any "suffering poor" comes the great volume of just complaint against the high cost of living.

The condition itself is world-wide. While it is in part to be attributed to the greater complexity and extravagance I have described, a cause we may call legitimate, and in part to increased cost of distribution for which the producer nor the tariff are responsible, there have been, I grant you, some business iniquities in the United States but for which the cost of living as it pertains to some articles of consumption would have been less. I can not, however, subscribe to the doctrine that "the tariff is the mother of the trusts." It is not. Proof that it is not lies in the fact that trusts exist in every civilized country. But under our system a high tariff has been now and then an accessory of the trust. When the trust has become a monopoly and shuts out domestic competition and is protected by the tariff from foreign competition, and is thus enabled to put on the arbitrary price to the consumer, the price that will yield more than a reasonable profit, we have a real evil. Especially is this so when the product of the trust is one of the comforts or necessities of life, and the evil is aggravated and more aggravating when the price is made to create handsome dividends on millions of stocks that cost their holders nothing. And so let the tariff on trust-manufactured goods, and I will say, too, on the products of any great industry whose efficiency and facilities under protection shall now have materially lessened the cost of production, be carefully scrutinized with a view to just revision in the public interest. But let us not be deluded with the idea that the high cost of living is in any generally appreciable degree due to the protective tariff. People have been made righteously indignant by the disclosures of the Interstate Commerce Commission in regard to the investments and profits of the express companies, by the disclosures of the Stanley investigating committee in regard to United States Steel, by the enormities practiced by the Standard Oil and the Tobacco Trusts and the Lumber Trust in driving competition from the field, and here and there, in spots, North as well as South, East as well as West, some, unfortunately for many legitimate interests, went "trust mad" to the extent they failed to discriminate; politics, often of the "peanut" variety, and not confined to the South, either, played its rôle, and a good many people were led to the absurd conclusion that to put wheat and cattle and eggs and potatoes on the free list was the way to "bust a trust."

That there is much needless and misleading furor in regard to the relation between the tariff and the cost of living is shown by exhaustive investigations recently made. We know that a British board of trade would not report conditions in America better than in England and Wales unless fully warranted by the facts. I have here a summary of the reports of the British Board of Trade on cost of living in the principal industrial towns of England and Wales, Germany, France, Belgium, and the United States. It contains a table showing the ratio of weekly wage paid in these several countries, taking that in England and Wales as 100. Here are the building trades—bricklayers, stone masons, carpenters, plasterers, plumbers, painters, laborers, and hod carriers; and here are the engineering trades—the fitters, turners, smiths, pattern makers, and laborers. I will not take the time of the Senate to read, but the report shows that taking the arithmetical mean of the ratios for all occupations, the weekly rate of wages in the United States was two and one-third times the wages in England and Wales, two and five-sixths times the wages in Germany, three and one-eighth times the wages in France, and three and three-fourths times the wages in Belgium.

Foods and rents are somewhat higher here than in England and Wales, but in concluding its report the board makes this significant statement:

> It is evident, then, that even when allowance has been made for the increased expenditure on food and rent a much greater margin is available in the United States than in England and Wales.
>
> The margin (over expenditure for rent and food) is clearly large, making possible a command of the necessaries and conveniences and minor luxuries of life that is both nominally and really greater than that enjoyed by the corresponding class in this country, although the effective margin is itself, in practice, curtailed by a scale of expenditure to some extent necessarily and to some extent voluntarily adopted in accordance with a different and a higher standard of material comfort.

Besides, it may be added, is the advantage of the shorter hours also shown by this report to the American workingman.

But there is a relation between the tariff and the cost of living. The tariff has unquestionably enabled the industry to pay that higher wage which in turn enabled the worker to better maintain, support, and educate himself and family despite the higher cost of living.

And now, Mr. President, permit me to turn for a moment to an important American industry I had hoped to soon see established in my own State. It would give us a much-needed diversity with our small grain crops. I refer to the beet-sugar industry. Through a series of careful experiments made in various parts of the State, it is shown that the conditions as to soil, climate, and the per cent of sugar contained in the beets are not excelled by those of any other State. But one condition is lacking, and for want of that condition and from the attitude of this administration in regard to permitting the condition to be supplied, I fear our hope is to be long deferred.

When I say the attitude of the administration I think it is understood that but for the position taken by the Executive no free-sugar bill or bill putting sugar on the free list would pass the Senate at this session. I believe it to be the sober judgment of impartial men familiar with the subject, and now, too, the sober judgment of a majority of the Members here, that the duty on sugar should not be reduced below the present moderate rate. That here is a great, important, comparatively new American industry, the encouragement of which will result in time in the production from all domestic sources of all the sugar we consume and our complete independence of foreign nations for this one staple of universal necessity and use; that meanwhile, by the maintenance of the duty, the cost to the consumer will not be increased to any appreciable degree, and that he will continue to get his sugar cheaper than in the great majority of European countries; that the indirect results of sugar-beet farming will be even more significant, farther reaching, and more beneficial to the American people than the direct results—in the conservation and renewal of the soil and the larger crops of wheat, oats, and barley resulting from a rotation with sugar beets.

Concerning this as the situation and these the benefits, there hardly seems to be dispute, and yet these facts, this sound judgment, this consensus of opinion, this industry of such promise, must yield, not to a statesmanlike policy, far-reaching and beneficent, but to "policy."

Mr. President, I spoke of the interest of my own State in this industry and of the experiments there made. In this connection I send to the desk a letter received last April from Prof. James H. Shepard, head of the department of chemistry at our State college of agriculture and mechanic arts and experiment station, on this subject and ask that the same be read by the Secretary in this connection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection. The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

SOUTH DAKOTA AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION,
Brookings, April 29, 1911.

Hon. THOMAS STERLING,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR STERLING: I am glad, indeed, to send you some information concerning sugar beets in this State. I have a bulletin on the subject in the hands of the printers, and it has been there since the holidays. It will probably be out next month. Thinking perhaps that it would be too late, I inclose the manuscript from which the bulletin was set. This does not make a very convenient form for you to consult, but it is better than nothing.

As you will learn, we have done much work. I am now breeding seed, and I am informed that our results last year sets a world's record for yield and sugar production. There is no doubt that our State is well adapted to the culture of the sugar beet, and it is, as you suggest, not only one of the best money crops, but it is also one of the least exhausting crops our farmers can grow, and they will grow the beets if we have the factories. I would invite your attention to the table and its discussion near the close of the manuscript.

Again, sugar beets will add immensely to the yield of our regular grain crops, owing to their beneficial effect on the soil itself. They are subsoilers and open up the soil for the penetration of water. They are a cultivated crop and so will clean the ground from weeds. If the tops and pulp are returned to the soil, little exhaustion takes place, since sugar comes wholly from the air.

Our State must soon find some way to curtail the outflow of farm fertility that has steadily sapped at our great resources since the State was settled. Sugar beets will do just that thing. Then, again, their growing will enhance our stock production, and we need more live stock. It will divide up our farms and make more homes and increase our population, things devoutly to be desired.

In view of the facts that all our splendid results have been reached without irrigation and without fertilizing our sugar beets, factories are sure to come unless unfavorable tariff legislation kills all our sugar industries. No one wants that, for to the intelligent mind that means high-priced sugar. The cost of living is too high already.

In view of what we all think, you will be perfectly sustained in any efforts you may make to protect the sugar-beet industry. Our State needs it.

With the kindest regards,

JAS. H. SHEPARD.

P. S.—I could send no cuts, as they are with the printers.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, in transmitting the bulletin referred to in that letter Prof. Shepard wrote me again in part as follows:

> If you would care for other copies please write me. I am anxiously watching the sugar-tariff proceedings. We were scheduled to have two or more factories in our State next year. I honestly believe that no State can raise better sugar beets, and I know that the advent of sugar-beet culture means the greatest prosperity to our State.

The letter refers to a table printed in the bulletin. The table is a short one, and I ask consent that it be printed in connection with my remarks, together with the page and a half of the bulletin following the table, the same being comment on the matter contained in the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Tests of sugar beets.

VARIETY TESTS OF SUGAR BEETS FOR 1911.

Variety number.	Number rows analyzed.	Number beets analyzed.	Weight beets analyzed—pounds.	Degree brix.	Per cent sugar in juice.	Purity.	Per cent sugar in beet.	Pounds beets per acre.	Pounds sugar per acre.
35	5	248	267	19.6	17.1	88	16.3	31,015	4,559
40	7	368	354	19.6	17.0	87	16.2	26,515	4,412
42	6	288	297	19.8	17.6	89	16.7	32,016	5,401
43	6	326	307	20.4	17.9	89	17.0	32,894	5,701
44	6	317	308	20.3	17.9	88	17.0	32,665	4,797

Tests of sugar beets—Continued.

VARIETY TESTS FOR 1912.

Variety number.	Number rows analyzed.	Number beets analyzed.	Weight beets analyzed—pounds.	Degree brix.	Per cent sugar in juice.	Purity.	Per cent sugar in beet.	Pounds beets per acre.	Pounds sugar per acre.
35	18	142	115	24.0	21.0	88	20.0	46,379	8,532
42	18	158	112	24.4	22.0	90	20.9	45,173	8,497
43	18	146	118	24.5	22.0	88	20.9	47,593	8,952
44	18	138	101	25.4	22.6	89	21.5	40,737	7,782
188	18	120	106	25.6	23.2	91	22.0	42,753	8,653
218	18	132	106	24.6	22.0	89	20.9	42,753	8,025
SD1	18	143	111	24.2	21.4	88	20.3	44,766	8,268

SPACING TESTS FOR 1912.

40	18	138	96	25.2	22.4	89	21.3	38,962	7,469
40	22	143	147	21.0	18.0	86	17.1	48,510	7,605
40	26	123	142	23.2	20.0	90	19.0	39,700	7,011
40	30	122	169	21.0	18.8	90	17.9	40,898	6,762

To the casual reader, perhaps, the figures in the table do not have much significance. But let us see. There is no ordinary crop raised on the farm that gives any such tonnage as sugar beets. Even corn cut green for silage does not amount to any such figure as 24 tons per acre.

Again, no ordinary crop grown on the farm has any such cash value as sugar beets. Factories buy sugar beets according to their sugar content. The lowest price paid is $5 per ton. Beets like those grown at this station would certainly bring a much higher rate—perhaps $7 or $8 per ton. A few figures will show that our land can be made to bring an income of from $100 to $125 per acre under careful culture in sugar beets.

Then look again at the sugar-per-acre column. Take variety No. 42 as an average. It gave, in round numbers, 8,500 pounds of sugar per acre. To grow as many pounds of wheat per acre it would require 140 bushels. To grow the same number of pounds of oats per acre would make it necessary to grow 260 bushels per acre. The utter hopelessness of any such undertaking is so striking that it needs no comment. In fact, it would require 10 acres in either oats or wheat to yield as much grain, pound for pound, as the sugar yield. Then, again, let us take the cash value of the recoverable sugar per acre, neglecting the by-products of manufacture—pulp, alcohol, etc. Sugar at wholesale is now $5.40 per hundred. Consequently the manufactured products from the sugar grown on 1 acre would be around $400. To raise that value in wheat, even at $1 per bushel, would require 400 bushels, and to grow that much at the average yield of 15 bushels per acre would require 26 acres of land; while to grow the same value in oats, at 25 cents per bushel, would take, at 30 bushels per acre, 52 acres of land. Moreover, sugar comes from the air. It does not deplete the soil as grain raising does.

We have now given a review of the work done with sugar beets in this State during the many years of its continuation. We have followed the beets through good years and through bad years. We have had droughts and other untoward features to contend with the same as other States. There is no paradise on earth. But through all these conditions we have no failures to record. The sugar beet furnishes one of our most reliable crops. In order that the reader may know how the sugar beet yields in other States, the averages for the United States are taken from the 1911 Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture. The average tons per acre is 10.82, and the average sugar in the beet is 15.81 per cent. Our rejects from the mother-beet analyses will give higher per cent than the average of all the commercial beets grown in the country. California has the highest per cent sugar in the beet of any State where they are grown commercially—18.54 per cent—while her tonnage is 10.72. The reader can make his own comparisons with South Dakota.

In conclusion, the work will be carried on at this station in order to learn the best conditions for growing both the beets themselves and for growing the seed.

It is evident that both industries, under proper management, will prove most profitable. We now have on hand a limited amount of home-grown seed. But it will be useless for individuals to ask for samples. In the light of our past experience it is evident that this would bring us nowhere. In certain communities where organized bodies are striving for factories would be a better place to send this high-grade seed. What we need now is concentrated, intelligent effort.

Mr. STERLING. And there, Mr. President, in these letters and in this bulletin of Prof. Shepard, is testimony of the highest character to the value this one industry would be to my State. He is not an investor nor speculator, but an absolutely self-disinterested witness, whose work at the agricultural college for more than 25 years and his experiments have fitted him to know whereof he speaks.

Mr. President, I have not been solicitous about talking here for the purpose of "preserving the record." I am impressed with the facts, with what I believe to be the sentiment of the people, and a sound national policy. I have said that I am willing to support any bill, whatever its source, which I believe to be for the public welfare; that I would not either support or oppose a measure on the ground of party advantage.

But I can not support this bill.

It occurs to me that here is yet a grand opportunity for a revision of the tariff, and yet a substantial recognition of the rights of these most vital and substantial agricultural interests, with which the bill so harshly deals.

We admit that any compromise must recognize the principle of protection; but it is an American principle, one responsible in large measure for our splendid industrial development, a principle in which it is evident the American people believe. Grant that they have been educated to it, and that in theory you are economically right; you can not reverse existing sentiment in a day. The injury to follow the enactment of this drastic agricultural schedule will simply create the discontent that will indefinitely postpone the day you must reach before a tariff-for-revenue-only policy can be a settled fact in America. And that day will be only when you have behind it that invincible force upon which all policies, all laws, must ultimately rest—the force of public opinion.

Then why not concede something here in the way of preparation, in the way of education, for the conditions you would realize? Why not do this in the interest of permanency and stability for your system in the end and for the peace of the country, if it is right? Would such a course be unstatesmanlike?

Granting that we have the ultras on both sides of this proposition, as we are apt to have on any proposition, is it beneath the business of statesmanship to consider what is expedient or to find the golden mean, the common ground on which the great majority of the common people might stand?

I know any suggestion of mine, coming from this side of the Chamber, will be of no avail; but let me be a little more specific in just briefly inviting attention to a few items here of the agricultural schedule.

Cattle less than 1 year old under present law are $2 per head; you make them free of duty. I am not advised, but my impression is, though I do not speak authoritatively, that in the Northwest there will be little objection to this item. But let them come in free!

The rate on all other cattle is 27.5 per cent. Under the proposed bill they are free. Make it 15 per cent.

Swine under the present rate are admitted at $1.50 per head. Under the bill they are free. Make the rate $1.

Sheep 1 year old or over under the present law are $1.50 per head. You make them free. We will divide it with you, which is not far from the rate of 10 per cent provided for by the House bill. And the same with sheep less than 1 year old.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. May I ask the Senator why he believes that a duty ought to be imposed on the importation of sheep?

Mr. STERLING. I think it should be done for the protection of the industry in this country.

Mr. WALSH. In what part of the country would the sheep growers be protected by a duty prohibiting the importation of sheep?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, we can not hear over here what either Senator is saying.

Mr. STERLING. I think really for the interest of the woolgrowers there should be this protection.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I regret that I did not hear the question and I can not hear the answer. I wish the Senators would speak so that we can hear them.

Mr. STERLING. I will say to the Senator from Montana I do not pretend to speak with authority on this proposition, but it is my idea that it will be in the interest of the woolgrowers themselves that this tariff shall be imposed upon the importation of sheep, and for the reason that sheep are imported with the wool on, and thus they would come in conflict with the wool produced here. It was as a compromise rate that I made the suggestion.

Mr. WALSH. I was following with great interest the thoughtful discussion of the subject by the Senator from South Dakota and I assumed that, as a matter of course, he had given careful consideration to each of the changes suggested by him. It puzzled me to understand quite how anyone could care to have a duty imposed upon the importation of sheep in this country.

Mr. STERLING. I will say that my suggestion simply is that, considering the previous duty and considering the proposition to put sheep on the free list now, this would be a compromise duty.

Mr. WALSH. As a sort of compromise apparently?

Mr. STERLING. Yes, sir.

Butter under the present law is 6 cents per pound. Under the bill 2½ cents. Make it 4. Cheese under the present law is 6 cents per pound. Your bill makes it 2½ cents. Make it 4, which is only slightly in excess of the rate named in the House bill. Cream, now 5 cents a gallon, you admit free. It ought to be at least 3 cents a gallon. Eggs, now admitted at 5 cents a dozen, you make free. Give us 3 cents.

Potatoes, which under present law are admitted at 25 cents per bushel, the bill makes free. We will divide it with you.

Wheat, 25 cents a bushel under present law, you admit free of duty. From 25 to 12½ cents is too great a cut at once. Make it 15. And let there be a compensatory duty of 12½ to 15 per cent ad valorem on wheat flour.

The cut of 15 cents per bushel on barley is not warranted on the ground of cheaper food supply. Rather let it be 20 cents per bushel.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to ask the Senator a question in that connection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator, I suppose, subscribes to the doctrine that the duty should be such as to compensate for the difference in production here and abroad, not of course to recompense for the difference in the cost of labor but in the cost of production. That is correct, is it not?

Mr. STERLING. Yes; as a general proposition.

Mr. WALSH. Can the Senator now advise us as to what is the difference in the cost of production in the case of barley in this country and the cost in the country which is our chief competitor?

Mr. STERLING. I will say to the Senator that under the present rate it is understood there are great importations of barley, and I think the home producer of barley should be protected. Without going into details as to the cost of production here and in Canada, or elsewhere from which barley is shipped, I thought of this as of other items of this suggested schedule of mine, that it would be a compromise.

Mr. WALSH. I was interested to obtain the basis upon which the calculation of the Senator was made. I assumed the Senator would regard Mr. A. E. Chamberlain, formerly of the agricultural department of his State, good authority on that subject.

Mr. STERLING. I do not know him.

Mr. WALSH. He was long associated with the agricultural college at Brookings.

Mr. STERLING. I do not have the honor of his acquaintance.

Mr. WALSH. He represented your State at the head of a delegation that came here before Congress two years ago in connection with the reciprocity measure.

Mr. STERLING. Yes; he may have done so; I was not aware of that.

Mr. WALSH. And in that connection he told the Finance Committee that the difference in the cost of production of barley here and in Canada was 5 cents a bushel. So, apparently, the duty is now fixed at three times the difference between the cost of production here and in Canada. Would the Senator like to make it five times?

Mr. STERLING. I would make, or rather suggest, it as a reasonable difference between the duty as it stands under the law of 1909 and the proposed bill.

You have cut the duty on oats from 15 cents to 6 cents per bushel. Why not try it at 10, as provided by the House bill? And flaxseed at 20 cents a bushel, as allowed by the House bill, instead of making a cut from 25 to 15 cents?

I simply suggest these as changes which might serve to prevent the law from being utterly obnoxious to the great body of producers of these the chief agricultural products of the land, fair prices for which mean the reasonable success and prosperity of that great class upon which all others must depend.

But I suppose, Mr. President, it is wholly immaterial whether my State, with its 77,000 square miles, with its soil and climate well adapted to agricultural purposes, has any beet-sugar factories or not; whether its grazing and live-stock interests are to be protected or not; whether it shall continue as one of the three greatest wheat-growing States in the world or not.

It is only a State affair. I was struck with the reply made by the Senator from Maine, then in charge of the bill, the other day when pressed for an answer to the question whether the reduction proposed by the bill on olive oil would injure that important California industry. After much colloquy he said he did not know whether it would or not.

Only a State affair! Mr. President, I know we had to surrender up the doctrine of State rights many years ago, along with other relics of strict construction. It had to give way to the principle of "an indestructible Union of indestructible States"; but I still supposed we might have State interest and State pride in the development of the State's resources.

Why, if there is one factor more than another in this dual system of government which has helped to make this the glorious Union it is, it is the healthy spirit of emulation among the States and the pride the worthy and wide-awake citizen of a State feels in the yield of her cotton, corn, and grain fields, her factories, her mines, her herds, her wool, her educational institutions, her churches, the character of her manhood, and the virtue and loveliness of her womanhood. But it is only a State affair!

Mr. President, in the old days this may have been to some extent true. But those days are gone; there is no longer isolation nor is distance a barrier to intercourse or commerce.

In these days of rapid transit, quick communication, and ready diffusion of resources and products throughout the length and breadth of the land it is, on the instant, a national affair, and in the fruits of that legitimate enterprise which benefits or enriches a State the people of the Nation are participants.

For the best interests of the whole we want to subserve the interests and institutions of the several parts; and, in my judgment, any revenue or economic policy which ignores this principle is wrong.

We again stand on the plank of that pioneer platform of 1860, quoted at the beginning of these remarks. The soundness of the principles there enunciated has been demonstrated by long experience; the people believe in them, and as against the narrow, destructive, and un-American policies advocated by the party in power these principles will now be invoked with renewed enthusiasm and vigor. I venture the prediction that they will serve to both rally and reunite.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned last night we were considering paragraph 77. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] propounded an inquiry to which I suppose I should make some answer. The inquiry of the Senator, as it appears in the RECORD, is as follows:

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator in charge of this part of the bill why he deems it necessary to maintain a duty of 50 per cent on pumice stone wholly or partly manufactured, while he reduces the duty on the unmanufactured stone from 21 per cent to 5 per cent?

Mr. President, I do not wish to take much time in giving the answer which I purpose to give, and I do not think it necessary to take much time in doing so, but it might be well to say that pumice stone is imported from Mexico, Iceland, and Hungary, but chiefly from the Lipari Islands, off Sicily. The importations come from those countries where the great bulk of the article is produced, but especially from the islands named, on the coast of Sicily. There is some pumice produced in the United States—in Kansas, Nebraska, Utah, and Nevada.

The unmanufactured pumice stone was admitted free under the Wilson law. A high duty was placed upon it by the Payne-Aldrich law. When it was free, under the Wilson law, the statistics show that $59,894 in value was imported. Afterwards, when, under the Payne-Aldrich law, the present law, a high duty was imposed ranging from 18 to 21 per cent, according to the appraisement of the value of the imports upon which the duties were levied upon arrival at our ports, the importations were just about the same as under the Wilson law, when they were free.

Before the House Committee on Ways and Means there were hearings somewhat extended when this paragraph was under consideration during the present session or when the pending bill was being framed. A number of manufacturers appeared before that committee. They contended for free raw material and, of course, for a high duty on the manufactured product. As a rule, they insisted that the present duty should not be reduced. Here is a statement contained in one of the numerous briefs filed before the Ways and Means Committee by Charles B. Chrystal, of New York, who is, as I understand, a manufacturer concerned in the pumice industry. I read from it as follows:

From the fact that there is no pumice produced in the United States excepting a so-called pumice, used in cheap soaps, cleansers, etc., this duty is very excessive.

That is the duty on the unmanufactured product.

The American pumice, so called, can not be used for most purposes for which pumice is required, such as in the manufacture of silver-plated and solid silver ware, for rubbing down varnished surfaces, and for numerous purposes; in fact, the so-called American pumice is useless for any other purpose, as has been repeatedly demonstrated by practical tests.

Mr. President, the House committee refused to follow the insistence of the pumice manufacturers to put pumice on the free list, as it had been under the Wilson law, and instead put the rate on the raw material at 5 per cent ad valorem. The average ad valorem duty in the Payne-Aldrich law, as shown by the statistics I have, ranges from about 18 per cent to 21 per cent. The House reduced it to 5 per cent.

The Senator from Kansas asked why we maintained a duty of 50 per cent on manufactures of pumice. Words are presumably intended to convey ideas, and one might suppose from the form in which the Senator propounded his question about maintaining the duty that he sought to impress the Senate and the country with the idea that we had not changed the duty as it is prescribed in the present law; but such is not the fact. The House reduced the duty on pumice manufactures 33 per cent; that is, from three-eighths of a cent a pound to one-fourth of a cent a pound. Not a living man came before the Senate committee to make any complaint or to protest against the action of the House. The House, having taken this action—and, as it seems to me, a very proper action—the Senate committee simply accepted what had been done by the House.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, nevertheless the fact remains that the committee has reduced the duty on unmanufactured pumice from approximately 21 per cent to 5 per cent. That is a reduction of about 75 per cent; while it has reduced the duty on the manufactured article from an estimated ad valorem of 80 to 50 per cent. I think that there is a reason why the manufacturers would not complain. They get a reduction on the raw material of 75 per cent. The raw material of pumice, which is produced in this country, is produced by whoever happens to have land upon which this pumice dust or pumice stone is found. It is not controlled by any combination or corporation of any kind.

Mr. STONE. But, Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator again to the fact that, if the information we have is well founded, the lava production or pumice gathered in some spots in his State and in one or two other States is of a kind that really does not come into active competition with the pumice that is used in manufactures on a large scale.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator has been misled by the testimony of a single manufacturer, who uses the pumice in the polishing of silverware. If the Senator had consulted the packing houses at Kansas City, Chicago, Omaha, and South St. Joseph he would have learned that the pumice that is found in Nebraska, Kansas, California, Utah, Nevada, and a few other States is used in the making of scouring powder, such as "Gold Dust Twins" and kindred articles, and put upon the market in very large quantities. If these great packing houses can get a reduction of 75 per cent on their raw material, and still a duty of 50 per cent is maintained on the things which they sell, of course they will not complain. I can understand readily that the Committee on Finance would have no complaints from them.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator fram Kansas yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. BRISTOW. Very gladly.

Mr. SIMMONS. I merely want to suggest to the Senator that if he will examine the unit value of the imported pumice stone, which comes almost exclusively, I think, from Italy, and the unit value of the pumice stone produced in this country he will see that necessarily they are different articles. I call the Senator's attention to the first bracket in the handbook, which gives the unit value of the importations of pumice stone, and he will see that the unit value in 1910 was $10.26 and in 1912, $9.27 per ton. If he will examine the latter part of that bracket, which deals with the production in this country, he will see that the unit value of the character of pumice stone produced in this country, so-called pumice stone—it is an imitation, I think—in 1905 was only $3.64, in 1910, $2.21, and in 1912, $4.08. I think the two materials are used for different purposes. The pumice stone imported from Italy is a lava and is used almost entirely for the polishing of woods and metals. The pumice stone we produce here, I think, is used very largely in connection with construction work and also in connection with the manufacture of soap.

I am not sure of my premise, and I assume the Senator from Kansas has some information more specific than mine; but I simply call his attention to what appears to me to be a clear demonstration that there is a great difference in the quality of the imported article and that of the homemade article, and that they are not used for the same purpose; but even if they were used for the same purpose, the difference in the value of the two articles would make it almost impossible for them to be competing products.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senator from North Carolina is in the main, so far as my information goes, right as to the use of the various grades of this pumice dust or stone, but, while I infer that the increased duty which was imposed four years ago has resulted in the more valuable pumice stone being imported, it has also resulted in the development of the local supply, which has been used for various purposes, such as the making of soap, washing powders, and so forth.

Mr. SIMMONS. But——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will pardon me a moment, I am not complaining of the reduced duty from 21 per cent to 5 per cent on the raw material, although I think it is a very radical reduction, and if I had been revising the tariff I would not have made the radical reduction that was made, because I think it was too much; but still I am not complaining of that. What I am complaining of is that with this radical reduction there should be still maintained—and by "maintained" I will say that I mean fixed by the committee; I will use that term, if it pleases the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] better—at 50 per cent. I think this an unwarranted discrimination in favor of the manufacturer when he has such a radical reduction on his raw material. I do not think that the great packing houses or the manufacturing concerns which use this material to make various articles of commerce should have as high as 50 per cent as a protective duty when the men who take the rock from the quarries or gather the dust from the prairies have their protection reduced 75 per cent, or down to 5 per cent from 21 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator and myself look at the tariff question from different standpoints. I myself do not consider as the determining factor the cost of production of an article here and abroad. I understand, however, that the Senator from Kansas does, and that it is the theory of the Senator from Kansas that there ought to be maintained a duty equal to the difference in the cost of production here and abroad. I think I am correct about that. Now, the Senator is complaining of the duty which we have retained as being too high. I think if the Senator will consult the statements of the manufacturers before the Ways and Means Committee, if he wants to apply his theory to this case, he will find that according to his theory the duty is not too high. I call the Senator's attention to the testimony of Mr. Murphey, president of the James H. Rhodes Co., of Chicago, Ill., and of the city of New York. Here is what he says:

Reasons for duty of three-eighths of a cent on manufactured—

He is insisting, as the Senator will see if he will read his testimony, upon a higher duty. He insists that the proposed duty was not enough. He says:

Pumice stone manufactured in Italy is being sold in bags f. o. b. docks New York at $18.50 per ton of 2,000 pounds (that is, after the United States duty has been paid). Thus, the United States custom records demonstrate that the Italians can grind, pack, and deliver at the dock at New York ground pumice stone at $11 per ton.

The $18 included the duty, which is something in the neighborhood of $9.

In referring to the American cost of the production of powdered Italian pumice stone, he said:

American cost of production of powdered Italian pumice stone in 1908 was $23 per ton, but since that time is higher because of the grinding rock costing more in Italy, ocean freight rate being 75 cents per ton higher, with a further advance scheduled for 1913, and the duty being over $1 per ton more, so that our present cost of producing is over $25.51 per ton.

The Senator will find also from the brief of R. J. Waddell & Co., of New York City, that they claim it cost them to produce this material in this country out of Italian pumice stone $24.54, and they claim, therefore, that the present duty is not high enough. I think the facts altogether controvert their statement, because the statistics show that there are practically no importations, or very slight importations, of the manufactured pumice, and it can not be, if the foreigner could put this pumice down here f. o. b. New York for $18 duty paid and it cost the American producer $24 a ton to produce it, that the American producers could have sustained the competition. Under such conditions that would have happened which the Senator from Kansas and others have predicted. The foreigner would have taken possession of our market; but as the foreigner did not take possession of our market in this product it shows that the gentlemen who testified were mistaken. But they are authorities; they are the manufacturers; they are the people from whom our friends on the other side have generally obtained their information; and they came before the Committee on Ways and Means and claimed that, even with the present duty of three-eighths of a cent a pound, something in the neighborhood of $8 a ton, they were not able to compete with the foreigner. We have reduced this duty from 30 per cent to 50 per cent, making that competition more difficult, if their contention is correct; and yet the Senator, who maintains the cost-of-production theory, insists that we have placed it too high.

I desire to ask the Senator if he has looked into that matter and if he has discovered the fact that, according to the claims of those who are producing the article, the present rate is not sufficient to measure the difference in the cost of production, which he says is the formula which we ought to adopt in fixing rates?

Mr. BRISTOW. I will say to the Senator that I have made some inquiry into this matter, and so I asked the question as to what basis the committee followed in arriving at this conclusion. Now, do I understand the Senator to say that they have maintained a duty of 50 per cent on manufactures of pumice stone because the evidence before the committee showed that that duty was necessary to protect the American manufacturers from foreign competition?

Mr. SIMMONS. No; I said nothing of the sort. I was speaking about the Senator's contention. I will state to the Senator why we reduced it. We are trying to make a competitive tariff. We discovered that with the present rate there were practically no importations of this product into this country; and, carrying out our theory, we have reduced the duty in order that we may stimulate a competition or bring about competition where practically none exists now.

Mr. BRISTOW. Now, Mr. President, if the Senator will observe the Tariff Handbook he will find that there were imported in 1912 over 6,000,000 pounds. That is quite a substantial importation of this kind of an article, it seems to me.

Mr. SIMMONS. I admit there have been considerable importations of the crude materials; but I am talking about the manufactured product.

Mr. BRISTOW. Pumice stone wholly or partially manufactured, according to the notes, was imported to the amount of 6,289,480 pounds.

Mr. SIMMONS. Valued at how much? The total importations last year of pumice stone, wholly or partially manufactured, bearing this three-eighths of a cent a pound duty were valued at only $29,000.

Mr. BRISTOW. But if the Senator will observe, in the column just above that, the amount is 6,289,480 pounds.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; 6,289,480 pounds, worth half a cent a pound.

Mr. BRISTOW. It does not seem to have been such a valuable material after all, does it?

Mr. SIMMONS. Not a very high-priced material; no—$10 a ton.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BRISTOW. In just a moment, if the Senator from Utah will excuse me. I understand the Senator now contends that this reduction was made because he believed the protective duty of three-eighths of a cent a pound was too high and that it ought to be reduced?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. BRISTOW. Why did the Senator arrive at the conclusion that there should be a reduction of 75 per cent on the unmanufactured stone?

Mr. SIMMONS. Oh, Mr. President, of course you can not measure everything in golden scales. When you find a duty too high, when you find there is practically no competition and you want to bring about competition, you have to do the best you can to fix a duty which will bring it about. You may succeed or you may not succeed.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I think the answer to that question is found in what I stated some time ago. I will repeat it now, and this is all I have to say about it.

The product that is imported chiefly from Italy and from the other countries I named, particularly the Sicilian pumice stone, the raw material, is of a kind and quality which for the most part, if not the whole part, enters into manufactured articles that do not—except in a limited way, if at all—compete with the manufactured articles made out of the so-called pumice produced in Kansas, Nebraska, and Utah. Hence it seems to me that those who manufacture a different kind of pumice, for uses different from those of the articles made out of the domestic pumice, might have their raw material at a reasonably low tariff rate. Upon that theory, I assume, the House fixed this rate of 5 per cent as against the urgent call upon them by the manufacturers that the material be put upon the free list where it was under the Wilson law. Under the Wilson law as much foreign pumice was imported into this country as was imported in 1910 and 1912 under the high rates of the Payne-Aldrich law.

Mr. BRISTOW. At that time there was practically no production at all in the United States.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BRISTOW. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. I understood the Senator from North Carolina to say that when the committee found a rate that was exceedingly high, with no importations, their thought was to reduce it so that it would become a competitive rate. Did I correctly understand the Senator?

Mr. SIMMONS. That is the theory upon which the bill was constructed.

Mr. SMOOT. Was that the reason of the reduction in this particular item?

Mr. SIMMONS. The House made the reduction. I assume they were following out the principle of fixing a rate that would bring about reasonable competition. They may not have made it low enough for that purpose. I do not know about that. I can not tell. That is a matter in the future. Nobody can tell.

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator, then, agree with the statement made by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] that the pumice stone mined and produced in this country is not used in the manufactured articles of pumice stone?

Mr. SIMMONS. I think there must be a very great difference between the pumice stone manufactured in this country and the pumice stone manufactured from Italian lava. I think there must be, and I gave the Senator my reasons for it.

Mr. SMOOT. I listened to the reasons, and now I want to put those reasons alongside the statement I made that the rate was a competitive one.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator is altogether off. The competitive rate I am seeking to bring about is in regard to the Italian product—the imported product.

Mr. SMOOT. Why, Mr. President, that is just the point I am making. If the product of pumice in the United States can not be made into the manufactured article, then, of course, there is no competition in the manufactured article, and it would make no difference, in so far as a competitive rate was concerned, whether it was 5 per cent or 50 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. In making that argument the Senator leaves out of consideration altogether the fact that while this high-priced lava is produced only in Italy it is manufactured in this country to a very large extent, as well as in Italy. Large quantities of the crude material are brought in by the manufacturers of this country, and they manufacture it here. What we are seeking to do is to bring about competition between the Italian manufacturers of this pumice stone and the American manufacturers of the same character of pumice stone.

Mr. SMOOT. The argument of the Senator was that it had been reduced to 5 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. We were not talking about the 5 per cent proposition at all. We were talking about the 50 per cent proposition. We had left the question of the raw material. The duty on that is reduced to 5 per cent. What the Senator from Kansas and myself were talking about, as I understood, was the duty upon the manufactured product of pumice stone.

Mr. SMOOT. No; the Senator from Kansas is complaining that the bill provides for a reduction of 75 per cent on the raw material, or the pumice-stone importations, and that on the manufactured article of pumice stone it has been reduced from 80 per cent to 50 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from Kansas did complain of the reduction to 5 per cent, but I did not refer to that duty at all in my statement and in my inquiry of the Senator from Kansas. I was talking altogether and solely about the manufactured product, which in the present law bears a duty of 80 per cent, and in this bill a duty of 50 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. All I desired was to know the Senator's position in relation to competitive rates, because if this rate of 50 per cent is a competitive rate what does it compete with? It competes with manufactures that are made from imported pumice stone, and not from pumice stone produced in this country.

Mr. SIMMONS. It brings about a competition between the American manufacturer of Italian pumice stone and the foreign manufacturer of Italian pumice stone.

Mr. BRISTOW. I do not care to prolong this discussion; but I was anxious, if I could, to get an answer to my question as to the exact theory upon which these duties are based. So far as my information goes, the Senator is right as to the Italian pumice stone being used largely for polishing silverware, furniture, and so forth, and that particular kind of work is not the kind of work for which our pumice stone is used. Ours is largely used in the manufacture of soap and cleansing materials of different kinds, and the market for that which is produced in the region of the country with which I am somewhat familiar has been with the large packing houses. They complained bitterly four years ago that the duty was raised on the raw material, and now it seems that they are satisfied, or they certainly should be, because the duty has been reduced on their raw material practically 75 per cent, while the duty on the finished product is maintained as high as 50 per cent ad valorem.

I think that is another evidence of the discrimination in this bill against the original producer, and the maintenance of high duties, when maintained in behalf of the manufacturer, which frequently is in behalf of the great combinations in our industrial life. This little duty illustrates that theory in this tariff bill the same as other duties to which I have called the attention of the Senate.

With the limited attention I have been able to give this particular paragraph I could not fix the duty which I think the manufacturer should have from the standpoint of the cost of production. If the Senator will say that he is entitled to 50 per cent because of the cost of production, the wages paid, and so forth, and can demonstrate that he is entitled to that duty, and that the duty goes into the pockets of the men who receive higher wages here than they do in foreign countries, I shall cheerfully join him in maintaining such a duty. But unless that can be clearly and conclusively shown, I think a duty of 50 per cent on any manufactured product is too much. If that can be shown, I shall not object to it.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I ask that the paragraph be agreed to.

Mr. SIMMONS. There is no amendment.

Mr. JAMES. There is no amendment offered, as I understand.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was, in paragraph 78, page 19, line 23, after the words "fluorspar, $1.50 per ton," to strike out "limestone rock asphalt, 25 cents per ton; asphaltum and bitumen, 50 cents per ton," so as to make the paragraph read:

78. Clays or earths, unwrought or unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 50 cents per ton; wrought or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per ton; china clay or kaolin, $1.25 per ton; fuller's earth, unwrought and unmanufactured, 75 cents per ton; wrought or manufactured, $1.50 per ton; fluorspar, $1.50 per ton: Provided, That the weight of the casks or other containers shall be included in the dutiable weight.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator having this section of the bill in charge what is included in the striking out of asphaltum and bitumen here? That includes both the crude and the refined material, does it not, and those are placed on the free list in paragraph 537½?

Mr. STONE. They are placed on the free list.

Mr. BURTON. Both of them?

Mr. STONE. Yes.

Mr. BURTON. Does the Senator from Missouri feel sure that that general designation is sufficient to avoid any difference of opinion in regard to classification? Formerly they were separately classified, the crude bitumen having a duty of $1.50 and the refined bitumen a duty of $3.

Mr. STONE. I understand the same language that is employed here has been used all along.

Mr. BURTON. It has been concluded, has it, that this language is sufficient to include both the crude and the refined material?

Mr. STONE. That is our opinion. If the Senator thinks differently, we shall be glad to have his views in regard to it.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think the language in the present law is the same as this. It is as follows:

Limestone rock asphalt, 50 cents per ton; asphalt and bitumen, not specially provided for in this section, crude, if not dried or otherwise advanced in manufacture, $1.50 per ton.

I see the words are different. The additional words "if not dried" are used. The intention was to put it all on the free list, though.

Mr. BURTON. This does not have to do with limestone rock asphalt. My inquiry related to bitumen.

Mr. STONE. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio if it is his judgment that this language would not put them both on the free list?

Mr. BURTON. I am inclined to think it does include both.

Mr. KENYON. I desire to suggest that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] has an amendment he desires to offer to this section. He was obliged to leave the Chamber for just a moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the committee amendment will be agreed to, and the section will not be passed until the Senator from Kentucky returns.

Mr. JAMES. I did not understand the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. KENYON. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] had to leave the Chamber, and he has an amendment to offer to this paragraph.

Mr. JAMES. We have no objection to its being passed over.

Mr. STONE. Let it be passed temporarily.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the committee amendment is agreed to, and the Senator from Kentucky can offer his amendment later.

Mr. KENYON. May his amendment be taken up when he returns?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes; that may be done.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I do not know the nature of the amendment to be offered by the Senator from Kentucky; but if it relates to fluorspar, before his amendment is finally passed upon, I wish to be briefly heard upon it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has been passed over until the Senator from Kentucky comes in.

Mr. JAMES. I can state to the Senator from Illinois that the amendment the Senator from Kentucky intends to introduce does relate to fluorspar.

Mr. SHERMAN. I wish to be heard on it before the subject is disposed of.

Mr. KENYON. I have here the amendment, which I think I will introduce in behalf of the Senator from Kentucky, and then the Senator from Illinois can proceed.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator from Kentucky is now in the Chamber.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I shall only briefly detain the Senate. When the time comes to take a vote, I shall ask for the yeas and nays. I do not know that it will do any good for me to call attention to this matter, as our friends on the other side seem to be disposed to maintain the bill as it now stands, no matter what suggestions may be made. I am a little reminded by their position of an old lawyer in Kentucky who was trying a will case. He excepted to about 50 rulings of the court against him; and finally the court ruled once for him, and he excepted to that. The court said to him: "Why, Mr. Jones, I decided in your favor. Why do you except to the ruling of the court?" He replied: "If your honor please, simply to appear consistent on the record." [Laughter.]

It seems to me that our friends on the other side are blindly disposed to keep what they may call their consistency apparent on the record. But I desire to suggest that there are some facts surrounding this industry that do not obtain, as I understand, in regard to any other which is affected by this bill.

In the first place, fluorspar is produced in Arizona, Colorado, Tennessee, southern Illinois, western Kentucky, and some other States. The United States Geological Survey and the surveys of Illinois and Kentucky show that the quantity in the two last-named States is sufficient to supply the demands of commerce for several decades to come.

The value and use of fluorspar is comparatively of recent discovery. The American people ascertained from repeated experiments that it was exceedingly valuable for a number of purposes. In the first place, while it was known and has been known for years to be valuable as a flux in the making of iron, it was discovered comparatively recently that it was peculiarly valuable in the making of open-hearth practice steel. It was found also that it was exceedingly valuable in the manufacture of glass; that it was valuable as a flux in the manufacture of other metals than iron and steel; that it was valuable for the making of fluoric acid; and that it was valuable for the purpose of making enamel for bathtubs and other articles.

Our people, after having ascertained these facts, commenced the development of this industry; and in 1902 in Illinois and Kentucky alone there were 47,170 tons of fluorspar mined, and at that time there were 150 establishments in those two States alone engaged in the manufacture.

What happened? Some enterprising Englishmen who had found out the value of this material went into the counties of Derby and Durham in England, where lead had been mined for centuries until the lead was exhausted. They found there huge piles of mineral containing fluorspar. They took a lease on those dump piles for a comparatively nominal royalty and commenced shipping the product to this country as ballast at the cheap ocean freight rate of $1 per ton. When they reached our coast they shipped it to Pittsburgh, where they sold it for $4.85 and $5 a ton. The result was that the people engaged in this business at home, who were compelled to pay $5, or approximately so, simply to mine this article, were overwhelmed. In addition to that, they had to pay $2.50 freight to Pittsburgh, so that when it reached Pittsburgh the material had actually cost $7.50, and there they were confronted with the dump piles of England selling at $4.85 and $5 per ton. The result was that the production of fluorspar here shrank in 1907 to 28,655 tons, and the 150 companies were all dissolved except, I believe, 12.

I want to call attention now to the fact that under the Dingley bill there was no protection on fluorspar; but there was contained in that bill a section providing that "minerals in a crude state not otherwise referred to" were to be admitted free of duty.

Under that provision the English fluorspar came into this country free. We were confronted with this condition of affairs. The industry here was doomed. In 1909 the Aldrich bill was passed, placing a duty of $3 a ton upon fluorspar, which gave the American manufacturer the advantage only of 50 cents a ton over the foreigner. Under that bill the production increased. In 1909 it amounted to 50,742 tons; in 1910, to 69,417 tons; in 1911, to 87,048 tons; in 1912, to 116,545 tons—of the value of $769,163.

Meanwhile, notwithstanding this tariff, there were imported into this country in 1911, 22,588 tons, showing that the tariff of $3 per ton is not at all prohibitory—because nearly one-sixth of the article consumed was imported—but is absolutely necessary to the maintenance of this industry. We might call this an infant industry. Our people have engaged in it, and they have expended their money in order to develop it, until it has become fairly remunerative, and there are nearly 2,000 laboring men engaged in the mines in Illinois and Kentucky.

Now the question arises, Why should we have this change? So far as the production at home and abroad is concerned that does not enter into this discussion. There is no cost of production abroad. The article is already produced, and the only cost is to shovel it up and ship it to this country and dump it upon our people. Therefore I say the cost of production has nothing to do with it.

The second question is, What effect does this tariff duty have? Does it increase the price to the consumer? Why, Mr. President, the tariff on fluorspar is a mill and a half per pound. It requires from 5 to 10 pounds of fluorspar to flux a ton of steel. In other words, it costs 7½ to 15 cents a ton—so infinitesimally small that it can have no effect whatever on the cost to the consumer. Besides, if any benefit is to be received from this change it will be received by the steel manufacturer, who is not asking it. No manufacturer of steel has asked that the tariff on this product should be reduced. Therefore I say that the only result of this legislation will be to punish the people who have invested their money in this enterprise, absolutely destroy their business, and throw 2,000 miners with remunerative wages out of employment.

Is this done to compete with a foreign country that mines fluorspar? No. If it were mined in England it might be said there would be something proper in adjusting the tariff so as to allow the difference in cost of production in this country and that. But it is not mined there. It is simply brought here, as I said, and dumped down. The only result of the reduction of duty would be the absolute destruction of the interest of our people and the absolute destruction of this industry.

Now, I can not believe that this Congress desires to do anything of that sort. But it will be said some revenue may be derived. How much revenue, with a duty of $1.50? You say you can get at any rate as much as you get now, because the quantity will be doubled that is shipped in. We will get about $60,000 revenue for the coffers of the National Government. We will be obtaining this paltry sum of revenue which at last is produced by the sale of the dump piles of the Old World as against our manufacturers, and to do this we will cut the tariff to $1.50. After our industry is destroyed the foreigner will increase the cost to the amount which is now paid.

I appeal to my friends on the other side of this Chamber. This is an injustice, and it is an injustice in behalf of the foreigner who has not a legitimate industry. It is an injustice, because it puts money into the hands of men who simply are taking advantage of an old situation while it destroys us.

I appeal to my friends on the other side to give us this duty of $3 a ton. I do not know whether that appeal will amount to anything or not. But I appeal to you not to destroy this new industry that has been developed by American genius and American workmen who have found the uses of this article and who have made it what it is.

It is now upon a semisecure basis. These people are not getting rich, but they are able to make the business profitable. I do hope that the Senate will not see fit to vote down the amendment which I have offered.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I simply want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that in 1912 the price of fluorspar imported into this country without the duty was $2.78 a ton. In 1912, the same year——

Mr. BRADLEY. Where does the Senator find that?

Mr. SIMMONS. I find that in the statistical report of the United States Government.

Mr. BRADLEY. I find it just the other way.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senator will read the Democratic handbook here, he will see that those are the figures given by the department, and the figures as to import unit of value are taken from the official figures.

Mr. BRADLEY. Fluorspar sold in this country in 1912 was valued at about $7 a ton; to be exact, at $6.59.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is exactly the point I was going to call the Senator's attention to. That is exactly true. The unit of the price of fluorspar produced in this country last year was $7.02. That was the average price for the American product.

The imported product, less duty, was $2.78, making a difference between the price at which the article could be bought abroad and brought here, leaving the duty out, of nearly $5. What I wish to ask the Senator is this: Does he not think where we can buy an article for $2.78 that $7 is too much to require the people of this country to pay for that article, and does he not think that there ought to be something done in order to reduce the domestic price?

Mr. BRADLEY. Do I understand the Senator to say that this article can be bought in this country at $2.78?

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senator will just refer to the handbook, he will see——

Mr. BRADLEY. I understand that, but will the Senator please——

Mr. SIMMONS. I am speaking of the handbook, giving the values.

Mr. BRADLEY. Does the Senator say it can be bought here for $2.78?

Mr. SIMMONS. Let me read from page 91, giving the imports, the value of imports, the unit of value, and the duties. The Senator will see that the imports of that year were 22,664 tons, and the value was $62,994, the average unit value $2.78.

Mr. BURTON. Will the Senator from Kentucky allow me?

Mr. BRADLEY. Certainly.

Mr. SIMMONS. Of course I can not speak for the accuracy of those figures; but I have now the Government's figures and they are just the same.

Mr. BURTON. I should like to ask the Senator from North Carolina a question, which in this case is of rather vital importance. Are those figures the foreign price, minus freight?

Mr. SIMMONS. They are the invoice price of the goods.

Mr. BURTON. That would be minus freight.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; the invoice price of the goods minus freight.

Mr. BURTON. That fact assumes a great deal of importance here—I think it has not been specially worthy of notice in most of the items taken up—because the freight from the place of origin is a very considerable item.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator know what it is?

Mr. BURTON. It would be at least a dollar a ton—probably more. Possibly it is brought as ballast from the shipping point.

Mr. SIMMONS. Assume that, and still you have a difference between the foreign price and the domestic price of about $7. That seems to me to be too much for the American people to pay. It is evident they are taking all the benefit of this duty and adding a little something to it, and that seems to me to be rather too much to expect the American people to pay.

Mr. BRADLEY. If the freight of $1 is added to the invoice price of $2.78, then the cost here was at least $3.78, and the Senator was mistaken when he said it could be bought for only $2.78 per ton.

Mr. President, in the first place, you not only add the freight, but you must add the cost of moving the fluorspar from the seacoast to the market at Pittsburgh. So that at last it will be found that the figures of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] are not illuminating. But suppose we admit that you can get it here for $2.78 a ton, then that is 22 cents less than the tariff of $3 a ton. If you can get it here for that amount of money, the tariff does not affect it, and the only result of the tariff has been to cheapen the article so that the consumer does not pay the tax.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will say to the Senator that the tariff under the present law is $3 a ton.

Mr. BRADLEY. Certainly.

Mr. SIMMONS. And you add that to this duty here. That would make about——

Mr. BRADLEY. That is all right, but what I am saying is that the tariff being $3 a ton, the article can be bought for only $2.78.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have not said the article sold in this country for $2.78. If there were no tariff on it then the article would sell in this country for $2.78 plus the freight, whatever that may be, and plus the profit.

Mr. BRADLEY. The Senator is again mistaken. If the invoice price is $2.78, the ocean freight $1, and the freight to Pittsburgh, say, $1.50, the net price here would be $5.28 per ton, when it costs in this country to dig the ore out of the ground $5 a ton, exclusive of any sort of transportation.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is exactly what I am saying. The unit value of this article imported is $2.78 a ton. The freight is probably another dollar. That is $3.78. The producers of this product in your State have added that tariff of $3; and they have added the freight, $1; and they charge $7 for it, which makes the foreign import price plus the duty plus the freight. They have taken advantage of it at the cost of the American people.

Mr. BRADLEY. Do I understand the argument of the Senator to be that, with $1 freight added, the foreign article is worth $3.78?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. BRADLEY. And notwithstanding that fact, it can be sold for $3.78 when the producer in Illinois and the producer in Kentucky are selling it for $7?

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator is mistaken. It can not be sold under the present law for $3.78 because it would have to pay a duty of $3 before it would get in, which would make the price $6.78. The domestic producer, therefore, takes advantage of the $3 tariff and of the whole of the $1 freight, if the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] is correct about the amount, and charges them to the American people upon every ton they buy in this country.

Mr. BRADLEY. Suppose that be true; that it is $6.78 a ton net after the tariff is paid, and yet the figures here show that the home product sells for only $6.50, and it costs $5 to mine it. The other is already mined and is brought here and dumped down on our people, and who have the advantage of only 19 cents a ton.

Whenever you repeal one dollar and a half of this tariff and allow this foreign article to come in here, the net price would be $5.28, and you would close every fluorspar mine in the United States, and that is the end of it. There is one thing certain, no one will ever come to this country to buy fluorspar piles, because there will be none here to buy, for we will never be able to take it out of the ground if this policy is to be carried out.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I can not add very much to the concise statement made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY], but there is an entire community of interests between us, and as a celebrated Democratic authority stated at one time the tariff was a local question. I add some further comment. The view taken in that way stated it in a somewhat narrow but a very practical manner. The country is a combination of local and occasionally selfish interests, and that is what commerce is sometimes. But we are trying to maintain all those local interests for the purpose of promoting the general welfare of the whole.

I am not oversanguine of making any impression on my Democratic brethren, Mr. President, but "hope springs eternal in the human breast," and I return to the onslaught repeatedly. I do not know whether it is that alone or whether, as trial lawyers say, we are perfecting our record in order to go up on it some time. At least, if economically our brethren are right, then we have been everlastingly, eternally, and economically wrong, and the question had just as well be appealed and heard by some court of competent authority in order to find out if possible whether it can ever be settled. I am not oversanguine as to having any permanent settlement made in this Chamber by the passage or defeat of this bill.

With this one item, however, and that seemingly insignificant, Mr. President, there is tied up the employment or idleness of some hundreds of men in a State which temporarily I have the honor to represent. It is a part of this country that did not develop very rapidly in the early times. A considerable mineral value has been discovered in that part of the country. Some of the largest soft-coal mines in the world are found in that end of the State. In portions of southern Illinois there is a very large tonnage of soft coal mined. The veins run from 12 to 14 feet. With that development men began to examine other resources of that country. As far back as 1842, long before anyone dreamed of its having a commercial value, fluorspar was taken out and carried away as a curiosity because of its attractive coloring.

It is always found blended with a greater or less percentage of lead and sometimes other related products. Occasionally there is zinc, but generally the galena blend is the strongest of any other known mineral. In the early times of this mining question there was an opinion that it was an indication of lead. In the northwestern part of Illinois and in the southwestern part of Wisconsin the development of lead has been very profitable to those working that mineral. When it was found down in the fluorspar country it was supposed that lead deposits in profitable quantities could be developed. In the first instance, back in 1842, it was prospected solely for lead. It was not until along in 1862, some 20 years after, that it was discovered that fluorspar had a commercial value. Later it was worked in small quantities.

Something has been said here of prices. In this Democratic handbook I have made such investigation as I have been able, coupled with other information I have on the subject. The unit value here of the importation fixes $2.78 as the correct figure. The unit value is the invoice value abroad, free on board the vehicle of commerce. That invoice value is either on a car ready for transportation to the seaboard in Derbyshire or in points in England where it is found. It is quoted on board the vessel. I can not be entirely accurate as to saying which it is, but it is free on board at either the sea point or at the point where it is delivered to the car in the interior of the island, as stated.

The lead mines of England have been worked for centuries. They are like the stannary districts where the tin mines were in existence at the time Caesar crossed the channel and invaded England. Almost from that time the lead mines of England have been worked. The bullets that were molded in the ancient wars of England were taken from the very mines out of which those tailings come to-day to sell at Pittsburgh in competition with this product from the Ohio River.

The fluorspar has lately acquired industrial significance. In former years its use was largely confined to enameling, watch dials, for chemical purposes in refining antimony and lead, and making hydrofluoric acid; in later years to the production of aluminum, and it is also used in the manufacture of sanitary wares, as a bond in manufacturing emery wheels in making opalescent glass, and in making electrodes for flaming arc lights, increasing the illuminating power and decreasing the current. More recently it is used extensively in open-hearth steel furnaces. It is estimated that about 80 per cent of the American production is consumed in such furnaces in the United States. With the increasing use of steel the demand for fluorspar is constantly enlarging. Fluorspar is used as a flux in steel manufacture. Competent authority from the laboratory and furnace says it reduces the sulphur and phosphorus and increases the tensile strength of the steel. It saves more iron than any other flux.

There is a wider field of distribution, I apprehend, than the authors of this paragraph had anticipated in this article. It is distributed in the United States in the Appalachian areas from Maine to Virginia. In the Mississippi Valley the important producing districts are in Kentucky and Illinois, which lead all other portions of the Union. At Jamestown, Colo., in Arizona, and New Mexico, near Deming, of the West and Southwest produce considerable quantities. Tennessee produces some. Western Kentucky is second only in production. The deposits lie along the Ohio River. In Illinois Hardin and Pope Counties lead in the production.

A remarkable development of this product has been made in very recent years. In 1883 the first available statistics on fluorspar show there were 4,000 short tons, valued at $20,000, produced in the United States. In 1911 there were 87,048 short tons, valued at $611,447. In 1911 Kentucky reported a total sales of 12,403 short tons, valued at $96,574. From Illinois the same year there were 68,817 tons, valued at $481,635. This includes gravel spar, lump spar, and ground spar in both districts. Colorado, New Mexico, and New Hampshire produced 5,828 tons, at an aggregate value of $33,238. In foreign countries it was distributed for 1910—the last available statistics—as follows:

	Tons.
Austria (metric tons)	8,000
France	8,264
Germany (exports; this country no longer reports production)	17,988
Spain	180
United Kingdom	62,607

This is a total production abroad of 97,039 tons. The Senate handbook estimate is 40,000 tons of imports for 1913 and 1914, as against 22,664 tons imported in 1912 and 16,561 tons in 1910. This estimate shows our friends expect fluorspar imports to be doubled on a 50 per cent reduction. The largest production area in western Kentucky and southeastern Illinois furnishes under present conditions a large part of the domestic supply. England is our chief competitor. It is there derived, as stated, from waste dumps and tailings in the lead districts. Since 1903 there has been a steadily increasing production from this source. Nearly 62 per cent of the entire British output was exported to the United States in 1910. Only small quantities were exported from England to continental Europe and Canada, estimated at from 17 to 25 per cent of the total production. Opinions on the quantity available in England differ. Some authorities there say that more than 90 per cent of the gravel spar is obtained from lead-mine dumps. Competent authority in that country says the supply is practically inexhaustible. Other authorities contradict this. It is produced there at a very low labor cost, and as it comes from waste dumps, its total production cost is low. It is carried as ballast in freight boats and is a highly competitive product with our domestic article. It competes as far west as Pittsburgh and extends southward in its entry to Birmingham, Ala. The latter is comparatively small, being confined to 39 tons for the port of New Orleans. The imports of this article are the largest at Philadelphia, being 21,129 tons; at Boston, 901 tons; New York, 391 tons; Baltimore, 78 tons; San Francisco, 50 tons, for 1912. The importations have fallen off since 1910. The total for the year ending June 30, 1912, being 22,588 tons.

The low ocean freights and low production cost in England make it a profitable article of export. Before 1909 fluorspar was free listed. Under the present law it is dutiable at $3 per ton.

The importations of this article have decreased since 1910, reaching 42,000 short tons in that year and falling to 32,764 tons in 1911. For 1912 there were 22,588 tons, and for the first nine months of the fiscal year 1912–13, 17,387 tons. It is significant that the importation of this article has decreased since the act of 1909 placing a $3 per ton duty on it. It is important to note that the average valuation of the imports per ton in 1909 was $3.78; in 1910, $3.18; in 1911, $2.46.

If, with this duty to equalize the production cost, the foreign product is still able to be competitive, the domestic product will meet destructive competition when it suffers the 50 per cent reduction made in this bill. An authority on this subject writing in 1905, prior to the imposition of the $3 a ton duty, says:

> Importers have now a slight advantage in the Pittsburgh market on this grade of ore. The American producers' only competitors are the importers, and competition with them is mainly a matter of transportation costs.
>
> The fluorspar imported from England is derived from waste dumps and is obtained at very little expense. A few years ago this did not exceed a cost of $2.31 per ton at Liverpool. As the material was generally carried as ballast, the freight rate to American ports was very low, and even with the addition of railroad freight and the tariff was able to compete with the American product at eastern points. Many fluorspar mines in South Durham and Derbyshire were idle and the production was only about half that of 1910. Few orders from the United States were given. The fluorspar mining in the United States must be carried on very efficiently under these circumstances in order to pay.

Considerable labor is required to put the spar in merchantable form. Birmingham, with its increasing industry, is using considerable of this product. The last reports available show that steel centers are taking a steadily increasing quantity. Many of the smaller companies, even with this increasing market, were idle in the Illinois-Kentucky district last year. The development of the mines and transportation facilities can be had only if the American market is kept intact. Fluorspar runs in veins. It is not merely a general rock deposit. It is mined as many metals are. Shafts must be sunk, tunnels driven, and the veins worked. They run in thickness from a few inches to 22 feet. The operation, sorting, and screening of the spar requires expensive machinery especially designed for that purpose for its economical production. The Kentucky area has declined until lately as compared with other points in this country.

This is attributed by those familiar with conditions to failure to appreciate the highly profitable, useful character of the spar, and that lead and zinc are usually by-products only; lack of competent engineering devices, lack of sufficient capital, and failure to provide adequate time for proper development; want of skilled miners and steady employment. With these latter conditions are combined the lack of good wagon roads at some producing points and other transportation facilities. The competitive import has helped hinder development until 1909 and 1910. Prior to 1909 its import value was $1.32 higher per ton than it was in 1911 after it was made dutiable. The imported article can be purchased advantageously, even under present conditions at any Atlantic port of entry. In the free-trade period of fluorspar the average cost to the consumer, including the $3 per ton duty, exclusive of freight, was $6.18 as compared with $5.43 for the domestic article.

It is evident that the future of this product in the United States depends upon the retention of the domestic market. The industry is not fully developed. It will be only under present conditions. If foreign fluorspar crowds the market in the eastern steel-producing centers, the Kentucky-Illinois developments will ultimately cease. British freight boats carrying the extracted fluorspar from the tailings and mine dumps of England will take the market of the eastern United States. The method of through freights from foreign shipping points to Pittsburgh and other interior steel centers facilitates the loss of American markets in this article. The railway freight from the Atlantic ports to Pittsburgh or other steel manufacturing points, figured in the through foreign rate, is so low as to be dangerous to the domestic article. When the freight rates in the United States from the fluorspar mines to the markets it must seek are put alongside of the combined ocean and railway rates to the United States, a material advantage to the foreign exporter is apparent in addition to the 50 per cent reduction in this bill. Whatever form it may assume, whether it be the commoner forms of earthenware made in Liverpool, Ohio, or made in northwestern Illinois, or other manufactured merchandise put on the market, are in the last analysis from 60 to 90 per cent labor cost, even if you take all the overhead charges of putting it on the market, cost of maintenance, and allow a liberal estimate for dividends on the amount of capital invested in the enterprise.

Fluorspar is in the same condition. It is a natural product. It is not earth that is shoveled up as is gypsum on the coasts of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but it runs in veins. It has a side wall and an underlying or foot wall. In the Rosiclare mine there is a shaft more than 300 feet deep with tunneling leading out from it following the veins through the various dips and directions they take. It requires skill for miners to work this article. It requires a special form of plant. The Rosiclare mine is the most complete of these enterprises in this country. It has a specially devised plant and machinery.

The men who do the work connected with this machinery are well paid. They are paid on an American standard of wages, as has already been stated. By the time it reaches the open-hearth furnaces in the city of Pittsburgh, at the price quoted of $7.02 a ton as a commercial article, it is fair to say that more than eighty cents out of every dollar on that ton is American labor down on the Ohio River that produces it. It is not profitable unless we have the market.

It means, as the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] has said, the death knell of this industry in Kentucky and Illinois. It is perfectly evident from the authorities I have consulted—and I have read both sides of the question—that the future of this production in the United States depends upon the retention of the domestic market for the present producers of this article.

The industry has not been fully developed in this country. There is some in Tennessee awaiting development and a small outcropping in Arizona that nobody has developed so as to see whether it is sufficient to be profitable or not. There is a great deal of it undoubtedly yet in the State of Colorado; but a single plant at Pueblo, the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co., is now taking all that can be produced there and near Deming, N. Mex.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do.

Mr. BURTON. Can the Senator give what that freight rate is?

Mr. SHERMAN. I can not give it.

Mr. BURTON. I was rather curious to know just what is the rate.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have not that freight rate. I wrote for it, and even telegraphed for it, but I have not been able to obtain it. If, however, the ocean freight on similar products is taken, I can generalize now without giving you the figures. It is a condition similar to that stated by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] a few days ago when the discussion of another product raised the same question.

If the ocean freight be deducted from the joint ocean and rail rate from Liverpool to Pittsburgh, the rail rate from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh is lower than a domestic shipment between the latter points.

So there is competition in the matter of freight rates which we have to meet in addition to this destructive cut made in this bill of 50 per cent. These considerations taken together simply spell out the destruction of this industry.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, I am somewhat familiar with the fluorspar situation. Practically all the spar produced in Kentucky is mined in the county in which I live. I think my colleague, the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY], was mistaken when he said that it cost $5 a ton to mine it. I think the fact is that it costs about $2.50 a ton to mine it. The spar mines——

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the junior Senator from Kentucky yield to his colleague?

Mr. JAMES. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY. I obtained my information from gentlemen engaged in the business in the Senator's county. I think Mr. Nunn was one of them.

Mr. JAMES. I think the Senator has confused the statement of Mr. Nunn as to the cost of production with his statement as to the cost of putting the product upon the railroad, because the mines are some 9 or 10 miles in the country, and it costs from $1.25 to $1.50 a ton to bring the supply from the country to the railroad track. The miners in my county are paid from $1.75 to $2 a day. The total number of people engaged in this work in the whole country is about 700. The best friends I have in the world are the men who own those spar mines, and if I were disposed to act like one of those gentlemen who want to place the products of everyone else on the free list and to have a tax placed on his own, I would be opposed to the reduction of this rate from $3 to $1.50 per ton.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. JAMES. I yield.

Mr. BRISTOW. Will the Senator please advise us why a duty of 50 per cent is desirable on fluorspar, when 5 per cent on pumice stone and 10 per cent on gypsum are regarded as sufficient?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas can not deflect my argument to wool grease or dextrine or some of those small things about which he has been arguing heretofore.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator will pardon me, I was not trying to deflect it upon wool grease or dextrine, but upon gypsum and pumice stone.

Mr. JAMES. I will tell the Senator why this rate is placed at 50 per cent. It is placed at that rate solely to produce revenue. The Senator has heard the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] say that it was not a protective duty. I am not in favor of a duty in this bill upon a product of my home county or anywhere else for the purpose of protection. I believe the taxing power can only be properly used for the purpose of obtaining revenue sufficient to run the Government.

Mr. BRISTOW. Would not a duty above 5 per cent produce more revenue on pumice stone than a duty of 5 per cent?

Mr. JAMES. Oh, Mr. President, the pumice-stone matter was argued out. The Senator took up about three hours on that proposition yesterday, and I thought he was properly enlightened, but if he will permit me, I merely want briefly to discuss the question that is now before the Senate. The duty on pumice stone has already been settled.

Originally the rate placed on this commodity by the House of Representatives in the Payne bill in 1909 was a dollar and a half a ton. That is all the producers thought they wanted then, and that is all which was thought necessary for the purpose of making competition between the home producer and the importer. That rate came to the Senate and was increased to $3 per ton. The House of Representatives, framing a Democratic tariff bill for the purpose of obtaining revenue without the purpose or intent or desire of protecting anybody, thought that a tariff rate of one dollar and a half on this article would produce revenue and at the same time afford fair competition between the importer and the American producer.

It is true, as the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] has said, that a great deal of this spar in England is in old heaps, where in former days, as they were engaged in other mining and did not know of its value or its use, it was thrown out, and it is gathered up there now, perhaps, at a price of a dollar a ton, is screened, and then brought over here. The truth is that the spar-mine operators in Kentucky, in my home county, and in the counties of Illinois started this industry not under a protective tariff; they had no tariff at all, but had to meet the competition of the world, and they did meet it.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the junior Senator from Kentucky yield to his colleague?

Mr. BRADLEY. I should like to ask my colleague a question.

Mr. JAMES. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY. Was there any competition with the world at the time our people commenced this industry?

Mr. JAMES. Oh, well, as to the discovery of the use of fluorspar——

Mr. BRADLEY. Has not that competition grown up since we started the development of this enterprise and since we discovered the many new uses and value of fluorspar?

Mr. JAMES. Of course, none of it was imported here until its use was discovered; which has been within the last few years.

Mr. BRADLEY. Then, I will ask the Senator if it was ever valuable until its use was discovered?

Mr. JAMES. Certainly not. Of course, it could not have been valuable until its use was discovered; but I can say that in Kentucky, when fluorspar was first discovered, they used to go and take it right off the top of the earth; and there are many places there now where it can be found. Hundreds and hundreds of wagons loaded with fluorspar have been brought into the town in which I live, for which they did not have to go into the earth to mine it, but now they do have to mine far into the earth to obtain it.

As I was proceeding to say, the original rate upon fluorspar was $3 per ton, which was an ad valorem of 107.94 per cent. This rate is reduced to 50 per cent ad valorem, and therefore makes the rate $1.50 per ton. The peculiar conditions in England were the reasons urged for the tariff rate. Now, the House of Representatives have reduced this rate to $1.50 a ton, and the Democratic members of the Finance Committee of the Senate concur in their finding. We reckon that it will produce revenue to the extent of $60,000 annually.

It is almost a question of freight rates. In the part of the country in which I live, western Kentucky, the railroads have discriminated against the spar shippers. They give a fairer and a better rate to the spar shippers right across the Ohio River at Roseclare. They did that to such an extent that the owners of the spar mines in my own county appealed to me to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission in their behalf.

The spar business in western Kentucky, in my judgment, will go on under this bill. One dollar and a half will make a fairly competitive rate for them and will produce revenue for the Government.

My colleague, Senator BRADLEY, proceeded in his usual good-natured and eloquent way to implore us to restore the rate of 107.94 per cent. His eloquence was most touching, and I thought that it was having considerable effect upon this side, until the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] rose and started to speak, and the longer the Senator from Illinois spoke the more thoroughly he became convinced of the hopelessness of the case, and at last he defied us and told us that he hoped for no relief at all.

In this bill as reported by the Finance Committee we leave a 50 per cent duty, while reducing the rate fifty-seven and some odd per cent. The spar mines in my county can live under it, and if they can not they are not entitled to survive.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I understand my distinguished colleague to say that the cost of mining fluorspar in his county and putting it on the train is about $5 a ton. I will not take the time to discuss the difference between that statement and the statement which I made, that the labor cost is about $5 in getting it ready for the market.

The Senator says that with a duty of $1.50 a ton the spar mines in his county can live. Let us see how they can live. It costs $5 a ton to put this spar on the train; the freight rate to Pittsburgh is $2.50, so that, when it reaches Pittsburgh, it has cost $7.50. According to the statement of the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, the fluorspar in the Old World is valued at $2.78 per ton in the invoice. It costs a dollar a ton to bring it to this country. That makes $3.78. Let us say that it costs—put it as high as you please—a dollar a ton to take it from the coast to Pittsburgh. That will make a total of $4.78; and when the fluorspar from the county of my distinguished colleague reaches the Pittsburgh market, costing $7.50, it is confronted with spar delivered there at $4.78, with proposed rate of $1.50, making $6.28. I should like to know how the fluorspar industry in his county can live under these circumstances? Mr. Nunn says it can not.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, my colleague entirely misunderstood what I said. The Senator himself stated that it cost $5 a ton to mine fluorspar in Kentucky. I said that in my judgment, that was an error; that it did not cost exceeding $2.50. He then replied that some gentleman in my home town had given him that information, and I said that, perhaps, he had confused the cost of mining with the cost of hauling it from the mine, 7 or 8 or 9 miles in the country, to the railroad station. Now, I will read from the brief filed by Mr. Nunn, who appeared for these people. He states:

> In other sections of Illinois and Kentucky the hauls are made by wagon from the mines to the nearest railway station at a cost varying from $1.25 to $2 per ton.

I notice that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] did not give the cost of mining spar. They speak of the competition which at a certain rate of duty will destroy them, but, singularly enough, they do not tell us how much it costs to mine it. Two dollars and a half a ton, in my judgment, is all that it costs to mine fluorspar, and $1.25 or $2 a ton to bring it to the market. Mr. Nunn himself further states in this brief, that under the tariff rate of $3, if they could receive, approximately, $6 per ton at the Pittsburgh field, they would be satisfied.

Say that the import price is $3 a ton and that $1.50 is the tariff rate. That makes $4.50. The freight rate is at least $1.50 from England to Pittsburgh, Pa. That makes $6. The statement that I made is this—and I notice it has not been refuted—that these fluorspar mines in my own State never did close up. The Senator from Illinois is mistaken. The fluorspar mines owned by Blue & Nunn, practically all of them in Kentucky, were operated all the time, and were operating when they came here to appeal to Congress to give them this rate of tariff. They only asked for $1.50 a ton, but the Senate was overgenerous with them and made the rate $3 per ton. Now, the House merely put that rate back to $1.50, not for the purpose of protection, but for the purpose of revenue, and that alone.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the junior Senator from Kentucky yield to his colleague?

Mr. JAMES. I do.

Mr. BRADLEY. I desire to correct my colleague in his statement as to nobody asking for $3 a ton duty, but only a dollar and a half.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator misunderstood me. I stated that in the House they asked for a duty of a dollar and a half a ton.

Mr. BRADLEY. Oh!

Mr. JAMES. At the time the Payne bill was framed and passed the House they got exactly what they wanted.

Mr. BRADLEY. I wish to say in that connection that I received quite a number of communications and talked to quite a number of people who were interested in the bill of 1909 who insisted that the amount fixed by the House was too small, and that they should have $3 a ton, and that $3 a ton was given to them by reason of an effort that I made in the Senate.

Mr. JAMES. That is true. I admit the statement of the Senator that it was through his influence that this rate was written into the law. I know that they appealed to the Senator and they petitioned him, and that they petitioned and appealed to me. If there is one class above another in all Kentucky for whom I have a genuine affection it is these men who own the spar mines. I grew up with them; I was a schoolboy with them. But I say this rate is a just rate, and their mines will not have to go out of business.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I dislike to differ from my friends the Senators from Kentucky and the Senator from Illinois. If this bill were framed upon a different principle I might not take the view which I now take, which is that if the proposed legislation is to be consistent, if the pending bill is to be fair and equal to all commodities and all localities, there should be no duty on fluorspar.

It will be noticed that the proposition of the bill is for a duty of $1.50 a ton, which is 54 per cent on the invoice price. As regards the quantity used, it is for the most part utilized in the manufacture of open-hearth steel.

Let us notice now some other duties on articles of similar use. Iron ore is on the free list, although there has existed a duty for scores of years. Probably my own city and my own county are more interested in that commodity than any other portion of the United States; but I want to say that the owners of the iron-ore mines have acquiesced in the removal of that duty, or at least the most of them have. Coal is free from duty. Coke is free from duty. So are scrap iron, scrap steel, pig iron, and ferromanganese. Not even the most finished watch has a duty of more than 30 per cent, and yet on this article of fluorspar a duty of 54 per cent is levied. Where is the justice in that? How does that compare with the rest?

But it is said that it is for revenue that the duty is levied. Mr. President, I do not think there could be a more conclusive argument that revenue duties should be levied only on non-competing products than this item. The moment you levy duties on competing products you throw the door wide open for discrimination and unfairness to different portions of the country—most unconscious discrimination, no doubt.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BURTON. Certainly.

Mr. JAMES. Do I understand the Senator now to be opposing the rate of $1.50 a ton?

Mr. BURTON. I say if this bill is consistent, if the proposed legislation is consistent, if this item is squared with other items in the bill, there ought to be no duty.

Mr. JAMES. I merely desire to direct the attention of the Senator to the fact that he voted for a duty of $3 a ton four years ago when the Payne-Aldrich bill was under consideration.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I do not know how I voted. If I had noticed this item four years ago, I certainly should have criticized it, just as I did tungsten and a number of other items of that nature. I voted for the Payne-Aldrich bill. There is no doubt of that; but I do not recall this item.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator voted for the bill, and it was up before the conference, too, and the Senator made no objection.

Mr. BURTON. The Senator from Kentucky can not in any way prevent me from arguing as to what is a proper principle by saying: "Oh, you did something four years ago that is inconsistent with what you are doing now." If this rate of $3 was in the Payne-Aldrich law, and it is there, it was one of the worst blemishes on the bill.

I was just saying that, most unconsciously, those who frame tariff bills, where they levy duties for revenue on competing articles, some of which are produced at home and some abroad, exercise partiality for their own locality. Here is fluorspar, an article competing with the foreign product. There is wool; there is iron ore; there is sugar—all in the same category. If you are levying duties for revenue, why do you put a duty of 54 per cent on fluorspar, the product of Kentucky and Illinois, and remove every dollar of duty from wool? Could you not get a far greater revenue from levying duties on wool? Further, fluorspar is a product of only Kentucky and Illinois, while there is not a single State in the Union on whose hills sheep may not be found. If you are after revenue, why do you not pursue the course that we have been pursuing these 16 years and continue the duty upon sugar? Why do you with ruthless hand take off all these duties and leave 54 per cent—about the highest duty in the whole bill—on fluorspar, a raw material?

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. BURTON. I do.

Mr. BRISTOW. I think there was a higher duty on dextrine.

Mr. BURTON. Possibly there was. This is the highest one I have noticed.

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. JAMES] yesterday said he thought gypsum ought to be on the free list. I was very much pleased with the remark of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], in treating of gypsum, when he said that if there were a great supply up there in Nova Scotia that you could pile right on board the boat—perhaps he did not use so inelegant an expression as that, but he meant a supply that was very near the coast—it was a dispensation of Providence that our people should get it so cheaply, and they ought to allow it to come in free. If fluorspar abounds in the dump heaps of Durham and Derbyshire, why should we not regard that as a dispensation of Providence, and admit it entirely free?

The freight rate is a considerable protection to the domestic product. The ocean freight from the port on the other side, where it is invoiced at $2.78 could not be less than $1. At any rate, it would not be so low as that except for the fact that heavier freights go eastward, and they can carry westward loads of large bulk at a cheaper price, and this article might perhaps be carried as ballast. But it is evident that there is a joint or combination rate, steamship and railroad, to Pittsburgh. The railroad rate from Baltimore or Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, I take it, would be $2 or $2.50, and the total separate rates, $3 to $3.50. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] can tell more about that than I can. What would be the rate from Baltimore or New York or Philadelphia to Pittsburgh?

Mr. OLIVER. I think the rate from Baltimore or Philadelphia or New York to Pittsburgh would not be less than $2.50 a ton; but I have no doubt that there is a through combination rate that would make it very much lower.

Mr. BURTON. I want to say to the Senators who have argued so earnestly on behalf of this article that if they really want to gain an advantage for their product, the best way for them to do is to advocate the abolition of these combination rates, both on imports and on exports. Suppose it did cost but $2.78 at the seaboard in Great Britain, after having been shipped from Derby or from Durham. If the freight tariffs were fixed in the same manner that they are in this country, the freight rate would make it cost per ton at least $6.28 at Pittsburgh. Then, again, there is a very large area near the localities where this fluorspar is mixed in which the demand will increase, because the center of iron and steel production is going westward. This area belongs to the domestic producers without duties.

In looking over the hearings, and noting the questions which were asked by the Democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means, it seemed to me they were very decidedly unfriendly to any duty on fluorspar; and it seems to me they were right in manifesting that unfriendliness, because this duty of $1.50 is entirely inconsistent with the rest of the bill. It is altogether out of keeping with the other rates which are fixed.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, before the Senator sits down I should like to ascertain definitely whether he favors putting fluorspar on the free list?

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, if you are going to pass this bill, if you are going to have the rates in it as they are fixed here, I should favor placing it on the free list. I very likely shall introduce no amendment, because it would be useless; but, as I have just said, it is quite out of keeping with other items in the bill.

Mr. STONE. Aside from whether we pass the bill or not, but confining himself to the merits of the single matter of fluorspar, would the Senator favor putting fluorspar on the free list in any bill?

Mr. BURTON. That is an academic question. It can not be answered by "yes" or "no." It would depend upon the general policy you are adopting. If there were a policy of protective duties, there would be grounds for imposing some duty upon it, although its bulk is such that there is a very good protection resulting from freight rates.

Mr. STONE. The senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] favors a duty of $3 a ton on fluorspar. The senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], who is entitled to enter without challenge the sanctum sanctorum of Republican councils, thinks it ought to be on the free list. There is a house woefully divided against itself; and you know the old and true adage that such a house rarely stands.

Mr. BURTON. Evidently you are afraid it will stand, because on the other side there is no such thing as individual judgment, no such thing as independence, but instead the solid array of Members bound by a caucus, where each man assigns his mentality, his judgment, to the caucus and votes accordingly. I do not think I need apologize because I differ somewhat from some of my colleagues on a tariff schedule. I have differed in this respect, and I am ready to differ again. I think that is the right principle, the one that should prevail in representative government, and which should prevail especially in this Senate, where each Senator has his own responsibility, and should not turn that responsibility over to a binding caucus.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, to surrender one's "individuality"—that is to say, one's opinion concerning an import duty here and there—to a caucus of one's party seems to be a mighty reprehensible thing; but to surrender one's "individuality" to a chairman of a Finance Committee—an ex-Senator from Rhode Island—seems to be a thing not reprehensible. With the exception of a very few Members on that side, and the so-called "Progressives," they voted with one voice against every amendment opposed by the late Senator from Rhode Island and for every amendment advocated by him.

That has nothing to do with this particular matter. I have a good deal of sympathy with some things that have just been said by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON]. Here is a product of very great value and very great importance in the manufacture of metals. The Englishman who is manufacturing these metals in competition with the American who is doing the same thing gets it at two dollars and seventy-odd cents per ton, whereas the price in America is $7.02 per ton. In other words, the American manufacturer who uses this article in the various processes of metal manufacturing is at a disadvantage of about four dollars and a quarter per ton in his use of the product. This duty is a singular instance of the unfairness and viciousness of a protective duty.

I want to show how the American price was reached by tariff process, and here it is: The invoice price of the foreign product f. o. b. is $2.78 per ton. The duty is $3 per ton. The freight, even in ballast, is $1 per ton. All these, footed up, come to $6.78. If the foreigner made 10 per cent profit, 67 cents is to be added to that. That makes a total of $7.45 per ton laid down in our port of entry on the seaboard. Nothing at all is added in this calculation for freight to the interior. The domestic producer simply fixed his price at $7.02 so as to fall under any possibility of the foreign producer bringing the stuff over and selling it at a profit wherever freight rates were equal or even 43 cents per ton less for the foreigner than for him; and as far as his calculation was correct he probably succeeded. He succeeded very largely, because it is shown that we imported only 22,500 tons, in round numbers, and we produced 87,000 tons plus, in round numbers. That is, four times as much.

If we now reduce the duty to $1.50 per ton, the figures will read thus: For the foreigner, $2.78, invoice price, f. o. b.; $1.50 duty; $1 freight; total, $5.28; 10 per cent profit, 52 cents; total, $5.80. So that even if the senior Senator from Kentucky was correct in saying that it costs about $4.85 to $5 per ton to mine it—and the junior Senator from Kentucky says that he is just about 50 per cent wrong in that, and that it costs only about $2.50—there is still an advantage in cost of production in favor of the domestic producer of 80 cents per ton, or if we allow the home producer 10 per cent profit, making a total cost for him at the mine, plus the profit, $5.50, then an advantage of 30 cents per ton, without counting the freight rates either way.

This is the calculation of the cost of the foreign product plus the profit at the port of New York, or at any other port of entry, whence it has to be sent to Pittsburgh or other places where it is used in these various processes of metal manufacture, and the calculation of the cost of mining plus the same profit at the mine in the United States. So there is an advantage in the cost price at the mine, even if it costs $5 per ton to mine it, of 30 cents over the cost price of the foreign product at the port of entry.

If the junior Senator from Kentucky be correct and the mining cost in Kentucky be $2.50 per ton, then the American producer has an advantage by force of the tariff of $2.80 per ton.

They struggle for the interior against one another, even with a duty of $1.50 a ton, possessing an advantage of 30 cents a ton, even on the contention as to cost made by the senior Senator from Kentucky. If there be any disadvantage to the American mine owner, it is one growing out of freight rates. In that case his remedy is to be sought before the Interstate Commerce Commission and not here.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I want to see if I can get the estimate of cost, as between my colleague and myself, in some sort of shape. I understand my colleague to say that the cost of mining fluorspar is $2.50 a ton. The cost of transporting it by wagon to certain points down there is $2 a ton. That makes $4.50. The freight rate to Pittsburgh is $2.50. That makes $7. Now, turning to the other side, I understand the chairman of the committee to say $2.78 is the invoice price. The ocean freight rate is $1, making $3.78; and the rail rate to Pittsburgh is about $1, making $4.78.

Mr. BURTON. If the Senator from Kentucky will allow me to interrupt him, there must be a combination rate between the ocean carrier and the railway domestic carrier. It certainly would not be less than $2 from the Atlantic seaboard in our country to Pittsburgh.

Mr. BRADLEY. Then let us take that estimate, which makes $5.78.

Mr. BURTON. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that I do not wish to be misunderstood. It is probable that there is a combination ocean-and-rail rate, which is less than the aggregate of the total.

Mr. BRADLEY. That is my idea.

Mr. SHERMAN. A joint rate.

Mr. BRADLEY. That would give the foreign product the advantage of from $1.22 to nearly $2 over the home product.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] undertakes to mix up fluorspar with wool. I think his mind runs principally on wool as being a product that should be protected. In other words, the wool has been pulled over his eyes. There is just about as much resemblance between fluorspar and wool as there is between a cross-cut saw and a pump handle. [Laughter.] Wool is not piled up on some foreign shore where it has been for 100 years and can be shipped into this country without any cost of production. Fluorspar is piled up where it can be shipped into this country without any cost of production. It seems to me the illustration of the Senator from Ohio is peculiarly unfortunate.

Another thing: As my distinguished colleague says, I can not for the life of me understand why when the present law passed in 1909 with a $3 rate of tariff on fluorspar there was no word of protest from the Senator from Ohio, either when the bill came up for its passage or when the item came before the Senate, whereas now he comes before the Senate with the statement that even $1.50 duty is too much, and undertakes to twit the other side because they do not make it free. Here are 700 or 800 men employed in Kentucky alone whose wages depend upon this business, at an average of $1.75 to $2, I believe my colleague states.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Nunn says $2.50.

Mr. BRADLEY. Two dollars and a half, which makes it still more important.

I will say that I have been a very modest Member of this body. There has been a great deal of talking done since this special session commenced, and I have not said anything until to-day, and I think this is my day to shine. [Laughter.] I want to have some sort of chance, and I am not prepared for this sudden departure on the part of the distinguished Senator from the State of Ohio.

Here is the testimony of Mr. Nunn as to wages:

As we see it, the imposition of that duty hurts no one. It has been the means of saving the industry in America. It has had this further effect: There are some 600 or 700 men employed in our county and in that district. Before 1909 they were getting from $1.50 to $2 per day wages. The average wage there now, not counting foremen, is about $2.50. It had the further effect of increasing the production of American fluorspar from 35,000 tons in 1908, I think, to 87,000 tons in 1911.

Mr. Nunn does not say the industry can live on $6 per ton in Pittsburgh, but that amount f. o. b. the cars in Kentucky.

I insist, Mr. President, that we should not give the foreigner this great advantage over this American product. The foreigner did not develop the value of this article. It was American enterprise that found out what fluorspar was good for. It was American enterprise that made it valuable. Up to that time we had no competition abroad. After our people had studied out this problem and developed it these people abroad leased those dump piles and are attempting to and are bringing them here and dumping them down and destroying American labor and a great American enterprise.

I insist that the duty of $3 now is just as proper as it was in 1909, and that the Senator from Ohio who voted for it then can not consistently vote against it now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY].

Mr. BRADLEY. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT], and therefore withhold my vote. If allowed to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT], and I therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I inquire whether the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have a pair with that Senator, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. CHILTON. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON], which I transfer to the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BANKHEAD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF], who is absent, and I withhold my vote.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] to the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] and vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 16, nays 60, as follows:

YEAS—16.

Bradley	Dillingham	Oliver	Sherman
Brandegee	Gallinger	Page	Smith, Mich.
Catron	Lodge	Penrose	Smoot
Clark, Wyo.	McLean	Perkins	Warren

NAYS—60.

Ashurst	Hughes	Nelson	Simmons
Bacon	James	O'Gorman	Smith, Ga.
Borah	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Smith, Md.
Brady	Johnston, Ala.	Owen	Smith, S. C.
Bristow	Jones	Pittman	Sterling
Bryan	Kenyon	Poindexter	Stone
Burton	Kern	Pomerene	Swanson
Chamberlain	La Follette	Ransdell	Thompson
Chilton	Lane	Reed	Thornton
Crawford	Lea	Robinson	Tillman
Cummins	Lewis	Saulsbury	Townsend
Fletcher	Lippitt	Shafroth	Vardaman
Gronna	Martin, Va.	Sheppard	Walsh
Hitchcock	Martine, N. J.	Shields	Williams
Hollis	Myers	Shively	Works

NOT VOTING—20.

Bankhead	Culberson	Jackson	Smith, Ariz.
Burleigh	du Pont	McCumber	Stephenson
Clapp	Fall	Newlands	Sutherland
Clarke, Ark.	Goff	Norris	Thomas
Colt	Gore	Root	Wecks

So Mr. BRADLEY's amendment was rejected.

Mr. STONE. I will ask if the committee amendment on line 23 has been agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has heretofore been agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask to have paragraph 78 passed over. I shall desire to offer some amendments to that paragraph later. I prefer not to offer them now.

Mr. THOMAS. Paragraph 78 was just considered.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It is the one we were just considering. We voted on adopting the committee amendment and I was simply giving notice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Wisconsin that the committee amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. STONE. There was a committee amendment there, but it has been agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has been agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. My attention was diverted. I perhaps should have made my request before the amendment was agreed to. If it is necessary, I will ask for a reconsideration.

Mr. STONE. All right; there is no objection to passing it over.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. I do not understand that the mere agreement to a committee amendment agrees to the paragraph at all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not so understand it, but the Chair did not want the Senator from Wisconsin to be under a misapprehension as to the action of the Senate.

Mr. STONE. I understand that when a paragraph has been disposed of and all amendments either agreed to or disagreed to the paragraph then itself is agreed to unless——

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the Senator will look at the RECORD when the unanimous consent was given for the method of procedure under which we are operating, I think he will find it the other way.

Mr. STONE. Unless I understand a Senator requests to have a paragraph passed over, which has been done.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not understand it that way.

Mr. STONE. If the Senator will wait until I am through, there would not be so much difference between us.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I thought the Senator had finished. I will wait.

Mr. STONE. I said unless it was passed over by the request of a Senator, and then the agreement was that we might subsequently return to it. But tentatively it is agreed to, unless some one asks to have it passed over.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not understand it so. Is the Senator finished now?

Mr. STONE. I have finished.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. My understanding of the matter is that there is no question of tentatively whatever about it; that by unanimous consent, although the paragraph has been read and the reading of the bill has been proceeded with, upon the request of a Senator at any time we shall return to that paragraph and amendments to it will be in order. If I am mistaken about it, I should like to have it cleared up now.

Mr. STONE. I did not say anything to the contrary.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I understood the Senator's claim to be to the contrary, which was that the paragraph was subsequently agreed to unless a Senator announced that he would return to it.

Mr. STONE. No; I did not say that.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The RECORD will show what was said by both of us. I, of course, may have misunderstood the Senator.

Mr. STONE. I did not say more than what I repeat, that if a Senator asks to have a paragraph passed over it will be passed over, and unless it is done then tentatively it is agreed to, with the right of any Senator afterwards to return to it. When I say tentatively agreed to, I mean that we ought to make some progress as we go along and have some kind of an understanding that paragraphs have been tentatively disposed of, or else we are reading to very little purpose.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think we are reading to very little purpose with the understanding that it is tentatively agreed to, and only tentatively, and may be recurred to at any time by request. However that may be, the Senator from Wisconsin has asked that this paragraph be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to make an announcement, which he thinks it would be well to look up. The Chair was under the impression that when we began to read the bill it should be read and amendments offered, and if a Senator requested that a paragraph should go over it was to go over. That has been the understanding of the Chair as to the agreement. He thinks it would be quite well to find out what the RECORD does say on the subject.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I will abide, of course, as the Senate will no doubt, by what the RECORD discloses was agreed to on the request of the Senator from North Carolina, the chairman of the Finance Committee. There was some question about it at the time, I distinctly remember, and I ask, if it be within the possession of the Secretary to readily turn to what the agreement was, that it be now read to the Senate. I am no more interested in it than any other Senator, and I am just as much interested in it.

Mr. SIMMONS. There was no agreement at all. I tried to reach an agreement and failed, and I said that we would proceed under the rules of the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Very well.

Mr. SIMMONS. And we have been proceeding under the rules of the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Whatever was stated will be shown by the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read from the RECORD what occurred.

The Secretary read from page 2951 of the RECORD of Wednesday, July 23, 1913, as follows:

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I have no sort of objection to agreeing that amendments may at all times be in order after action on committee amendments, but I would not desire to be a party to a unanimous-consent agreement which, in its effect, would make in order an amendment which otherwise would be contrary to the rules of the Senate. Furthermore, I think possibly we might have considerable controversy as to what we had agreed to, and, in that view, I withdraw my request and ask that we proceed under the rules of the Senate.

Mr. OLIVER. I call for the regular order, then.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The next amendment of the Committee on Finance was to strike out all of paragraph 79 as printed in the House text in the following words:

79. Mica and manufactures of mica, or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem; ground mica, 15 per cent ad valorem.

And to insert in lieu thereof the following:

79. Mica, unmanufactured, valued at not above 15 cents per pound, 4 cents per pound; valued above 15 cents per pound and not above 75 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem; valued above 75 cents per pound, 20 per cent ad valorem; cut mica, mica splittings, built-up mica, and all manufactures of mica, or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem; ground mica, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. GALLINGER. I notice that in this item the method that the majority adopted in making ad valorem rates instead of specific rates has been departed from to some extent. I should like to ask why it is that mica, unmanufactured, valued not above 15 cents per pound, is given a specific rate of 4 cents per pound, while other forms of the same material are given ad valorem rates? There must be some reason for it.

Mr. THOMAS rose.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will await a reply to my question if any Senator chooses to undertake it.

Mr. THOMAS. I thought the Senator had something more to say. The rate of duty, as stated by the Senator, is 4 cents a pound on mica, unmanufactured, and valued at not above 15 cents per pound. The schedule which has been reported is one which seems to be satisfactory to some of the manufacturers and to some of the producers. The general average of the price of mica, I think, last year was 17 cents; and it was thought under the circumstances that this, being an average duty of about 26.6 cents on mica of that value, would be less somewhat than the House bill and at the same time in keeping with what seemed to be the views of some of the manufacturers and some of the producers.

Mr. GALLINGER. The query still rests in my mind why a specific rate was put upon unmanufactured mica and an ad valorem rate put upon that same substance in other forms, like cut mica, mica splittings, and mica valued above a certain price. Why have one form of the product a specific rate and others ad valorem rates?

Mr. President, I want to ask further from the committee or the Senator having it in charge as to these rates. I remember that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS], the chairman of the committee, joined with me on a former occasion in making quite a contest for adequate rates upon mica. It was produced in North Carolina and in New Hampshire, and for once we were in accord in our endeavor to get a protective rate upon it, or a rate that we thought would protect the industry.

I will ask some Senator—because I have not investigated it this year—whether or not the rates of this bill are satisfactory to the men who produce mica, and particularly to those in North Carolina, who have a much larger interest in it than New Hampshire or any other Northern State has?

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator refer to me when he speaks about the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes; I refer to the Senator from North Carolina, the chairman of the committee.

Mr. SIMMONS. When did I join the Senator? I have no recollection of ever discussing the question of mica with him.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am not quite sure whether it was in 1909, but I think it was.

Mr. SIMMONS. It was not. We did not discuss the question of mica in 1909. The Senator is mistaken about that. But I will answer the Senator——

Mr. GALLINGER. However that may be, I am not at all mistaken that the Senator evinced a very great interest in this product, as I did, and it was for the reason that it was produced in the State that the Senator so ably represents as well as in the little State of New Hampshire.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. GALLINGER. And my only interest in it now is to ascertain (because I confess that my people have not written to me particularly about this item this year) whether or not these rates are adequate, in the opinion of the Senator from North Carolina, to protect the industry from foreign competition.

Mr. SIMMONS. It is not a question of protection at all, Mr. President.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator will excuse me again; I did not use the word "protect" in the sense of protection. What I meant was whether or not they would be able to continue, in all human probability, the mining of mica in competition with foreign countries.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will try to answer the Senator, at all events, without any evasion and with absolute frankness.

The Senator's first inquiry is why we have placed a specific rate upon the manufactured product and why we have placed an ad valorem duty upon another part of the product. I will state to the Senator that that was done at the suggestion of those who are familiar with the business as a necessary method in order to deal fairly with the different products, because of the great variation in the price of the raw material.

I would myself much prefer an ad valorem rate on all these; that is, the rate the House placed upon it; but there is as great a variation in the price of mica as in any product that is produced in this country. The price ranges all the way from about 7 cents a pound up to as high in some instances as 90 cents per pound, although the 90-cent rate is probably a rare rate. You could not fix an ad valorem with that great variation in price that would not discriminate in favor of one class and against another class.

If the Senator will just make a calculation, he will see that in those conditions an ad valorem applying to all the articles would result in discrimination. All the producers of mica who came before us emphasized that fact. They said whatever rates were fixed, on account of the great variation in the price of this product, it is necessary that we should resort to a compound rate, or rather to a rate partly specific and a rate partly ad valorem. It was done for that purpose in order to equalize the rates, and if the Senator will make the calculation, as I have made the calculation—I do not want to undertake to do it now—starting with mica valued at 7 cents a pound, and going up to 15, and then to 30, 40, and 50, and higher than 50, he will see that a flat rate will work discrimination. It was to prevent that that the rates have been so fixed.

Mr. GALLINGER. And the Senator thinks it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to have put a specific rate upon the other qualities of mica enumerated in the paragraph, does he?

Mr. SIMMONS. It would not have been impossible, but the manufacturers suggested that after we passed a certain rate we might reduce the ad valorem; and the Senator will see that we did that. After we passed a certain valuation—75 cents a pound, I believe—then we reduced the ad valorem.

Mr. STONE. Above 15 cents.

Mr. SIMMONS. Above 15 cents; yes. The Senator from New Hampshire will see when it is not above 75 cents a pound the duty is 25 per cent ad valorem, and when valued above 75 cents a pound, 20 per cent ad valorem. Then we put a different rate, a rate of 15 per cent, upon ground mica and 30 per cent upon built-up mica. In other words, the committee tried, after conference with the manufacturers, to get a schedule of rates, using the specific and the ad valorem, that would be just to all classes of this varying product.

I will state to the Senator that after we had had this conference with the manufacturers we asked an expert of the Government to work it out so as, so far as it was practicable, to bring about uniformity in the rates. This schedule is the result of the recommendation of an expert of the department. Whether he has worked it out right or not, I am not myself absolutely sure; but it was referred to him, and he did work it out in this way and said he had worked it out so as to bring about an equality of these rates as to the various grades of mica.

Mr. GALLINGER. The further question which I propounded was as to whether or not, in the judgment of the Senator or of the committee, the rates in the bill are adequate to develop and protect this article against competition. We imported last year nearly a million and a half pounds of it, if I read the figures correctly, and there is a pretty pronounced reduction in the rates in this bill as against those in the existing law.

Mr. SIMMONS. Do I understand the Senator from New Hampshire as complaining that the rates are too low or too high?

Mr. GALLINGER. I was inquiring as to whether they might not be too low. For instance, the specific rate on the first quality is reduced from 5 cents to 4 cents a pound. That is a reduction of 20 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will simply say to the Senator that we thought that this rate placed it upon a fairly competitive basis. I do not think there is very serious objection made to this rate in any direction. I think it is a very fair rate.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am glad to hear that from the Senator.

Mr. SIMMONS. There are already, as the Senator knows, considerable importations of this article.

Mr. GALLINGER. A million and a half pounds last year.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; there are considerable importations of it; but it is now not upon a thoroughly competitive basis, and I think these rates will adjust it so that it will be put upon a fair competitive basis.

Mr. GALLINGER. Before I take my seat I want to assure the Senator from North Carolina that I intended nothing invidious in suggesting that he and I on a former occasion were both interested in this item. It may be that it was in private conversation, rather than in debate in the Senate; but I do know the fact that we did confer about it. Although the industry is small in my State, yet our prosperity is made up of small industries, and I simply wanted to be assured that the rates were fair and that the reduction would not result in wiping out that little industry which we have in New Hampshire.

The explanation of the Senator of the necessity for making a specific rate on one class of mica and ad valorem rates on the other classes is not quite so clear to my mind as it might be, but I will take the Senator's word for it and believe that it is the best arrangement that under the circumstances could have been made.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, there are some inconsistencies in this paragraph, and I desire to call the attention of the Senate to them. The present law provides:

Mica, unmanufactured or rough trimmed only, 5 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem; mica, cut or trimmed, mica plates or built-up mica, and all manufactures of mica or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem.

In other words, the law to-day provides that the duty on unmanufactured mica, irrespective of value, shall be 5 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem. The equivalent ad valorem is 35.47 per cent. The Democratic members of the Finance Committee report the bill to the Senate with this provision:

Mica, unmanufactured, valued at not above 15 cents per pound, 4 cents per pound.

The Senator from North Carolina says that the value of mica is from 7 cents up to 90 cents per pound. The value of the great bulk of mica produced in North Carolina is from 5 cents to 17 cents per pound. Now, let me call the attention of the Senate to what the rates will be under the amended bill. Mica valued at 5 cents a pound under this bill carries 80 per cent; mica valued at 6 cents per pound, nearly 70 per cent; mica valued at 7 cents a pound, nearly 60 per cent; mica valued at 8 cents a pound, 50 per cent; and mica valued at 9 cents per pound, 44 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the Senator work that out on the Payne-Aldrich rate of 5 cents per pound plus 20 per cent ad valorem? Suppose the Senator pursues the same method of calculation and takes mica valued at 5 cents a pound and applies the present rate, which is 5 cents a pound plus 20 per cent ad valorem, and the rate, I think, will be 120 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no need of my figuring that out. The Senator has already done that many times, I take it for granted. As the bill passed the House it read in this way:

Mica and manufactures of mica, or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 20 per cent ad valorem; ground mica, 15 per cent ad valorem.

The House simply carried out their policy in this paragraph, the same as they have done generally, providing for ad valorem rates; but when the bill comes to the Senate the rate is changed on all mica valued at less than 15 cents a pound.

Again, Mr. President, the pending bill provides:

Cut mica, mica splittings, built-up mica, and all manufactures of mica, or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Under the present law the rate is 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem, or an equivalent ad valorem of 30.97 per cent.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Utah will permit me——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. I hope the Senator from Utah does not intend to criticize adversely the return to the specific duty, because the Senator from Utah is as well aware as I am that the whole tendency of all the best economists and financiers of the world is to have specific duties wherever possible. I think in the tariffs of Germany and France there are nothing but specific duties; and it is pleasant to see this bill, which proceeds in exactly the opposite direction by imposing ad valorems, in the case of mica returning to the system which the world at large believes to be the soundest system.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that I have made that statement on the floor of the Senate quite a number of times in relation to specific and ad valorem rates.

The duty on ground mica is placed at 15 per cent ad valorem by the Democratic bill. That is a new provision. It has always come into this country, if at all, as a nonenumerated article at a rate of 20 per cent. I simply want to congratulate the producers and manufacturers of mica in the United States on being taken care of under this bill.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Utah if he also extends his congratulations to the consumer?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in the case of mica, as with a great many other items in this bill, the consumer will never know that the rates have been changed. The reduction will never reach him, but it will be "lost in the shuffle."

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, we have this situation: The Senator from New Hampshire is complaining that the rate on mica is too low, and we have the Senator from Utah complaining that the rate on mica is too high.

Mr. SMOOT. No, Mr. President; the Senator is wrong when he says that I have complained that the rate is too high. I was congratulating the producer in this country on being given a rate that at least would protect him. The equivalent ad valorem on manufactured mica under the present law is 30.97 per cent, and this bill provides 30 per cent; so he is pretty well taken care of.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, there is no question about the fact that the 30 per cent ad valorem rate fixed by the House would discriminate in favor of the high-priced mica against the low-priced mica, and it was that situation with which the committee had to deal. It was a fact that was brought to our attention by all the dealers in the country.

As I have said, this rate was fixed not so much by the committee, although they assented to it, as it was by a Government expert under the direction of the committee so to adjust these rates as to bring about equality and uniformity of taxation. We did not feel that we were bound by the House rate in this matter, as we have not felt we were bound by the House rate in other matters. Neither did we feel that we were bound by the present rate. Undoubtedly, Mr. President, this rate is a very great reduction from the present law, and undoubtedly as applied to the whole paragraph it is a reduction from the House rate also.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, since he has made that statement, I want to ask the Senator a question. The bill provides:

Cut mica, mica splittings, built-up mica, and all manufactures of mica or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Is that a great reduction from the rate provided in the present law?

Mr. SIMMONS. I was not speaking about any particular bracket in the paragraph, but I was speaking about the whole paragraph; and, taking the whole paragraph together, I say it is a very great reduction from the present law and a slight reduction from the House bill.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to ask the Senator how many pounds of mica valued at above 75 cents a pound are produced in the United States?

Mr. SIMMONS. How many pounds of mica?

Mr. SMOOT. No; of mica valued at above 75 cents per pound.

Mr. SIMMONS. Oh, I can not answer that.

Mr. SMOOT. The amount is so infinitesimally small that it is not worthy of consideration. It is true that that grade of mica has been reduced to 20 per cent from an equivalent ad valorem of 25 per cent, but it cuts no figure whatever in the protection of mica in this country. I am speaking now of the great product that comes under this paragraph as a whole, and I ask the Senator if there is a reduction from the present rate on cut mica, mica splittings, built-up mica, and all manufactures of mica or of which mica is the component material of chief value?

